

Of Early-Day Merchant — Refuses Relief as Way to Land Job — Ending of Broadcasting Experience — Fine Qualities Often Hidden — Plea for the Deaf.

A story of the early-day merchant's community usefulness is told in the current issue of Nation's Business. It is especially interesting to those who remember the town's one store and the proprietor's ever readiness to help anyone in need. This story related to the only store in a frontier town before the days of automobiles or good roads.

Something not mentioned in the story is the way the pioneer merchant extended credit. Supplies for a year were often bought and used before a cent was paid, and it is not recalled that trusted customers ever failed to meet obligations.

The pioneer merchant didn't lose much in the long run by trusting his customers, and he was a good deal of a help factor in firing courage and helping over rough spots the early strugglers who blazed the way.

Spurs Relief Suggestion. We know a girl who, though eminently qualified and much desired could not be given a government job as a dietitian in a school because she was not on so-called relief. She was advised that if she would go on relief even though not actually accepting it, she could have the job. But her pride asserted itself, and she refused to be considered an applicant for relief.

At The Final Program. Since the first imperfect broadcasting attempts more than twenty years ago, we have been almost awed by the sending of sound through space without visible means of conveyance. We have been quite as much interested in the accomplishment as in the many excellent programs made available by the mere turning of a dial.

In concluding our broadcasting experience we turn with marvel to the possibility of the performance in which we have had a part for nearly three years. The experience has often been thrilling with considerable reward in the belief that promising talent has been given a chance for expression. Also it is gratifying to believe the Wayne community has become more widely known through the effort. We appreciate the spirit of helpful good will manifested, and only wish the advertising demand had warranted continuance of the work and cost.

In going off the air indefinitely, we wish to express appreciation to WJAG for the way it carried its part of the responsibility without sufficient compensation. And we are not unmindful of the service freely given each of us by those who prepared and handled the programs.

Unrevealed Qualities. People often have a lot of hidden good—good that casual observers do not suspect. No one knows the extent of concealed kindnesses that help someone who is making a severe rough going without public knowledge, is misunderstood—often even condemned on purely imaginary grounds. The compensation derived from steady and supporting tottering footsteps is a satisfied conscience. The most helpful person does not shout his generous deeds from the housetops. He does not call out the band when he wants to do something for an individual or for society. He quietly goes about his work and looks to conceal his good deeds.

SURVEY MADE OF STUDENT GRADES

Median At Wayne College For Second Quarter Is 87—Other College News.

Research in distribution of grades by classes for the first quarter at the Wayne State Teachers College shows the following median: Seniors, 87; juniors, 88; sophomores, 87; and freshmen, 85.

A survey was also made of averages in student groups, variously employed. The median for the 24 students engaged at the college library, some of the NYA and others employed by the state, was 88. Average for the 29 students employed at the cafeteria was 86.

Students ranking highest by classes were: Senior, Elmer Gildersleeve, 95 1-2; junior, Arthur Larson, 94 1-4; sophomore, Laune Heidenreich, 93 1-4; freshman, Mary King, 95.

Give Demonstration Program. A demonstration voice program was given yesterday morning in chapel exercises under direction of Prof. Clifford Bair. Monody or single line singing was demonstrated by Miss Alice McGregor, Miss Harriet Lamson and David Sanders.

The chorus and a capella choir also demonstrated polyphony of many part line singing of numbers introduced by the English, Franco-Belgian and Italian schools. Modern compositions were sung by Miss Kathryn Greenleaf, Prof. Bair and the chorus and choir.

To Attend State Meeting. Dr. J. T. Anderson will attend the meetings of the delegates to the assembly of Nebraska State Teachers' association to be held Friday and Saturday this week at Lincoln. Dr. Hans Olson, superintendent of the training high school of Kearney State Teachers College, and chairman of the planning bureau, arrived yesterday to visit the Wayne college, and will go to Lincoln Friday with Dr. Anderson.

Receive NYA Funds. Second allotment of NYA funds was received at the college the first of the week and checks were available to the 119 students employed under the plan December 3 and 4. Annual college stunt night scheduled for December 13 has been postponed until after the holidays.

Games are scheduled all this week for the basketball tournament being sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. The "Stooges," winners of the trophy in the interclass tourney for the past two years, are hoping to head the list again this year. A number of teams are entered in the competition and the finals will be played off this Friday.

Autographed copies of the book, "Stories of the Far West," by Joseph G. Masters of Omaha, have been received at the college. The books were ordered by college students after Mr. Masters' talk here.

Dr. Andrews Makes Statement. The following comment on the amount of time students should spend in working for room and board was made recently by Dr. Anderson in response to a number of inquiries:

"Many questions have come to the college with regard to the time students should spend in working for room and board. Often we are asked what wage should be paid a college student for work at odd jobs.

"In general, a student should average one hour a day for each meal and one hour for room. This would make a total of four hours per day, or an average of twenty-eight hours per week for room and board. Students who work for a stated sum per week should not be asked to work over time, but any great extent during vacation and at other times without additional pay. Neither should a student be asked to have his time shortened appreciably for special accommodations to him.

"In all cases a thorough understanding of just what is to be expected should be had when a contract is made. A misunderstanding is often the cause of much difficulty. Generally speaking, twenty-five cents per hour seems to be a fair wage for students working by the hour."

GRAVEL PLANNED FROM CARROLL

State Engineer Promises Rep. A. H. Biermann Early Work On Road.

Gravel outlet for Carroll is promised early in the spring, according to word received by Rep. August H. Biermann. The plan is to gravel from Carroll south to highway No. 113 and then east into Wayne at an early date.

State Engineer A. C. Tilley of the Department of Roads and Irrigation, writes Rep. Biermann, November 8 relative to a gravelled outlet for Carroll as follows: "This will confirm our conversation of yesterday having reference to construction of the highway from Carroll south to the intersection with the Wayne-Pierce road, also having reference to construction north of Carroll.

"We have included in our Feed-or-Road program that section from Carroll south and a short section from Carroll north. Due to the fact that it is already so late in the year, I doubt very much if it will be possible to get this work under contract to actually undertake construction before spring. However, it will be our purpose to prepare plans and actually contract the work during the winter so that it may be started in the spring.

"This is substantially what I told the delegation from Carroll, when they were here, except at that time we did not realize it would be impossible to get the work underway before spring."

GRAVEL PROMISED FOR HIGHWAYS IN WAYNE VICINITY

REPRESENTATIVE August Biermann has assurance from road headquarters in Lincoln that the highway from Wayne to the western line of the county with a branch to Carroll will be hard surfaced early next year. He is further assured that the highway south of Wakefield will also be given finishing treatment. Wayne does not have the hard surfaced roads that its importance as a school and trade center deserves, and it is hoped united and vigorous efforts will be put forth in that direction next year.

Not only should the roads mentioned be completed, but a Wayne outlet should be found for the Concord territory. The feasible plan to pave a road from the east and west paving south to that north should be pushed along. Travel on main roads still surfaced with mud, is a powerful argument at this time in behalf of early action. More permanent road improvements are due in this vicinity and they should be forthcoming to make up for improvements that have gone to other parts of the state.

Sermon Is Given Fifty Years Ago

Baptism Ceremony In 1885 Marks The Beginning Of Theophilus Church.

Sunday, December 1, marked the fiftieth anniversary of the preliminary sermon which culminated in the building of Theophilus Lutheran church, southwest of Wayne, of which Rev. A. Hofferer is now pastor.

In 1885 Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wittler, now of Hartington, wished a neighborhood baptismal sermon preached for their infant son, Ed. Wittler. Rev. Mr. Moeller of Council Bluffs, was called here to deliver the sermon in school district 40, just opposite the present location of Theophilus church.

The church was organized in 1888 and services were held in the schoolhouse until funds were raised to build a house of worship in 1897. Since that time the congregation has supported its own minister and regular services are held.

Of the members of the congregation present at the baptismal services 50 years ago, the following were also present at the anniversary Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wittler of Hartington, Mrs. Minnie Brune and her daughter, Mrs. Louis Schulte, Ed. Wittler and August Wittler.

August Wittler was godfather or sponsor for Ed. Wittler at the baptismal ceremony a half century ago. In his sermon of Sunday, Rev. Hofferer told of the early beginning of the church, its organization, congregation and history since the baptismal ceremony of 1885.

NEW PROGRAM IS ANNOUNCED

Provisions Of Two-Year Plan For Agriculture Are Made Known.

