

Year's Resolutions — St... To Principle — Restricted Advertising Policy — Crazy at 17 — Double-Barreled Tax — Warning to Children — Avoiding Envy — Value in Work.

New Year's resolutions relating to personal habits have doubtless been as numerous as ever this year, and many of them, found too much in the way of personal inclinations, will probably be broken before the year is far advanced. However, some New Year's resolutions touching public policies have been announced, and following serious consideration, they will undoubtedly be kept inviolate.

In his Nebraska Farmer, Sam McKelvie resolves to use every power at his command "to prevent the subversion of the American form of government." He proposes to do his part by preventing any designing "snakes" from sneaking up on the people and fastening the yoke of autocratic government on them before they realize what is happening.

Within a more limited field, we feel a more profound sense of obligation and responsibility. Many other editors are undoubtedly imbued with a similar determination to leave no word unspoken, no alarm unsounded, to keep people from unwittingly accepting a form of government that would strip themselves of future liberties.

In connection with asserting a spirit of wholesome independence in support of principle, we note that Editor H. D. Leggett of the "Ord. Quid" answers a criticism by saying he will lose in his proposed candidacy for the unicameral legislature rather than stifle opinions in regard to the New Deal. He had been warned that if he did not soft-pedal his opinions he would be defeated. He says he will discuss acts of the New Deal freely with approval and disapproval measured out according to conviction, and then let the electorate decide for or against his candidacy as judgment suggests.

As a new Year's resolution the Sioux City Tribune announced that it would "drop hard liquor advertising from its columns henceforth." Like other newspapers that have elected to drop advertising, the Tribune has reached the conclusion that liquor consumption needs no encouraging—that if regulation under license is designed to promote temperance, as some contend, the purpose is better served by not tempting the susceptible.

An Omaha boy, 17, suicided because a young woman, 19, already married, mother of a child, her husband in the penitentiary, refused to marry him until he could get a steady job. If he were not hopelessly crazy, it would seem some sensible person could have talked the youth out of such an act of desperation. He needed a guardian more than a wife.

The new plan to require an automobile owner to pay property tax at the same time he buys a new license plate looks like a surer way to distribute the tax burden. A car owner can't escape the license plate rule, but under the former plan he could, sometimes, if so disposed, defeat the assessor. In addition to insuring public revenue, the new system presupposes that if one can't afford to drive a car, he can't afford the double-barreled tax before starting out.

Children with their sleds should be certain to stick to streets set apart for their enjoyment, and motorists should be just as careful to avoid such streets, observing signs and cooperating in every way to prevent accidents.

On account of a "delightfully comforting" sensation, a fellow would satisfy with himself if in that way he did not betray a degree of shallowness that becomes apparent to everybody but himself.

Being busy at some useful task, best assurance of health and content. It is the surest panacea for a "nervous" condition.

Fast Trip West Made By Party Over Holidays

To travel 4,600 miles and spend nine days in southern California in two weeks' holiday vacation is the record made by Coach and Mrs. W. R. Hickman and son, Robert, Miss Mate Relyea and L. C. Gildersleeve who arrived home Sunday morning at 10. Mr. Hickman did all the driving. He made the last stretch of 1070 miles from Albuquerque, N. M., to Wayne without stopping.

The Wayne folks went west through Wyoming, Utah and Nevada and stopped a half day at Boulder dam at Las Vegas, Nevada. They left Wayne Saturday morning, December 21, at 10 and arrived in Los Angeles at 6 Monday afternoon. Returning on the Santa Fe trail they left Los Angeles last Thursday morning at 9:30 and arrived in Wayne Sunday morning after spending three-fourths of a day in a 200-mile side trip out of Williams, Ariz., to see the Grand Canyon. They found the northern route shorter 1700 in comparison to 2000 miles, and with fewer curves. There was very little snow and none that interfered with driving.

The Hickmans' visit was a surprise to Mr. Hickman's mother, Mrs. Stella Hickman, whom they found well. They also visited three brothers of Mr. Hickman, B. G. at Hollywood, Lawrence and Ralph at Los Angeles.

