SMALL HERD OF BUFFALOES KEPT AT FARM NEAR HOSKINS

Langenberg Brothers Start Raising Animals As Hobby In 1931—Three Calves Are Born To Original Pair.

Buffaloes in Wayne county in the year 1935 may seem a bit far-fetched to those who are unaware of the small herd started near Hoskins in 1931 by George and Henry Langenberg. A sight of the shaggy beasts takes one in imagination to the days when huge herds roamed the Nebraska prairie—when westward moving caravans must forever be on the alert for the dust cloud on the horizon which meant a stampede of the maddened animals.

The Langenberg brothers brought two buffaloes from Grand Island in December, 1931, a male and female. An interest in the development of the beasts led the Langenbergs to purchase the animals. Three calves were produced by the cow, two growing to maturity and the third dying at birth in the terrific heat and drought of the summer of 1934.

ECONOMIST LOOKS TO NEW YEAR FOR HIGH PROSPERITY

ECONOMIST Roger W. Babson is optimistic over the business outlook. He expresses the belief that an average ten per cent increase in trade volume will be realized during the year. Enlarged demands in heavy industries, added to an already enhanced trade in consumer goods and motor products, are expected to push the depression out of the way this year. The rising tide of opposition to socialistic experiments on the part of the government and the firm position of business and industry against obstructive legislation have had a strengthening influence on confidence, and confidence has been one element most needed to prompt investment and absorb the unemployed. Demands on congress to cut out dangerous experiments and put the brakes on public expenditures are strong enough to be heeded and to give assurance of freedom from legislative interference. The election over in the fall with certainty of sound policies to follow, the condition of the country may be expected to be well into an area of genuine prosperity before the end of the year.

Sound Basis
 CALVIN Coolidge, president for nearly eight years, and an outstanding stickler for economy in public as well as private business, was known for the pointed way in which he drew logical conclusions. Here is one from his pen, a contradiction of many present trends in public policies:

"There is just one condition on which men can secure employment and a living, nourishing, profitable wage, for whatever they contribute to the enterprise, be it labor or capital, and that condition is that someone make a profit.

"That is the sound basis for the distribution of wealth and the only one.

"It cannot be done by law, it cannot be done by public ownership, it cannot be done by socialism. When you deny the right to a profit you deny the right of a reward to thrift and industry."

Coming Session
 The president is likely to be disappointed when he tries to use the whip-hand on the coming session of congress. The tables promise to be turned. For nearly three years members of both houses have been mere automatons. They largely suspended thinking for themselves, and trusted the White House to tell them what to do, and they shouted O. K. in perfect unison. The president gathered his ideas from encompassing college professors who were pleased to try out class-room theories on a sick country. It was a dull day when no new ideas appeared from some college laboratory. A nod of acquiescence from the president magnetized congress into approval. Reform measures usually took precedence over recovery measures, and the influence on frightened capital largely neutralized the effect of the government's unprecedented spending spree.

Opposition to the New Deal mounts as the Literary Digest's poll develops. Latest returns show thirty-six states with dissenting percentages and twelve states in favor with decreased percentages. In the forty-eight states, asked for approval or disapproval of New Deal policies, the percentages run 39.53 yes and 60.47 no.

It was eminently consistent for Alfred E. Smith to decline an invitation to the White House during his sojourn in Washington to make an anti-administration speech the last of the month.

The administration's pledge to give business and industry and the federal treasury a rest would sink deeper into popular consciousness if a national campaign were not impending.

scheduled to speak over a national hook-up in behalf of constitutional government as spokesman for an organization having that purpose in mind. This speech promises to be sharply critical of the administration's indifference to the nation's fundamental bulwark. Nebraska's Senator Edward R. Burke has gone to Washington convinced that the government's excessive expenditures have failed of their purpose and that private business should be kept as free as possible from federal interference. Published report of his revised state of mind, disapproving some administration policies, shows the spirit of independence that promises to steady and rationalize the coming sessions at Washington. The certainty that congress will do its own thinking and refuse to look to the White House for orders is refreshing and reassuring.

