

Involves Big Problem—Proposed Auction—Wayne Host—Demand Unsatisfied—Abstemious Feeding.

With the notorious Hauptmann uncertainty finally disposed of, we wonder just how much mental distortion was involved in planning the Lindbergh kidnaping? We wonder how much mental disease is responsible for every crime against society? We wonder how much of a twist is in the mind of the conscienceless sliker who, preying on unsuspecting victims, has the criminal instinct, but also has the smartness—the cunning—to keep within the law! We have a notion that the fellow who risks legal penalties by kidnaping or by robbing banks or otherwise imposing on society, or who observes statutory limitations while fleeing widows and orphans or both, often suffers quite as much of a diseased one who commits a grievous offense while apparently sane and who is chucked into an institution for the criminal insane. Criminologists still have many unsolved problems. They may find criminals with mental derangements quite as much in need of cures with restraint as the maddened individual who runs amuck and wreaks destruction before he can be taken into captivity. Both criminologists, and alienists are perplexed in trying to determine crime causes and degrees of accountability, and to find the best ways to promote justice and at the same time protect rational and orderly society.

From a Missouri Wit. In a Missouri newspaper appeared last month an itemized list of things to be sold at auction on January 8, 1937. The list included: "One democratic platform that has never been used, therefore as good as new; one aged mule, unbroken and slightly bleached; a few broad smiles; one carload of mixed feeding cattle if not shot before day of sale; the bones of 12,000,000 little pigs and sows which died from the effect of the AAA; 150,000 bushels of seed corn raised in South America, also some Canadian seed wheat; four and three-fourths bushels of AAA potatoes stamped and wrapped in tissue paper; one ship load of cotton goods imported from Japan; one joke book containing all codes and the Russian alphabet; 72 caterpillars picked before frost and approved by the buyers' trust." Fine arrangements for the auction, however, will necessarily be delayed until after November 3. The constitution, freedom of the press, independence of industry and agriculture and some other American rights may conceivably have to be substituted for the items listed.

The Music Contest. It is no exaggeration to say thousands witnessed and applauded north Nebraska high school students in their musical demonstrations here last week-end. Friendly rivalry keyed all participants to do their very best, and older students by contrasting the new with the old, thorough and appropriate modern advances in the development of talent. Manifestly, rich fields of talent have awaited competent leadership, and youths deserve to be commended for making the most of the training. We are gratified to know visitors were uniformly pleased with Wayne's accommodations and friendly welcome. Many words of appreciation were expressed in regard to the city's new auditorium and many college conveniences. Wayne is glad to be host to the music contest and to other public gatherings.

Jobs on Farms. We are told that farm jobs do not find ready takers, that the supply of applicants is not equal to the demand. What is the cause? Amies of unemployed are reported, and only a slightly decreased, and many are still on relief. Why not find self-support and self-respect on farms rather than accept humiliating surrender to government paternalism? No other kind of work is more wholesome than farm work. No life is more refreshing than that spent in cultivating fields and watching vegetation spring from mellowed ground. Do those who turn away from farm jobs, really want to work? Have they lost their pride? Isn't independence worth the effort and responsibility?

Advantage in Moderation. At a banquet to be sat at the head of a table and while we were seated to the table and perhaps looked as aggrieved as hunger would ordinarily suggest, we felt secretly glad, because we did not fancy a nightfall abundance for "internal" works unaccustomed to heavy fare. The head or foot had been overlooked in the distribution of table implements. Nothing to eat with, if we had had anything to eat, we finally grew uneasy as a merely ornamental institution; and we were glad to see a waiter who, if this were one of the government's WPA projects—something to do but nothing in particular to accomplish. After the banquet was well advanced, a full complement of equipment was brought in, and we had a sizable piece of excellent but ice cream was parked before us—the envy of the neighborhood, as it was the only-quick ice cream within the eye range. WAYNE SCORES IN CAPTURING LARGE FARM GATHERING

Wayne's public spirit, backed by its new auditorium, has captured another important public gathering. It is to have on April 16 one of two meetings in the state, addressed by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. The purpose of the meeting is to consider the new soil conservation act—the subject which Mr. O'Neal will present and which he thoroughly understands. Many farmers and others will be interested in the discussion and the surrounding territory will be largely represented. As usual, Wayne will lend every possible assistance to make the meeting a success.

CLASSIFY CROPS IN NEW PROGRAM

Acreage Computing Method In Soil Conservation Is Explained. Wayne county committee began work this week on classifying crops and practices in connection with soil building and soil depleting groups so that farmers may know what they can do to qualify for grants to be made under the soil conservation program.

Farmers who plant alfalfa, clovers and perennial grasses in the 1936 program will receive a soil conserving payment and also a soil building payment, the latter representing part of the cost of seed and seeding. If a farmer had 20 acres of old alfalfa and seeded an additional 20 acres this year, he would receive $40 soil building payment, $2 an acre for the new seeding. For new seedlings of mammoth or red clover he would receive $1.50 per acre and for sweet and other clovers, $1 per acre. The amount represents a proportionate cost of the seed and seeding.

The amount of soil building payment that may be earned through seeding of legumes or grasses is, Walter Moller states, always limited by the credit available on the farm. This credit is the total number of soil conserving acres on the farm at the end of the year times $1 per acre.

The acreage on which payments may be made in the soil conservation program is determined as follows: First, subtract from the total acreage in the farm the acreage in roads, buildings, lots and waste land; second, subtract the acreage in wild hay and pasture land which has not been cropped since 1930; third, determine how much of the remaining acreage was in common grain crops in 1935, this being the soil depleting base; fourth, multiply the soil depleting base by 15 percent to give the number of acres which will draw payment if changed from the grain or depleting crops to soil conserving crops in 1936 and which represents the minimum acreage of soil conserving crops which should be on the farm at the end of 1936 if the farmer receives soil conserving payment.

Common grain crops are considered soil depleting, and such crops as alfalfa, sweet clover, perennial grasses and forest trees are considered soil conserving.

READERS REGALED EVERY WEEK WITH LIVE EXPERIENCE

Each week the Herald contains interviews with people who return from travels or who have had unusual experiences, and the things that seem to lend greatest interest involve human traits and habits. Readers want to know what inhabitants of distant parts are thinking and doing. Cities are about the same everywhere. Scenery has been described so often that it has become commonplace. But people are different. No two are alike, and no two think exactly alike. Individual peculiarities and group customs attract attention. Dust storms, blizzards, tornadoes and earthquakes would have dull sameness without the human element. People are always interesting. Everybody wants to know more about the other fellow, his circumstances, social environment, hopes and aspirations. You are missing real values if you do not read the Herald's human interest stories each week.

OMAHA MAN IS GUEST SPEAKER

Dr. L. C. Denise Addresses Wayne Kiwanis Club On The Holy Land Today. Noonday luncheon for Kiwanis club members Monday was followed by an address from Dr. L. C. Denise, president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary of Omaha, on "The Holy Land As It Is Today." Dr. and Mrs. Denise visited the country of Biblical times the past summer, gaining first-hand information of places in which every author of the Bible lived at one time or another.

Natives of the Holy Land have commercialized the country a great deal in the past few years and offer to guide visitors about, showing the places which are mentioned in the Bible. Churches of Palestine are divided as to belief, Mohammedan guards keeping Protestants in order. Palestine is only a small country, about 140 miles long and 40 miles wide. "It is the most diversified country of the world," stated Dr. Denise. "The highest point is far above sea level and the lowest is far below; the climate varies from bitter cold and snow in the high altitudes to a tropical climate in the lower sections. Many citrus fruits are shipped out from the southern section, in the northern part of Palestine wheat raising and grazing are the most important industries."

The Dead Sea has more salt than the Great Salt Lake. Dr. Denise discovered. Part of the country is mountainous and cut by rivers. "Palestine is a land of changeless customs," Dr. Denise said. "Men till the soil with wooden hand plows, and camels and oxen are the beasts of burden. When the wheat is garnered, it is placed on a threshing floor, which is not a floor but stone; the cattle tramp the grain in into a threshing machine. The threshed grain is thrown into the air and the wind allowed to carry away the chaff."

Dr. Denise and his wife saw women throughout Palestine carrying heavy jars upon their heads, the scene typical of the old Biblical times. Hand in hand with the old customs one sees modern power in the form of powerful automobiles. On the sea are the old-time sloops built much the same as they were built 2000 years ago; beside them one may see modern seaplanes. Shepherds roam over the hills, their homes widely apart. They pitch their tents. Many of the farmers live in towns. Everywhere there is a jostling of the old and the new, of Arabians and Jews. The largest city of Palestine is Jerusalem, 100 per cent Jewish. Dr. Denise stated; the city is very interesting and one's ears become attuned to the three languages heard most often—English, Hebrew and Arabic.