Mr. Hickman went to the Long Beach hospital where Dr. U. S. Conn is being cared for. He saw Dr. Conn but did not converse with him as visitors are not yet permitted to talk to him. The nurse told Mr. Hickman that Dr. Conn is out of danger and she gave every hope for his complete recovery. After Mr. Hickman left, Dr. Conn told the nurse that it was Mr. Hickman he heard speak. Dr. Conn will be moved in a few days to the Glendale sanitarium, one of the finest in the world. Mr. Hickman called Mrs. Conn and the J. G. Millers New Year's day and they were encouraged about Dr. Conn.

The Hickmans visited the Ben McEachen family at Huntington Park. Miss Bessie McEachen is to be married February 1. They also saw Mrs. Marguerite Goodyear Swartz at San Diego. She is a former Wayne resident. The Hickmans visited Rockwell naval flying field near San Diego and went across the border to Tia Juana, Mexico.

All the Wayne folks saw the New Year's day parade of flower-bedecked floats at Pasadena. The gorgeous floats made a procession that required three hours to pass. Mr. Gildersleeve attended the Rose Bowl football game in the afternoon. Mrs. Harry Gildersleeve having been able to reserve seats. When the Hickmans inquired for tickets the only ones available were $7.50 and up.

A neighbor of Mrs. Harry Gildersleeve told L. C. Gildersleeve that California no longer permit the name of Boulder dam. They call the new dam at Las Vegas the Hoover dam as it was originally named. Mr. Gildersleeve attended the Sunday school class in a large Presbyterian church in the city and the instructor referred to this as the Hoover dam.

Mr. Gildersleeve saw Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Milner and found both well. They are with the Ellis Miner family. He saw Mrs. C. A. Grohls at Pomona and found her nicely located.

The party enjoyed the trip and all feel that they saw lots in a short time.

Miss Susie Souders returned Saturday to her teaching at Springfield after visiting her father, J. W. Souders.

Fast Trip West Made By Party Over Holidays

To travel 4,600 miles and spend nine days in southern California in two weeks' holiday vacation is the record made by Coach and Mrs. W. R. Hickman and son, Robert, Miss Mate Relyea and L. C. Gildersleeve who arrived home Sunday morning at 10. Mr. Hickman did all the driving. He made the last stretch of 1070 miles from Albuquerque, N. M., to Wayne without stopping.

The Wayne folks went west through Wyoming, Utah and Nevada and stopped a half day at Boulder dam at Las Vegas, Nevada. They left Wayne Saturday morning, December 21, at 10 and arrived in Los Angeles at 6 Monday afternoon. Returning on the Santa Fe trail they left Los Angeles last Thursday morning at 9:30 and arrived in Wayne Sunday morning after spending three-fourths of a day in a 200-mile side trip out of Williams, Ariz., to see the Grand Canyon. They found the northern route shorter 1700 in comparison to 2000 miles, and with fewer curves. There was very little snow and none that interfered with driving.

The Hickmans' visit was a surprise to Mr. Hickman's mother, Mrs. Stella Hickman, whom they found well. They also visited three brothers of Mr. Hickman, B. G. at Hollywood, Lawrence and Ralph at Los Angeles.

Mr. Hickman went to the Long Beach hospital where Dr. U. S. Conn is being cared for. He saw Dr. Conn but did not converse with him as visitors are not yet permitted to talk to him. The nurse told Mr. Hickman that Dr. Conn is out of danger and she gave every hope for his complete recovery. After Mr. Hickman left, Dr. Conn told the nurse that it was Mr. Hickman he heard speak. Dr. Conn will be moved in a few days to the Glendale sanitarium, one of the finest in the world. Mr. Hickman called Mrs. Conn and the J. G. Millers New Year's day and they were encouraged about Dr. Conn.

