ANNUAL AUDIT OF HERALD'S LIST IS OPEN FOR REVIEW

Another annual audit of the Herald's circulation was made during the past week by the Ralph L. McKee Company, working in conjunction with the Nebraska Press association, and despite unfavorable business conditions, results were so satisfactory that Ralph L. McKee issued this voluntary statement dated February 6, 1936: "In connection with your circulation audit made this date under the direction of the Nebraska Press association, I want to congratulate you on the splendid condition of your subscription list and the fact that the Wayne Herald may boast of the second largest circulation among the audited weekly newspapers of Nebraska."

The Chief, published at Broken Bow, Custer county, has the largest circulation among the weekly newspapers in the state. Only genuine subscriptions—not gift subscriptions—are counted in an audit. Subscriptions sent without orders and without pay from those to whom they are sent, are not accepted as leading strength to a circulation. It is considered by those who have investigated that one will read a newspaper if he wants it badly enough to pay for it. If he doesn't want it and doesn't pay for it, he is not likely to read it. Anyone interested in the Herald's circulation from an advertising standpoint may inspect the auditor's report.

SEVERE STORM GRIPS SECTIONS

Cold, Snow And Wind Make One Of Worst Blizzards In Recollection.

Cold, snow and wind combined Friday and Saturday to make one of the most severe winter storms within recollection of many people. Every effort has been bent on restoring activity and conditions are returning to normal this week.

Highways and county roads are being cleared as rapidly as possible. State snow plows were through here the first of the week opening drifts. Highway No. 35 was opened from Wakefield to Norfolk through Wayne Monday. Travelers east go north of Wakefield on No. 9 to No. 20 and on to Sioux City. Plows were working north and south of Wayne on No. 15 Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and planned to have connections with Wisner and Laurel yesterday.

The Fremont-Norfolk road was open for travel Monday. Deepest cuts were reported near Hoskins on No. 35 where banks of snow were twice the height of cars in places. A large truck was stalled in one of these cuts Tuesday, stopping traffic for a time. Sides of the truck caught between the deep banks.

County road equipment is working at full capacity to clear roads. The two plows in Frank Ertleben's district worked night and day after Friday's storm to open roads. The plows broke down under the heavy work Monday and were out of duty for a time. The larger plow started again Wednesday and the smaller one is also at work now. The plow in David Koch's district and also the one in Henry Retwisch's district have been working steadily. These plows worked to meet each other Sunday to make it possible to take the body of Elmer Fredrickson of Carroll to Winside. The road was opened three miles north of Winside and two and a half south of Carroll. Both are at work continually. Difficulty was experienced Sunday by Randolph undertaker to get to Shoes when Wm. Bartling died.

CHAPEL PROGRAM HONORS LINCOLN

Prof. Bowen Gives Address On Birthday Anniversary Of War President.

Chapel program yesterday at the Wayne State Teachers College auditorium honored the birthday of one of the most beloved men in history, Abraham Lincoln. The symphonic band, under direction of Prof. John R. Keith, opened the convocation period with "Memories of Stephen Foster," a medley of Stephen Foster airs arranged by Lucian Caillet.

Rev. Fay Charing Mills had devotionals, reading from the first and third chapters of Exodus and the third chapter of the Book of Proverbs. Rev. L. W. Gramly read Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Prof. O. B. Bowen gave the address of the morning, the life of Abraham Lincoln. Prof. Clifford Bair directed the a capella choir in the selection "It's Me, O Lord" by Noble Cain.

Prof. Bowen's address follows: "One hundred and twenty-seven years ago today a frontier mother held in her arms a new-born baby boy who was destined to have his name recorded among earth's few select immortals. If one were to ask students of Greek to name the greatest Grecian, they might answer Aristotle, or Socrates, or Plato, or Pericles, or Demosthenes, or any one of a score of names. If one were to ask students of Roman history to name the greatest Roman, they might answer Julius Caesar, Augustus, or Cicero, or Marcus Aurelius or any one of a half hundred names. Who was England's greatest? Was it Gladstone, or Pitt, or Burke, or Elizabeth, or Victoria or Disraeli, or Shakespeare?"

"Millions of Americans have come and gone. Great men, great women have appeared, done their work and passed on, to be followed in turn by others. Great writers, great teachers, great preachers, orators, soldiers, scientists, philanthropists, reformers, statesmen—illustrious names. Yet, if the question be asked who of all this great company is the greatest, but one name comes to our lips.

"Handicapped by poverty, shackled by a pioneer environment, deprived of schooling, from the midst of intrigue and hate, from the midst of blood and war and criticism, out of it all he emerges, and stands today without a peer on the pages of our history.

"H. G. Wells, the great British writer and historian, searched the world for the greatest men who ever lived. He looked through all time. He looked into all countries. Out of the teeming billions of the past he made his selections. He looked into the East and began writing his list: Jesus, Buddha, Asoka, Aristotle. In England he found Francis Bacon. Then he looked to the new world. He looked to America. And he found a man who was not helped by the prospective of five, ten or 20 centuries of history, for he had been dead only a little over 50 years. And to the list, Jesus, Buddha, Asoka, Aristotle and Bacon, he added the name, Abraham Lincoln.

"It sometimes happens that some great individual so dominates a period that to know the activities of the individual is to know the history of the period. This is true of a period in Greek history and I (Continued on page four)

FIERCE ELEMENTS THREATEN DEFEAT TO OLD MEMORIES

The "Worst Blizzard of the Century," explained as meaning the twentieth century, was the startling newspaper headline used the first of the week. Most old-timers are inclined to stick to their oft-repeated stories that by contrast nothing much has been seen yet. R. R. Smith who landed in Nebraska fifty-five years ago this week, and because of an insuperable blizzard, camped the first night in an inhospitable snowbank manifests surprising uncertainty about comparison of late savage elements with those within his recollection. He explains, however, that he was in Texas on January 12, 1881, when the memorably tough short-course blizzard swept the country. Those who remember that storm believe more snow filled the air then, but that the mercury did not sink so low. As to quantities of snow, pioneers trot out the winter of 1880-1881 as an example of outstanding excess. Snow covered the ground in October of that winter and remained until the next May. Pioneers will await further developments this season before deciding that the 1880-1881 dating period has been disqualified. Buildings, groves and other protections must be taken into account in making comparisons. In connection with the late spell of wind and snow we learn that Saturday was the first time in twenty-nine years that all railway trains hereabouts were annulled for one whole day. Also Saturday night marked the first time within our recollection that most local business houses, recognizing storm-forced trade suspension, did not try to function. Most old-timers will agree that youngsters may reasonably date from this period.

Fire at Hoskins Destroys Store

Firemen Work Untiringly To Prevent Spread In Sub-Zero Weather.

Fire which is thought to have been caused by a defective flue, destroyed the Phillips hardware store and stock at Hoskins Saturday night. Heroic efforts of firemen saved the lumber yard and streets which are in connection and also saved the Winter filling station and other nearby structures. Some insurance was carried on the hardware building and stock.

Frank Phillips and Mr. Nelson left the store shortly after 6 o'clock and the alarm was turned in at about 7. Due to the strong wind, it was impossible to check the blaze but firemen kept it from spreading. It was fortunate that snow covered roofs of most houses as the burning embers were carried for blocks. Farmers for miles around were able to see the fire.

Firemen watched the building all through the night to guard against a possible new break-out. Several of the men froze, their faces, ears and hands in the 20 below zero weather and their clothes were covered with sheets of ice. Mrs. Reuben Wehner served sandwiches and hot coffee for the men.

Entire Country In Grip of Storm

Most Severe Winter Spell Of Twentieth Century Visits States.