The new 1936-37 corn-hog adjustment contract has been approved, according to State Director W. H. Brokaw, and details will be explained at local meetings in January during the sign-up campaign.

The two year contract, effective as of December 1, 1935, requires that the signer produce for market in 1936 at least 50 percent of his market hog base and not more than 100 percent of his base if he is to receive the maximum hog adjustment payment. The cooperating producer also must plant to corn at least 25 percent of his corn base next year but not more than a percentage which is within the permitted optional range of 70 to 90 percent of his corn base.

Corn and hog bases under the new program will be established by appraisal by community committees in accordance with standards prescribed by the secretary. This undertaking, new to commodity adjustment programs, is designed to permit the assignment of equitable bases to all producers regardless of whether or not they have previously participated in corn-hog programs or farmed previous to 1936.

An additional major change from the 1935 contract is the provision that an average equal to the land held under corn production, known as the "adjusted corn acreage" under the new contract, be devoted to soil-improving or erosion-preventing crops. The area used for these crops must be in addition to the acreage normally devoted to such uses on the farm.

For complying with the hog adjustment provisions of the 1936-37 contract, the participating producer will receive his entire hog payment as soon as possible after final compliance has been checked after the close of each year. The 1936 rate will be at $1.25 per head for each hog in the base, less the pro-rata share of the local administrative expenses. Deductions will be made at the rate of $2.50 per head if the producer fails to raise 50 percent of his base hog numbers and $5.00 per head if he raises more than his assigned base number, states Mr. Brokaw.

Corn adjustment payments in 1936 will be made in two installments, about August 1 and December 31, at the rate of $1.00 per bushel multiplied by the adjusted yield and the number of adjusted acres. Deductions will be made for local administrative expenses as heretofore.

The rates of adjustment and rates of payments for 1937 will be announced by the secretary by November 30, 1936, and will be determined from the outlook for supplies and prices at that time. A contract signer, however, will not be required to plant more than 25 percent of his corn base nor make an adjustment below 75 percent of his base in 1937. To secure the maximum hog payment in 1937, the signer will not be required to produce more than 60 percent not asked to produce less than 75 percent of the assigned market base. The rate of payment on corn in 1937 will not be less than 30c per bushel and the rate on hogs will not be less than $1.25 per head on the number in the base.

The new corn-hog contract is to be in full force from December 1, 1935, through November 30, 1937, unless the secretary terminates all corn-hog contracts with respect to 1937 by an announcement not later than November 30, 1936, or approves an application made (Continued on page seven)

Latin Club In Costume Play

Training School Group To Sing Carols December 19 In College Vicinity.

Members of the Latin club of the Wayne college training school plan a play to which parents are invited the evening of December 19. The play selected is "In the Ancient Days" and has a cast of 20 characters appearing in Roman costumes. After the play members of the club will sing Christmas carols in Latin at the different homes in the college neighborhood. Training school of orchestra gave a program in the assembly for convocation Wednesday morning. The orchestra is under direction of Prof. J. R. Keith.

The first grade Mothers' club will meet Tuesday, December 10, with Miss Constance Barker. The meeting will begin at 3:45 and will be held in the first grade room with Mrs. J. R. Johnson in charge. Dr. Walter Benthack will give a talk. Mothers of children in other grades are invited to attend the meeting.

Children have started the sale of Christmas seals for health fund. A dollar from the sale of seals for the next year was spent in the following way: 29 pennies did tuberculosis work; 26 rendered important service to sufferers from heart disease; 12 pennies were used for research work; 10 pennies were devoted solely to the needs of many children; 5 pennies did a fine job in the field of dental health; 4 pennies fought one of the most difficult and subtle battles of all—that against social disease; 3 pennies worked for health production in industry; and one last penny worked for general cooperation with other agencies and community organizations.

The junior class play Tuesday evening of last week was a happy affair in every way. In spite of the inclemency of the weather the class had a large and appreciative audience. The players were at their best, each one in the cast playing his part as though it were in real life. It was team work from beginning to end with an all-star cast. Then too, Miss Lettie Scott and Miss Florence Drake made a happy choice in the play and also made a correct assignment of parts. Miss Scott and Miss Barbara Seabury well merited the token of appreciation received from the class at the close of the performance. The training school orchestra, directed by Prof. J. R. Keith, contributed much to the enjoyment of the evening.

Funds realized from the play will be used to defray expenses of the junior-senior banquet to be given in the spring.

STANTON PASTOR SPEAKS MONDAY

Rev. O. W. Lowe Addresses Kiwanians On History Of "Old Glory"

Rev. Fay Charling Mills introduced Rev. Oscar W. Lowe of Stanton, as guest speaker following 12:30 luncheon Monday at Hotel Stratton for members of the Kiwanis club. F. L. Blair led in singing patriotic songs, accompanied at the piano by J. E. Brittain. A message of sympathy to club members in the loss of John T. Bressler received from Fred C. W. Parker, national secretary, was read.

In introducing the speaker of the afternoon Rev. Mills stated that he and Rev. Lowe were former classmates of seminary days. "I like to share my hobby with others," said Rev. Lowe in opening his talk on "The Story of Old Glory." Rev. Lowe is interested in flag collecting and displayed many in illustration of his talk, explaining the history of each and its connection with the flag of the United States.

An interesting flag acquired the past summer by Rev. Lowe was the Scottish streamer showing the amicable feeling between France and Scotland in the motif of the Scotch lions surrounded by the French lilies. The new Gandhi flag of India has the spinning wheel emblem on the white, green and red background; the leader's idea of the only way back to prosperity.

In the Italian flag, Mussolini has recently removed the cross from above the shield of St. John. The flag formerly had the cross and crown above the shield, the motif on the white background, flanked on either side by horizontal red and green bars.

Brings Flag To America.
Lief Erickson brought his own flag to America in the year 1099 A. D., a blue raven of battle on a white background. Rev. Lowe showed a flag which he brought from Labrador of the year 1497 with the cross of St. George. The commercial flag of Spain dates back to the eighth century, with bars of red, yellow and red. He displayed a pennant of white with green cross overshadowing the crowns of king and queen.

The flag brought by the Swedish colonists to Delaware in 1638 was of yellow and white with cross. The Pilgrims in 1620 brought the flag bearing the cross of St. Andrew and the cross of St. Mary.

The colors of St. George and St. Andrew are used in the flag of the United States—both are deep in religious symbols. The cross of St. Andrew was different from the cross upon which Christ was crucified. When St. Anthony was crucified he requested that his cross be changed; he felt that he was unworthy to be crucified upon the same type of cross as the Saviour.

Union Jack Adopted.
The two emblems were coupled and modified by King James and made into the English Union Jack. The cross bars of the Jack came from the story of St. Patrick crossing his own path and leaving a trail of blood.

One hundred years later the flag of Cromwell was adopted by the English, the Union Jack in the corner of a red field. In 1730 the colonists were ordered by the king to adopt a flag, carrying out the design of the Cromwell flag. The first flag made for colonists was a red ground with the oak tree which sheltered the king in a journey through a storm. The flag of the fleet, designed by continental congress had a white background, pine tree and green-sailed sailors.

At the time the colonists demanded freedom from England, George Washington, Benjamin Franklin and an unknown man met to design a flag, adopting the red and white colors. The flag of the Boston Tea Party was a yellow ground with a black rattlesnake and the lettering, "Don't Tread On Me." There were 13 letters in the sentence and 13 rattlers on the snake. The flag did more toward crystallizing feeling against England than any other one thing.

Make Grand Union Flag.
The grand union flag adopted when Washington was given command of the army, was made up of stripes with the Union Jack in the corner; 13 guns were fired when the flag was raised. The Bunker Hill flag bore the cross of St. George and the tree. In 1776 the flag of the colonies was made with the circle of 13 stars in the blue field. Betsy Ross made the flag but was not the designer of any of it save the placing of the stars, like a wedding ring, significant of home.

When the seven states seceded from the colonies they adopted a flag with seven stars in a blue field and three stripes, red, white and red. Benny Benson designed the flag of Alaska after a request from the American Legion that the country be allowed its own banner. The flag is blue with the great dipper in gold and a single golden star in the right upper corner.

In ending his talk, Rev. Lowe stated that "the day would come when there would be an international flag to bind together the countries of the world."

MRS. SARAH AHERN TELLS OF EARLY DAYS IN COUNTY

Recalls First Trip From Jackson In Spring Wagon To See Logan Valley — Move Here Year Later.