The Hickmans visited the Ben McEachen family at Huntington Park. Miss Bessie McEachen is to be married February 1. They also saw Mrs. Marguerite Goodyear Swartz at San Diego. She is a former Wayne resident. The Hickmans visited Rockwell naval flying field near San Diego and went across the border to Tia Juana, Mexico.

All the Wayne folks saw the New Year's day parade of flower-bedecked floats at Pasadena. The gorgeous floats made a procession that required three hours to pass. Mr. Gildersleeve attended the Rose Bowl football game in the afternoon. Mrs. Harry Gildersleeve having been able to reserve seats. When the Hickmans inquired for tickets the only ones available were $7.50 and up.

A neighbor of Mrs. Harry Gildersleeve told L. C. Gildersleeve that California no longer permit the name of Boulder dam. They call the new dam at Las Vegas the Hoover dam as it was originally named. Mr. Gildersleeve attended the Sunday school class in a large Presbyterian church in the city and the instructor referred to this as the Hoover dam.

Mr. Gildersleeve saw Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Milner and found both well. They are with the Ellis Miner family. He saw Mrs. C. A. Grohls at Pomona and found her nicely located.

The party enjoyed the trip and all feel that they saw lots in a short time.

Miss Susie Souders returned Saturday to her teaching at Springfield after visiting her father, J. W. Souders.

President Speaks
 PRESIDENT Roosevelt's annual message to congress delivered at a joint session and sent out over a radio network Friday night, was more of a political harangue than an exposition of the state of the union. The time-honored custom of explaining the condition of each governmental department was turned into self-deification and an acrimonious ranting at any who had dared to question the wisdom or efficacy of administration policies.

The president's criticism of European and Asiatic autocracies and of those he charges with seeking autocratic power in this country suggests a smoke screen to cover the administration's inordinate thirst for power, notable in the NRA, happily outlawed by the supreme court, and failed attempts to muzzle the press and regiment agriculture. He compared free exercise of speech and individual will in the United States with suppressed expression in Europe where people do as they are told, not as they wish. And this very precious freedom, believed threatened in the last few years, has aroused determined efforts to preserve.

The president flayed what he called "intrenched greed," and we have a suspicion he thinks one is guilty of "intrenched greed" if he happens by industrious habits and careful management to be able to make financial headway, pay employes and other obligations promptly, and especially if he has been eyeing with uneasiness an increasing mountain of national indebtedness. He charges "intrenched greed" with the employment of "vast propaganda" to spread fear and discord among the people, and yet no source of propaganda known to human experience has approached in volume and incessant effort the outpouring from numerous federal bureaus since the enthronement of the present regime.

The president sounded an encouraging note about balancing the budget—this in the face of present and proposed expenses that would seem to make further unbalancing unavoidable. He advises against new taxes, but how the government can get along without them, even to bridge over a campaign year, would puzzle anyone who is not a member of the "brain trust." The president advises administration critics to go to congress and ask for the repeal of laws deemed obstructive to recovery. This thoughtful suggestion would not up to this time have found a very cordial reception among congressional groups trained to listen for White House signals rather than consult their own judgment or be influenced by the political platform on which they, as well as the chief executive, were hoisted into positions of responsibility.

Early in his administration the president invited criticism, but he has become resentful since the invitation has been accepted, as evidenced by his "annual message." Out of fanciful schemes like the Townsend old-age pension will doubtless evolve some practical plan to ease life's burden on elderly persons. The Townsend proposition is so wildly extravagant and offers so many chances for misuse that it could not be operated without doing serious injustice to those left to do the work and pay the taxes. Some form of reasonable security for the aged may be fashioned along workable lines.

Weekly sales at the local live stock pavilion are valuable for Wayne and surrounding territory. Each Monday buyers and sellers get together. The result is a lively local market, lending additional activity to a growing trade center. Plans to arrange business bargains every Monday are suggested as a contribution to the pavilion sale day. The pavilion deserves the support of both town and country.