The most prolonged period of intense cold of the 20th century is the way the past week's storm is described by weather records. And the more than 20 days of sub-zero weather were accompanied by snow carried on a strong wind. The storm lashed the country from the Pacific to the Atlantic and as far south as the Texas Panhandle.

More than 200 people lost their lives in the storm area of the nation. Much property damage resulted. Travel was interrupted and many towns had difficulty in getting supplies of food and fuel.

Northeast Nebraska, like all parts of the country, was digging out of the snow the first of this week. Highways are clearing and railroad service has resumed.

Gives Reasons The Saturday Evening Post explains why it is against the New Deal. In regard to new Deal-pledges, recollecting the wreckage that followed solemnly made pre-election promises, the Post says "only an unwarly fish will take the new bait that hides the old hook."

In concluding a page editorial on the subject, the Post summarizes its reasons in these paragraphs: "We are against the New Deal because its laws leave broad discretionary powers in the hands of the Executive; because they can be and are amplified and interpreted by the rulings of bureaucrats, and these rulings have the force of law; because their aims and their administration are contradictory and chaotic; and because they seek to remake mankind and America in little more than the Biblical seven days."

"We are against the New Deal because it is prodigal and wasteful in its expenditures; because it ignores the rules of arithmetic, while it exalts addition and multiplication; and finally because it cannot be trusted. Even while it extends the right hand to business, with the left it showers it with innuendo, epithet and invective. Two shining examples of this are the recent speeches delivered by Professor Tugwell in Los Angeles and Secretary Ickes in Detroit, not to mention the verbal vegetables that the President so freely hurled at business in his Atlanta speech and in the one before Congress with which he opened his political campaign. The Tugwell speech is not only peppered with epithets for those who refuse to swallow the New Deal whole, but it gives us a forecast of what may be in store for the country, if the New Deal is returned to power. It is one of the most important and revealing documents in the literature of the New Deal. It is not altogether what appears on the surface that sets us against the New Deal, but what boils up from below at more or less regular intervals. "Finally, we are against the New Deal because it is autocratic, European, and un-American."

Freedom Of Press AS the freedom of the press is the best assurance of the freedom of the people, the supreme court came to the rescue of the people this week in declaring unconstitutional the Louisiana state law taxing newspapers. The law was the product of the late Senator Huey Long's plan to throttle and control the state. Louisiana publishers appealed to the supreme court. The court's decision explained that the suit involved not merely the taxing but the liberty of newspapers. It proposed to limit the circulation of information, "to which," said the court, "the public is entitled in virtue of the constitutional guarantees." Any attempt to suppress or abridge publicity must be regarded with grave concern, says the court, which concluded: "A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves." The court speaks wisely. Forfeit a free press and we would forfeit our cherished liberties. No congress or state legislature should be so remiss in judgment, so ignorant or indifferent to possibilities to pass a law to shackle newspapers and prevent publication of facts or honest opinions. Control of the press is a long step in the direction of a dictatorship, as witness the experience of dictator-ridden nations of Europe. Attempts have been made to destroy the freedom of the American press, but fortunately the supreme court stands in this way—stands as a bulwark of American liberties.

Beholds Darkly THE current Kiwanis Magazine contains an article by a Boston merchant in regard to editorial appraisal of the Roosevelt administration by American newspapers, alleging that editors changed from agreeable acquiescence on the start to bitter opposition as the country landed on the high waves of plenty and prosperity. He says editors are owned by "big business." He mourns invalidation of the NRA which, if continued, he says would have brought unparalleled prosperity. Such puerile bunk! Newspapers were consistently disposed to cooperate with any movement designed to pull the country out of the dumps. When they saw regimentation put into practice and further threatened, they lost hope and offered resistance. Temporary relief through the expenditure of billions could have been made permanent by inspiring confidence and getting people back on private payrolls. Instead of making employers feel safe, the economy planners have nullified promises with invectives and threats. A policy of browbeating could not be expected to put buoyancy and assurance into employing institutions. Even in his circumscribed environment, the Boston merchant ought to have known that NRA was terrorizing and strangling small businesses, and that its death knell brought important momentum back of the recovery spirit.

The mere fact that a fellow gets into the United States senate is no assurance that he is possessed of extraordinary sense. On the contrary, he may employ judgment that would discredit an eighth grade graduate. Senator Pittman of Nevada, precipitated an attack on Japan on the floor of the senate—a gratuitous affront at a time when the world is moving in the direction of war and we are trying to move the other way. People in the United States have paid dearly to learn anew the folly and futility of war, and they see no reason why they should mix in foreign troubles. They have plenty of troubles of their own to settle.

The head-line writer who said in last week's Herald that "County Shares in Snow Storm" was doubtless thinking of the benefits that would follow in the way of plenty of moisture which was sadly lacking a year ago. Also, California should understand that we are not averse to plenty of snow, so we can raise more corn and more hogs to help feed the hungry on the western coast. "In the Teeth of a Terrific Blizzard" would make those in mild climates feel more liberally compensated.

Secretary Harold Ickes who is chief spender of public funds to speed recovery, is reported fretting over the tardiness and meagerness with which the money is being put into circulation. "Instead of siphoning enough money into the channels of trade through the construction of substantial public works to do a recovery job, we have been using an eyedropper," Ickes is quoted as saying. Wouldn't it be tough on taxpayers to have Ickes a dictator?

A free government should not be understood to mean a free living—a help-yourself policy with no values involved or questions asked. A free government means protected human rights and a fair and equal chance to exercise such rights and turn to advantage one's ambition to work and save.

An article in Liberty treats at length the indiscretion of labor organizations in demanding so much that they endanger their position with a possibility of losing to communism or fascism, in either of which their won advantages would be under the heel of autocratic tyranny.

One young lady complains that while coming down town one day this week, the gum she was chewing froze in her mouth. This could have been prevented by breathing through the nose and forcing a suspension of talk.

Landon may not have so dulcet a radio voice as President Roosevelt, but the country is not pinning its hopes on the way a public speller handles his vocal organ.

Planners Want Control. Kearney Hub: A new farm relief suggestion is being advanced, namely, the purchase of lands, by the government, and thus gain control of production. Roughly it is estimated that if the government acquired about 50,000,000 acres, including both highly productive and submarginal lands, the "balance of power" could be assumed by Washington authorities. The danger lies in that such effort would be offset by reclamation projects and application of more intensified farming methods.

Few Recollections. Auburn Herald: "What has become of the O. F. gentleman who generally ventured out in cold weather only after he had wound about 12 feet of 'comforter' around his neck?"—J. H. Sweet in Nebraska City News-Press. One day, having wound his "comforter" around his neck he forgot to put on his four-buckle over shoes when he went out, and caught cold and died of pneumonia. But reference to this old fashioned gentleman reminds us of the old fashioned boys for whom grandmother knit long woolen leggings, wristlets and stocking caps and who were also supplied with copper-toed boots. Alas, they too, are gone and in their place have come the boys who would have been regarded as going practically naked by our grandparents.

Farm Lands Moving Slowly. Omaha Journal-Stockman: Summing up its year's business in the disposal of farms taken over by default, the farm credit administration reports that the number of farms bought from the twelve federal land banks by farmers and investors in 1935 was almost double the number for 1934 and more than double that for 1933. The tone of the farm real-estate market improved substantially in every district, and farms and part farms acquired by the banks over a period of years were sold at an average of about $4 a day for each acre every working day during the year. Some 3,793 whole farms and 1,970 part farms were sold in 1935 for $29,213,000, compared to 4,865 whole farms and 498 part farms sold for $17,600,000 in 1934, and 4,128 whole farms and 637 part farms sold for $14,115,000 in 1933.