"Tell you something about the early days? Why, yes, I can," answered Mrs. Sarah Graves Ahern in reply to an inquiry from the Herald reporter. "You know, I was just sitting here thinking of the story there really is in the history of a town and county."

Mrs. Ahern sat before a window with her knitting on her lap, the subdued light making a charming background for her trim little figure and aura of silvery hair. Her eyes sparkled with animation as they must have years ago when as a girl, she lived near the Killarney lakes in old Ireland.

"We came to La Porte from Jackson before the railway came through the county," said Mrs. Ahern. "The whole neighborhood was prairie, covered with high waving grass. Occasionally one could see deer bounding over the prairie."

Come Here From Jackson. The Aherns had decided to leave Jackson and come over to Wayne county and made the trip by spring wagon to look over the country around LaPorte. "There wasn't any rooming house at La Porte, so we stayed the night at W. A. Hunt's. The Hunter children had the measles but since it was so warm—the month was August—I didn't think that it was as well that James be exposed then as after the weather became colder."

The Aherns met John T. Bressler while at LaPorte and Mr. Bressler took them to the John Tracy farm west of Wayne. Mr. Tracy had erected a crude cabin shelter on his land and Mr. and Mrs. Ahern and son were invited to spend the night. Mrs. Ahern recalls that most of the night she was unable to sleep for any one.

Returning to Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Ahern remained until the following year when Mrs. Ahern's millinery and dressmaking store burned, and then she decided that she would like to go to Wayne county to live. Mr. Ahern was employed on the railroad at the time. A pack had then been taken through Wayne county and buildings removed from the old site of LaPorte.

Wayne Had Few Buildings. "There was a new restaurant in Wayne and the depot had just been completed, otherwise there were no buildings except for the ones that had been moved over from LaPorte. The restaurant was a crude affair with the raw, new boards showing on the outside. We came order to fill when she went into the city to do her buying. Most of the hats she selected were ordered by her steady customers. There were no crop failures at first and people all seemed to have implicit faith in the land. People came in from all sides to the rich Logan valley. When the town was very young, and occupants few, the residents gathered for oysters stew to welcome the new arrivals.

Town Grows Rapidly. "I was so busy in the store during the week," Mrs. Ahern continued, "that I had very little time to get out except on Sundays. Then I was always surprised to see how the town had grown during the week. It has been growing ever since."

Mrs. Ahern recalls that Mrs. Brittain, Mrs. John T. Bressler and herself were the first three women in the town.

Mrs. Ahern laughingly recalled a visit to "prairie dog town" one fine summer day. The Tracys went with them and the families had a picnic lunch together. In the course of the afternoon, they missed one of the children and no amount of calling seemed to get any response from the missing child. Prairie grass was so tall that it was impossible to see a two-year-old child.

Finally someone stood up in the spring wagon and, reaching for moving prairie grass in the still air. In this way the youngster was located.

J. J. Ahern Takes Over Store. Early in 1900 Mr. and Mrs. Ahern decided to give up the store because of the latter's health and return to Illinois. J. J. Ahern took over the store here.

Born In Tralee, Ireland. Mrs. Ahern was born in Tralee, County Kerry, close to the Lakes of Killarney in Ireland, and came to this country in 1871 at the age of 21. Twice she has made the trip back to her girlhood home, once just before the war and the last time about seven years ago. Her father was alive on her last visit, and the old home seemed little changed. Shortly after her return to the United States war in Europe was declared, although no murmur had reached her ears while visiting in the old country. At that time, King George of England felt so little the need of protection that he attended the Ascot races with no escort.

Mrs. Ahern remembers the huge guard which always accompanied the King when she was a girl running about the moors and lakes. The Atlantic ocean was just six miles from Mrs. Ahern's old home and she recalls many happy hours at the beach, fleeing from the tide, and sometimes being caught by the waves when she was playing in the sand for shells and watching the great breakers come rolling in.

Has Visits To Old Home. On her last visit to the old home Mrs. Ahern noted that the estates of the wealthy English which were very prevalent in that section of Ireland in her girlhood, were gone. Some of the mansions had been purchased by the Irish government for hospitals but the English are no longer allowed to maintain homes there—Ireland is now for the Irish. This was accomplished by Gladstone's parliamentation.

"My dear," said Mrs. Ahern softly, "you would be surprised to see the Irish girls now. They dress just like girls in America. Dealers from all the little towns show for their stores in London and you know London gets its styles directly from Paris."

Tells of Early Christmas. When asked about the early day Thanksgiving and Christmas celebrations, Mrs. Ahern replied: "Well of course, we had a great deal to be thankful for but Thanksgiving was never such a day for us as Christmas. We always tried to have a lovely Christmas for the children. We had our Christmas trees—often many of the tree decorations were homemade out of things they were just as pretty to us as the decorations you buy today."

Mrs. Ahern recalled one Christmas when she made dressing gowns for her two older daughters from some of the fine materials left over from gowns she had made. It had been her custom to make warm underwear and nightgowns for the girls other years and for this particular Christmas the packages were placed high on the tree. The girls decided to leave them until the last, being sure they contained the "nighties" of other years. When the packages were opened the girls were in ecstasies of delight. Tears came into Mrs. Ahern's soft, brown eyes as she recalled the happiness of her two little daughters.

Breaks Hip In Fall. Mrs. Ahern suffered a broken hip in a fall two years ago, but this sweet little lady utters no word of complaint for the misfortune, only to regret that she is unable to get about as she did formerly. She is the mother of seven living children: James, Arthur and John Ahern of Wayne, Mrs. Harry Smith of Minnesota, Mrs. Ross Fowler of Vermilion, S. D., Miss Clara Ahern of Chicago, and Miss Martina who entered the sisterhood a number of years ago.

To Provide Baskets For Needy Families Red Cross relief agency, local clubs and individuals will provide Christmas baskets for needy families again this year. Groups and individuals are invited to contribute food, clothing or toys. The baskets will be filled December 24 and place of bringing contributions will be announced.

Christmas Story Is Program Theme

Miss Martha Pierce And Mrs. R. R. Smith Have Club Lesson.

"Art is not an old product or behavior but an inner demand to shape material into new and significant forms," quoted Miss Martha Pierce from Dewey's definition in her address to the Business and Professional Women's club at Christmas candlelight dinner Tuesday evening at Hotel Stratton. Miss Pierce says that it is hard to distinguish between Christmas art and Christian art. "Man uses his hands to make an expression which is art." Sculpture is not art but a product of it.

Much beautiful mosaic art work was destroyed in the last century because it was thought that people were worshipping the images rather than their God. An unknown artist of that period created works that rate higher than any modern or ancient ones, said Miss Pierce. Artists have a different attitude toward life than most humans. Only a few people and lovers of beauty can create these beauties.

Miss Pierce stated that the trip to the manger, the birth of the Christ child and the presenting of gifts are the divine expressions created or painted. The first Madonna, painted to present more of a human rather than the triangular lines, was carried before a procession and placed over the altar. The face of the Madonna is loved by everyone and thought of as the ideal lady.

"In modern times the religious theme is rarely used. We have lost something," said Miss Pierce. "Why is it that no modern artist can paint to move the emotions?" is the question she arises, in many minds. Few modern artists have tried a Madonna. Their Madonnas have more of an earthly mother than did those of old. The face of the modern Madonna doesn't seem to have the expression that the original had. It is just pretty.

Miss Pierce described some of the pictures that are not heard of very often. Some of these were exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. These pictures were by artists from different parts of Europe and the way that they expressed the birth of the Christ Child. This is regional art. The Italian expressed his home town. The Venetian used costumes of his country. It was said of the Venetian artist that he tried to write a book on a piece of paper. He always used animals in his pictures since he did them well. The Venetian artist also used a contrast of light and dark in his pictures. The German artist painted Mary as a typical German woman. He also made some mistakes in the painting as many beginners do but the mistakes are overlooked because of the beauty of it.

Mrs. R. R. Smith gave a Christmas story. Nothing is so lovely as the original Christmas story from the Bible, she explained. Mrs. Smith chose one of Van Dyke's Christmas stories, "The First Christmas Tree." This relates our customs and tells of them in an effective and beautiful way. It recalls some of the traditions.

The oak tree was used first and was hewed down. Through the branches of this grew the pine tree. This tree was cut down and burned in the fireplace. The sparks through the tree are suggested by our colored lights. The Christmas time is a season for the children because of the birth of the Christ child. These were the questions answered in the story which Mrs. Smith gave.