The Hebrew speech of the seventh century is a language difficult to speak and it grows increasingly hard to find professors who are able to meet the requirements for the universities of the country. There are over 300,000 books in the Hebrew library and these are catalogued in six languages.

The Jewish people who are returning to Palestine from Germany at the present time are of common ancestry. The Jewish immigration is not religious. Some of the immigrants are atheists. The Arabs hate the Jewish people and (Continued on page four)

Supply Of Grasses Is Large In Nation

Never before in the nation's history have the available supplies of seed of grasses and legumes in general been as large or the situation so favorable for large increases in pasture and meadow crops...

Fairly large surpluses, in excess of normal usage, are reported for orchard grass, rye grass and meadow fescue. The supply of brome grass and crested wheat grass seed, adapted to western and northwestern conditions, is greatly increased over last year.

The supply of alfalfa seed is reported fairly large. The supply of red clover and alsike is below normal. Sweet clover seed is available for normal usage and some surplus. The sudan grass seed crop is the largest ever harvested. Wholesale prices for seed, as reported by G. C. Adler of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics are generally lower than last year and lower than during the five years, 1929-33. Red clover is about one-fifth lower than last year and alfalfa and sweet clover about one-fourth lower. Kentucky blue grass seed prices are less. Red top is about one-third of last year's price and sudan grass about one-fourth of last year's price. Timothy seed is much lower.

Use Of Soybeans Is Studied In Industry

Further study of industrial utilization of soybeans products in a new regional research laboratory at the University of Illinois college of agriculture has just been announced by the United States department of agriculture, Nebraska is one of twelve states which the laboratory will serve.

Industrial utilization of soybeans will be stressed in the program for the new laboratory. Dr. O. E. May, assistant chief of the industrial farm products research division of the U. S. bureau of chemistry and soils, will be director of the new laboratory. Programs undertaken will be formulated by an advisory council made up of Dr. May and representatives of the twelve states involved. Work undertaken will also be subject to the approval of the directors of the state experiment stations.

Coordinating the soybean research work of the 12 states in one central laboratory will make it possible to do far more for the advancement of the soybean industry than could be accomplished by each of the states working separately. The twelve states in the region last year produced a crop of more than 37 million bushels of beans having a value of more than 25 million dollars. More than two million acres were grown.

Industrial utilization of soybeans for paint and other purposes has been stimulated to the point where in Illinois alone it is estimated that 20,000 rural people already have more than a quarter million gallons of soybean oil paint. Growth of the soybean industry has been so rapid that there are now approximately 35 soybean processing plants in the market for beans, 20 mills are making food products from soybeans, and 50 factories are making paints, oils and other products from the crop, those in charge of the new laboratory say.

Planting Of Grass In Soil Program

One of the important activities of the soil conservation service in Nebraska during the next two years will be the planting of native grasses. The supply of seed for 1936 is limited, but a total of 11,200 pounds will be distributed to the projects at Albion, Ralston, and Syracuse, and to the 17 conservation camps throughout the state.

Western wheat grass will lead all other varieties for 1936 planting. There are 9,600 pounds of seed available in this variety. Some of it will go to each of the three projects. Other seed available included 800 pounds of big bluestem, 500 pounds of blue grama, 450 pounds of little bluestem, 300 pounds of needle grass, 100 pounds each of switch grass and slough grass, and 50 pounds of sand reed grass.

An attempt will be made to collect 62,000 pounds of seed this fall to be planted next spring at the projects and camps. This will include 33,000 pounds to be allotted to the projects, and 29,000 pounds to be divided among the camps.

If enough seed can be collected 19,000 pounds of big bluestem will be seeded in the spring of 1937. Other varieties to be planted include 12,000 pounds of little bluestem, 2,500 pounds of Indian grass, 3,000 pounds of switch grass, 4,000 pounds side-bat grama, 13,000 pounds of blue grama, and 8,000 pounds of western wheat grass.

That Omaha Bridge.

Geneva Signal: The Omaha real estate board has presented a toy bridge to Governor Cochran in token of appreciation of his efforts to get a free bridge built over the Missouri at Omaha. What the governor needs is votes, but we assume that the presentation of the toy bridge implied the delivery of votes at the November election. The only fly in the free bridge ointment at the moment is the proposal of authorities at Washington to require the payment of tolls at the proposed new bridge until the government loan on one of the present bridges at Omaha is liquidated. That sounds like good sense, which is something unusual these days.

Gov. Landon's Lead.

Sioux City Journal: According to the poll taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion and published in America Speaks in The Sunday Journal, Gov. Landon of Kansas now has a majority in the race for the republican presidential nomination of 56 per cent. There are some republican leaders who believe the governor would win at the convention were held at this time. Others insist he can be stopped in Cleveland. That remains to be seen.

Most observers are agreed today that there is much more rivalry and bitterness among the party leaders than can be good for the party. Candidates are anathema to each other. Senator Borah, for example who denied a short time ago he would bolt if denied the nomination, now reserves the right to go what he pleases. No doubt a good many cutting things will be said by republicans about members and leaders of their own party between this time and the date for the convention. That will not help the party to obtain the thing it needs most in this fight, which is harmony.

If Gov. Landon is to be the nominee, all other candidates ought to support him in the campaign and election. Beyond a doubt, Col. Knox, Senator Vandenberg and Senator Dickinson, aspirants for the nomination, would support the candidate. They will not bolt. In a fair fight for the nomination that is what the losers ought to do. There will be other conventions and other races for the presidency. A man politically ambitious cannot afford to be a dog in the manger.

Meat Campaign Is Broad.

Omaha Journal-Stockman. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spratt didn't have anything on anybody else. Jack ate the fat meat and the Mrs. the lean meat. Jack didn't care if he got fat, and his wife wanted to stay lean. And certainly the women have that privilege. They know a thing or two about shapely, womanly women.

Taking advantage of the findings of the Spratt family, the National Live Stock and Meat Board has distributed to the public more than a million copies of a booklet which shows how to keep up bodily strength by eating meat without danger of putting on fat. Lean meat is the thing. But the fellow who thinks more of luscious, juicy meat, and doesn't worry about what he may get in adipose tissue, wants a hunk with some fat in it. Well, he can find out about that too, in book form.

Maybe, the stockman who finds a few pennies taken out of his bill of sale for financing the National Live Stock and Meat Board's advertising campaign of meats has never heard about what his pennies make possible. The board gets out about two dozen sorts of publications to further the demand for meats. One of these forms is the book on meat in a reducing diet. Another is a chart for use in schools, showing the food value of meats. Another shows how to economize and still have meat in the diet. Another form deals with the selection and preparation of meats.

The board reports that its meat literature is being used in organized study clubs in various cities. It is shown in displays from time to time in city, county and state health exhibits and has attracted wide attention at the national conventions of the medical, dental, dietetic and home economics professions.

All of this literature is designed to increase meat consumption, and the farmer who permits a few cents to be taken from his sale for the purpose is informed that the pennies he contributes to widen his market are matched by similar pennies from the processors.

Achievement Day Program Planned

In closing a most successful project club year in which scores of farm and town women have participated, the annual county-wide achievement day has been scheduled for April 29 in Wayne at the city auditorium. Walter J. Moller, agricultural agent, announced the tentative plans for the program this week. The gathering will be open to the public. Several hundred are expected to attend.

Although plans have not yet been completed, the program will include a panel discussion centered around "What Makes a Good Day for the Farm Family." This is a new method of presenting interesting information and is rapidly becoming popular throughout the county. There are to be no formal speeches but a free discussion between members of the panel to which the audience will listen.

Speakers on the panel will include a grandmother; a mother with boys and girls in high school who will present some of the present day problems; the young mother with children will bring up questions on how to find time to do all the things necessary and yet establish a good family relationship; a father who will explain what starts the day off right for him; Other view points will be presented by a farm boy and the county agricultural agent.

An exhibit is also planned for the achievement day. Community singing will open the program. A report of the "Lay Yea" committee together with recognition of local leadership is also scheduled.

An Iowa Example FORMER Senator Smith W. Brookhart has entered Iowa's pre-primary race for the republican senatorial nomination. His opponent for the nomination is Senator Dickinson, present incumbent and outspoken critic of the New Deal. In the former primary, Brookhart, defeated for the republican senatorial nomination by Henry Field, ran as an independent, and the result was the election of a democrat in November.