A man who handles much farm land tells us that prices are not down. Demand was down considerably during the closing months of last year, but is picking up now. But he doesn't think there will be anything in the nature of a boom in land prices—too many farms for sale, if few under pressure to sell.

TWO PATRIOTS. Two notable birthday anniversaries, that of Lincoln this week, and that of Washington next week, will, on account of our jumbled economic condition, receive unusual consideration. Washington led to national independence. Lincoln served in a major crisis. One blazed the way; the other preserved what had been accomplished. The "horse and buggy days" in which their power for leadership was felt, bequeathed to succeeding generations the genius and pluck to invent and make practical improved methods and means. Inheritance of the sinewy Washington and Lincoln qualities has so far successfully fortified people against the blandishments of political quacks, and though another danger point has been reached, it is expected the spirit of independence and courage evident in the past, will be reasserted in the future, rescuing the American democracy from the perils of the present. Stories of the immortal Washington and Lincoln will help steel the American fiber for tasks ahead.

JUBILEE (Continued from page one) Anniversary events. He calls he has often revisited recollections of Wayne, and has been eager to return to see those remaining of his early acquaintances.

Valuable Revelations. Coming revelations, dug from many sources and embalmed in a little book, will prove interesting to the present and of inestimable value to the future. Much patient work will be required to gather needed facts, and old-timers and others will help a worthy purpose by lending any possible assistance to Supt. Dienst and his teaching corps. Who are the 886 girls and boys who proudly left the Wayne high school with diplomas of graduation under their arms during the past fifty years? Where are they now and what are they doing? These and other questions will be answered as far as possible before the coming jubilee celebration is over.

CONGRESS

As Seen by a Nebraskan

The government machinery is working at high speed to get ready to pay the so called soldiers' bonus. Over three million application forms have been placed in the mail and it will take 3,000 additional employees by the Veterans administration and treasury department to handle this rush job. One guess is that the bonus will be about July 1, before the bonus will reach the veterans because of interest calculations necessary.

Practically all of the bills on general consent calendar which would grant the Indians permission to go to the Court of Claims to seek justice were objected to yesterday by a determined bloc of Congressmen who want all of these bills off the calendar because of a new ruling by the Comptroller General. This bloc was successful in their campaign, and many of these bills which affect Indians in Nebraska will have to be started all over again.

There seems to be a determined effort on the part of many members to cut ruthless appropriations. This was shown yesterday when the House defeated a bill backed by California boosters to invite the opening of Boulder Dam. The bill in question carried no appropriation. Merely an invitation to the foreign countries to come over here and help celebrate the opening of big dam, but the debate disclosed that another bill was all ready to follow that bill and it asked for about three million dollars to entertain these foreigners when they did come over. Those opposing the bill made it plain that if the far-

BOY SCOUTS. Boy Scouts are holding the front of the stage this week as they celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their organization. Fundamental principles call for high physical, mental and moral standards, and a boy cannot observe these principles and not be a good and useful citizen. Boy Scout activities are wholesome and constructive. They involve exercise of qualities that might, if neglected, lead to evil ways. Boys are taught how to work and play, how to anticipate dangers and how to act in emergencies. They are taught how to make right uses of both minds and hands. They are encouraged to be unselfish and to look out for others as well as for themselves. In a critical formative period, boys are brought under careful leadership, and they are safeguarded against many of life's temptations. In twenty-six years the Boy Scouts have attained world-wide recognition and influence, and in all lands, as in America, they have grown as a powerful force for the best ideals in civilization.

countries would pay the United States what they owe us in war debts, they would be more friendly. The fact that the government has already spent millions of dollars for exhibitions in San Francisco, San Diego and Los Angeles also helped to defeat this bill.

The House voted favorably yesterday to appropriate forty million dollars to provide loans for farmers for seed, during the year 1936. The Senate bill is for sixty million dollars. Those opposing this bill stated that it cost about five million dollars a year to run the set-up, but those who said that the seed loans must be made immediately showed that a large amount of this money is being paid back, and they predicted that practically all of it would be paid back, and the government would not be out very much. Many farmers have written that they are unable to pay their feed and seed loans but the committee and the administration is not allowing the various relief bills to come up. Some of these bills call for repayment of these feed and seed loans in kind bushel for bushel. The farmers borrowed at a time when the seed was very high and they have to pay back when the grain is comparatively low. They would be glad to pay back bushel for bushel in kind. The forty million dollar feed and seed loan bill passed the House.

The young men and women who work for the government here say they are having a hard time of it. They say that they can't make both ends meet, although they receive salaries of around twelve hundred dollars a year. Every department has its society which holds weekly social functions and these young men and women say that they have to dress up to standard and have to pay back their social obligations which costs them a lot of money. One young man who is going back to a farm in Nebraska, says he can live better at home on the farm for a few dollars a month than he can in Washington for $1200 a year.

Congressmen representing dairy farm states have a permanent organization to help legislation which will help the dairy farmers. At a meeting of this organization it was estimated that it cost farmers and this government about 300 million dollars on bovine tuberculosis eradication. Strict rules are laid down on the shipment of cows which do not meet the tuberculosis tests. Now this organization wants to know why it won't be fair to make cows coming from foreign lands into this country meet the same test animals raised in America. A bill to that effect has been introduced in the House.

These same dairy people are discussing the proposed new farm program. They are afraid if land is taken out of conservation, it will result in raising more dairy herds and producing a surplus of dairy products. These people felt that if these lands are planted to grasses, they should be plowed under. This question is bothering the farm organization leaders.

Another new bill which will be introduced with a view of helping cooperative creameries is one to eliminate the three cent charge on each check which drivers deliver to farmers from whom they collect milk and cream. The post-office department rule is that in case these creameries have their independent drivers deliver checks with any written information thereon they must pay three cents for each check. One Iowa Congressman tells us that this has already cost one of his small creameries $2,000 a year.

There is every indication that if the new soil erosion farm program goes through both houses and becomes a law there will be no delay in carrying out this program. The department has anticipated the success of its program, by making advance preparation. One girl who works in the dairy division of the AAA says that during the past week there has been much activity in her department. All week, she says, they have been installing new telephones and new desks.

my dissatisfied fellow-countrymen, and not in mine is the momentous issue of the Civil war. We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

"A man of determination has spoken. No compromise. No wavering. The die is cast. "Then the firing on Fort Sumter, the calling for volunteers, turmoil in cotton, the business, turmoil everywhere. The hideous nightmare of war and destruction—the emancipation proclamation—the fall of Richmond—the surrender of Lee's army—the assassination of Lincoln. Four years of confusion, of hate and death. The last few years of which you and I complain have been heaven compared with the hell of those war years. "It seems as we look back on that awful period, but one man kept his equilibrium. His words come down to us across the years, so calm, so sane, so peaceful. Even while the war is raging he is saying, 'with malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, God gives us the light, let us not misunderstand the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and orphan; to do all which may achieve and cherish a lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.'"

"What made Lincoln great? "President Theodore Roosevelt said: "No president who ever sat in the White house has borne the burden that Lincoln bore, or been under the ceaseless strain which he endured. "What made Lincoln great? His character and his reputation are hard to analyze. Some would say that circumstances, the stirring times in which he lived, made him great. But this will not answer the question. Thousands of other men lived at that time. In 1860 the population of the United States was 31,000,000. Why did the finger of destiny, passing over that great multitude, finally rest upon this tall awkward, anxious-faced man? For in that multitude, was the little giant, Stephen A. Douglas. There was also the great statesman, the great governor, the great senator of a great state, William H. Seward. There was Horace Greeley and there was Salmon P. Chase. In that multitude there were college men, brilliant in achievement, great in statesmanship. Why did the finger of destiny pass them all and rest upon this unschooled inexperienced frontiersman from Illinois?"