Looking Backward
 TO many who suffered broken family ties during 1935, the year etched into memory the blackest spot in life's entire experience. We share the feelings of all who thus suffered. One may have seen material possessions disappear. He may have worked without gain, or he may have lost his property through the ravages of the elements, but all such sacrifices are trivial in comparison with the surrender of a precious soul whose life had become an integral part of the family unit. Our biggest regret of 1935—as it is the biggest regret of many others—is that something could not have been done to avert loss that no human agency could repair. In our life—as in that of many others—the year struck a major blow, and now looking backward and seeing nothing that is not overshadowed by dark recollection, we wish for ourselves and for others similarly stricken that, as the new year unfolds, from the agonies imposed in the past there may be evolved a standard of thinking and doing more nearly in rapport with the unselfish lives taken away.

We cannot see how left and right-wingers in either party can stand on the same platform. Neither can yield enough to satisfy the other. The president should be able to satisfy radical elements in both groups, and unless the forces of discontent in his own party become unexpectedly great, he will be renominated. A republican who is a middle of the roader, safe as well as progressive, willing to go forward without threatening disaster, determined to cut public expenses and rescue the appalled taxpayer, would seem to be the hope of so called conservative thinkers in both parties.

MARK TWAIN
 The passing of a century since the birth of Mark Twain has revived memory of his experiences—his habits of thinking, his philosophy, his mental twists. His early life as a pilot on the Mississippi and his later experiences in the mining camps of the far west gave him a rough background. Despite or because of contacts with much of the seamy side of life, he abhorred every manner of cruelty. He was against hurting anyone regardless of race or color or creed—whether rich or poor, high or low—unless hurting him would keep him from hurting those who did not deserve to be hurt. He sensed the utter folly of war, and the frightful penalties exacted by war. One exception, however, was his sanction of freeing of the oppressed Cubans by armed force. Mark Twain's rich satire was often used to reveal and correct injustices. He was sensitive and sympathetic without a shadow of pretense, and he was wholly democratic in his ideas of government. He yearned for the time when the king business of foreign nations would be junked, and that peoples everywhere would have equal rights and equal opportunities. Had he lived to see the rise of dictatorships—unworthy successors to kings—he would doubtless have sunk still deeper into the despair with which he often regarded humanity in his old age. He was not pleased with the world. Its misdeeds led him to consider death as one's best fortune. An overflowing font of humor readily changed to an overflowing fount of sorrow as he counted the graves of members of his own precious family to prove that life's greatest tragedies and griefs usually come after one has reached the age of 40.

RITE HELD FOR EARLY SETTLER

 In 1920 when they moved to Wayne. Mr. and Mrs. Miller suffered a great shock September 21, 1923, in the loss of their son, Carl, who passed away suddenly, leaving his wife and four small children. Mr. Miller never fully recovered from the loss and from the death of his wife Caroline, December 24, 1927. Deceased is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Jacobson of Bancroft, Mrs. Bertha Aevermann of Rudyard, Mont., Mrs. Marie Bargholz and Mrs. Mabel Kohrt of Wayne, and one son, Otto Miller, also of Wayne. There are 28 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Miller died in infancy.
 Mr. Miller had been in fairly good health and had always been active until the past year when he grew gradually weaker. Deceased was one of the hardy pioneers of this section of the country and was industrious, providing well for his family.
 The following members of the Modern Woodman lodge were active pallbearers at last rites Tuesday: Russell Lindsay, Francis Lindsay, Joe Baker, J. J. Steele, Robert Jeffrey and Harry Hammer. Honorary pallbearers were members of the Sons of Herman lodge: Chas. Thun, Ferdinand Thun, William Blecke, Henry Hansen, George Otto and August Kruse. Those here from a distance for Leaving of the Lindberghs to find safety in England should and will stir up determined action to rid this country of criminal elements. Official corruption employed to enforce the law connive with racketeers to levy tribute on lawful business under threats of violence, how can gangster groups be made to respect the law? First, there should be an absolute clean-up of official circles accustomed to wink at crime or in any way in league with criminals. So called racketeering—extorting money from private business—is so in conflict with individual rights that it should be defied and put to flight by organized trade centers. Racketeering is so closely allied with other crimes that if it is allowed to go unrestrained it is certain to weaken law enforcement along all lines. Interested business groups may best join hands with agents of the federal government's department of justice to rout feeble-minded city officers as well as menacing gangster leeches. Forced to pay tribute to a band of racketeers, a private business man virtually strengthens the foothold of crime, and the policeman or other officer who accepts hush money, is more of an enemy to law and order than the criminal whom he is sworn to bring to justice. Circumstances surrounding the Lindbergh removal to England may arouse the American sense of duty to see that society is protected against plundering outlaws. Until this is done, comparatively secure rural communities will continue to win away from metropolitan centers those who desire the highest realization of the freedom and protection guaranteed under the stars and stripes.