Following defeat and under appointment of the New Deal, Brookhart served for a time as trade adviser to soviet Russia, and this experience perhaps qualified him to advise that the republican party must "offer candidates and policies superior to and far in advance of the New Deal." Thus, it is evident that Brookhart republicans would go farther if possible than the New Deal in breaking down the spirit of independence, interfering with private rights and building a collectivist state. To the republican masses, out of sympathy with the left-wing variety, the New Deal has gone too far in that direction to encourage return of healthy and permanent prosperity.

So, the gap between Brookhart republicans and Dickinson republicans widens, and there is no hope of compromise. The only logical course is a coalition of middle-of-the-road republicans and Jeffersonian democrats. Radicals of the Brookhart variety will support the New Deal beyond voting for themselves if they happen to be candidates and sailing under the republican banner.

Meeting Pledges IN the contest between Senator Edward R. Burke and Dan V. Stephens for the office of democratic national committeeman in Nebraska, we are outside the range of voting for either. But we are amused at the presumptuous gullibility of democratic voters in Mr. Stephens' contention that Senator Burke ought to be defeated because he did not help the president carry out his pledges to the country.

Just what were those pledges? A review of the democratic platform and of pre-election promises would convince anyone that no attempt was made to follow the course on which election was based. A program altogether out of harmony with preliminary New Deal pledges was undertaken, and it would seem to us that in opposing some New Deal fallacies Senator Burke came nearer carrying out pledges to the people than the administration for which Mr. Stephens complains of lack of support within party ranks.

It would appear that anyone who consults the record or has any idea of consistency, would conclude that the president instead of the Nebraska senator had abandoned the democratic platform and repudiated pre-election pledges. Following the election, the president did not waste any time sidetracking his party's proclaimed principles and substituting a strange variety in no way answering popular expectations as expressed at the polls.

Improved Machines IMPROVED machinery for agriculture is pointed out by the Omaha Journal-Stockman as bringing changes for the better in farm life. Improved machines and improved methods facilitate farm work and stimulate boys' and girls' interest in farm activities. Doing with machines work that used to be done with the hands changes drudgery into ease, and gives more time for leisure and recreation.

"Changes wrought by improved farm machinings will come slowly," says the Journal-Stockman, "but they will come just as sure as the economic status of agriculture is improved. With most farmers at present, it is a question of whether to make judicious repairs of old implements with which to handle this year's crop or to purchase new. While the purchase of new machines may be deferred, farmers are quick to recognize the value of up-to-date implements and are liberal buyers when they have funds. They undoubtedly will put much new machinery to work just as soon as it is economically possible to do so."

Emerson On Immortality WELL advanced in years, toward the close of a life enriched by experience and observation, the great Ralph Waldo Emerson said this: "Of what import this vacant sky, these puffing elements, these insignificant lives, full of selfish loves and quarrels and enmity? Then he answered his own question: 'Everything is prospective, and man is to live hereafter. That the world is for his education is the only sane solution of the enigma. All I have been teaches me to trust the Creator for all I have not seen. Whatever it be which the great Providence prepares for us, it must be something large and generous, and in the great state of his work.'

tion, and from one of the latest we learn that 110 Nebraska farm families are happily situated on projects distributed among eight cities of the state. The story of the content and prospect of the 110 families is beautifully and reassuringly told, though we are impressed by the fact that only a small fraction of the total number of Nebraska farm families is included. The rest of the farm families may be thinking of the time when settlement—not resettlement—of government obligations comes due.

Political leaders are careful to give favorable color to appearances just preceding and during a campaign for popular favor, and they expect voters to be influenced in that way. Time magazine explains how the president's customary companionship with the idle rich and members of the "brain trust" was avoided on his present fishing trip in order to escape criticism. For the cruise, the president substituted a modest boat for Vincent Astor's previously used "million dollar" yacht which seemed the prudent thing to do in an election year.

Little excitement is manifested on the eve of the nominating primary which comes next Tuesday. Candidates find little event interest aroused. But voters may be thinking more than ever, and they may go to the polls in larger numbers than usual to make nominations. They will follow national conventions, issues will be drawn and the campaign will be on.

Consistency means so little to politicians that its absence is not expected by them to mean anything to the public. A candidate uses the party ship with which he is out of accord, to carry him into office, and then he may coolly try to scuttle the ship. It is biting the hand that feeds one, but that does not seem to be considered out of place in politics.

The late municipal election shows that candidates named by petition suffer serious handicaps and that the only way to give choice and equal chances is to hold two nominating conventions. This may be done most easily and satisfactorily on the initiative of political parties.

"Magnificent Obsession," wonderfully wholesome story, was the attraction at the local theatre for three days of the past week, and the crowds that attended proved the good taste of theatre-goers.

Must Find a Market. Nebraska State Journal: All this talk of a permanent government policy for farming, designed to make the soil tillers amenable to rules and regulations promulgated by bureaucrats who may or may not know much about the problems involved, compliance being secured by payments of cash, furnishes no permanent solution to the real problem, which is that of making the best and most profitable use of land owned. Agriculture must, in the end, as Henry Ford has repeatedly pointed out, depend for permanent prosperity on developing new uses for its products, just as industry has done. Without it industry would be languishing just as is agriculture.

Taxes and Riches. Milwaukee Journal: Do the rich pay the taxes in this country of ours? Writing in the Saturday Evening Post, Samuel Crowther gives a negative answer. "The nation," says Mr. Crowther, "is today spending almost 15 billion dollars a year for government. The total income of those with incomes of five thousand dollars a year and over was only $5,707,071,000 in 1932 and is not much more now. Hence at least two-thirds of the cost must be borne by those whose incomes are less than five thousand dollars—many of whom think they pay no taxes."

Mr. Crowther has oversimplified a bit here, but the essential fact that persons of small income pay most of the taxes remains. You cannot get money except where the money is; you cannot get 15 billion dollars out of less than six billion dollars, no matter how you tax.

A Nation On Relief. Omaha Journal-Stockman: The way it looks now, federal relief measures must be continued for many months, possibly for years, and the prospect of a great nation looking after the welfare of millions who need more and more looking after, is not a very pleasant one.

It is bad enough that we, as a people, should find it our pressing duty to extend relief in the way of work, wages and direct charity to millions of families but the real tragedy of the situation is the deadening influence of this relief program on the rising generation.

"Mass relief has had a tremendous effect on the attitudes of the children," points out Randall Blatt, executive director of the Nebraska Children's Home Society and for many years an administrator of federal relief measures in the state.

"These children," Mr. Blatt declares, "are coming to look to the relief worker, instead of the father and mother, as the source from which all blessings flow. I'm not saying this mass relief hasn't been and isn't necessary, but I do know that the apathy that rules these relief homes is one of the greatest dangers today."

Thus it appears that our enormous federal relief measures have not only tended to weaken our personal responsibility for the welfare of the unfortunate, they have weakened the self-reliance, the self-respect, of the recipients of the national charity. No wonder President Roosevelt and the nation seek to bring the federal relief program to an end.

EASTER. To mortals but recently under the scourge of surrendering precious lives, the mystery of the resurrection—commemorated on Easter—holds special interest. To such ones the story of the visit to the vacated tomb, the unexpected reappearance of the martyred Nazarene, and the persuaded Thomas renews queries and hopes. Importance of the revelation of two thousand years ago increases the yearning for more proof, and if the doubting disciple's satisfaction could be made the modern experience, greatest comfort would possess questioning minds whose intense desire gropes for roots of certainty. The resurrection is one among many mysteries, and the truth, much concealed and hard to establish, leads inquiring, anxious souls to look away from the fleshpots in contemplation of supernal values. Appropriately, with spiritual reawakening, Easter marks renewal of vegetation—always a miracle—always a source of buoyancy and gladness.

CRIME

(Continued from page one) licy had been disposed of in the usual way—dispatched and re-cessed with joy—overdue substantial arrived so far out of customary sequence that we were able to resist perpetrating a surprise on our gastronomic department. Result: The longest, uninterrupted sleep in many years. Moral: Keeping on friendly terms with one's stomach by not overtaxing it is an almost certain way to get along agreeably with the rest of the anatomy. And a light meal is the best defense against imported and not properly deodorized postprandial jolts.

Election Held In Four Towns

Wakfield Cemetery association officers elected are: President, Dr. C. W. Henton; vice president, Mrs. Mary Aistrope; secretary, Mrs. Anna Long; trustees, Mrs. Adam Nuernberger, Mrs. Byron Heydon and Alfred Lundberg.

All candidates were nominated at the two caucuses. Vote at Winside. Winside voters chose C. E. Bensch, F. Wm. Fleer and J. C. Schmoede village board for terms of two years and Fred Wittler and Rev. H. M. Hilpert for school board for terms of two years at Tuesday's election. Winside cast 125 ballots and the normal election brings out 200.