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roggenbach of Alton, vicinity were caught in the storm in Rochester, Minn., and were unable to reach Wayne until train service resumed through here Monday. On their return they found roads impassable to their home near Alton and were in Wayne a couple of days.

The drifted roads made it difficult for a bridal party. Bobsleds were used in getting supplies to the Ed. Hagemann home for the wedding of Miss Emma Hagemann and Alfred Evren Sunday, the sled turning over on the trip. Sleds were also the best means of transportation for guests.

Horses Are Stalled. A truckload of horses belonging to Howard Pitzer and Chas. Meyer, Jr., was stalled in snow near the Arthur Liles farm Friday afternoon. Snow drifted to such an extent that the truck couldn't be pulled out; without a loading device, the driver was unable to get the horses from the truck and the animals were forced to remain in rather cold quarters until Saturday morning when they were released, apparently not much the worse for exposure.

Have Scout Service. Church services were cancelled Sunday with exception of the special sermon for boy scouts at the Presbyterian church, this opening national boy scout week. A number of the boys attended. Rev. Dierking stressed the need for youth work in Wayne in their country." He urged them to build a record that would do credit to themselves and their nation.

Attendance in the Wayne high school was cut down considerably Monday with 45 rural students unable to get into town because of blocked roads. Attendance picked up a little from the country Tuesday with 38 absent from the rural districts. Some of the high school pupils who were out Monday walked into town that afternoon and are staying with relatives or friends until road conditions improve.

Wayne high school debaters who were caught in the snow on Friday, were obliged to remain there until Tuesday. College students who went home Friday were many of them snowbound until first of the week.

Several basketball games were cancelled because of blocked roads. Most rural districts have had intermittent school because of the storm.

Pheasants suffered greatly in the storm. Many in the vicinity have tried to save the birds by forcing to wear rubber gloves and to have their chairs and feet covered to prevent the discomfort

2. Many farmers come in and take mail for themselves and their neighbors. Before last week's storm the mail carriers had to detour and double back to make their routes and often traveled 60 to 70 miles to serve 30. The mail service will be given but carriers will have to do lots of driving around for some weeks to make the routes. Many places have to be dug out by shovels.

Break Long Record. For the first time in 28 years the through railway line from Sioux City to Norfolk was without a revenue train for two days, Saturday and Sunday. The line through Wayne was without a passenger or freight from 9:55 Friday night until Monday noon although the engine with snow plow went over the road on Sunday. The first train through was a westbound passenger and freight. The engine and snow plows were able to clear the tracks almost without difficulty—the hardest pull for the engine was on Apex hill near Hoskins. The branch line to Bloomfield had no train from Friday night until Tuesday afternoon and the branch line from Wakefield to Crofton had the same service.

Because of lack of train service from Friday to Monday, the city was without daily papers during that time. The radio provided the most welcome means of obtaining news of world happenings, also of receiving information about high-ways in the storm area.

Telephones Busy. At the approach of storm Monday last week Wayne telephone operators had one of the busiest days in months. Local calls going through the Wayne exchange that day numbered 5,177 and toll calls, 173. Static electricity was very bad both Monday and Saturday—on Saturday operators were forced to wear rubber gloves and to have their chairs and feet covered to prevent the discomfort of repeated shocks. Between 9 and 10 o'clock Monday of last week, operators put through 600 calls. Toll calls last week Wednesday numbered 186 and Friday, 197. The number of calls through the local exchange was made heavier because of the approaching storms and also because of the fact that a great many were snowbound by blocked roads.

Temperatures hovered below zero much of the time during the storm, going as low as 25 and 30 below. On a few days the recordings did not reach above zero. Records show a succession of about 23 days with sub-zero readings.

Coal shortages were felt in a number of towns. Loads of coal which were in transit to Wayne arrived the first of the week so that supplies are ample. Some dealers received orders Sunday so that people in need could get fuel.

Sleds and horses have been much in evidence this week as people came from rural sections to get supplies in town. Some who were close enough walked in. Sleds were used in getting milk into town and also in delivering it about the city.

Caught In Storm. The storm of Friday caught a number of people before they were able to reach home. Buena Vista basketball team from Storm Lake, Iowa, arrived Friday by car and was storm-stayed here until Monday when they drove to York to play a game before returning to Iowa. Dean Hanson and Harold Killion were marooned near the Cedar county line Friday and were obliged to leave their car and walk several miles to Wayne in the sub-zero weather. John F. Ahern was caught near Wisner Friday on his return from his sales territory and he remained until Monday when he came to Wayne by train. Jack Kingston and Milford Brown were caught near Concord and remained with the Harold Gunnarsons.

H. E. Siman, who left Friday by train for Stewartville, Minn., to visit his mother who has been ill, was storm-stayed at Alden, Minn., about 40 miles out of Sioux City. The train was obliged to remain there for 40 hours and then was brought back to Sioux City Sunday with aid of plows. Mr. Siman returned home Monday after being unsuccessful in reaching his destination.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roggenbach of Alton, vicinity were caught in the storm in Rochester, Minn., and were unable to reach Wayne until train service resumed through here Monday. On their return they found roads impassable to their home near Alton and were in Wayne a couple of days.

Truck Regulation Is Before Group
 Lincoln, Neb.—Chairman Hugh H. Drake of the Nebraska railway commission said cost of regulating motor truck lines may interfere with the commission's plans to prescribe certificates and require filing of rates by truckers.
 "If we go very far into truck regulation it may cost $30,000 a year," he said. "We don't have the money."
 Although the certificate and rate filing proposals are pending before the commission, which last fall assumed jurisdiction over truckers, Drake said these regulations also might prove costly.
 He estimated it would cost the commission almost $3 for each certificate issued and the members are not sure whether they can ask the truckers to pay this fee or would have to pay it out of the regular legislative appropriation for support of the commission. Under pending proposals certificates would be issued automatically to all truck lines existing on a certain date.

heretofore have been devoted almost wholly to news and editorials," points out Harold Denny, Moscow correspondent of the New York Times. "They proclaimed that various foods, from sausages to Black at Soviet stores here. And they were all paid advertisements. There is no deadheading even in the Socialist State."
 "One advertisement by the Moscow meat trust described the great varieties of meat and game now available at its various stores here, while the Moscow retail fish trust proclaimed its various delicacies from smoked herring to caviar.
 "A factory kitchen organization announced it was now prepared, in response to the telephone call of a housewife, to send other semi-finished foods—chops, salted and ready to fry; pastry batter ready to put in the oven, and other ingredients for a tasty meal. In the style of Americans the advertisers told housewives the advantage of saving time and drudgery.
 "The Moscow grocery trust similarly advised customers not to shop around but to telephone orders.
 "Advertising is not a new thing here, but it has never been seen on such a scale as was blazoned out today. Heretofore it has been limited to theatrical announcements, want ads and occasional small advertisements of perfumes or what-not.
 Furthermore, the Soviet leaders have made a complete "about face" on the subject of newspaper advertising. They are setting an example themselves by using the newspaper columns liberally and are urging business men and farmers to advertise their wares and attract buyers. It just goes to show that even in a backward country they find that it pays to advertise in the newspapers.
 "Whoever opposes us now does it not because we are nazis but because we restored military independence to Germany," stated Adolf Hitler.