If persistence wins in politics, as it often does in other lines of endeavor, Dwight Griswold of Gordon should finally land the governorship. He has just filed for the third time for the republican nomination. He was defeated in 1932 by a majority of 35,000 and in 1934 by a majority of 17,000. Proportionate headway would capture the governorship in 1936.

Coldest weather of the winter this week has reminded inhabitants that this is no tropical country, and that soft zephyrs do not harmonize with the popular idea of our mid-western climate. A light fall of snow puts the scenery in tune for the anniversary of the country's worst blizzard which happened on January 12, 1888.

Higher hog prices have responded to elimination of the processing tax, and lower pork prices may consistently reflect the same thing. This is the first time anyone ever witnessed ascending prices on the hoof simultaneously with descending prices over the block.

PROGRESS.

In the old days religious beliefs were more sharply drawn between accepting orthodoxy or nothing. The fellow who dared to question popular church dogma was spurned as little better than a heathen. His quest for logical grounds on which to fasten supernatural hopes was interpreted as execrable infidelity. For heresy Michael Servetus, physician and theologian, was burned at the stake in the sixteenth century. Thus, the earnest inquirer did not have a joyful experience. He was handicapped in trying to solve the mysteries of life by persecutions or worse. So, he often abandoned the task of trying to add new proofs, accepting the stigma of disbelief and disclaiming any and every basis for immortality. But times have changed. Society has become more tolerant. Splitting hairs over unimportant religious facts has given way to careful and unprejudiced reasoning. Science has revealed many things that help the inquiring mind satisfy belief, and this support strengthens the church in its spiritual structure. Instead of hindering the earnest searcher for truth, as was the practice in the old days, encouraging his study and profiting by it, put substance into belief in immortality—the one thing most desired by every normal person.

for worries—the quickest way to soften the blows of unhappy fate. It is important to have plenty for one's mind and hands to do, even if earnings are small. An eagerness to work and a conscientious endeavor to do well whatever is undertaken build a solid foundation under later development. The main thing is to keep employed whether the pecuniary compensation is deemed adequate or not.

Wayne Operator Claims Title To World's Youngest

Claim of having the youngest telegraph office head in the world is being made by the Wayne office. The subject was Leonard Pilate, Vermilion's office manager, is only 20. John H. Hilsbeck of the Wayne office is only 18 so the honor shifts until a possible contender appears. Mr. Hilsbeck also has distinction of having exceeded all previous records for the Wayne office in the sale of Christmas holiday greeting messages.

Mr. Hilsbeck entered Western Union service July 5, 1934, when he was 17. He worked as messenger until April 13, 1935, at Holdrege, Neb., where he was under supervision of C. B. Meller. He had no previous training in book work, typing or Morse operation. All of these were taught him by Mr. Meller.

An office manager must be 18 years of age. Mr. Hilsbeck received word April 13, 1935, that he was to be transferred to the Wayne office and it was necessary for him to work in the office as assistant until April 18, his 18th birthday, before the management could be assigned to him.

Mr. Hilsbeck took his first Western Union message at Christmas, 1934, in Holdrege. This was a holiday greeting. He was nervous but thrilled and at first forgot to take the message after copying it, this being very necessary. The message manager confirmed the message and heaved a sigh of relief. Things went smoothly from then on and the telegraph work became easy for the young operator.

A. H. BIERMANN.

Many things we cannot understand, and the way of death is one of them. Apparently robust August H. Biermann, Wayne county's state representative and a young man of great promise, has answered the final summons. He was a progressive farmer, a valuable citizen and a wonderful home builder. His family needed him, and society needed him. His constructive and forward-looking farm methods, his useful public service and his wholesome and steadily developing public influence were sources of inspiration. While his success was marked and gratifying, he was just getting fairly started. He was fast fashioning a healthy superstructure on a sound foundation. He had reason to look to many years of worthy achievement. He was young, successful and apparently strong, and he had much of life to live and many things yet to accomplish. Besides his wife and children who are sorely bereft, his untimely passing strikes deeply into the emotions of all who know his many character and lofty virtues. But that is the way of death. We do not know its why and wherefore, but we have an abiding confidence that earthly mysteries will be solved beyond the grave. Any other result would be cruel and unjust and out of harmony with the philosophy and hope of the ages.