C. E. Bensch was reelected on the town board. His vote was 80. Mr. Fleer, who received 87, and Mr. Schmoede, who received 76, are new. C. J. Nieman had a vote of 47 on the board and Alfred Koplin, 10.

On the Winside school board, Fred Wittler was reelected with 85 votes. Rev. Hilpert, who is new, also had 85. Ed. Weible, whose name was placed on the ballot by petition, received 46.

Elect at Carroll. A fairly good-sized vote was cast at Carroll Tuesday when Ed. Trautwein, H. L. Bredemeyer and E. J. Davis were reelected to the village board, and Ed. Murrill, Joy Tucker and Levi Roberts were elected on the school board.

Ed. Trautwein received 50, H. L. Bredemeyer 57 and E. J. Davis 46.

THINKING.

Strickland Gillilan, professional humorist, who is well known to many in Wayne, credits people with the possession of minds, but not with the practice of making much use of them. He seems to think employment of mental faculties is most needed during political campaigns. He says voters do not vote for somebody, but are prejudiced to vote against somebody. He says feelings and prejudices are substituted for judgment and intelligence. "Long before the campaign really sets in," says Gillilan, "the boys with the typewriters (and generous contracts to deliver notes via the propaganda route) begin fixing up what you are to believe against the fellow you are to vote against. Your mind is made up for you before you know it, in their dusty offices, with newspaper clippings piled to the ceiling. They are arranging it so that even if you were inclined to think intelligently about public affairs, you won't need to do so." Gillilan evidently believes most people do not think earnestly enough to decide public questions on merit. We have a notion he is mistaken in figuring the masses are not thoughtful and making careful analysis of public issues. Through apathy, they may be fooled part of the time as suggested by Lincoln, but they cannot be fooled all the time, and this year, aroused to resist, they will not be fooled.

64 votes on the village board, each to serve two years. Ed. Murrill, who received 50 votes, and Joy Tucker, who received 48, are elected to school board for three years, the latter being new. Their terms begin next July. Levi Roberts received 41 votes to be elected to the school board for two years, beginning at once to fill the unexpired term of Charles Mills. Ed. Trautwein received 18, V. G. Williams 24 and H. H. Hopy 29 votes for school board.

sult Wayne county farmers will receive their trees about one week later than earlier anticipated.

Such was the announcement made today by Agricultural Agent Walter L. Muller after receiving word from Earl G. Maxwell, state extension forester at the college of agriculture, of the delay in shipment. Original plans called for shipment of trees starting March 31. Orders for evergreens to a few counties were filled the first day but were immediately stopped when adverse weather set in. No broadleaf trees were shipped last week.

Weather permitting, distribution of the trees was to get under way early this week again. Farmers requesting the seedling and transplants should expect their seedlings about one week to ten days later than the original dates supplied them.

LaPorte Community Club.
LaPorte Community club members and their families met Friday evening at the F. C. Hammer home for a combined April fool party and achievement day program. Stunts, plays and games helped the time pass pleasantly. Two stunts, "The Midnight Fire Alarm" and "Conspiracy of Forces," and the play, "Winning Her Father's Consent," were put on by the following: Mrs. F. C. Hammer, Mrs. A. W. Dolph, Mrs. E. M. Laughlin, Helen Marie Laughlin, Les and Delores Litt, Albert Sundel, Mary Alice Hammer and Fannie Selders. Group games were conducted by Mrs. Edgar Larson and Mrs. Albert Sundel. The party occurred on the 9th anniversary of the club's founding. Of the 20 charter members, nine have moved away and nine others have taken their places. Each year the club has had 12 meetings, one picnic and two parties. The chief aim is community betterment, but once a year a substantial donation is made to charity. At the party a 3-dozen egg crate was packed for the Children's Home in Omaha. In appreciation of services and to commemorate their 25th wedding anniversary of February, the club members presented Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Laughlin with a silver tray and relish server. Luncheon served at the close carried out the April fool idea.

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "Sin, sickness, and death are comprised in human material belief, and belong not to the divine Mind. They are without a real origin or existence. They have neither Principle nor permanence, but belong, with all that is material and temporal, to the nothingness of error, which simulates the creations of "Truth." (pages 286-7).

"Though by no means curt, the dismissal was abrupt. Mr. Hamill stood pondering for several moments before he returned to the cabin and went to the door of the stateroom that the Port Norman missionary's wife had shared with Lillith.
Some time before the steamer nosed in to the landing, Garth made out that the portioned plane aloft at the waterfront was too small to be one of the regular Bellanca transports. It had no cabin, and only three seats, foremost of the passengers ashore, he at once climbed the bluff to the post.
As he expected, a red-coated constable of the Northwest police was lounging in the old trading post stateroom with one of the Altrany pilots. The latter sprang to meet him. "Hello, Lani—you don't have duck Hollava note, you squatterin' in the wot. You've cruised your frozen hell a hundred times in any old crate."
Garth gripped hands with him. "Lo, Kiwi! I didn't happen to be after nippackets. There are things you have to rub your nose against to get."
Garth sobered to business. "What news?"
"Your man set his bus down here three days ago. Hopped off PDQ, with all she could heave up under gas and oil."
The constable had stood at attention. He met Garth's glance with a smile. "All right, sir. One question—those three miners?"
"Broke prospectors, sir. Records, far as known, not savory. But none of the bunch is wanted, and they're not newcomers from across the border. They'll know enough not to interfere when I take my prisoners."
The post father came hastening in to shake hands. "Pardon my absence, Mr. Garth. Was up to Liard. It's a great pleasure to have you stop off with us. If you plan to take in dogs, I have a picked team that I'd be honored—"
"Thank you, no," Garth cut in. "But I would like a rifle, rabbit, undersuit, winter moccasins, gloves, and three pairs of socks."
He went into a bunkroom to put on the rabbit-fur suit under his buckskins. When he came out, a girl in a plain, ill-fitting gown stood talking to the pilot. The pilot glanced towards him. The girl turned quickly. He found himself face to face with Lillith Hamill.
Yet it was not the cabin and puffed market face of his canoe companion. Nor was it that deep-lined, rugged and powdered face with scarier-smearred lips that had sneered at him on Tobin's wharf. It was a face smooth and firm, vivid with life and vitality. Only the blue eyes were hard.
"Alan Garth," she said, "I've learned about it. You're going back there—after him?"
"Sorry, Miss Hamill. It's not revenge, if that's what you think. I tried to spidee you. But, if you must have it, he is a thief."
The girl's eyes flashed. "Worse! He's a cowardly murderer. That is why I am coming to see him taken prisoner."
"Yes?"
"Yes. I am going to see him ring, the sneaky beast! Do you think I've forgotten how he crept up and shot you when you weren't looking? And what if he didn't intend to shoot? Did he left him to die, if that's not enough, must I tell you how he taunted me?"
"Yet that's no reason why you—"
"It is! If you refuse I'll tag after you in another plane."
Garth studied her gravely. She stared back at him, hotly defiant. He pretended to accept her reasons for wanting to go.
"You must certainly are a good hater, Miss Hamill. One thing, though. The valley is about to freeze up. It will not be the summer paradise we left. We may land in a blizzard."

She looked around the store. "Where are those Eskimo suits you told me about?"
"At that he smiled a bit grimly. "This is inland country. You shall have rabbit and buckskins." He turned to the factor: "Add the lady's outfit to my account." To the pilot: "Kiwi, this is where you are to fit your name. You're going to be a wingless ground bird."
"Oh, have a heart, Lani!"
"Three is a crowd, and she is it. Ask her father."
For the first time the girl betrayed a trace of doubt. "But we'll have to have a pilot."
Kiwi stared, then grinned at the job. "Hello, what you don't know about our boy friend would appear to be quite a considerable—All right, you lame duck, go hog the joystick."
Constable Dillon put in a word: "It's not on the cards, sir, to take along a young lady. If this Huxby tried to take her, I must make her out. Something different about her?"

"It's Not on the Cards, Sir, to Take a Young Lady."