CRIME

the funeral services were: Mr. and Mrs. August Jacobsen and son, Walter, of Bancroft, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Payne of Sioux City, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Magnuson and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Magnuson of Allen, Miss Ruth and Otto Miller of Concord.

 fence. The animals have been kept at the Henry Langenberg farm because of the numerous small canyons and abundance of spring water in the pasture land. When corralled the buffaloes are fed hay and some corn but when in pasture are allowed to shift for themselves. Salt is provided for them. The first winter the Langenbergs had the animals they were kept housed in the board corral—people came from far and near to see and exclaim over the two wild-looking creatures.
 "In summer," exclaimed one of the small Langenberg children, "they look awful funny, 'cause their hair comes out." An inquiry led to the explanation that with the beginning of hot weather the animals started shedding huge tufts of hair and present quite a mangy, moth-eaten look. In the fall the coats of the animals thicken and hair becomes long and shaggy.
 At birth the calves look almost like ordinary young of domestic cattle. In color they are a light fawn. The mother is much interested in her young and stands at guard when anyone approaches, lowering her head and becoming quite vicious if provoked. All three calves born to the female at the Langenberg farm arrived in late spring. A buffalo calf does not reach full maturity until after its sixth year and the animals live to be from 30 to 40 years old. The oldest calf at the Langenberg farm is larger than its mother and is about 3 years old; the youngest is about 1 and a half.
 When the two original animals were purchased at Grand Island, the male weighed 850 pounds and the female, 660. When the bull was killed it had attained a weight of 1,300 pounds.
 The animals stay closely together which is probably the instinct of self-preservation, held over from the days when "safety in numbers" was the only protection to the great herds which traveled in such closely packed masses that it was almost impossible to break them. In the early days huge howitzers or cannon were carried by covered wagon trains, for protection from Indians and also to split possible herds of stampeding buffalo. When the animals run, the head is lowered between the front legs so that the feet are raised higher than the head.
 If the animals at the Langenberg farm remain wild and unmanageable as they have been for the past few weeks, they will be killed and the meat sold. The meat from buffalo is tender and juicy and greatly resembles beef-steak. In the early days the hump was much prized for the making of pemican.

They have also noticed that in the crop regulation contract, provision is made for the coming two years with authority reserved to the secretary of agriculture to make any changes which he may deem advisable. With drought experience still fresh in mind, the secretary may permit himself to be advised by the weather, and decisions of the supreme court, promised this month, may have a bearing on his future plans.

St. John's Lutheran church at West Point, which has disbanded after serving the community since 1879, was served for several years by Rev. William Fischer of Wayne. The services were discontinued six months ago, and members of the congregation have united with other churches of their faith.