Robbie Gibb sang two numbers before the program, accompanied by Miss Hazel Reece. The pieces were "Homing" and "Duna". The tables set for 33 were decorated with red tapers. The committee in charge of the dinner was Miss Evelyn Felber, chairman, Miss Savilla Yocum, Miss Kathleen McFarlan and Miss Evelyn Mellor.

A short business meeting was held after the program. It was decided that each member buy a gift not costing over 25c to be given for the Christmas boxes and bring these to the party next time. The club will have a dessert bridge Christmas party December 16. Christmas greetings in original form will be given by each member. Miss Ruth Ross will present a one-act play. The committee in charge is Mrs. A. D. Lewis, Mrs. Minnie H. Kay, Mrs. A. L. Swan, Mrs. E. E. Gately, Mrs. Minnie Strickland, Miss Hedwig Bokelman and Miss Nina Thompson.

Hold Candle Service At Baptist Church

"Carrying the Light of Jesus to the World" was the theme of the impressive candle light service in charge of the World Wide Guild at the Baptist church Sunday evening. The service commemorated the international plan of Guilds to hold such programs the first of each December. The Guilds Sunday each December. The Guilds, with Miss Florence Drake as sponsor, took the Guild covenant and Miss Hilda Hattig, Miss Beulah Johnson and Miss Irene Daws gave talks on this while Miss Drake lighted candles. Second part of the service was a pageant. Pairs of girls were costumed to represent different countries. A procession of American girls came from the rear of the church, bearing lighted candles, and lighted candles held by one of the girls representing each of the foreign countries. The foreigners then lighted candles of the others in their countries. As a quartet sang "Coming, Coming, Yes They Are," the foreign girls distributed candles among the audience and lighted these, the persons of the audience carrying the candles lighted on their way home. The plan represented the spreading of light in the world.

Liquor Menace THE excess in which imbibing of alcoholic spirits is indulged and encouraged, may cause a revolution of feeling that will sweep legalized sale out as quickly as it was swept in. A regulated liquor traffic was accepted by a majority on the assumption that it might be the lesser of two evils—bootlegging under prohibition being the other one. But temperance people who voted to legalize the traffic, did so to meet a demand—a demand believed satisfied in the dark under prohibition. They did not vote to create a desire to dignify drunkenness as a worthy social accomplishment.

The way the liquor business is urged and flaunted and the way its product has become an increasing menace to automobile travel, lead to the belief that the time is not distant when, unless regulation becomes more effective, people will demand a change.

Out at Santa Barbara, Calif., a mother while under the influence of liquor, shot her son. The boy had rebuked his mother for drinking. Failure to stop her indulgence, the boy, aged 16, retaliated by turning himself to drink. Then, as the story is told, the mother proposed to check the boy by shooting him. He may live, as hoped, but whatever may be the turn in the dial of fate, only a pall of agonizing regret can hang over those who engaged in an unabashed saturnalia of fiery drink.

The Omaha World-Herald which has stood for regulation under the law, sounds alarm over dangers to the road caused by an increasing number of drunken drivers. That newspaper points out that the results of a recent investigation show drunken drivers have generally increased 45 per cent since prohibition was repealed — in Colorado 200 per cent and in Arizona 113 per cent. The World-Herald urges stricter enforcement of laws and more certain imposition of penalties.

But just when is a motorist too drunk to drive safely? Just how much liquor can he be encouraged to drink without becoming a menace to himself and to fellow motorists? When has a fellow taken aboard just enough alcoholic spirits and not too much to manage a high-powered car without endangering human life?

Atlanta Speech PRESIDENT Roosevelt's Atlanta speech blandly explained how in March, 1933, the country had been caught by the seat of the trousers just as it was toppling over into an abyss of utter ruin. He took hold in the nick of time. In the spring of 1933 when the world barely escaped coming to an end for the United States, the president said bankers flocked to Washington in a fever of anxiety. He said he told them the government would have to spend considerable money. He asked the bankers how much indebtedness the government could stand, and they said from fiftyfive to seventy billions of dollars even at the low values of the time. He told them such an indebtedness was unnecessary, anyway, even if they were willing, he just wouldn't do it. His stand against a national debt of the size proposed by the bankers seemed to be accepted by himself as almost heroic.

Since the speech an effort has been made to locate and name the bankers who looked with favor on building up a giant tax burden, but so far the quest has been in vain. The public would like to have the pictures of usually conservative bankers who believed in buying back prosperity and who were willing to tax the country to the limit to do it.

Senator Norris EDITOR W. F. Cramb of Fairbury, who is a democrat of the old school, and who took an uncompromising stand against the Roosevelt regime as soon as he scented its socialist trend, is quick to frown on Senator Norris' renewed candidacy as proposed and sanctioned by the administration head. Cramb commends Norris' service in Washington as useful in the old days, but says he is too much of a left-winger to help preserve America's precious fundamental ideas. Cramb says among other things: "We have supported Norris several times, but will not do it again. There was a time when over-radicalism could be tolerated, because there was little danger it would become rampant. But that time is passed. Right now the danger is that this country will swing away from American principles either to Russian socialism or Italian fascism. And Norris is helping in that direction. The duty of Nebraska voters is plain — they must clip the wings of that element and Norris is a very prominent feather in the wings which must be clipped."

Samuel McKeivie, publisher of the Nebraska Farmer, contributes an enlightening and logical discussion of the government's AAA plan to the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. McKeivie finds so many requirements in the AAA program that a farmer gains too little in one way for what he forfeits in other ways. There is a growing disposition to give agriculture a background of just trade laws and then let it be worked out according to the experience and judgment of the farmer without interference, from one-cylindered theorists — without high-brow advice or long-distance planning. McKeivie came from a long line of practical farmers, and he knows agriculture's problems and responsibilities from A to Z.

Glib James Farley, postmaster-general and head of the New Deal's national committee, reports on his return to the east that there is nothing to feel uneasy about in looking to next year's presidential campaign. With a smile of assurance, he names one state after another as certain to give the president a majority. His smugly offered conclusions seem not to be disturbed in the least by the steadily mounting opposition reported by the Literary Digest's national poll. Farley's idea of winning is evidently to turn deaf ears to unfavorable reports and shout his wild imaginings above the gathering storm.

Dictator Mussolini asks Italian women to give their gold rings to the cause of the war against Ethiopia, and in return the government will bestow on them appropriately inscribed steel rings. The women will be forced to sacrifice their gold ornaments as they were forced to sacrifice their sons, all to wage a war of conquest to in-trench and glorify fascism, further to fasten its tentacles on a defenseless people whose opinions are not consulted and whose voice if heard would not be heeded.

Publisher Hearst asks that Prof. Rex. Tugwell be retired from government service on account of his conflict with America's original form of government. If Hearst is on the right track, it would seem to prove that Prof. Wirt was also on the right track when he launched charges against the administration early in its experience.

Imposition of sanctions on Italy will tend to bring that nation down to a par with Ethiopia in war strength. Ethiopia is so far behind in the implements and understanding of modern warfare that Italy ought to be able to bear a lot of handicaps.

Referendum Reflections.

Nebraska Farmer: The recent corn-hog referendum in which Nebraska voted a little better than three to one in favor, and the nation at large, six to one, is more illuminating when carefully analyzed in the light of facts.

We cite two instances of questionable methods of propaganda and balloting which show the lack of uniformity in taking the referendum.

The first example is related by Wallace F. Short, editor of the Unionist and Public Forum, published in Sioux City, Mr. Short vouches for the report that corn-hog committeemen visited each farmer of a certain northwest Iowa township in advance of the scheduled date and endeavored to influence him to vote for the program. The farmer was handed a ballot and urged to mark it in favor of the program immediately. If unwilling, he was visited again, and even a third time, which in some cases was on the evening preceding the election. If the farmer still declined to mark the ballot for the program, with the excuse that he would vote at the polling place on the following day, the committeeman would inform him that all farmers had been seen and therefore the polls would not be open for voting the next day. A few farmers who visited the polling place on Saturday, Mr. Short states, found the place closed and therefore had no chance to vote. The election officials merely counted the votes they had collected in their individual farm-to-farm canvass, and announced the result.

From southwest Nebraska a subscriber writes us of the other instance. A committeeman had asked him to vote for his father, who was away from home. The son replied that he was quite sure his father would vote against the program, whereupon the committeeman conferred with a co-worker and then departed with the remark, "We don't want his vote, then."