"Perhaps she'll tell you when we come off. I'll of course do what I can for her."
Garth shook hands, and swung aboard the small craft. At a sign from him, the displaced pilot gave the propeller a spin. The plane swung around and down towards the water. There was a hurry. Had Huxby seemed to fly into the valley there to stake the placer claim on name and hop out again, he would not have taken the three miners. He undoubtedly had planned to do his season's assessment work.
Midway of the down river flight, the Huxby came out into a steep, small, Garth dropped to the water and tied up under the lee of a spruce-black point.
They ran in and out of a steep squall, leaving everything sheeted with ice. Garth and Dillon knocked clear the edge of the wings. Another hop brought the party to the emergency landing post, shortly before sundown.
"This time Lillith Hamill did not refuse Tobin's crude hospitality. She troubled the old sourdough far more by insisting upon watching his preparation of supper and breakfast.
He could not at first believe she was the same plain girl who had scoffed at his "garbage." She had only refrained from scoffing, she ate his bacon and porridge as heartily as Garth and the policeman.
The moosehide canoe lay upturned on the bank beside Garth's old birchbark. Tobin had at once told Huxby's story. According to the engineer, the lady and her husband had been on a mission to the mountains. He had come out with Garth to fetch a plane for them. But Garth had been killed by a wounded she-grizzly.

MURDER

CHAPTER IX
In THE morning Garth for the first time since the last night, felt a little too beautifully rose. He made sure that Lillith's blankets were back in her cockpit before he handed her aboard. He fitted the glass wind cow to the cockpit rim. "If we strike into a blizzard, get your cap over your ears, and blink-ey yourself, head and all, he warned. "You don't want to lose your ears and nose."
The Huxby canoe was already snug under his own cow. Garth swung his pilot cockpit. Old Tobin gave the propeller a spin for him.
"This time Garth needed no etching in order to trace the air route. Aboard the cabin monoplane he had watched Huxby's instruments and noted the landmarks from above. He now knew the way by air.
By the time the lovely rose dawn glowed into an angry red sunrise, the roaring plane had flown all the way across that weary desolation of muskies and broken-fledged lower mountains.
"Thickening clouds foretold another storm. But Garth had outraced it. Instead of veering in around the out-thrust mountain to the pass, he banked and drove past the east side of the mountain on a low, distant.

Letters From Other States Are Received By City Fifth Grade

Pupils Learn New Facts Of History And Geography By Correspondence.

In an effort to learn more of the geography of the country in which they live, fifth graders of the Wayne city school have written letters to children of their own ages in other states. Many of the replies are full of interest. Bonnie Fae Kugler received the following letter from Rehoboth, Delaware: "The fifth grade received your letter and were very pleased to hear from you. We go in bathing a great deal in the summer for Rehoboth is on the ocean. Sometimes when the ocean is rough we must be very careful or the waves will knock us down. Many people go fishing for trout, hard-heads, flounder and many other fish. This year during a storm, the pier was torn away. Rehoboth is the largest summer resort in Delaware. Many people from Wilmington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington spend the summer here. In geography we are studying the north central states. Do the farmers near there have to irrigate their fields? Tell us something about your climate. Have you ever seen a buffalo? Have you ever been on a ranch? Are you allowed to swim in the rivers? "Wilmington is not far from here. Chemicals are made there by the Du Pont company. They are used in fire extinguishers, in explosives and in making dyes." Virginia Girl Writes. Joanne Jenk wrote her letter to Onancock, Virginia, and has received a number of communications from that place. Children of the Wayne fifth grade have been puzzled by an expression appearing in the Onancock letters, "of great," and finally decided it must be a colloquialism. The following are excerpts from letters Joanne has received: "It has been to the ocean many times but have never had a picnic down near the shore as I know of. It is 'of great' to me when I can go to the ocean or out in a boat on it, and it is 'of great' when he takes me out riding in it. Some products of the water are oysters, clams, lobsters, crabs, scallops and all kinds of fish such as black Willis, white perch, herring, sharks, spots, butter fish, trout and drums. "Products of the land are potatoes, corn, beans, peas, snap beans, kale, turnip greens, turnips, lettuce, carrots, sweet potatoes, strawberries and blackberries. "Some of our famous Virginia men are: George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, Patrick Henry and Robert E. Lee. Some Virginia women who are famous are: Mary Washington, Emily Virginia Mason, Mary Custis, Virginia Dare, Dolly Madison, Sally Tompkins and Margaret Jenkins Preston. "Gives Country History. "Onancock is full of history and tradition. Let us glance back to 1608. We find that John Smith on a map making expedition, driven up the Onancock creek by a storm. It didn't last long yet he followed a winding stream and reached Onancock where he was welcomed by Ekeeks, King of the Onancock Indians. We do not know how long he stayed. "Onancock means foggy. It was then an Indian village and paid tribute to King Debediavan on Nandua creek. In the early part of the 17th century we find that Ekeeks sold to John Wise—the first white man to settle near here—1,000 acres of land, for seven Dutch blankets. "Only" a settlement across from Finney's wharf, is built on the Wise land, and in the grove next to the creek is where a barbeque was held in honor of Henry A. Wise, returned from being a minister to Brazil. In 1877 there were eight towns in the neck, and Onancock was one of them, and had four or five families. "Three years later Mayor Charles Scarborough was directed to proceed with a court house. This was built in Onancock, also a warehouse and clerk's office, all built near the wharf. The name was then changed to Port Scarborough but later changed back to Onancock. Sir William Berkeley found refuge during Bacon's rebellion, in the Parker House, now the home of Mr. Columbus Justice on Parker street. What a thrill Onancock must have had when Commodore Whaley went out with two barges to fight the King of the six barges. There was an explosion and Commodore Whaley was killed, brought to Queen street wharf and buried in Scott Hall Yard. This is a bit of unwritten history. "Describes Eastern Country. Another letter from an Onancock fifth grader to Joanne Jenk contains more of the history of the eastern town: "Eastern Shore is a big peninsula between Chesapeake bay and the Atlantic ocean. It has no mountain ranges and is very flat. There have been no floods except from high tides. The first settlement was at Smith Island, founded by Captain John Smith just off the central point of the coast. Most of the towns have Indian names. "We raise Irish Cobler potatoes for our main crop. The prices have been so poor for the past five years that our two counties have changed from the two richest of the state to almost the two poorest. Our crops are sweet potatoes and strawberries. A great deal of poultry is raised here. Summers are hot, but not too hot, and the winters have not been so very cold but the last two have seen zero weather." Tells About Utah. From Centerville, Utah, the following interesting letter was sent to Rodney Lowe: "Our class received your letter. I want to tell you about Utah: I live close to the mountains and when I look out of our east windows I see a mountain with small canyons in it. "Last Sunday I went pussywillow gathering. Most pussywillows grow on the banks of the creeks coming out of the canyons. I also go hiking up the mountains to get Christmas trees at Thanksgiving time and they last over until New Year's. When we cut Christmas trees we climb 20 feet up the tree before we cut the tree. Leaving 20 feet below protects us from floods. We get the trees at Thanksgiving time because around Christmas there is too much snow. "We also ski when it snows; we wait until the next day. The wind helps the snow for skiing when it leaves ripples on the snow. We put on our skis and slide down the mountain side. Sometimes we reach a small cliff about three feet high. We don't turn out for it—we go straight for it. We keep our balance and sometimes we fly four feet in the air. "When I look westward, I see the town. Below the town is Salty Swamps and below that is the Great Salt Lake. It has an excellent name because it is so salty we can float on the lake surface. "We boys pick peas and cherries for a little money. We take an empty gunny sack and fill it full of peas. We get about 1 cent a pound. Sometimes we take a bucket and fill it with cherries, empty it and repeat it again. "In the summer we get in our cars and drive up the mountain roads. The roads wind into canyons and we have to keep looking for a camping spot that will suit us. We pitch a tent and make up our beds. We use pine needles for a mattress and at night we sleep on a soft bed. In the morning the air is thick with pine and wild flower smells. This is the way it is: Up 'til morning we did not pay much attention to the trees. They are very tall. The river is not very far away from our camp. We get water for cooking and then go fishing. The river is very deep. We can walk on rocks to small islands. The nights are cold and we use as much bedding as we do in winter at home. "Don't you wish you could come to Utah?" Letter From Montana. To Betty Weible a Thompson Falls, Mont., girl writes as follows: "Thompson Falls is located on the beautiful Clark's Fork river. It is the county seat of Sanders county and is located in the midst of the mountains. The mountains are from 5 to 8 thousands of feet high. They are as high as the highest mountain in the east. There is snow on them until late June or July. "There are too many mountains farms or ranches as we call them here. Fruit, vegetables, and feed for cattle are raised. Grazing is an important industry. Every year thousands of sheep are driven through Thompson Falls to graze in the mountains. We have two dairy farms which supply milk and cream for our town. "Lumbering is another important industry. The mountains are thickly forested. They do a little mining around here, too. The Forest Service headquarters of the Cabinet National forest are here. Harold Marvick is the recipient of the following letter from Salem, N. Y.: "We have one school at Salem and our town is about 1,100. Washington academy is the oldest incorporated school in the state. Our state ranks high in education. A beautiful site has been purchased for a new school. "Our state is called the empire state. It leads in manufacturing, wealth, commerce, agriculture and population. Some points of interest are Niagara Falls, Saratoga battlefield, Adirondack park and the beautiful Finger Lake region. "We had a long, cold winter with lots of snow. Often the snow has been five feet deep on the level. It is all gone now and it has been raining for several days. Some of the cities near us are being flooded." Here From Alabama. Willis Lesman wrote to the fifth grade of the Brundidge, Alabama, school and his reply is quoted here: "We have very nice weather in the south but we sometimes wish we could play in the snow. We have very little snow in the south. Our chief industry is farming, the chief products being cotton, corn, peanuts, vegetables and fruit. "We plant cotton in the latter part of March and April. The boll weevil doesn't hurt the cotton until it is about two months old; therefore we haven't seen any this year. We poison the weevil by spraying a dust poison on the cotton plant. "We have limestone beds in the northern part of Alabama and also much bituminous coal and steel. Near our school we have the "Porcosins," a place where the trees are wholly evergreens. There is only one other like it in the world, which is in Germany. It is sometimes considered one of the wonders of the world. We hope you will visit our state sometime, because we think we have many things of interest." "MARTHA" OR "THE FAIR AT RICHMOND" (By Grace Welsh Lutgen) Many of us may not respond to the art of the masters who may be insensible to the thrilling notes of orchestras, organs or voices; we may not enjoy the eloquence of literary gems; but we all find keen delight in watching the drama unfold before us on the stage. Whether we be lovely or not, we can breathe the air of romance, even though we are awkward and poor, we sit in palaces and rub elbows with royalty. Such will be our privilege at the production of the opera, "Martha," by Frederick von Flotow. There we shall see Lady Harriet, one of the court ladies, attending upon Queen Anne of England, who became so bored with life that she suddenly decides to disguise herself in a peasant costume, and join a band of singing servants who are on their way to Richmond at the fair, Lady Harriet, as the servant, "Martha," is accompanied in the escapade by her personal maid, Nancy, and her would-be-lover, Sir "Tristan," as "Old John." Set to lovely music, the scenes carry us to the market place where the servants are bound out for a year to the farmers. Among these are Martha and Nancy, Plunket and Lionel, the farmers who claim these maids, find them rather helpless and charming servants, while the trick of getting out of their dilemma without scandal makes a lively, humorous plot. There is humor, romance, and adventure aplenty. But aside from the story, "Martha" has an equally strong appeal through its lovely, human, musical scores, with the familiar ballad, "The Last Rose of Summer," a well known and greatly loved composition. Maestro Giacomo Spadoni, an associate of Prof. Clifford Bair in Civic opera in Chicago, writes concerning an incident in a production of "Martha," as follows: "A most amusing incident occurred during a performance of 'Martha' in Chicago a few years ago. Schina was playing 'Lionel' and Lazzari was playing Plunkett. It was in the room scene in which Plunkett locks the girls in the room, lest they should escape, that it happened. "I was back-stage, ready to make the noise of the key turning. Lazzari whispered, 'Ready, Spadoni!' and gave the key two hardy turns and twice I made the noise. Then as he turned his back and walked across the stage I gave another turn of the key. You can imagine the consternation of Lazzari and, of course, the audience laughed lustily. The conductor, you may rest assured, was furious." Will Attend Wedding. Mrs. A. T. Claycomb, John, George, Barbara and Richard Claycomb will leave Friday for DeKalb, Ill., to attend on Saturday the marriage of Frank Claycomb of St. Louis, Mo., and Miss Harriet Duncan at the Roy Duncan home. Joy joins the party at Ames. The Claycombs will return Sunday or Monday. Women To Confer. Farm women who attend the 24th annual feeders' day at Nebraska college of agriculture, in Lincoln April 17 will hear special programs of interest by Miss Margaret Feltz and Miss Mary Ellen Brown. Care of meat will be stressed. John Flarney, 80, of Ponca, died Wednesday last week.