RUSSIAN LEARNING TO ADVERTISE.
 Omaha Journal-Stockman: An early rule in Russia, under the soviet regime, was that advertising was merely a waste of money and that food, labor and all other commodities should be offered for what they were worth and the public could take them or leave them. Even Russians can learn, however, and now they seem to be going to the other extreme in the matter of newspaper advertising.
 "Display advertisement skillfully arranged typographically in neat two-column boxes, suddenly appeared on the chaste pages of IZVESTIA and PRAVDA, which

Month of January Sets New Record

G. B. Sanberg contributes the following about the weather:

Information recently received on weather conditions in Wayne indicate that the month of January, 1936, set a new record for low temperatures for the period from January 5 to February 5. Data from the United States weather bureau records based on temperatures at Sioux City-Iowa, indicate a total of 1888 degree days against 46 year average for the same period of 172 degree days. In calculating fuel requirements the degree day unit of measurement is universally accepted and used. The degree day is as a unit of measurement of weather. The number of degree days in a 24-hour period represents the difference between 65 degrees Fahrenheit and the mean temperature for the 24-hour period. For example: During a given day when the maximum temperature is 10 degrees above zero and the minimum temperature is zero the mean temperature for the day would be 5 degrees above zero. Subtracting 5 from 65, would leave a total of 60 or the number of degree days for that day. Taking the 46-year average of 172 degree days as normal for the period of January 5 to February 5, 1936, the 1888 degree days actually recorded represents an increase of 23.9 percent. January, 1936, was colder than January, 1935 on this basis by 36.4 percent.

United States weather bureau figures indicate that the mean temperature for the period was 2.8 degrees above zero or an average of 62.2 degree days. It is interesting to note that thus far during the current heating season a total of 4888 degree days have been recorded as against a normal of 4400. 4888 degree days represents the increase from normal or 11.06 percent. Scientific analysis has proven that fuel requirement will vary almost in direct proportion to the percent of increase or decrease in degree days.

Mexican Visit Is Of Interest To Rollie W. Leys

Warm, invigorating sunshine, clear, deep blue sky—typical brick and adobe homes with red tile roofs and tile floors—many native Mexicans with Spanish dialect and customs. This Mr. and Mrs. Rollie W. Leys found in Old Mexico when they spent three days over the border on their trip south. The Leys arrived home Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Leys, who drove to Texas two weeks ago, went from Laredo, Texas, 200 miles across the border to Monterey, a city of 200,000, nestled at the foot of the Sierra Madre mountains. A good paved highway leads from Laredo to Monterey and as there is only one improved route, travelers have no fear of losing the way. Mexico City is 600 miles farther. The Pan-American highway to that point is not complete, though many are traveling on it.

Monterey is a typical Spanish city. Influence of American modernization has improved the city in many ways and it has also taken away some of the early Spanish charm. Though hotels are of Spanish style, these old brick buildings have steam heat and other modern conveniences that make them most comfortable. Mexican employees speak English, some of them not so fluently, and they are able to interpret wants of visitors.

Older homes in Monterey present the typical Spanish picture—two-story brick with balcony, red tile roof and tile floors, the house set close to the street and having only one entrance, and each yard fenced or walled. Modern influence is found in newer sections of the city where homes have larger plots of ground and are set back from the street. They still retain most of the Spanish characteristics, however, but are modernized. In rural sections one sees the squat, square Spanish huts of adobe. The whole countryside presents a bright, colorful picture.

The Leys found considerable unrest in Mexico, uneasiness over labor conditions and unrest regarding government policies. On the day the Leys arrived in Monterey a group of 5,000 laborers marched down the main thorough fare to the plaza to make protest against capital and employers. Carrying red banners and designating themselves as the Red Syndicate they shouted "Down with Capital" and "Labor must have a fair wage." Some of the men were well dressed and others not so well. About 1,600 were from the glass factory where workers walked out because they wanted higher wages. The following day the Leys saw 50,000 employers and their sympathizers march to protest to the 5,000 marchers of the previous day. The protest showed that the objectors are still in the minority but that they are active.

Monterey has about 600 manufacturing plants, these being steel, glass and other plants using native products.

The Leys spent remainder of their vacation trip in Texas, visiting San Antonio, Brownsville and Corpus Christi. They noted the fact that Texas has so many large cities and appears most prosperous. Weather in Texas was damp, cold and cloudy most of the time and this, the Texans said, is unusual for this time of year when warm sun usually shines.

The Leys drove through many oil fields in Texas and found some of them operating and others idle. Grapefruit and orange crops have just been harvested in southern Texas. Farmers have planted cotton and are waiting for it to grow. Vegetable and other planting seems to be delayed by the weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Ley drove south on highway No. 81 and found the road excellent all the way. On their return they found traces of snow but none to hinder traffic until they reached Fairmont and Hebbronville. The road from Fairmont to Lincoln was closed so they went on to York and stayed until Sunday when they drove to Lincoln to visit the H. E. Heines and Allan Champes. They drove home from Lincoln Monday, coming by way of Fremont, Wisner and Norfolk. The highways were open and traveling was easy.

"The Tree Planter's State"

1—Earl G. Maxwell, state extension forester at the University of Nebraska College of Agriculture, who is in charge of Clarke-McNary tree planting in Nebraska.

2—Pines on the Chris Lauter farm in Kearney county, planted in 1926, protect the farmstead from blinding snowstorms and hold the moisture.

3—A Nebraska windbreak. Here the entire farmstead is protected from winds.

Nebraskans are more firmly convinced than ever before of the need for a windbreak around every farmstead. They are also determined that Nebraska shall remain, "The tree planter's state."

Swirling snow which has swept across the country in one of the most severe winters in the present century has helped remind many people of the need of trees around farm buildings and feed lots. Where trees stand around the buildings, the snow has been caught and impounded. Moisture has been saved. The farm home and dwellings have not suffered the inconveniences of so much snow as the farmstead around which no trees stand.

These facts together with the need for replanting trees which are awakened Nebraskans to the need for tree planting. As a result, farmers in every section of the state will probably put more than 1,300,000 Clarke-McNary seedlings and transplants into the ground this spring. The trees are distributed through the University of Nebraska, college of agriculture extension service and county agricultural agents for packing and shipping charges.

Already farmers have made application for nearly 750,000 of these seedlings and transplants. With shipping season approximately two months away, they are hurrying to get their applications approved. Blanks are available at all county agricultural agent offices or at the Nebraska college of agriculture at Lincoln.

Women of Club Hold Open House

Many Are Guests At New Auditorium Rooms On Friday Afternoon.

About 225 women of Wayne and vicinity attended the Wayne Woman's club "open house" and tea at the new club rooms in the auditorium Friday afternoon.

The tea table was attractive with a lace cloth, silver appointments and sweetpeas and jonquils. Bouquets of flowers were also about the rooms.

Another gave women equal privileges with men in schools and this led to considerable trouble as women are not accustomed to freedom from restraint.

Each club member furnished cookies for the tea and those which were left were made up into 45 packages and distributed to invalids, shut-ins and elderly people of Wayne.

Charter members, early officers, those who signed the club articles of incorporation in 1919 and those who helped in furnishing the club rooms were honored on Friday's committees.

World Friendship Mark Of Scouting

Of the 14,000 girl scout troops now registered at national headquarters, New York, nine are on foreign soil. In the celebration of international month, February, which is observed by the 33 member countries of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, the Americans consequently contribute a little international touch that is all their own.

Three of the American troops abroad are in China, where Barbara Lucile House of Padoga, troop, Peiping, was recently invested as the first Golden Eagle in that country on the recommendation of Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, wife of the American ambassador. One girl scout troop is in Uganda, Africa, and includes the daughters of the local potentate, Dowdi Chwa, and there is one each in Aruba, Dutch West Indies; St. Thomas, Virgin Islands; Haiti, India and Persia.

The United States through Mrs. James J. Storrow of Boston founded the international home at Adelsboden, Switzerland, to which a fund, known as the Juliette Low memorial, sends American and other girls each summer for a holiday. World friendship through closer contact and mutual understanding is a corner stone of the girl scout building.