The early Protestant church organization was effected in 1866 and the edifice erected in 1879. The St. John church, belonging to the Evangelical Prussian synod, was organized 30 years ago in this building erected by the early Methodists. Some of the charter members living today are Mrs. Conrad Haber, Joseph Wildt, Peter Pacliot, Mrs. W. H. Howell, Charles Nitz and Mrs. Frank Wickert. Rev. Fischer had made regular trips to West Point to serve the congregation.

Stolen Property Found On Stranger

Marjorie Misfeldt, Teacher, Arranges Program For This Friday.

A strange giving his name as John Duball was found guilty in county court Friday on charge of leaving and concealing stolen property, and he was sentenced to serve 30 days in the county jail. The man had in his possession 11 pairs of men's leather gloves, valued at $1.25 to $1.75 each. The property was taken about noon Thursday from the Golden Rule store. A customer in the store saw a man take the articles and she notified the management. Sheriff J. H. Pile began search immediately and at 2 o'clock that afternoon he found John Duball walking on the highway about five miles south of Wayne. The man had received a ride that far and was seeking another ride when the sheriff took him in hand. The man was alone, though it is thought he had a companion when in Wayne.

Joe Lutgen escaped with minor bruises and a wrenched right shoulder when his car plunged off a 16-foot embankment east of Winnebago Friday evening. The road on which Joe was driving was quite slippery and when almost at the approach of a narrow bridge, he noticed a car coming from the opposite direction at a high rate of speed. Fearing that the two cars would meet on the bridge, Joe put on his brakes, his car taking the guard rail. The car poised for a moment on the edge of the embankment, then somersaulted to land upside down in a shallow creek. The car was badly damaged.

DISTRICT 21 IS TO BE MADE SUPERIOR STANDARD SCHOOL FRIDAY NIGHT

Marjorie Misfeldt, Teacher, Arranges Program For This Friday.

FIRST TO BE HONORED

At a program to be held Friday evening, January 3, in district 21, four miles west and one mile south of Winslow, formal recognition will be given the school as superior standard. Miss Marjorie Misfeldt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. B. Misfeldt, of near Winslow, is teacher and has arranged a fittingly dignified and interesting program for the occasion, with Miss Chloce Baldrige, director of rural education at Lincoln, Prof. A. V. Teed, head of the department of rural education at the Wayne State Teachers College, and Miss Pearl Sewell, county superintendent, as guest speakers.

Superior Standard School, District 21, Wayne County.

A school to be superior standard, must have a total of 95 points while the standard must have 75. Rules for standard schools include the following: School must be maintained for a period of nine months; teacher must have at least one year of experience or its equivalent; there must be adequate school grounds, one or more acres, kept clean; there must be a good well on or near the grounds and sanitary methods for drinking water; desks must be single and adjustable with 15 square feet of floor space to each child; light must come from the left and rear with windows equivalent to one-fifth of the floor space; there must be an approved heating plant and 200 cubic feet of air space to each child; equipment must include teacher's desk and chair, dictionary, globe, maps, blackboards and up-to-date texts; cleaning methods must be sanitary; doors must open outward; outbuildings must be as far apart as possible, must be clean, with board or lattice shields to screen entrances.

Members of the schoolboard and people of the district are vitally interested in making No. 21, the best in the county. Improvements on the building and grounds are being made constantly. Several bull pine trees, some ash and maple were recently planted on the school grounds. The school is often called "The Apex"—the building is on a rather high piece of land with a tiny stream winding below the base of the hill. Grounds have been graded up and arranged so that the building is on a higher level than the playground.

District 21 was able to meet almost all the requirements mentioned in the two lists when Miss Baldrige visited the school the early part of December. A few slight changes at the school have enabled the district to satisfy all requirements. Recently a window on the east side of the building was closed; a sturdy fence and cinder walks were completed the past summer. Members of the school board are: Fred Ulrich, director; Ervin Ulrich, moderator, and August Meierhenry, treasurer.

The district has organized a neighborhood club and members meet often with the teacher to discuss any problems which might arise and also to keep in close contact with each other. Miss Misfeldt is now teaching her fifth year at the school. There are 14 children of school age in the district.