Former Wayne Instructor Compiles Figures To Help Farmers.

Agriculturalists in the vicinity of Wayne as well as those in the other communities of the state can materially improve their economic status if they know the percentage of variability in rainfall to expect each year.

The university geographer has figured out that the median annual precipitation at the Hartington station amounts to 27.06 inches, according to its 42 years of rainfall recordings.

While figures seem to indicate that the average median rainfall for the last quarter of a century in Nebraska has not been as high as formerly, the university professor said there was a tendency to boost rainfall records in earlier years.

Mrs. A. W. Dolph In Washington For Holiday Visit

Nine days in the city of Washington proved most interesting to Mrs. A. W. Dolph who was a guest of her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Sonner, and her niece, Mrs. Louis Holmes, and family over the holidays.

The holidays brought Washington its coldest weather in 29 years. Snow and cold were experienced during Christmas week, and last week Sunday and Monday the storm resembled a typical blizzard.

The Washington buildings and sights are most interesting, Mrs. Dolph found with her relatives. Mrs. Dolph visited the capitol, hall of representatives and senate offices.

The party went to the wharf where a colored man got them some fresh oysters which were large and exceptionally good.

MARRIED SIXTYSIX YEARS IS HENRY KELLOGG RECORD

Are Old Settlers Of Wayne County, Coming Here 54 Years Ago.

Sixtysix years of happy married life is the record of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kellogg of Wayne, who last week had the pleasure of acting as bridesmaid and best man to their grandson, Francis Kellogg of Timber Lake, S. D., who drove here with his bride-to-be, Miss Mildred M. Osnes of Burke, S. D., to be married in the home of his grandparents.

Although Mrs. Kellogg is 80 years old and Mr. Kellogg is 84, both are well and enjoy doing their own work at the home on Nebraska street where they have lived for the past 53 years.

Mr. Kellogg came to Nebraska from Michigan and reared a farm near Wahoo in 1874 and Mrs. Kellogg and baby arrived a short time later. Trains ran as far as Fremont then and the remaining 20 miles were made by team and wagon.

They were rewarded for their patience and faith in the country. The hoppers left, never to return, in the great destructive hordes which had devastated crops for four years.

"We always seemed to have enough to eat, though," said Mrs. Kellogg, "but not much of a variety." Mr. Kellogg replied to this with: "No there weren't any crops to speak of, but there weren't any prices for produce through those years, if there had been any crops."

The Kelloggs first home in Nebraska was a small frame house with a loft overhead which was used for sleeping quarters.

Many Pawnee and Winnebago Indians stopped at the Kellogg home traveling from one reservation to the other. "They always frightened me if I was alone," Mrs. Kellogg smiled, "but they never molested anything at our place. I often gave them bread and coffee."

Some buffalo remained in the western part of the state when the Kelloggs first came here although the herds moved farther west each year, pursued by hunters. Deer weren't so plentiful even then but one occasionally saw one of the fleet-footed animals bounding over the prairie.

In the spring of 1881 Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg and family decided to sell their farm at Wahoo and move to Wayne county. The farm they purchased at that time is located 4 miles east of Wayne and there they lived until 1902 when they moved into town.

Clear in the minds of both Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg is memory of the great blizzard January 12, 1888. Wind tore at the buildings and snow almost buried them. No stock was lost at the Kellogg farm although many of their neighbors had animals perish from exposure.

When the home was built on the farm, Mr. Kellogg hauled lumber from Sioux City and Emerson. The men used rough materials were purchased at that person but lumber for finishing the dwelling had to come from Sioux City.

All staple groceries were bought at LaPorte until the railroad came through the county and the town of Wayne was started.