We are not saying that these two cases were representative. Our readers know best about that based upon how the referendum was conducted in their own communities. Further letters will be welcomed.

Another interesting speculation is how many of the 75,154 Nebraska voters were landlords not living on and operating farms. It should be remembered that for every tenant who is a contract-signer there is a landlord entitled to vote. This would suggest a sizable reduction in the number of farms represented by the 57,205 who voted in favor of the referendum. Such reduction would also make the vote much smaller by comparison with the total number of farms in the state, which is 133,616 according to the 1935 census.

Alphabetical Agencies.

Omaha Journal Stockman: According to official proclamation the Federal Emergency Relief Administration — FERA to you — is no more, its work having been taken over by other alphabetical agencies. Perhaps that is progress, but the day we're waiting to see is when some relief agency of other government bureau is scrapped without two or three new ones being created in its place.

DECEMBER.

December holds much of joy and sorrow. It is the month of the world's greatest holiday season in which all Christian peoples share, and in contemplation of which human emotions multiply kindly thoughts and generous deeds. People are lifted above small bickerings—away from hateful rivalries. They search the past for holiday recollections. They remember their first and many succeeding Christmas experiences. Many faces conspicuous in old-time holiday festivities and later are now missing. Familiar figures in family groups have disappeared. Sadness courses through these memories, and as feelings rise to the joy of giving—to the joy of imparting happiness to buoyant youth—they are wrenched by broken ties that cannot be mended—by associations that cannot be restored. So, the season, full of good cheer and pleasing anticipations, is also charged with many griefs, aroused as the mind, looking about to bestow kindnesses, digs into the past.

Story

Wants Another Session.

Editor W. F. Cramb of Fairbury, who is long on seeing but short on hearing, makes this observation: "The governor better call another special session. The legislature did something for the blind but forgot all about the deaf. So that instead of the blind leading the blind, it will be a case of the deaf feeding the blind."

Plan Story Hour At City Library

Story hour for children is planned at Wayne city library Saturday at 1 o'clock. Mrs. Clarence Wright will have charge this Saturday and will tell Christmas stories of special interest to older children. A good number of children gathered at the library last Saturday for the first story hour at which Miss Ruth Heidenreich had charge.

BUSINESS.

Roger W. Babson, noted economist, says the next few years should see a large upswing in business unless something interferes. "All statistics indicate that business is getting better and should soon be back to normal," he says. In this territory, improvement is noted in some lines, but little if at all in others. The general tendency, however, is upward, and if the government's policies can be persuaded to permit the breathing spell promised, the Babson prediction ought to come true. Former depressions have been overcome and have been followed by periods of prosperity, and the present one should have the same experience. Some think the depression has been prolonged by an excess of government interference—by fanciful experiments and wild spending. Others—mainly those who are running the show—think government tinkering has been beneficial. Anyway, Babson believes that while unemployment is as great as it was in 1932, factory production is up to normal. The building industry which has been dragging anchor for some time is expected to develop action and absorb an army of idlers. If the president can keep his experiments off the back of business and business during coming months, hoped-for improvement in all lines should be realized.

candles in connection with completion of their pioneer project. Some of the children made paster-board molds and others dipped the wicks in the melted wax. The candles will be used for Christmas.

Begin Desert Project. Pupils in the third grade are beginning a desert project as the setting for Christmas. The children will make a new scene for their miniature theatre, using palm trees and camels. Jacqueline Wightman and Eleanor Bentback were named as a committee to go to the library and look for all material available for the study of the desert.

Has Birthday Party. Lynelle Shuck observed her seventh birthday Monday and gave a party for children in the second grade room. Lynelle had a birthday cake with seven candles which was cut and served to her schoolmates, with individual molds of fruit salad. Mrs. C. J. Shuck and Mrs. Lloyd Bradford were guests of the room.

Cleone Heine was 7 years old November 20. Mrs. Frank Heine and Mrs. Griess visited the second grade room that day and Cleone served individual cup cakes.

Virgil Stolze of the second grade had a birthday November 22 when he was 7 years old.

Activities in the second grade are centering about Christmas. Elizabeth Bonawitz brought from the library a book, "The Great Adventure of Mrs. Santa Claus," which Miss Ruth Ross is reading to the children.

To Serve Milk Lunches. Letters were sent out the first of the week to parents asking opinions on serving milk to children of the first five grades. A half pint of milk will be served to each child once a day for the sum of 13 cents per week.

Receive New Work Books. First graders received their new "Peter and Peggy" work books the first of the week and are enjoying all the things they are able to do with them. The books furnish the children with writing, reading, coloring and thinking problems.

Children will begin making their Christmas toys this week. Their first work will be in sawing out and painting Santa Claus.

Jimmie Liggett left the first grade when his parents moved to Lincoln.

Little folks in the kindergarten began work the first of the week on Christmas toys.

Tang of Crimson Cranberry Adds Zest to These Dishes

AMERICA'S own fruit, the cranberry, is finding its way into many recipes nowadays. And what a noble contribution it makes! In a table dessert, it's a perfect partner to the delicate smoothness of quick-cooking tapioca and lends the dessert a color to gladden the eye. In these muffins and in this gelatin dessert, the cranberry adds a crowning touch of deliciousness.

The Availability of Good

MANY individuals, voyaging on the troubled sea of material existence, may be likened to boatmen rowing against the tide. With strenuous and ceaseless effort they work as though against a power which they believe will, if not opposed, sweep them in a direction the very opposite to that in which they have set their course.

To each individual the desired haven is his highest concept of good, that state of human experience which he believes will bring him satisfaction and freedom from further struggles. Some strive to gain possession of something which they believe has been denied them, and others to recover something which they appear to have lost. Many are driven by a strong opportunity, success, honor, companionship, and the like. The tide against which men row is believed to exist in all its forms, including lack, limitation, poverty, and further struggles.

The teachings of Christ Jesus never indicate that men must struggle against evil as something real in order to gain a little freedom for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. We may take this kingdom as denoting all that is good, satisfying, and joyful, and the daily life of the Master was a testimony to the truth of his statement, for never at any time did he experience lack or limitation.

Printing ink stains may be removed by rubbing the stain thoroughly with lard, and then washing with soap and warm water. For writing inks, try washing with soap and water first. Then try cornmeal or salt or French chalk and talcum powder, brushing off as the ink is absorbed and repeating. If this is not successful, soak the stains in milk for one or two days, changing the milk as it becomes discolored. Or rub the stains with a cut lemon, squeezing on some of the juice and rinsing frequently.

Rub lemon juice and a little salt on the stains and bleach in the sun. Repeat or add more lemon juice if necessary.

Moisten the stains with lemon juice, or soak overnight in sour milk, and bleach in the sun without rinsing. Or dissolve 1 pound of sal soda in a quart of cold water and add 1-1/2 pound of calcium hypochlorite. Apply with a medicine dropper and IMMEDIATELY AFTER APPLY Oxalic acid solution and then rinse. The immediate use of oxalic acid is to neutralize the first mixture and prevent it from harming the material. Repeat if necessary.

Use cold water. Do not use hot water, or stains will set. After using cold water, wash with soap and warm water. If material is not washable after using cold water, sponge with chloroform, gasoline or benzol.

Dip in acetone and squeeze out. Material does not need to be washed if acetone is used, and it will dry very rapidly. If acetone is not available, use turpentine or benzol and then wash with warm water and soap.

Apply turpentine to the stains and then wash thoroughly with soap and hot water. If this is not successful use chloroform or benzol and then wash with soap and hot water. Or try rubbing in lard and then washing with soap and hot water.

If washing with soap and warm water is not successful, apply lemon juice and bleach in the sun. Keep the stains covered with lemon juice during the bleaching.

For superficial burns, apply immediately olive oil, sweet butter, lard, vaseline or soap. A deep-seated burn should be treated as a wound, and preferably by a doctor.

Rub with wood or grain alcohol or ether. Then wash with warm water and soap.

World Events

A movement is under way for England, France and Germany to form an arms agreement. America's air mail service to Hawaii and the Philippines started last Friday. The ship will reach Honolulu in 18 hours and Manila in 60 hours.

Mussolini is asking Italian women to give their gold wedding rings to him to replenish the country's finances. He promises to replace them with steel bands.