The school has a full basement and modern furnace heating plant. There are two large cloak rooms, one of which is used for extra seats, which when removed, give extra space in the schoolroom proper. All seats are single with both adjustable seats and desks to fit any child. At the front of the room is a raised platform, seven and one-half inches high, for provided for cleanliness such as shoe scraper, flexible wire mat or cocoa fibre mat; there must be a Parent-Teachers organization or a similar organization in the neighborhood; teacher of a superior standard school must complete all units in children's work and in character education and she must meet the requirements for better rural teaching and hold at least a first grade elementary certificate; people of the district must cooperate with the teacher in every respect.

Teachers in the district since 1914 have been the following: Miss Kate Wiedenfeldt, 1914-1915; Elmer Behler, 1915-1916; Harold Anderson, 1916-1917; Magnuk Jensen, 1917-1918; Miss Collie Brooks, 1918-1919; Miss Marie Miller, 1919-1920; Miss Doris Swanson, 1920-1921; Mrs. Ellen Doyle, 1921-1922; Miss Ella Strate, 1922-1923 and 1923-1924; Miss Ella Green, 1924-1925; Miss Louise Kleinbach, 1925-1926, 1926-1927; Miss Mona Humphrey, 1927-1928, 1928-1929; Miss Iretta Buetow, 1929-1930; Miss Mona Humphrey, 1930-1931; Miss Marjorie Misfeldt, 1931-1932, 1932-1933, 1933-1934, 1934-1935, 1935-1936.

At the program scheduled for January 3 the school will be presented with a recognition plaque in copper which will be placed in a conspicuous part of the building.

Points on which the schools are judged for standard and superior standard rating are: Organization, 8; teacher, 10; grounds, 10; water supply, 10; buildings, 23; equipment, 22; sanitation, 10; outbuildings, 10.

Car Is Damaged In Accident Here

Glenn Wallace escaped with bruises when the new sedan which he was driving was sideswiped by a truck five miles south of Wayne Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock and the car went about 250 feet into a pasture. Wallace, who was alone, was driving south, going into the country to demonstrate the new machine. The truck was coming from the south. The back end of the car was torn loose so that the steering and brakes did not function. The side of the car was also damaged. Mr. Wallace guided the machine as best he could until it tore out 40 feet of fencing and finally stopped in the pasture.

TWO SHOPS MOVE LOCATIONS HERE

Miss Ethel Huff and Miss Emma Schmitz have moved their Wayne Shoppe to the former telegraph office building at 115 Main street. Mrs. Minnie Kagy has moved The Mode to the north Main street building which the Wayne Shoppe vacated.

Davenport Burns At W. D. Hall Home

Fire destroyed the davenport at the W. D. Hall residence Saturday afternoon. Wilbur, jr., was trying to find a dark place where he could set a candle so it would shed most light. He decided that beneath the davenport was darkest and placed the candle there with the result that the davenport caught fire. Older neighbor children who were in the house were playing upstairs. Nona Jane Hall was nearby, saw her brother's accidental plight and ran to a neighbor's to put in the alarm. Max Hendrickson happened by and carried the burning davenport out of the house. No damage resulted to the house or to other furniture. No insurance was carried on the davenport.

"LINDY"

By EDITH HUSE WIGHTMAN

What was that funny little "Wah! wah!" that came from mother's and daddy's room? Never before had Mary heard a noise like that in her house.

Mary was a little girl 7 years old who lived with her mother and daddy in a big white house right near a lovely park. Lindy also lived in this white house. Lindy was a big brown and white dog. He was Mary's constant pal and companion. If mother looked out of the window and saw Lindy she knew Mary was there too for they were always together.

It was a warm spring morning and the sun had peeked in and awakened Mary when she heard that funny noise from mother's room. Sitting up, Lindy always slept on a rug near Mary's bed, was sitting up with his ears pointed. He too had heard the queer noise. He gave a short little bark as if to ask, "What's come to our house?"