Island Of Hainan Is Mission Field For Cousin of Mrs. Mellor of Wayne

The island of Hainan, just off the most southern point of China, has been the home for 26 years of Miss Margaret Moninger, cousin of Mrs. R. E. K. Mellor of Wayne. Miss Moninger is on furlough from her work in Hainan and visited here the last of the week with Mrs. Mellor.

Hainan is a tropical island, swept by typhoons, and the Nebraska snow is the first Miss Moninger has seen since 1928-1929, her last furlough to the United States. Her station is a Kaehak, about 40 miles southeast of the Port of Hainan, and is one of three maintained on the island by the Puyghyberians.

The island has three different tribal groups. The aboriginal group was sent to the island from Peking in the year 1 A. D. as political prisoners and is the only one of direct Chinese descent. The Loas group is the same as the racial tribes-people of Siam, and came to the island as fishermen about 1,400 years later. The Maio group is of the typical Tibetan-Mongolian type and these people were driven to the island by famine about 500 years ago. All of the tribes have their own dialects and their own form of culture. The Maio group has no written language.

At the post where Miss Moninger is stationed two of the instructors in religion are Chinese scholars of the old school who have adopted the Christian religion. Five of the Chinese ministers have had seminary training. The doctor in charge of the hospital at the mission is a former Nebraska girl, Dr. Esther M. Morris of Hastings, a graduate of the Hastings college and of the University of Nebraska college of medicine. Dr. Morris took her internship in hospitals in eastern United States. Her home was originally at Stuart, Neb.

Malaria is one of the diseases always present in Hainan. Cholera, dysentery and bubonic plague must be watched as epidemics which spread with lightning-like speed.

Miss Moninger experienced the communist trouble from 1925 to 1927 which was widespread in China. Furloughs were given the American missionaries in 1927 and 1928 to get them out of the coun-side. There are many reefs in the narrow passages and currents are strong; many steamers which have attempted the straits without a certain knowledge of the location of the reefs and of the tides have met their doom—ship captains never attempt to navigate there at night. The trip to Hongkong takes from 24 to 36 hours.

It never gets below 42 degrees above zero on the island yet that temperature is very uncomfortable because of the extreme dampness which accompanies it. The brick houses of the white population are heated by ample fireplaces during the cold days of the year. Frame houses are not built on the island because of the white ant invasions, also because of the danger from typhoons. The native homes are of one story brick and those of the whites are usually two stories, the latter more often damaged in storms than the native homes because of the added height. In 1933 Hainan experienced the worst typhoons in 40 years—three times that summer the rice crop was washed out and replanted, and for the first time in the memory of most of the native population, rice had to be imported to tide them over the winter. "The Chinese can manage without a great many of the things we think necessary," Miss Moninger said, "but if you take away his rice, he starves."

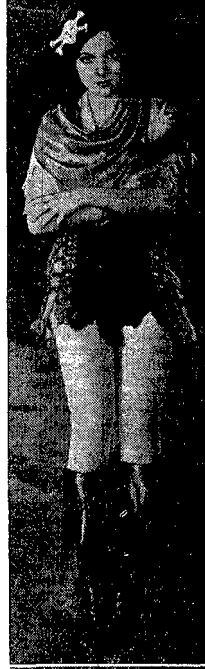

Miss Moninger's home is at Marshalltown, Iowa, and this is her third furlough since she went to Hainan in 1915.

Natives of the island are craftsmen in the art of enameled silver and also in the carving of cocoon-pine shells. Miss Moninger wore a pin of intricate silver filigree inlaid with fine enameling. Chinese crafts and civilization are older than that of any other country and the handicrafts of the natives of Hainan in their particular arts, are mastery.

"Hainan is a very pleasant place to live," Miss Moninger states, "yet I would not choose it as a permanent abode if it were not for my work."

The island is mostly devoted to agriculture, rice being the main crop and the main article of diet among the islanders. Uncleared portions of the island are tropical jungle and the interior is mountainous. The island is about 250 miles southwest of Hongkong and it is there the American group goes to do necessary shopping. Trans-Pacific steamers do not stop at the smaller ports nor do they attempt the Hainan straits which are very dangerous. Anyone leaving the island must go on a small steamer. Tides from off the coast boil into the straits from either

Wayne Loses Two Basketball Games

West Point And Oakland Win By Close Margins Last Of Week.

Wayne high school took two defeats in basketball last week, when on successive nights they lost by two points each to West Point and Oakland high schools, the latter being an extra period thriller.

At West Point on last Wednesday night the score was tied at 3 all, 5 all, 7 all, 9 all, 11 all, 13 all, and then Wayne went ahead 14-13 with a few minutes remaining. However, the lead was short lived as West Point connected on a gift shot and a couple of fielders to move away 18-14, and Wayne was able to garner only two points back, the game ending 18-16 for West Point.

Wayne seconds measured the West Point seconds 16-13 in a good contest.

On Thursday night, in an extra period thriller, Oakland high school walked off with a 31-29 victory. The regular 32 minutes ended with the score dead locked at 27-27. In the three minute extra period, Oakland went away on a free throw 28-27, but Jimmy Ahern lofted a nifty one through to put Wayne ahead 29-28. On a foul, Young of Oakland tied the score, making good on a free throw. After a mad scramble, Anderson of Oakland found himself loose for a bucket, and the game ended shortly 31-29 for Oakland.

In a preliminary scramble the Wayne seconds walked away with the junior high 34-15 in a semi-basket ball showing.

"IL DUCE" POWER IN ITALY WHEN THERE SIX YEARS AGO

Visit To Country In 1930 Impresses Instructor With Good Work.

SEES OTHER COUNTRIES

Even six years ago, Il Duce was a great power in Italy—so much so, that tourists visiting the country were asked not to mention his name even in conversing together. Though Italians might not be able to understand the English language, they know the name of their leader, Mussolini, and are suspicious of any foreigner mentioning it. Miss Beulah Rundle, Latin supervisor in the Wayne college training school, visited the country in 1930, and she and members of her party derived a great deal of amusement from referring to Mussolini as "Mr. Smith" or "the powers that be."

"Mussolini deserves a great deal of credit for having cleaned up the country. Travel in Italy is a paradise compared to what it was 20 years ago. We noticed signs in both French and Italian in all the elevators asking tourists not to give to beggars, and signed by Mussolini," Miss Rundle explained.

Italy, at one time, was infested with beggars, clothed in dirty rags and tormenting tourists for alms. Accompanying the request of Mussolini not to give money to them, was an explanation that the government provides for its own needy and that begging is unnecessary. For the most part the Italian people were courteous to the Americans but not so much so as were the people of Greece and Switzerland.

Miss Rundle's party found that the people of Italy were very jealous of American leadership and insisted that their own people must be guides to places of interest. While one of the leaders of the American group was lecturing on Roman ruins and architecture one day, he was seized and jailed. It was necessary to go to the American consulate and have him treated with the Italians before the lecturer could be released. Italian guides are especially jealous of the "doges" or "judges" palace in Rome, and feel that this is their personal property.

To all appearances, Mussolini, six years ago, was a great favorite in the eyes of his countrymen. Credit is due him for the work he has done in helping the poorer classes of people; in the intellectual world, for his work in putting history of the country on a plane where all might understand.

The peasant class of Italy is uneducated and very backward in working methods. In a visit to Horace's Sabine farm on the Apennine way, near Rome, Miss Rundle noticed the workers flaying grain in the manner of hundreds of years ago. There are many pilgrimages to Horace's farm by English folks but the American people found themselves rather a novelty. One of the lecturers read from Horace while the group rested at the farm and excited some suspicion from the Italian workmen.