Club Arranges Arbor Contests

Essays and Birds Houses In Competition Sponsored by Wayne Women.

Essays for the Arbor day contesting sponsored by the Wayne Women's club for children of the ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth grades of the Wayne city school and the Wayne Training school should be in the hands of Mrs. W. H. Phillips by April 18, and must be in her possession by noon of April 20. Bird houses which are a part of the Arbor day contest sponsored by Wayne women for grade children of the city, should be completed and taken to the Wayne Herald office by April 18. The bird contest is divided into two sections, one for children in grades three, four and five and the other for grades six, seven and eight. Mrs. S. A. Lutgen, who is in charge of the essay contest, presented the project to children of the Wayne city school and Wayne Training school in brief talks before the high school assemblies the past week. Mrs. F. S. Berry, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. J. O. Wentworth and Miss Enid Conklyn are assisting Mrs. Lutgen with the work. Prizes for best essays are $2, $1 and two for 50 cents each. Winner of first prize will also have the honor of having his essay read at the school's public tree planting exercises. Subject for the essay contest is: "Why Nebraska Should Observe Arbor Day." Youngsters in the bird house contest will compete for prizes of $1, 75 cents and 25 cents. Mrs. D. S. Whitman is in charge of this contest and is assisted by Mrs. K. N. Parke, Mrs. W. C. Corryell, Mrs. E. E. Gallej and Mrs. H. C. Cassey. The bird houses will be presented in person by their builders to women of the club at the municipal auditorium April 24. Children of Wayne competing in the two contests will be entertained at 4 o'clock the afternoon of April 24 by the Woman's club at the new club rooms in the auditorium. The government printing office is celebrating its 75th anniversary this week. The first "superintendent of public printing" was appointed by President Lincoln on March 23, 1861. He then had only a four story building about sixty feet wide and two hundred forty feet long, and employed between 300 and 400 persons. Today the government printing plant is known as the largest in the world. It is valued in excess of $10,000,000, employs 5,000 workers, has 22 acres of floor space, and an expansion program is under way to meet ever growing needs. This program will result in the building of an eight story building, which will be raised on the ground now occupied by the old building units of the printing office; and eventually the office will have 81 and 1/2 acres of floor space. One congressman is proposing to construct a 450 foot wide transcontinental highway. He thinks it gives a lot of people jobs. He wants to run a 450 foot wide cement highway from New York through Washington to Miami, Florida, and from the Chicago vicinity through the southwest to link with the Pan-American highway leading to Mexico City. Some of the members are talking seriously about this proposed highway, but those who worked on farm to market roads believe the time has come to continue the farm to market program as started and put into operation through the efforts of the prairie states group last year. The records here show that a lot of farm to market roads have been constructed, and as a result, many farmers who formerly have been in the mud and were unable to reach the main highway are now able to come to town during all kinds of weather, except during blizzards similar to the one we recently had in Nebraska. Those who favored the farm to market program are keeping in close touch with the WPA organization here, endeavoring to interest them in continuing that work in the farm sections during 1936. The number of employees outside the military, legislative and executive branches, is nearing the million mark. There are about 235,000 newcomers here during the last three years and about half that number work right here in this town. Strange as it seems, only one in every 107 have been selected from the civil service lists, although there is a long waiting list of civil service people. Today we are able to secure the complete list of imports for consumption of specified farm commodities by sources, for the calendar year 1935, from the United States tariff commission. The totals are somewhat sensational in that the amount of imports from foreign countries for the year is very high. This official report shows that we imported 43,427,298 bushels of wheat, 3,842,523 bushels of rye, 27,435,870 bushels of wheat,

4,398,428 bushel of barley, 10,106,905 bushel of oats, 17,559,662 bushel of flaxseed, 87,171 tons of hay, 24, 878,943 pounds of potatoes, 6, 799,274 pounds of beef, and 3,703,375 pounds of pork. are no similar products available, or when prices bid for domestic products are considered unreasonable. Washington businessmen are congratulating themselves because this city has escaped the marked order of Harry Hopkins, the federal relief administrator, who states that 800,000 of the 3,000,000 relief workers will be taken from work rolls by June 30. The order to the Washington WPA is that men and women at work here will be reduced along in this order, but most of them will be transferred to other jobs. So it is felt that while the rest of the country will suffer by his reduction, the city of Washington escapes the brunt of the WPA dismissal. KARL STEFAN Southwest Wayne. For Frank Schulte. ### Legislation Is Topic Of Lesson

Wayne Branch A. A. U. W. Elects Officers Last Week at Smith's.

Legislation of interest before congress in Washington was the topic of the lesson given by Mrs. W. F. Dierking before Wayne branch of A. A. U. W. last Thursday evening at the R. R. Smith home. Thinking women should regard legislation as a privilege and a duty, Mrs. Dierking stated, and should take an interest in influencing worthwhile action.