Mary answered her dog's longing look, "Yes, Lindy, there's something new in our house. Let's play we're scouts and see what it is."

Lindy didn't wait for a second invitation. He jumped up and, using his sharp teeth, pulled the covers off of Mary. It sort of surprised Mary but she was used to having Lindy play jokes on her and she sort of liked it. "Yes, Lindy, you have fooled me again," said Mary as she tumbled out of bed and tiptoed down the hall with Lindy at her heels. Mary's daddy met them at the door of the room where they had heard the funny noise and said, "Well, Mary, we have a real surprise for you and Lindy this morning." In a minute Mary was looking at the funny little thing on the bed. Lindy gazed first at Mary and then at the wiggling thing.

Mary, going closer to the bundle, said, "Oh, I don't know whether to cry or to laugh. I have been praying every night for a baby brother but I didn't think God would send him so soon. He's sort of funny looking and makes such queer noises but I love him all ready." She kissed him carefully on his soft, velvety cheek.

Lindy, who didn't like to have Mary pay so much attention to that queer noise, walked down stairs with his ears down and his tail between his legs. He went right out of doors. Mary had taught him to open the door by pushing it with his nose.

Mother was so busy that morning with the new baby brother that Mary had to be a good helper. She helped daddy get breakfast and picked up all her playthings. Mary decided she would show her mother how happy she was by doing as many kind and helpful things as she could. After breakfast she washed and wiped the dishes, swept the floor and then sat down studying the cookbook to see what she could make for lunch. Just then Mary thought of Lindy. She forgot to give him any breakfast. She went out of doors and called, "Lindy! Lindy!" but Lindy didn't come. Where could Lindy have gone?

After mother finished her lunch she said, "Mary, you are a good little cook. Everything tasted so good." Mary had fixed vegetable soup, eggs on toast, jello and milk. It pleased her to have mother like her meal.

Mary was so busy being a helper that she didn't think of Lindy again until night. When she went to bed she felt like crying for Lindy wasn't on the rug beside her bed. But Mary didn't cry. She knew she had to be brave with a brand new baby brother.

The days, weeks and months went flying by and soon Mary could take baby brother out of doors. Mother would spread a blanket on the grass and put baby brother in the middle. Then Mary would play peek-a-boo and make all kinds of funny faces. Baby brother would coo and laugh and try to pull Mary's hair when she came too close. Over baby brother would go and Mary would set him up and start the show all over again.

One day when Mary and baby brother were romping on the blanket, baby brother said, "Goo-goo," and pointed at something coming towards them. Mary looked and there was a shaggy, thin, dirty dog running towards them. "Could that be Lindy?" The dog came up to Mary and licked her legs and gave a short bark as if to say, "I'm sorry I ran away. I want to be your pal again." Mary knew then it was good old Lindy.

Lindy went over and licked baby brother's face. Baby brother kicked so hard and was so excited that he tumbled right over again. Mary picked up baby brother and put him on Lindy's back and said: "Come on, let's go tell mother."

Mother met them at the door. She had been watching from the window. As they came up to mother, Mary said: "Oh, mother, Lindy's back. I prayed last night that God would send him back to us. I know Lindy would like baby brother better now that he has grown bigger. Lindy can be a pal to both of us." Lindy just wagged his tail as much as to say, "Mary, you are right. I'm going to stay right here with you and baby brother. I want you both for pals." Mother too was pleased to have Lindy back again.

That night Lindy had a good bath and a big supper. Then he curled up on the rug by Mary's bed and after one little grunt went sound asleep. Mary looked at Lindy and listened to the cooing of baby brother. Then she thanked God for being so kind to her. Mary went to sleep that night thinking of all the good times she and baby brother and Lindy were going to have together.