In the early days of farming in the county, crops were always good, Mr. Kellogg declared. "We raised the finest kind of wheat and always had plenty of moisture." In answer to an inquiry concerning the difference in soil moisture then and now, he said: "Yes, I think the drainage system in the country now has a lot to do with lack of moisture in the soil. The water level is higher all the time."

The SURPRISE

By EDITH HUSE WIGHTMAN. The Jones farm home was as busy as a beehive. What do you suppose was the cause of all this hurry and work? Yes, the Joneses were going to have company. They were expecting special visitors this time.

There were four in the Jones family, the 8-year-old twins, Betty and Bobby, and their mother and father. Now Betty and Bobby had some twin cousins who lived in a big city. These city cousins, Lois and Dick, were 8 years old too and had never been on a farm.

It was summer and Betty and Bobby had invited Lois and Dick to spend some of their vacation in the Jones home. They wanted the city cousins to enjoy the fresh country air and see the many interesting things on a farm.

Everything seemed so strange to Lois and Dick. After the suitcases were taken upstairs and mother had found some extra overalls for the city cousins, the four children, hand in hand, started to see the sights on the Jones farm.

"First let's go down to the big dairy barn and see the cows," suggested Bobby. "The men are milking now and maybe they will give us a drink of the warm milk." As they watched the men milking, Dick said, "Well, I never stopped to think that our milk comes from a cow. Ours is brought to the door in bottles so I never connected that with the cows together before."

"Swish, swish, swish" the milk went into the pail. "Say, I would like to try milking one of those cows myself," said Dick. One of the men gladly gave Dick his three-legged stool. Dick sat close to the bag of the cow and started pulling the teats as the man had done. But pull as hard as he could no milk came. The other children laughed and the cow, to show that she didn't like her new milkman, gave him a swish across the face with her tail. Dick jumped up, "It's not half as easy as it looks. I guess I will have to take some lessons before I can milk a cow."

Lois and Betty were watching the cow eat. "What is that funny smelling stuff the cows are eating?" asked Lois. "That is silage," answered Betty. "It is made of corn. Stalks and all are cut and then chopped up in a machine and put in a silo with some water." "I surely wouldn't want to eat anything that smelled like that," added Lois.

Bobby, who was always trying to play jokes on people, spoke up, "I'll bet you don't know how many sets of teeth a cow has." "Why two of course," answered Dick. "No, you are wrong," said Bobby. "Come here and I'll show you." With some effort Bobby persuaded one of the cows to open her mouth and there, much to the surprise of Lois and Dick, they saw only one lower set of teeth. There were no teeth above, just sort of a pad. The man gave them each a drink of warm milk. "My that was good," said Lois. "I never tasted anything like it before."

"Let's go have a ride on Pepper before it gets too late," suggested Bobby. Pepper was Betty's and Bobby's Shetland pony, their favorite pet and pal. "Lois, you ride first for you are the visitor," said Betty. Lois was afraid. "Then you go first, Dick," Bobby added. Dick wasn't so brave himself but as soon as he made up his mind, he went up to Pepper and jumped on in a hurry. The minute Dick hit Pepper's back the pony went jumping and bucking all around the yard. Dick, white with fear, was yelling, "Help! Help! Stop him. What shall I do?" The pony ran under a big tree. Dick grabbed one of the branches. Off went Pepper leaving Dick dangling from the tree. Limping a little, joined the other children who were doubled over with laughter. "Oh, you looked just like Tom Mix," said Lois. "Well I don't see anything funny about that," said Dick. "What's the matter with that pony?" "There's nothing wrong with Pepper," replied Bobby. "It's all your fault. You got onto him wrong. A horse or pony is particular how its rider gets on. If you don't do it right he will buck you off. You should always get on from the left side." Bobby whistled to Pepper who came running up with a mischievous look in his eye. After Bobby showed the city twins how to get on the pony, the four took turns riding Pepper until it was almost dark.