Most bills before congress, in which A. A. U. W. people are interested, deal with education, status of women and children and consumer interest. The neutrality bill satisfies neither side. It is regarded as a liability by one group and designated as not strong enough by another group. Child labor amendment has been passed by 24 states but must pass in 12 more to become law. Creation of a department of education with a place in the cabinet, and combination of navy and army departments under defense lead are proposed.

Department of art, science and literature, national conservatory of music and incorporation of the American theatre are proposed. Provision for research, increase of army and navy, emergency aid to help schools continue and to re-finance their indebtedness, survey of school graduates without work, provision for teachers' talking oaths of allegiance, aviation schools, aid for crippled children, action to protect against communism, establishment of a bureau of public affairs, vocational training and employment of youths, study of government bureaus to determine any overlapping, action to control dispensing of information by physicians, ways of conducting foreign affairs better, a move to place this country in the League of Nations, control of manufacture of arms and ammunition and protection of free speech are, among the measures in which the A. A. U. W. is taking interest, favoring some and opposing others.

Officers elected by Wayne branch are: President, Dr. Mary Honey; secretary, Mrs. Dierking; chairman of education, Mrs. H. D. Griffin; social chairman, Miss Miriam Huse; and membership chairman, Miss Lenore Ramsey. Mrs. Griffin and Miss Ramsey held the office before. Mrs. Clara Heylman, Miss Pearl Rutherford and Miss Ruth Paden comprised the nominating committee.

Miss Beulah Rundle, president for two years, expressed appreciation to all who have assisted her. Miss Esther Dewitz reported on project she has followed in keeping record of activities with newspaper clippings. Miss Ramsey reported on membership, stating that all eligible have been invited. Miss Stella Traster, in charge of the library project, reported that Miss Josephine Silvers last year had started a good movement in sending about 400 magazines to rural schools, and about the same number has been collected this year. Miss Enid Conklyn reported $8.50 received for fellowship fund, and Mrs. C. F. Dienst reported on the drive for crippled children, the branch buying $2 worth of seals for this. Mrs. D. S. Wightman, treasurer, reported a balance of $43.

Mrs. Griffin, chairman of study groups, reported these very active. She called on Miss Ramsey who told of drama and creative writing work. Miss Louise Wendt who reported for consumers' research. Mrs. C. E. Wilson on book review group and Dr. Honey on international relations.

Wayne branch voted to extend invitation to the state convention for next spring. This year's is in Omaha soon. Refreshments were served Thursday by Mrs. Smith, Miss Mildred Piper, Mrs. G. W. Costerison, Mrs. C. F. Dienst, Miss Esther Dewitz and Mrs. L. F. Perry. Senior girls of Wayne college and the two Wayne high schools will be guests of A. A. U. W. at a tea at Neihardt hall May 2. On the committee are Mrs. C. E. Wilson, Miss Mildred Snyder, Miss Enid Conklyn, Miss Anna Geisler, Miss Maude Curley, Miss Pearl Rutherford, Mrs. Celia Pearson, Miss Jessie Boyce, Miss Rundle, Miss Ruth Ross, Miss Coral Stoddard and Mrs. F. W. Nyberg.

Art Department To Have Exhibit

C. E. Carhart Finds California In Very Poor Financial State

People of Western Section Pulling For Townsend Old Age Plan With Clubs Organized For Its Support.

"It was a lot of satisfaction for me to say to boasting Californians, 'Well, Nebraska, may not have as many paved roads or public parks as you have, but at least what we have are paid for,'" says C. E. Carhart, recently returned from four months spent in the west. "I've seen quite a lot of places this winter and at other times—California is a nice place to spend a winter—but I've never seen any place where I'd rather live than right here."

Asked about the financial status of the people of California, Mr. Carhart went on: "The state of California is heavily in debt—it has spent with no regard as to how it was going to pay. Now it is up against that debt and the care of people who filter into the state and stay there, with no means of support. That's mainly why the state is crying to the federal government for help now, and also why the people are pulling for the Townsend old age plan."

Mr. Carhart found politics of the state pretty much mixed, as is true of other states. He found that the Townsend plan foothold was stronger than ever. Many clubs are organized over the state and new ones cropping out. Every paper carries notices of the Townsend club meetings. San Diego papers having many such items each day. "San Diego has a high percentage of sailor families, who contribute a great deal of money toward the town," Mr. Carhart explained. "The city is the southern base for the United States naval fleet, although at the present time the battleships are not kept in the San Diego harbor, which is one of the finest in the world from the standpoint of land protection. Millions of dollars of federal money are being spent on the harbor this year, dredging and deepening it. At the present time the fleet is kept in the San Pedro harbor, while only the torpedo boats and cruisers, and other auxiliary ships are at San Diego. Both San Diego and Los Angeles want to participate in the sailors' payroll of millions of dollars, and it is necessary to divide as a matter of politics—in order to keep them satisfied."

Interested In Buildings. Mr. Carhart was interested in the buildings of California and expressed his opinion of the workmanship as "abominable—anything that will hold together goes." He noticed that all building materials used were of inferior grades. Since there is no need of building for warmth in southern California, structure is poor and money spent mainly on show. "I did notice one thing which struck me as being admirable and that is the conveniences used in the homes, especially in the kitchens and bathrooms. The kitchens seemed to me to be wonderful productions for comfort to women and economy of steps."

Mr. and Mrs. Carhart enjoyed the mildness of the climate and the freedom from extremes. Before they left the west citrus trees were in full bloom, deciduous trees were leafed out and the wild flowers blossoming along the mountain roads. Barley and wheat were fully headed out. Most of the labor on southern California truck farms is done by Mexicans. "There was a strike on one of the big celery farms near San Diego while we were there. And believe it or not," laughed Mr. Carhart, "the Mexicans struck because their boss put a white man in the field to work with them."

Mid-West Tourists. The Wayne people found that most of the tourists in California were from the middle west—people intent on escaping the rigors of a Nebraska winter. They noticed very few easterners through California and came to the conclusion that Florida draws the winter tourists from the eastern section of the United States. The Carharts attended the Iowa picnic at Long Beach at which there were over 100,000 present. "Long Beach is called the capital of Iowa—I believe it is, now," Mr. Carhart declared. "I found that there were lots of Nebraskans in California; Min-

Spring In Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., April 4.—Dr. E. E. Lackey, University of Nebraska geographer, said tonight spring begins later in western Nebraska, than in the eastern part of the state, but advances more rapidly in the western portion.

Based on records of the last 37 years, Lackey said, the median date of the last killing frost in the Lincoln vicinity is April 18.

Farmers in extreme southeastern Nebraska, the professor said, may count on a killing frost April 23 or later 50 per cent of the time.

Easter Story of Resurrection Inspires All Through The Ages

Mrs. Allis N. Follard, who is spending the winter in Dell Rapids, S. D., with her mother, wrote the following about Easter for a club of that city:

The proper time for celebrating Easter was long in dispute in the Christian church. The Christians of the East first observed Easter on the fourth of Nisan, corresponding to April, the day on which the Jewish Passover fell. The majority of the church, however, celebrated it on the Sunday following that day. Finally the Council of Nice in 325 A. D. fixed Easter as the first Sunday after the full moon which appears on or next after March 21, the vernal equinox. By full moon is meant the fourteenth day of the calendar month, or month. If the moon is full March 21, and should that day be Saturday, March 22 would be Easter, the earliest date on which it could fall. If the moon should fall on Monday, April 9, Easter would be April 25, the latest date which it could fall.

The name, Easter, comes from the Anglo-Saxon, Eostre, a goddess of light or spring, whose festival was celebrated in April. The name of the festival in Greek, French, Italian, and most other languages is derived from the Hebrew, pessach, meaning passover, since by the first Christians Easter was considered a continuation of the feast of the Passover, at which the paschal lamb, symbol of Christ, was sacrificed. The word, Lent, designating the forty days preceding Easter, comes from the old English word, lentes, also meaning spring.

Not only from the meaning of the words, Easter and Lent, does one feel that spring is the appropriate season of the year for especially commemorating the great event of the resurrection but also because of the reawakening of nature after her seeming death while earth makes her annual far journey from the sun. The festival of joy's return, spring is the rebirth of mortal and of immortal hope. Does not the spring well serve the purpose of reminding us of the souls immortality when we see in the world of nature after the freezing death of winter, the manifest indication of our own far survival?