Think Dempsey Stopped In Wayne Last Thursday

A luxurious greyn twin-six Packard sedan caused no special stir in Wayne last Thursday afternoon until it was punctured on the machine when it reached south Main street. The car stopped at the Langemeier service station and one of the men stepped to the pay telephone booth and called a friend in Omaha saying, "This is Jack. Put all the money on that horse's shoe." Immediately those at the station decided Jack Dempsey was visiting them.

Was it really Jack Dempsey who stopped in Wayne? All who saw him are convinced of it. He and another man and a woman were in the large car which bore an Illinois license plate. They had come from Sioux City and were headed for Norfolk and points west. Those at the station figured they probably had come from Chicago and were going to California.

The party was in a hurry. As Jack wanted the tired fixed in the fewest possible minutes, the station man called Don Miller to repair this while they searched for gasoline and other needs of the car. Jack asked Don why he didn't use a bumper jack and Don replied that the method he was using was quicker and easier when the car is loaded. The back seat of the machine seemed to be full of traveling needs. Jack advised Miller not to scratch the paint for he said, "Everyone else has scratched it."

While the party was having the car tended by Edwin Thies and Don Miller, the three went into the South Side tavern where Leslie Ford served them. They ordered food three times, chili, then hamburger and then raisin pie, and ate most of the pie. Raw hamburger was order for the tiny, sleek dog carried by the lady. The men flashed bills in large sums when making payments.

Jack wore a dark green, well-tailored swaggar coat and green hat which he pushed to the back of his head when he got out of the car. His large stature, his nose and other distinctive features assured onlookers that it was Jack himself. The lady in the party was about 5 feet tall and weighed about 120 pounds. Her complexion was medium. She wore considerable make-up and was smoking cigarets. She was in swaggar suit. The other man, whom Jack and the lady called Doc, was of medium size. He did not attract the attention accorded Jack and the lady. The tiny dog wore a sweater.

Jack commented unfavorably about the Sioux City-Wayne road, referring to the garveled highway as a dirt road. After the party had waited impatiently about 15 minutes they sped south on highway No. 35 toward Norfolk. All who saw them are still convinced that Jack Dempsey was the man in green.

Think Dempsey Stopped In Wayne Last Thursday

Was it really Jack Dempsey who stopped in Wayne? All who saw him are convinced of it. He and another man and a woman were in the large car which bore an Illinois license plate. They had come from Sioux City and were headed for Norfolk and points west. Those at the station figured they probably had come from Chicago and were going to California.

The party was in a hurry. As Jack wanted the tired fixed in the fewest possible minutes, the station man called Don Miller to repair this while they searched for gasoline and other needs of the car. Jack asked Don why he didn't use a bumper jack and Don replied that the method he was using was quicker and easier when the car is loaded. The back seat of the machine seemed to be full of traveling needs. Jack advised Miller not to scratch the paint for he said, "Everyone else has scratched it."

While the party was having the car tended by Edwin Thies and Don Miller, the three went into the South Side tavern where Leslie Ford served them. They ordered food three times, chili, then hamburger and then raisin pie, and ate most of the pie. Raw hamburger was order for the tiny, sleek dog carried by the lady. The men flashed bills in large sums when making payments.

Jack wore a dark green, well-tailored swaggar coat and green hat which he pushed to the back of his head when he got out of the car. His large stature, his nose and other distinctive features assured onlookers that it was Jack himself. The lady in the party was about 5 feet tall and weighed about 120 pounds. BAD BLIZZARD IN EARLY DAY

Location of Sugar Beet Factory Was Prospect Many Years Ago.