A stream of fiery lava broke forth out of Mauna Loa, the world's second largest active volcano, on Hawaii. The flaming red mass could be seen 60 miles in darkness.

President Roosevelt is asking for floating of a 900 million dollar loan to finance work relief projects this winter. The sum brings the debt to a new high peak of $30,500,000,000.

The corn-hog officials have drafted the 1936-37 program. The proposed contract includes paying farmers $2.50 a head for hogs produced up to 50 per cent of their 1932-33 average, 35 cents a bushel on estimated yield of acres retired from corn production, permitting hog production up to the 1932-33 average, and requiring farmers to plant 25 per cent of their corn base.

Over-Stimulation of Agriculture. Omaha Journal-Stockman: More farms are being operated in this country now than five years ago. There are more farmers and many thousands more acres under cultivation than in 1930. The full 1935 census figures have not yet been compiled but enough state reports have been tabulated to demonstrate that we have more farms, more farmers and more land under the plow than five years ago.

Another thing, with modern farming methods and modern machinery, production per man power on the farms and ranches of this country is undoubtedly greater than it was before. Men are producing more farm products per acre than at any other period in the history of the nation and it naturally follows that potential production of farm products is greater now than ever before.

The question naturally comes up: Why should the government be expending millions of dollars in efforts to increase acreage and production? Why expend millions in efforts to get more farmers out on to land? In view of the fact that production is already in excess of domestic consumption, it would seem unwise to go ahead increasing production of farm products without also providing a market for these products.

Still another angle to this back-to-the-farm program is brought out in a survey of the problem just recently made by three distinguished professors of McGill university, Canada. These three professors, Dr. Car. A. Dawson, Lloyd G. Reynolds, and L. C. Marsh, believe that the possibilities of city residents making a success on the land are limited. Instead of relieving the situation in our congested centers of population, they only serve to further complicate the social and agricultural situation.

The re-organization of the occupational abilities of mature persons is a long-time process and involves great uncertainty, they assert. "The price is too great from every point of view and it seems most unwise to attempt to reconstitute agriculturists out of persons who have dwelt for many years in urban centers.

"As the farmer approaches the point where a very small proportion of his living is obtained by selling his products and purchasing goods and services with the proceeds, his standard of living becomes excessively low. Farmers 'live off the land,' but for the most part indirectly by way of accessible markets. An accessible market is a fundamental pre-requisite of modern settlement."

Observation and experience in this country confirm the conclusions of the Canadian economists. Attempts to make successful farmers out of unsuccessful city dwellers has resulted in failure after failure and have made matters just that much more difficult for the actual farmers.

So long as the number of farms and farmers is increasing, perhaps this is a natural solution of the problem. To over-stimulate this movement by subsidies and doles is not only unwise, it is positively dangerous to the nation's greatest and most vital industry—agriculture.

Rev. W. Dierking Speaks At Club
Henry Ley Reports On Plans Of Organization For Holiday Season.

Rev. W. F. Dierking addressed members of the Young Business Men's club on the subject of "Dreams" following 6:30 dinner at Hotel Stratton last week Wednesday evening.

Rev. Dierking stated that he picked the individual who had never had dreams of higher attainment, plans for a distant goal or desires for the seemingly unattainable. "Every individual should have dreams," said Rev. Dierking.

He stated that his particular dream was of a trip to the Holy Land and to the catacombs of Rome for an intensive study of the early beginnings of the Christian religion. Rev. Dierking feels that a great deal could be learned along this line from the catacombs.

Business discussion at the meeting included a report from Henry Ley on the progress being made in securing entertainment for the holiday season, stressing the free-moving picture to be shown for the benefit of children of the community and the selecting of Santa Claus. He also reported on decorations for Main street, work to be started in the near future.

Dr. L. F. Perry reported that a play had been selected to be given by members of the club at the new city auditorium sometime during the winter months.

Ed. Dapt was voted into the organization as a new member.

LYNETTE RENNICK HERE ON VISIT AFTER SEVEN YEARS

Former Wayne Girl Taught On Island Of Puerto Rico — Tells Of Winter Trip To Panama Canal Zone.

Miss Lynette Rennick arrived here the first of last week from San Francisco, Calif., to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Andrews, for the first time in seven years. This is Miss Rennick's first visit to Wayne in seven years. She explained the reason for her absence and how she has been in California since that time, for several years as secretary to the manager of a large hotel in Berkeley. For the past few months Miss Rennick has been in Hollywood with her sister, Mrs. David Townsend.

Last December Miss Rennick took a boat trip to Panama from San Francisco, on one of the "white fleet" belonging to the United Fruit company. The boats are slow moving but are immaculately clean, beautifully new and shining. On Christmas day she watched the loading of 45,000 stems of bananas on the fruit boats at Puerto Armales.

Miss Rennick took an airplane trip across the Panama canal, one of the most impressive sights imaginable. After landing at the port of Balboa, to cross the canal one must either go by train or by airplane. There are no roads crossing the canal. The first sight of the shoreline from the boat is very lovely, the jungle-like vegetation glowing richly from its setting of blue sky and water.

Many people take the trip down the coast for the rest of the leisurely trip affords, going down and returning on the same boat. Miss Rennick remained a week in Panama, the complete trip taking a month. The trip by water was of 19 days duration, nine days down and 10 back.

Panama has a polygot assortment of races—Chinese, Japanese, Europeans, Negroes, Indians, Mexicans and Americans. The zone is a meeting pot for the nations of the world. Miss Rennick visited friends at Cristobal and had a number of short trips to ruins of a vanished civilization. She explored the ruins with the golden rule and was much interested in the construction.

In Cristobal all traffic is the opposite of that in the United States, showing the English influence. Miss Rennick laughingly stated that the first hour in Cristobal is the most nerve-racking of her life. The city is located on the Atlantic side of the canal and is much like coastal cities of Puerto Rico. Miss Rennick prefers the Atlantic side of the Panama to the Pacific side. The city of Cristobal is on the beautiful Cristobal bay, one of the lovely buildings of the city is a hotel built out over the bay.

Miss Rennick was in the city at the time of the aviation day maneuvers when all the army and navy planes were being shown.

The former Wayne girl has noted an increase in building activities in the San Fernando valley of California within the past few months. Many new homes of the Monterey type are being built although there is not so much activity in business buildings. Homes being built now are of the moderately priced, five or six-room bungalow type.

Miss Rennick was accompanied from California by Mrs. D. J. Cavanna of Wayne, who had visited her in California for several weeks. She will return to the west, accompanied by her cousin, George Rennick of Platte, and the two will take the southern route, stopping at Williams, Ariz., to visit Mrs. Albert H. Hudson and Miss Cecilia Reardon.

WAY BACK WHEN

Here it is almost time to go up in the attic looking for the Christmas tree decorations. Let's see now, where did I put those two strings of tree lights? Oh yes, in that green box in the old hair-dress trunk. And here's some of that angel hair left over from last year—and those glass balls the children are always so crazy about. And yes—here's the star and the angel for the top of the tree!

But do you remember away back when—? Everyone in the house sat down to help with the Christmas tree decorations, stringing popcorn and cranberries to brighten up the evergreen boughs. Out came the candle holders and the littlest ones were set to cleaning out last

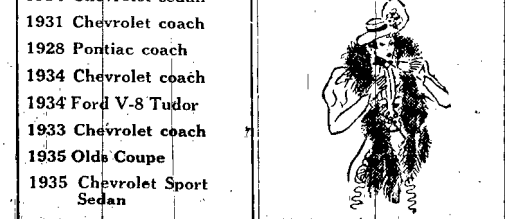

And here's what the well-dressed couple will wear for the Christmas skating parties down on Meek's Meadow. Note the silhouette effect of the trousers, the wide-lapelled top coat, the flowing cravat and the tall silk hat. My! My! what elegance. And the full-fur-trimmed

And here's the old-time gift selection from "him to her." Brush, comb and mirror in heavily engraved silver, to say nothing of the practical hair recover. They last forever—witness the number relegated to the attic.

Just one reproduction of the many photos in the old album. This is Aunt Matilda's oldest son, Jed. He went off to New York a dozen years ago—doing pretty well in Wall street where they make stocks and bonds. "Handsome, isn't he? Did you ever see such beautiful moustaches?"

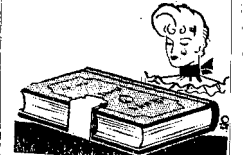

Annabelle is just back from an eastern finishing school for the holidays and is wearing the last word from Paris for afternoon tea. The scarf is made of real ostrich feathers and is called a boa. "My dear, hats are getting so small, they are positively unbecoming."