"Let's gather eggs, Lois," said Betty. "While the boys give Pepper a drink and turn him out in the pasture." Betty picked up an old tin can. "What do you want of that old can?" asked Lois. "You will find out when we get in the hen house," answered Betty. The girls went from nest to nest gathering eggs. "My, we are getting lots of eggs!" exclaimed Lois as she came to a nest with an old hen on it. There were some eggs under that hen so she went to reach for them. "Oh Ouch!" yelled Betty from the other side of the hen house. "That old hen won't let me have her eggs," sobbed Lois. "Everytime I go after them she pecks me." "Let me show you how it is done," said Betty taking the tin can and pushing it over the old hen's head. "There now. All you have to do is to reach under and get the eggs. The old hen can't do a thing," explained Betty. Then Betty took the can off the hen's head. "Oh! I see," said Lois. "That's the reason you picked up that old tin can. Next time, I gather eggs I'll get a can too."

It was four tired children who crawled into bed that night. But they were up bright and early the next morning with lots of pep. "Say, do you know what day this is?" asked Bobby. "Why it's the Fourth of July," cried Betty. "I can't be," said Lois. "For I didn't hear any firecrackers." "We don't shoot firecrackers anymore," added Bobby. "We would rather have a picnic and save our money for something worthwhile." "Oh! Can we have a picnic today?" asked Lois. "I think that would be lots more fun than shooting noisy firecrackers." Yes, I think

Mother has planned a picnic lunch for us today," answered Betty. "We can hike up to the grove and play games and eat."

After breakfast mother handed each of the children a box and said, "You can call this a surprise Fourth of July picnic for each of you has a box with something different. No one knows what is in the boxes. Now run along to the grove and play you are forest animals spending the day in the woods. And when it comes lunch time each one gives part of what's in his box to the others."

The twins climbed trees, played hide-and-go-seek and before they realized it the morning was gone. "Oh boy, let's eat," shouted Bobby. "I'm hungry as a bear. What do you suppose is in the boxes?" Because she was company Lois opened her box first. It was filled with big, fat peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. Dick opened his next because he was company, too. In it were four big red tomatoes and some deviled eggs. "I'll bet those are some of the eggs we gathered, aren't they Betty?" asked Lois. "I expect they are," answered Betty. In Betty's box was some fruit salad and Bobby found cookies and all-day suckers in his. Mother didn't forget anything. She had given Bobby a pail filled with nice cold milk. My how they did enjoy that lunch.

"Let's tell riddles while we rest," suggested Betty. "Can you think of one, Lois?" "Oh let me think," said Lois. "Yes, I know one. Why is a stick of candy like a horse?" "They don't seem very much alike to me," said Bobby. "You lick them both," said Betty. "You are getting warm, but that isn't quite right," laughed Lois. "The real answer is 'The harder you lick them the faster they go.'"

"I have one," said Betty. "When is a farmer mean to his corn?" "That's easy," laughed Bobby. "When he pulls its ears. It's your turn Dick." "This is another easy one," replied Dick. "Why did Washington wear red suspenders?" "You can't fool us on that one," chuckled Betty. "He wore red suspenders to hold his pants up." "I have a good one," said Bobby. "What is it that has two hookers, two lookers, four stiffstanders, four down-hangers and one frisk-about? And it's something right here on the farm." The children were called to give up when Betty called, "Oh I know. A cow." "That is right," said Bobby.

"I think we had better be starting home," suggested Betty. "It is getting late and we still have eggs to gather." "That was the nicest Fourth of July I have ever had," said Lois, and Dick agreed with her.

All too soon it came time for Lois and Dick to go back to their home in the city. They made Betty and Bobby promise to come and visit them. Then they would come to the Jones farm again for they had such a good time they would like to visit often.

After Betty and Bobby had waved goodbye to their twin cousins until they could no longer see the car, Bobby said, "It's sure keen to have a couple of nice cousins like Lois and Dick."

MISS WILLIAMS WRITES WAYNE PEOPLE FROM EGEKIK, ALASKA

Former Wayne College Student Secures Teaching Position With Her Brother In The Far North.