There is something superlatively reassuring in the certainty of spring's approach. Although winter is majestic, the days seem bleakly by and the nights slump gloomily past. Yet at the appointed hour, an all-animating influence pervades the elements of earth and sky. Life stirs in the dark soil. In the dim air our eyes discern wedges of wild geese bearing northward on triumphant wings. In the words of the Psalmist, who cannot say that the songs of returned robins and meadow-larks have the power "to renew a right spirit" within him?

The worker of the soil, the toiler in the fields, has no difficulty in apprehending God. The gardener is always humble; he walks with wonder, toiling among miracles. The farmer must feel this sharing in the divine plan as the dawn unfolds in peace and beauty over the familiar scenes of his daily tasks. When he sows the grain he has full faith in resurrection although he may think of it in terms of harvest.

Those of us who dwell in towns and villages and are not brought close to nature in our daily work should find in the words of Bryant, "Go forth under the open sky and list the nature's teachings." "The groves were God's first temples." Spring readily and insistently reminds us that life is to be lived, and not altogether to be told away. One should take time each day to "commune with nature" in order to be able to say, at night "I have fully lived today." Too often we merely exist. "As we journey through life, let us live by the way."

It is said that "God dwells in a garden" and that "flowers are the language of God." While it is restful to work among the plants that grace one's door-yard, it is also good to get away from houses and man-built towns to charmed places where the joy of spring-time penetrates more deeply. One is uplifted physically and spiritually when he beholds the misty green- ing of the tops along a stream or country road. One owes it to himself to be able to say, at night "I have fully lived today." Too often we merely exist. "As we journey through life, let us live by the way."

While spring is so full of the joy and hope of the awakening of nature, a fitting season to typify the Easter story of resurrection and its sublime meaning, Christ's glorious waking in the tomb and his supreme promise before to the whole year. And throughout the year one may receive inspiration if his eyes seek out the beauties of the horizon. He will find that out of these far glimpses fresh viewpoints grow. He will live more fully and better serve in whatever niche his life is cast.

Many customs, beautiful and quaint, are observed in churches and in homes as an expression of joy because Christ rose from the dead. The giving of Easter eggs is a custom which has originated with the Christians, the eggs being symbols of new life. Coloring the of Christ, the greatest crime in history; first, ambition, represented by Caiaphas, high priest, and son-in-law of Annas who controlled him. They sacrificed Christ for the preservation of the office of Caiaphas and his co-conspirators. In less than 50 years the Roman legions had destroyed Jerusalem, demolished the temple, and with unbelievable cruelty had scattered the people and destroyed the Jewish nation. As a nation its life has never been renewed. The Jews are a people without a country but a people in whom nationality is unusually persistent. Can it be that this wandering people will once again establish themselves in Palestine? Persecuted in many places of the earth, notably by the Hitler regime in Germany, many Jews have fled to Palestine.

The Asia magazine for April, 1936, relates that armies of young Jewish pioneers are working along the slopes and in the valleys of Palestine seeking to reclaim wasted land, and for centuries. Diggers are turning the earth, draining it, battling with pest, contending together in heat and cold, hunger and thirst to make this ancient land blossom and give forth again. "Here through ritual of labor in the service of an ideal—an established home under a new law and order—these valiant pioneers assembling from all quarters of the globe like scattered members of the lost tribes, are rekindling ancient fires, with a dream as vivid yet more, as the vision of Moses—Israel at last released of its bondage and its wanderings."

The second sin that led to the crucifixion of Jesus was greed, represented by Judas Iscariot, the only Judan among the twelve disciples. Abandoning the apparently failing cause of Christ, he did not wish to return to Judaism empty-handed. "For over two years the Judaic party had sought in vain the charmed life of the Galilean rabbi. He that should destroy for Judaism this young Galilee who had defied it, would be not receive the hoarded of victory from priest and people? Judas saw himself crowned by the party of his youth and the vote of the Chief Council." This, according to Lyman Abbott, not the paltry sum of thirty pieces of silver, was the price his imagination offered him when he gave to his Lord the kiss of betrayal. He forgot that always the reward of treachery is scorn—scorn heaviest from those who profit by it. So did Benedict Arnold forget. So does every traitor.

The third sin was that of cowardice, represented by Pontius Pilate. In order to save the life of one whom he regarded as a harmless enthusiast, he would have had to hazard the lives of a score of Roman soldiers, imperil the peace and order of the entire community, and perhaps forfeit his own office. Cowardice is plainly expressed in his judgment: "I do not condemn him; but take him and execute your own sentence upon him." There could not be a more complete denial of conscience or reason.

The Via Dolorosa, road of sorrows, is the way along which Jesus went to his crucifixion. Tradition identifies it with a street in Jerusalem and has set apart fourteen places on the way as Stations of the Cross, such as the spot where Christ sank under the weight of his cross, where he met his mother, and where St. Veronica is said to have wiped the sweat from the Saviour's brow with her kerchief. The Bible records that after the crucifixion there was preternatural darkness from the sixth to the ninth hour. The atmosphere was heavy, filled with awe-inspiring gloom and a singular feeling of helpless insecurity which foretold the impending earthquake. We read in Matthew 27: 45 and 46: "Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour. And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice saying, My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?" In verses 50 and 51 of the same chapter we read: "Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost. And behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake and the rocks rent." Again in Matthew 28:2: "And behold, there was a great earthquake, for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it."

The resurrection of Jesus Christ has been described as "the extraordinary evidence of an ordinary event." Every death is a resurrection, for death is simply the separation of the body and the spirit. The spirit is committed to God who gave it. We cannot know where the spirit dwells in its continuing life since all our knowledge is confined within the bounds of human experience, but there is a yearning, a faith, a sure feeling that convinces everyone that there is something in him which is absolutely imperishable and indestructible.

"I only know I cannot drift

CAUGHT IN THE WILD By ROBERT AMES BENNET

CHAPTER VIII—Continued —2— "The supply steamers of the Hudson's Bay company and other traders, taking out the season's cargoes of furs." "The millionaire granted his relief; 'Ugh—steamers! Almost good as a plane.' " "Come along, and if we see it in time," Garth qualified, "you are rather farsighted. You might watch for smoke downriver." "I'll do that. D—n you daddling with any raft! Ten to one, you've already let every steamer slip past. All this time with your nose rubbing those d—d logs!" "Garth went down to tell Lillith that her father was by way of being a well man. He sent her to move the camp to a small opening in the thicket, close behind the grumblers. Fuel for a bonfire had already been heaped up on the beach. But Garth did not count strongly on sighting any steamer. The boats might have lingered at the far-away Arctic trading posts. Delays meant danger of an early blizzard. He rushed his work on the raft. When dusk came, Lillith went on watch, in place of her father. Garth relieved her at midnight. But neither of them saw any light on the vast expanse of ghostly gleaming whitecaps. By another sunset Garth had the raft completed to his satisfaction. He had built a superstructure that raised the footing well above the waterline. Rails guarded against the risk of squall waves washing the stiff weak millionaire overboard. For weeks, Garth had washed the paddles to keep them free of saplings. He rigged other saplings to mast and yardarm, ready to hoist the blanket as a sail in case of a favorable change in the wind. "Shift or calm, we'll put off at sunrise," he announced. "Though Mr. Ramill grumbled, he ate his fill of broiled whitefish, and rolled up for the night to fall into the healthy heavy sleep of a convalescent. Lillith again took the first watch. In the midst of his first sleep, Garth opened his eyes with the instinctive wakefulness of a hunter. The girl's hand was on his forehead. "Yes?" he asked. "I—I'm not sure," she murmured. "The wind has gone down... it looks like a star. But it is so low on the water, I thought I'd better call you." He rolled from the bed of spruce tips and dry moss. A single glance downward was enough. He jumped to light the prepared bundle of brush at the snuff-drip and leap with it down the bank. As the heap of fuel on the beach burst into flame he heard the girl's gasping murmur, close behind his shoulder: "It can't be a—mistake? You're certain—certain that it's really—"

"You'll Not Have Much Longer to Insult Me."

river came the hoarse blasts of a steamer's whistle, muffled by distance yet unmistakable. "All right, Miss Ramill," Garth said. "Tell your maid to pack your luggage." "Before we came aboard, word was received by radio that a man named Huxby had recorded a platinum placer claim at Fort Simpson, that he had bought a large goldpan, and flown north with three miners." "Mr. Ramill looked his doubtfully and forcibly took her and me with him in the canoe, he could at least have had the plane come for us." "If you care for my guess," Garth said, "he was more interested in your daughter as an heiress than as a woman." "No guess about it. A cold-blooded rascal who would have murdered you for your claim! I'll run him down and make him pay in full for deserting Lillith and me, if it costs a million!" "His punishment will cost you nothing, Mr. Ramill. He has been trapped by his own greed." "Trapped?"