Holiday travel in the nineties with the very latest in luggage, to say nothing of the correct traveling costumes, brass-bound trunks were quite the thing. Remember the tray in the top with one side closed to keep the dust from fine lingerie? It took a lot of luggage for a lady to travel in those days. Apparel was a bit too voluminous to tuck in one bag and an overnight kit. Only one bonnet could fit into the hat-box, too.

The gentleman in the background is carrying what was known as a portmanteau. What, no telescope?

Ah-Ha! The old family album, resplendent in red velvet, with brass hinged clasp. Now, there was a way to entertain the boy friend! No Christmas gift of the gay nineties was more appreciated by different members of the family. Mother welcomed it when entertaining difficult callers. Sister found it one of the inventions of the age—two could sit quite close together on the slippery parlor sofa while looking at the photographs and lin-types of important antecedents.

And Brother could entertain the gang with caustic comments on "the old boy with the Santa Claus beard"—at least until Mother heard him. And Dad? Well, of course, Dad liked it if the family did. He hadn't much time for fold-overs like the women-folks.

Annabelle's party costume is the envy of all her old school friends. Sleeves are larger, waists are smaller, skirts are fuller and mitts are the rage. The pompadour is being worn with a high comb. Let us hope that Annabelle gets through the evening without a too-deep breath.

Ho-hum! These new-fangled night shirts aren't bad. Seems like someone might invent a slipper a fellow could put on after he takes off his shoes. Kinda glad Ma thought of this for a Christmas present. A man gets tired of always getting cravats and silk handkerchiefs. Ho-hum! Hope this candle won't go out.

COAL FOUND NEAR PONCA

From Ponca Journal for December 2, 1930: An excursion over the new railroad to Omaha will probably take off in a few days. The coal famine now prevailing in the east and west will not strike north-central Nebraska after the Ponca mine opens. Wood is getting scarce but people can pinch through for they feel sure that they will have plenty of coal to burn soon. With such a discovery as has lately been made in the coal mine it is hardly possible to think of anything else. Since the discovery here many neighboring communities are going to make tests for coal. At Yankeetown work will start on an artesian or oil well, coal hole or whatever may be struck in going to a depth of 2,500 feet.

From Wayne Herald for December 4, 1902: John Swanson, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Swanson, died December 2, 1902. Frank's building just north of O. D. Frank's place caught fire and was destroyed. Firemen saved the Wm. Piepenstock building just to the north. Most of Wm. Dammeyer's stock was removed but the damage to it amounted to about $1,500. Mr. Dammeyer will manufacture cigars at home for a time, and the Jones barber shop will move to the Boyd hotel.

From the Wayne Herald for December 4, 1919: Forty young folks have registered at the Wayne college for the winter short course. Temperature dropped to 10 degrees below zero.

"Each may have his own garden pennials. An ace tract or a back yard are not essential. The best garden is in one's heart; its products everlasting, with prejudice weeded out, and envy and spite pruned away. The gardener who plants the seeds of faith, hope and charity will have a garden that endures as the oak outlives the storm, the poppies on Flanders fields blot out the stains of war, and the spirit of Christ survives His agony in the garden of Gethsemane."

Mrs. Otis Stringer died December 1, 1918. A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tomme November 27, 1919. Wayne county Red Cross received 827 members.

CONGRESS

As Seen by a Nebraskan

One of the most interesting letters received since leaving home is from Leo K. Cotterman, of Manila, P. I. Mr. Cotterman is a son of Chas. Cotterman who was raised in Boone county and came to the islands a good many years ago, where he has been unusually successful. Old residents around Peterburg and Albion will remember the Cottermans well.

Japanese laborers work all day—and a long day—for wages equal to about what the American earns in one hour. Figured in American money here are some of the wage scales PER DAY for different Japanese industries:

- Textiles, 21c to 61c.
- Chemicals, 19c to 58c.
- Food, 38c to 53c.
- Paper, 39c to 53c.
- Wearing apparel, 35c to 70c.
- Wood and bamboo products, 52c to 67c.
- Printing, 66c to 85c.
- Building industry, 66c to 84c.
- Day laborers, 23c to 74c.
- Domestic services, 22c female, 23c male.

The mental industry pays the highest wages of all, ranging from $1.28 to $1.64 per week. Looking these figures over, perhaps you will see the reason more than ever how difficult it is to compete with the Japanese and maintain our American standard of living.

Foreign languages, French, German, and English are being featured in schools here. The English classes are featured in the larger cities and the English Society which has a large membership is having an annual convention this week in Tokio.

Radios are popular all over Japan. Crowds of people gather before the public receiving sets and listen to the day's news which is broadcast at various periods. The radio reception in Tokio and Kobe is unusually good. With their low wave receivers they get our western coast cities in the shape. They get London, Berlin and the Philippine and Australian stations here very well and they do a lot of re-broadcasting of these programs.

The "eyes and ears" of Japan is seen by the thousands of sail steam, and gasoline boats in the water. The Junk and Sampans are picturesque but they are occupied by sea farmers. The Japanese farm the water as closely as they farm the land. There is no respect for hours. Americans in this party saw workmen building houses and buildings as late as 10 o'clock at night. They saw factory workers who see no clocks. Men work twelve hours. Girls and women work ten hours. The pay is insignificant. Girls of poor families are farmed out to factories and certain institutions to pay off the debts of the parents.

Passengers are told that they must not take photos of the water fronts, fortified places or the fortifications. But the passengers don't know where these places are located. Neither do some of the officials, so the Americans take pictures. Bert Lord of New York, who's a congressman and a movie picture fan took a lot of pictures. Today's issue of "The Tokio Advertiser" states that he is suspected of espionage. This congressman, who knows more about farm to market roads than he does about forts, is bewildered by a front page story carrying his name in connection with a spy plot.

story in the Nichi newspapers here. He is credited with being here for the sole purpose of getting information about Japanese fortifications. His real purpose here is to be with the congressional party. But nevertheless the Philippine commission is followed about the various towns we visit.

Soldiers and sailors who sailed into the Port of Yokohama will remember the forts at the mouth of the harbor. Some of them were destroyed by the last earthquake. Others have been rebuilt. But it's almost a hanging word to talk about forts here. The spy system prevails. Even we are followed.

The American embassy in Tokio does a lot of entertaining. They have to do it to keep up with the Joneses of the embassies of the other nations. They gave a tea and reception for the visitors and thousands of people came. Like in Washington there seems to be a waste of gigantic amounts of food and liquid refreshments. To a congressman from the corn-hog country it looks like a lot of waste of taxpayers' money. But the scores of highly paid employees at the embassies say it is necessary. The Japanese are strict on all formal dress and formalities.

Railroad schedules are strictly maintained. A train is never late. It is an unforfeitable sin to be ten seconds late at the station. They use both steam and electric trains. They installed the electric trains but kept the steam trains running for months before using the electric trains until the crews learned to run the electric trains perfectly. They are thorough—these Japanese.

Mr. Y. Kagami, of the NYK line family, about 28 years of age, educated in foreign lands, believes Japan will become westernized more rapidly than many other countries. He wears European clothes. Speaks English perfectly. He owns an automobile. This young man is the author of a book on Japan and the Orient, which is read extensively by travelers. He believes in modern things which older Japanese are somewhat timid about. He goes out after the business. He wants to meet people who buy, who ship freight and who sell tickets to tourists.

On board this ship is Major Anderson who has been in the Islands thirty-seven years. He is returning from a trip in South Africa. He knows many people in Omaha and Albion. He remembers when the first Nebraska volunteers arrived in Manila. He asks many questions about business conditions in the states. He is now rated as a millionaire in the Islands and has just finished a study of conditions in the south and east Africa. He states the role for the poor whites is causing much consternation in that country. He brings out the results of the investigation into the poor white problem in Africa by the Carnegie corporation. This report shows that the work relief done in that country is disturbing the government. Here is a brief statement which winds up that official report: "There is emphatic warning against the present system of indiscriminate doles which cause loss of independence and may imbue the recipients with a sense of inferiority. It impairs their industry, weakens their sense of personal responsibility and helps to make them dishonest."

Major Anderson asks members of this party if that could also happen in the United States of America.

These Dull Times.
Omaha Journal-Stockman: Magicians, abound—or shall we say "lunatics"?