The tour Miss Rundle took to the Mediterranean countries was organized by the University Bureau of Travel and the American Association of Travel in 1930 for the anniversary of Virgil's 2000th birthday, and was primarily for the teachers of Latin throughout the country. The cruise was to start on the itinerary of Virgil, but so many besides Latin instructors signed for it that two cruises were made up, one to begin where the other left off, backtracking on the course of the first. Miss Rundle took the second trip, under the leadership of Lorado Taft and Miss Rand.

Lecturers for the tour included instructors from some of the leading universities of the country. The parties spent four weeks on the Mediterranean and five weeks on the continent. Five hundred were registered for the cruise but with the exception of a meeting at Naples, the groups were never brought together at any one place.

Miss Rundle's party sailed for Europe on the Majestic, one of the German boats seized during the World War by the United States. There is much more vibration on a German made ship, Miss Rundle discovered, than on an American made boat. The party landed at Cherbourg, France, and was interested in discovering that no vessel is allowed to sail into port—it must go in on tenders. Cherbourg is a military base and the law has been in effect for many years.

For the Mediterranean cruise the "City of Paris" was chartered. Hindus did all of the menial labor on the boat; officers were English and the ship was chartered out of Glasgow. The second class dining room on the boat was turned into a laundry where members of the party could do their own washing and ironing. In visiting island ports where sleeping quarters were not available on land, the party always returned to the boat for the night. After one of the island trips it was always a joy to get back to the boat for a before-dinner swim in the warm waters of the Mediterranean. There was only a half day and one night of storm on the sea during the complete cruise.

The cruise touched Asia Minor and made a short trip into Turkey; the Hellespont included the loveliest scenery Miss Rundle had noted on her complete trip. The coastline of Asia was velvety green, the moss along the shore looking like sails being put out to sea. Through the Hellespont the shore seemed so close on either side that one might reach out and touch it. Members of the cruising party had an interesting experience in Constantinople; at a restaurant called "The Turquoise," they were much impressed by the stately bearing of the waitresses. The women were dressed in white silk shirtswaives and white skirts—their bearing was queenly. On inquiry it was learned that they were Russian refugees, mostly of royal descent.

The cruise touched Crete and most of the Aegean islands and included a visit at Tunis and Carthage in North Africa. Modern Tunis is a lovely city and ancient Carthage is now merely a suburb of the newer metropolis. Carthage is mostly residence section, excavations and ruins. The contour of Africa in this section of the country is flat and rolling.

Athens, Greece, by moonlight is one of the highlights of Miss Rundle's visit to these ancient lands. Lorado Taft and several from Miss Rundle's party visited the Acropolis at night and breathlessly watched the play of moonlight and shadow on old marble. There was quite a large group, yet no one broke the vast silence. It was most impressive and Miss Rundle likened the feeling of reverence it gave to that of a great cathedral.

In Venice the party took a boat trip through the canals stopping at some of the principal cathedrals. Miss Rundle was especially interested in the palace where Robert Browning lived and wrote. In Venice the hotel where they party stayed was just across the canal from a little church, beautiful in its very smallness. In the moonlight one could look out on the city asleep and see the reflection of stars and lights in the canals below.

Seed Corn Tests Are Being Made

The seed corn testing campaign planned for Wayne county is getting under way this week, with several samples of seed to be tested coming into the office of Agricultural Agent Walter L. Moller.

The germination of 1935 corn is consistently lower than good seed in a normal year. Old corn which has been properly stored if selected and tested will prove a good course of seed.

The agricultural agent's office receives inquiries from people wanting good seed of all kinds and those who have seed to sell may want samples of the seed and their names at the office.

By LILLIAN H. DIENST

It was such a cold day that Bobby and Anne could not even go coasting on the hill by the schoolhouse. They stood by the big front window and watched the sparkle of the sun on the snow, and listened to the cold creaking of car-wheels passing by.

Mother came into the living-room, and their faces brightened. "Do you know what this snowy weather reminds me of?" she asked. "It's like the winters in New York State that I used to hear Grandmother tell about. She said the snow would be drifted so deep that it was clear over the fences, and they used to go sleigh-riding right over the fields; no one could tell where the road was, when the fences were covered up. They rode in 'cutters,' or one-seated sleighs, all bundled up in heavy coats and fur lap-robes, with hot bricks at their feet to keep them warm.

"When Grandmother and Grandfather were young married folks they used to have a pair of lively little ponies that would often upset the cutter and send them rolling in the snow. They did not mind this, though, but thought it a lot of fun, for the snow was soft and there was no danger of getting hurt. They would laugh, set the cutter right side up, brush each other off, and climb in to finish their ride.

"Did you ever go riding with them?" asked Anne. "No, I never even saw the ponies; I just heard your grandmother tell about them," said Mother with a little laugh. "In fact, I never was in that country in the winter-time, for my parents moved away from it before I was born. But when I was a little girl they used to take me back in the summers, and I remember thinking it the most beautiful country I had ever seen."

"Come on, Mother, tell us about it," begged Bobby, pulling his mother toward the big sofa in front of the fire-place. Mother thought of the cake she had planned to bake, but decided it could wait, and settled down with a child snuggled up on each side of her.

"As I have told you before," she began, "Delaware County, in New York State, is in the foothills of the Catskill mountains, the same mountains where Rip Van Winkle took his famous nap. It is named for the Delaware River, which runs through it.

CARROLL YOUTH DIES SATURDAY

Elmer Fredrickson Is Ill Only A Few Hours With Pneumonia.

After being ill only a few hours with pneumonia and heart trouble, Elmer Fredrickson, 25, of Carroll, died at the Chris Fredrickson home in Carroll Saturday morning at 7:30. Funeral services were held at the Carroll Methodist church with Rev. J. H. Fowler in charge and burial made at Bethany cemetery.

Elmer had had a cold for a few days but was at his work near Wayne as usual Friday. In the afternoon he drove west of town to the Larsen school to bring his sister, Miss Anna, home from her teaching. He had returned and was down town when he was seized with a severe coughing spell and went home. He did not feel well enough to eat supper and a doctor was called, pronouncing his trouble pneumonia. The young man died a few hours later.

No undertaker could reach Carroll Saturday. On Sunday the snow plows were started from Winside north and from Carroll south, and the Carroll plow was accompanied by about 40 men who volunteered to help scoop out the road.

The road was opened north of Winside three miles and south of Carroll two and a half miles. A bobbed was used to make the distance between the two plows. Gableber & Neely road was plowed. Horses and sleds were used Sunday to bring Miss Laura Fredrickson to Carroll from Frank Loberg's where she stays while teaching.

Elmer Fredrickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Fredrickson, was born at Hoskins, Neb., February 26, 1910. He lived there until 1912 when the family came to Carroll, their home since. Deceased attended Carroll grade and high school and since had been helping his father in well drilling.

Elmer is survived by his parents, five sisters, Anna, Ethel, Laura, Mabel and Ruby, all at home, and four brothers, Wm. of near Carroll, Joe of Plainview, James and Ted at home. Two brothers and one sister died previously and are buried in Bethany cemetery. His maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus, are also buried there.

Suspend School First of Week

Storm Makes Irregular Attendance And Work In Carroll.

Carroll school was dismissed Monday on account of drifted roads. About half of the high school students are from rural districts and many of the students have been unable to attend regularly the past week. Those who come from the country each day were dismissed early each day last week so they could reach home safely before dark. School was to resume here Tuesday.

Basketball games with Dixon Friday and with the Norfolk Reserves Saturday were postponed because of the storm. No dates have yet been set for these. Carroll team was to go to Belden Tuesday this week, and Winside comes here this Friday.

Miss Jean Pasewalk went to her home at Norfolk Friday evening to spend the week-end and she was unable to return to Carroll until Monday.

Several high school students stayed with relatives and friends in town the past week during stormy weather.