Early Days

From the Wayne Herald for January 7, 1897: The worst blizzard that has visited this section since January, 1888, began Saturday night and raged until Monday night. At times it was impossible to see across the street, and snow drifts were six to eight feet deep. No trains ran until Tuesday and business generally was suspended. People of Wayne and vicinity are about to conclude negotiations which will guarantee location of a sugar factory in this city. John Conway of Port Scott, Kan., was here to make the deal and he thinks the country around Wayne is the finest on earth for growing sugar beets. It is proposed to build a $125,000 plant. As beets produce 185 pounds of sugar to the ton and as an acre produces 14 tons of beets, the prospects for a profitable industry are promising. The social event of the season was the New Year's eve stag party with A. Dearborn. Assisting hosts were R. W. Wikins, H. D. Blanchard, E. E. Perrine and W. H. McNeal. The guests were W. S. Goldie, Dr. Hammond, Neal Harrington, R. M. Galbraith, Dr. Heckert, Ed. Mitchell, A. P. Childs, Henry Ley, Lon Ellis, Raymond Tracy, E. P. Olmstead, A. A. Welch, J. T. Bressler, H. C. Wright, W. V. Albert Berry went to Lincoln to be custodian in the house of representatives. From the Ponca Journal for January 6, 1881: The popular Silver Ridge seminary opened with an increased enrollment. The drill is stuck in the coal mine but the men are putting the shaft down anyway. A horrible accident occurred on the railroad near Covington. Eleven men were working to shovel out a deep cut which was filled with snow. The passenger train came along and the men stepped aside to let it pass. The train put on extra steam to get through the drift. Some of the men were too close to the train steps and were caught and thrown beneath the wheels, being killed instantly. Early Days from the Wayne Herald for January 1, 1920: H. A. Moles moved here from Sioux City and occupy the residence vacated by the Wayne hospital. Wm. Thielfoldt and Miss Emma Koeppel of Winside, were married December 31, 1919. SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are three young millionaire mining magnates; his daughter, Lillian, and Vivian Huxley, pilot and mechanic. Huxley claims to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lillian, product of the jazz-age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxley and family, after several tests, assure Garth that his claim is nearly worthless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing the treachery that lies ahead, Garth secretly removes a small part from the motor of the plane.
The engine swung into the cabin and fastened back ashore with a flask of whisky. During his short absence Mr. Ramill had ceased to gasp. He could draw deeper breaths. Two or three swallows of whisky fattened his flabby muscles. Helped by his daughter and Huxley, he started to his feet and staggered out along the rock shelf to the plane.
The wing end stood neck-high above the ledge. While Mr. Ramill took another bracer of whisky, Huxley boosted the girl up on the front edge. She gasped half of her father's collar. Huxley gripped his thick legs below the knees and heaved. Mr. Ramill's hands were on the edge of the rock. He pulled with all his whisky-borrowed strength. His corpulent body rose above the edge of the ledge.
Huxley gave a last upward shove. It enabled the girl to drag her father over on the convex surface. Huxley vaulted after to help her lift the prone millionaire to his feet. They started to lead him along the wing top to the fuselage of the plane.
Behind the backs of the three Garth stepped clear from the aiders and came forward, silent as a stalking lynx. Midway between the head of the plane and the spruce to which it was tied, he stopped and lowered his rifle, but down, to lean on the muzzle.
"Hallo, he's coming up!" "What's happened, Mr. Ramill?"
At the first word Huxley tensed and glanced over his shoulder. He let go of Ramill. After a moment he jerked around and thrust out the automatic pistol toward Garth.
"Swing up that rifle, but end forward," he ordered.
"Why, what 'you mean?" Garth questioned, his mouth half open.
"I mean business," Huxley answered. "Hold up that rifle—up above your head; then come forward and lay the rifle on the wing."
Garth rounded his mouth still more. "My word, man, you must be stark mad. I've no thought of shooting you."
"I'm taking no chances. Put that rifle on the wing, or I'll fill you full of lead."
"Mad—mad as a march hare," muttered Garth. "Don't shoot."
He lifted the rifle overhead, but forward, as ordered, and advanced, still gapping. He came within a step of the wing edge and paused. The girl was gazing at him in open contempt. He had been such an easy mark. Her father looked grave, but made no move to interpose when Huxley leveled his pistol and took diliberate aim.
CHAPTER III
Outbluffed.
A MAN of iron nerve might have held his breath from the levelled automatic of the mining engineer.