Highly learned experimenters talk on the one hand in all seriousness and shorter stingers of none at all; and on the other hand of hens with heritable resistance to disease, as if there things were commonplace and already attained.

J. N. "Ding" Darling resigns from his position as chief of the biological survey, tired of endless arguments with various government bureaucrats which would drain the swampy homes of his beloved ducks in order to grow more crops, while others maintain that such areas should be flooded deeper to supply water for the irrigation of dry places. In the meantime all of us are confronted with the specter of a surplus which was but recently entirely too real.

The man with the hoe, or the ten-plow tractor as the case may be, is prone to make wild gestures in silence if confronted with such an array of confusing facts. One political demagogue shouts in his ears, "We are headed straight to the bow-bows," while another locks alluringly and promises, "Follow me right into Utopia."

Perhaps one of the great safeguards of the times is his tendency to close his ears and go his own sweet way.

Maybe chickens can be bred which are resistant to the worst diseases, and perhaps the idea can be extended over into other kinds of live stock. The field is broad, and the farmer will be glad to utilize any such developments. Some will find a place for more readily domesticated bees.

Economists predict an expanding output of farm products and somewhat lower prices, but the heartening part of the situation, considered in the light of experiences of recent years, is the outlet which appears to be opening up for food supplies which are being grown. That is the greatest magic of it all—or maybe it is lunacy. Who can tell?

CAUGHT IN THE WILD By ROBERT AMES BENNET

CHAPTER I The Cheechacos.

GARTH knelt upon the planks of the small floating wharf to fasten a pitch-splanted patch on the bottom of his upturned birch bark canoe. In the midst of his work he paused to listen. A faraway drone was just audible above the turg and hum of insects.

A plane was coming down river towards the emergency refueling station at the old abandoned trading post. Yet the regular schedule of the line did not call for the northbound Belanca for several days.

Though his thoughts lingered on the approaching plane, his eyes and hands turned to the patching of the canoe. The craft must be made ready for the weeks of winter paddling. There would be some top-drip time for the thousand mile trip out before the winter freeze-up.

As he finished the patch the loud drone of the motor swelled into a staccato roar. He turned to watch the white monoplane swoop down and take the water like a spluttering duck.

The pilot started to taxi shoreward. Garth again set about patching the small leak. A sudden silence told that the motor had been stilled. Across the bush came a curt order:

"Ho, Jack, fend off and snub her." Garth leisurely twisted around to eye the incoming craft. She was a beautiful medium-sized plane with a cabin behind the semi-enclosed cockpit. Between the pilot and the river current she was driving toward the upstream side of the wharf at a speed that promised to smash the pontoons.

Yet neither of the two helmeted persons in the cockpit made a move to climb down in readiness to ward off the shock.

In the North abledomed men are supposed to wait upon themselves. More, the pilot's tone had been that of a man commanding an inferior. Garth stayed motionless, waiting for the crackup with cool curiosity.

At that the smaller person cried out in a sharp, almost shrill voice: "Quick, you gawping dummie!"

The fact that one of the pair was a woman made a vast difference. Garth caught the end of the mooring line flung by the pilot, and the river current she was driving toward the upstream side of the wharf at a speed that promised to smash the pontoons.

Aided by a slight swerve in the current, he was able to walk the plane to the outer end of the wharf before the nearer pontoon could hit the float logs. As the aircraft glided clear, he made the line fast to a ringbolt and returned to his canoe.

"What the devil?" snapped the pilot. Come back, you fool. Take in the slack. You're swinging his canoe into the water and stepped aboard to test the last patch. The airplane, having drifted downstream to the end of the line, swung around and lay nosing the current. Neither the man or the woman made a move until Garth drove his canoe ashore and lifted it atop the stony bank.

As he climbed to the front of the old post store, above the base of the wharf, he saw the pilot at last swing down to haul on the line. Inside the big log cabin he crossed to one of the rear rooms and put a light hand on the forehead of the snoring man in the nearest bunk.

"Turn out, Tobin, visitors." The grizzled-headed station tender roused up to blink and peep.

"Visitors? You're not stringing me, Mr. Garth?"

"No, never plane." Tobin slipped on his mooring and hobbled out into the storeroom. The pilot had nosed his plane head and tail to the lower side of the landing stage. He was handling his woman companion down from the cockpit. Both had replaced their leather flying helmets with hats and mosquito nets.

They went in under the overhanging wing to the second door of the cabin. It opened to the out-thrust of a portly man in city clothes. Assisted by the pilot, he managed to get down upon the wharf by means of steps lowered from inside the cabin.

Garth spoke to the supply tender: "The only a stray prospecter, Tobin, understand?"

"Aye, sir," grunted Tobin. Without a word of greeting, he hobbled back a few steps as the pilot and his passenger stepped in over the rough threshold.

The portly man opened a gold-mounted cigar case. The young woman produced a long amber-stemmed cigarette holder. This was promptly filled by the pilot, who paused only to snip a mosquito net on his clean-shaven cheek before striking a match.

Out went Garth's hand in a swift clutch that caught the flaming match in his enlaced palm. The pilot, who was as tall as Garth and heavier built, turned to stare down at him in cold anger.

"You insolent rounthead! Clear out of here."

Garth smiled. Tobin did the answering. "Huh, crazy loon! Lightin' matches in here. Can't you read the sign? No smoking." Bouché him, too."

The pilot thrust a hand inside his leather jacket. "Try it. I'll drill both of you."

"How frightful," said Garth. "You must imagine this is a Wild West show. Please don't shoot until the lady can get outside. Shots are even more apt than matches to explode all this gasoline."

The portly man snapped shut his cigar case.

"That's so! You have no cause to be ruffled, Vivian. The fellow seems to have acted on a well-intended impulse."

The pilot's hand came out empty from inside the jacket. "Why couldn't the fool have spoken a warning?"

Garth had sized up the man. He expected to hear an apology for the abuse or thanks for saving the visitors from possible annihilation. With an indifferent smile, he shifted the gaze of his gray eyes to examin-

The woman member of the party. Her glasses had led him to think her older than the pilot. Under her rouge and powder her face was thin and drawn. Its lines might have belonged to a woman in the middle-thirties. Her blue eyes looked more than bored and cynical. Their fireless matched the lined face.

Yet, upon examination, Garth saw she could not be seen in the mid twenties. Traces of girlish freshness still lingered in her painted face, under the bluishness of discoloration and disillusionment.

As she faced away from him, the pilot spoke to Tobin: "Get busy. Truck down sixty gallons of gas and five of oil—and be quick about it. While you're here is refueling the plane, you'll cook us the best meal you can throw together."

Down came Tobin's shaggy eyebrows. "Who'd you think you're bossin'? Shove along to a tradin' post for yer grub an' gas. This here cache is the visitor's emergency deeno."

The portly visitor took a billfold from his coat and drew out a paper. "Take a look at this order, my man. It authorizes me to requisition any of the Airways' stations for whatever supplies I wish."

Tobin read the order, and thrust it back, with no lessening of his doorness. "So you're Burton Hamill, are you? Looks like a straight order. All the same, you'll sign the book before you'll get a drop."

He turned about to open an oily account book on one of the stacks of gasoline cases. Mr. Hamill drew a fountain pen from his vest pocket with plump white fingers, and limned forward to write.

"There's your receipt," said the pilot. "Now have this dumb helper of yours rush out our gas, and get your pants on the fire. We want service."

"Yuh? Well, you're welcome to want it till doomsday. That company order calls for supplies. Don't say nothin' about cookin' nor service."

Mr. Hamill interposed: "All right, man. I see you're stiff from rheumatism. I will pay this young fellow to refuel the plane."

Garth turned his cool gaze upon the pilot. "Why not give this bird of yours the chance to earn a little more pay?"

"Because Mr. Huxby has down my plane all the way from Chicago, with only short stop-overs. Also, he is my partner, not a mechanic."

"Well, he's not the only party present who's not a kiwi." Garth pulled a small poke from inside his buckskin shirt, hefted it as he considered, and put it back. "Nor do I need your gas. I've got gas in my own pockets. You're just interested in what's in the pockets of the other party."

"No." "But your gold sack?" "Gold?" Garth muttered.

He drew out his poke again and opened it to shake a few metal nodules of metal into his palm. Both Huxby and Mr. Hamill stopped close to peer at the grayish silvery bits. The older man looked puzzled. The younger took a nodule into his own palm, eyed it a moment, and