Egegik, Alaska, is now the home of Miss Jeanette Williams, granddaughter of R. P. Williams and niece of Mrs. Eathly Lutz of Wayne. Miss Williams holds an A. B. degree from the Wayne State Teachers College and last fall secured a position as teacher in a native school at Egegik. Her brother, Marvin Williams, has taught in the village school for two years.

A letter of September 3, 1935, written to her mother, Mrs. Hannah Williams of Neligh, shortly after her arrival in Alaska, tells of her trip and of her new surroundings.

"Here I am in my new home and so far it has been so exciting that I just know I am going to like it. We arrived Sunday noon at about 1 o'clock and the boat ride was interesting. I never expect to see such lovely scenery again as long as I live; there were mountains on each side of us most of the way with little fishing villages snugled on the slopes. At each little town we stopped for two or three hours to unload freight and of course we always got off the boat to inspect the villages. The food on the boat was very good and nicely served.

"We arrived at Seward, Alaska, at 5 o'clock in the evening and that was as far as the boat went. We had to go to Anchorage by train—and what a train! We left Seward at 8:30 that evening and didn't get to Anchorage until 2 in the morning although the distance was only 114 miles. The train went about 20 miles an hour and jumped like a rabbit. I took a plane from Anchorage to Egegik and the pilot had a room reserved for me at a hotel there because people simply rush for a bed that doesn't rock.

"The plane ride was wonderful and the view of the mountains, rivers, lakes and glaciers beyond description. High up the mountains were white with snow and below the snow-line we could see the green of the trees and the Alaskan moss. We had to stay overnight in some little village along the way because we were so late in starting but I had a room with a very nice family. The doctor of the village showed me all through his hospital and gave me a gallon of fresh milk to take to Marvin and Lorraine. We were to leave early in the morning for Egegik but the weather was so bad we didn't take off until almost 11 o'clock and then the ride was anything but pleasant. It gave me a dreadful headache and I was glad it was so short.

"Marvin and Lorraine have a good warm place to live at the schoolhouse apartment and it is nicely finished inside. You should have seen us out picking cranberries yesterday—who would ever think that cranberries grew in Alaska! They grow wild everywhere on the slopes and it would take a long time to pick them all. We canned some of the berries today and made jam and jelly and "I have received but one letter from you but I may have one waiting in Anchorage as we have lots of mail there. We did not have a mail plane here for a month and when one did come in we were disappointed because there was so much, the pilot had to leave part of it in Anchorage. We have been having quite a time keeping ice here—all the planes are on skis and must have at least six inches of ice before they are able to land. We finally got six inches of ice on the lakes after waiting for it four weeks; then the wind switched again and we had rain. Now the lakes are all thawed again and we have to wait until the ice freezes before expecting more mail. Can you imagine this being the nineteenth of November and no snow in Alaska? We have had no snow yet and Marvin keeps telling me that if I have the idea that there is no cold weather in Alaska, I'll think differently after being here a few more months.

"School is coming along fine and it really is fun although one must have lots of patience. Some of the children just can't seem to learn. Most of them are half breeds; many white men coming here from the states marry native women after being here for several years. It is surely difficult to tell the age of a native woman—some of them younger than I have six or seven children.

"We lost three of our natives just recently. Two brothers lost their wives just a week apart with tuberculosis. The saddest death was that of one of our pupils who was skating one night on too-thin ice and fell through. It took a half hour for us to get him out of the water. It was impossible to lay boards across the ice because it was so thin in this particular spot. They had to get to him by boat. We worked over him for two hours but it was useless. Since then the other children have been afraid of the water. I am afraid too, but I am certainly going to learn to skate.

"We haven't had any dancing in the village lately because so many of the families are gone. They all go to their cabins farther north to trap during the winter. Some are still waiting for snow so they can go by dog team. Most of them come home at Christmas time, celebrating the Russia holiday two weeks later than we do.

"The Eskimauks are very faithful to their church and go regularly. About two years ago they made a pledge to abstain from drinking no more so there surely is very little drinking here at Egegik."