Snowstorm Causes Halt To Activity

Highway And Side Roads Are Being Opened By Plow And Scoop.

The Friday snowstorm, which was general in the middle west, tied up traffic in this vicinity until the first of the week. Roads both east and west and north and south drifted considerably and the deep banks of snow were packed hard. Plows and shovels have been put into operation and highways and side roads are opening. Many of the drifts have to be scooped out as the snow is so hard.

Mail routes were not made Saturday on account of the drifting. Parts of the routes were carried the first of the week and it was expected the service would be near normal by mid-week.

Train service was suspended Saturday, there being no train last week after Friday evening. The Sioux City-Norfolk road was open for travel Monday but a day or two longer were required to open the Bloomfield branch.

School was dismissed in Carroll Monday and a number of rural schools had no sessions several days this week. Some students were obliged to remain in town as they could not reach home.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airway emergency station. It is Art Burton, Ramill, oil miner, mining magnate; his daughter, Lillian; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Huxby says he is only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lillian Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after several days of tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery, Garth secretly removes a part from the plane's fuel tank and they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth sets the monoplane adrift and the crew returns to the fall. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the "wild" and that they are depending on him for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hard work and they try to take some trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth finds the party has stock the tea sugar he has been saving for emergencies. He makes no objection, simply pointing out that he is accustomed to a strict meat diet, and that they are hurting only themselves. The work of getting ready for the trip continues. He calls for help, and works on the mining claim.

When he returned from his plunge, a fire was flaming high in the cook hole. Well away from it, the heirs to millions was smearing one of the moose legs with mud brought up from the lake shore by her father in his expensive soft hat.

Garth raked the ditch bones from the smudge-fire and set back the spits of the partly burnt steaks. He then dripped melting moose fat into a small twist-cup of birchbark that he had brought back with him. The cup already held two or three gills of spruce pitch.

Garth offered his dope. "Best cosmetic in the North. You may as well go the limit."

"I'll rather dipped his fingers in the face and smeared the stuff on his nose and neck as Garth had done. Garth said: "Eat your fill, Miss Ramill will stay to tend the fire. You and I are to climb. You'll wear Huxby's leather trousers outside your own."

"But they're too small for me around the belt."

"You'll not be after a few days. They'll wear the jacket also."

A taste of hot marrow roused the girl's appetite. Hunger overcame her other cravings. She said nothing even when, at the end of the meal, her father drew on Huxby's flying suit over his clothes and started off with Garth.

Though Garth had spoken of a climb, he first led along the lake shore to the beginning of the misty swamp. Then turned and slanted gradually up through the belt of spruce trees until the west side of the trough was reached at timberline. He stopped to look at Huxby while Mr. Ramill caught his second wind. The mining engineer gave no heed to them. He was hard at work pulling out gravel, midway up to the discovery stake.

Garth led across to the east side of the trough. After every half he started the portly millionaire on again as soon as he could draw a deep breath.

Three hours later found them still below the lower end of the glacier. Garth at last called a halt to the climb. He headed back

Old Age Pension Funds To Be Paid

Lincoln, Neb.—Payments of old age assistance to Nebraska's aged indigent will start some time during February, Assistance Director Irl Tolson said.

Application blanks were received by all county boards today and eligible assistance recipients will start filling them out immediately, Tolson said.

Only state funds will be disbursed until congress has made an appropriation, Tolson said. This means that until the appropriation is made, old age assistance recipients will receive only half the amount they ultimately will get.

Attends University. Walter Savidge, jr., is attending the University of Nebraska at Lincoln. He has entered the business administration college.

World Events

Main proposal of the new AAA program is a soil conservation plan. Acreage of crop land normally used for soil maintaining and soil improving crops would be 30 to 50 million.

The German government acted to forestall anti-semitic riots after demanding that the Swiss government investigate motives behind the murder of a Nazi leader, assassinated by a Jew.

A nationwide housing program based on federal loans is proposed in congress. The undertaking contemplates long-range building program, low interest rates and construction for as many as one million families.

Midway down to timberland, Ramill collapsed, so utterly spent that he could not get up even after a long rest. Garth took him on his back and packed him on down to the camp, without a halt.

Huxby and Miss Ramill were feasting. They had piled the moose leg out of the fire hole and broken off the clay shell. The meat had baked to juicy tenderness. Even the gristle was melted into gelatine.

When Garth laid her father in the long rest, Garth took him on his back and packed him on down to the camp, without a halt.

"Another of your damnable jokes! He's dying! You've killed him!" Garth smiled approvingly. "So, after all, you're capable of feeling a little concern for someone else than yourself. Both the cup two-thirds full of water, and for in enough of that sweet tea to cool it for drinking."

"The tea is hot already. I've kept back Dad's share. I'll give it to him straight."

"You'll warm that water." The mining engineer stood up.

She Followed Garth Into the Chilly Blue Shadow of the Cave.

"I've told you to speak respectfully to Miss Ramill."

Garth paid no more attention to him than to the buzz of a mosquito. The girl looked expectantly at her father. He stood waiting for Garth.

When Garth neither replied nor so much as glanced around at him, the engineer's cold assurance gave way to doubt. He turned and went down to the lake. Miss Ramill's eyes widened. She glanced from his stiff back to the buckskin clad shoulders that had so lightly touched her father into camp. All this had been a matter of seconds. In another moment she was hanging over to the rim with the tin cup.

When she came to the leanto with the almost scalding hot mixture of boiled water and tea, her father muttered, beneath groans, that he did not want it. "No—no! Oh-oh! Let me die—in peace!"

Garth heaved up the lax head and shoulders, and held the cup to the quivering lip. "Drink, or I'll pour it down your throat."

A few minutes later the "dying" millionaire began to eat. He bolted down the juicy tender meat until sleep overtook him in the midst of a bite.

Though spoiled, Lillian was far from being a fool. She had begun to realize that to get what she wanted, something more than wishing was necessary. Her father had gone

TRUE NATIVES OF SOUTH ARE PARTIAL TO WARM BREADS

Miss Mary Currier Tells Of Many Southern Delicacies Popular In Section Of Tennessee Which Is Her Home.

"When I first came north I thought I should starve, because I could never find any warm bread," said Miss Mary Currier, home economics instructor at the Wayne State Teachers College, in her soft southern voice.

Hot bread is an essential in the diet of the southern and southern cooks have perfected many, unheated in the north. Very little bread is eaten in the south as compared to the north, which accounts for the difference and variety of breads.

Grits is a dish very popular in the southern states and is sometimes served as often as three times a day. It is a cereal food and is made of ground hominy, moist, and quite similar to mush. Spoon bread is made of meal, milk and eggs and is baked in the oven. It is served with a spoon, hence the name.

Another hot bread, dear to the heart of the southerner, is the Sally Lunn and this delicacy is a batter dough, made of wheat flour leavened with yeast and baked in a hot oven. Corn sticks are baked in corn pans shaped like ears of corn; they look much like ears of corn when baked to a golden brown.

One of the real delicacies, Miss Currier states, is the southern, two or three-year-old ham. The ham is smoke cured, covered with cloth and packed in a fairly dry place. At two years the ham is considered good and at three, it is excellent.

Creole dishes are very much in demand; they are prepared with tomato and peppers and are highly seasoned. A vegetable which is grown in the southern section of the country and much liked is the okra; one sees it occasionally in the north in canned soups.

Not so much beef is eaten in the south. More popular meats are chicken and pork and the southern cook serves a great deal of fish. "The northern cook does not use enough seasoning to suit the palate of the southerner," said Miss Currier.

In the spring of the year turnip greens cooked with hog jaw is considered quite a delicacy. Some favorite southern recipes are submitted by Miss Currier:
