FATHERS' day is over and as remembrances father received wearables instead of flowers, which former he usually needs worse.

Flowers are deemed more appropriate for mothers' day, because mother is a more finely modeled creature with a deeper sense of the beautiful, and when she gets a bouquet of flowers or a blooming plant from her loved ones, she is thrilled.

Father is just as affectionate, but rather more practical, and so the way to penetrate his pericardium and properly arouse the sense which it encloses, is to give him a shirt, necktie or pair of socks. He revels in the beauty and fragrance of flowers, but his sensibilities are not so profoundly touched or his joy so long sustained unless sentiment is connected with something he can put to practical use.

But father is usually an affectionate old bird with a big heart and good intentions. He usually does his best, and is anxious to safeguard members of his family against ill fortune, and provide them with every possible present advantage.

His love is not always manifested. His eagerness to make the grade and maintain his household in adequate comfort often conceals the depth of his emotions. If he fills his role, he is the household buffer, a sort of shock-absorber, is on hand with words and deeds of courage, and he does his best to lead dependents along lines of usefulness and honor and popular respect.

To Raise THE Christian Science Monitor calls attention to Postmaster-General and National Chairman Farley's new plan to raise campaign funds by asking postmasters to sell so-called Roosevelt nomination tickets at $1 apiece.

This action is in violation of law and in conflict with the president's declaration against mixing politics into public service. It is in harmony, however, with the administration's policy to say one thing and do another. The Monitor draws this conclusion:

"The whole incident emphasizes the need for an improved concept of public service based on merit rather than spoils. Efforts to push enactment of the Ramspeck Bill, and Governor Landon's message to the Cleveland convention amending the civil service plank in his party's platform, attest increasing recognition of this need. Whether Mr. Farley is responsible or not, this attempt to coerce direct financial support from federal employees focuses public attention still further in the direction of reform. One step toward reform would be for the public to leave no question of its condemnation of such methods."

New Deal THE program was well fixed for New Deal ballyhoo and Roosevelt adulation at the Philadelphia convention this week.

One report said Chairman Farley's lack of popularity as a leader was evident when he was loudly applauded on indicating that he was about to quit speaking and sit down. Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, the keynoter, lathered over the president and his New Deal policies with extravagant praise, attacked dissenters and found no good in anything the republicans have said or done.

The party machine was well oiled and carefully manned to renominate the president and adopt a platform that would suit his changed front. However, pointing with pride and renewing pledges will be accepted with grave doubts by the thinking populace familiar with the contrast between past promises and past performances.

Hitherto thwarted attempts to abridge freedom of the press suggest the practicability of the government using a share of the taxpayers' billions to buy newspaper plants and exercise absolute control over avenues of publicity. The taxpayer would thus finance ways of keeping himself fully instructed on what to think and do.

The volumes of propaganda sent out by different branches of the government would then be sure of reaching the public. If the New Deal is to be perpetuated with growing power, its course could be made least difficult by owning the newspapers. It would be the easiest and quickest way to establish a dictatorship.

George N. Peek who has been writing a series of articles based on his early connection with the national administration, thinks there have been too many professors with no practical experience to fix tariff schedules and handle other governmental policies. He suggests that the class room custom of settling a question by putting down a bad mark for failure to answer according to the text book will not work in dealing with foreign nations. He deplores the lack of experienced statesmen the last few years in directing the course of the ship of state.

Necessarily the New Dealers now assembled in Philadelphia will have to make out an entirely new platform and carefully avoid any reference to or re-annunciation of any part of their platform of 1932. The way the latter fared, however, will give little encouragement to depend on the platform to be adopted now.

The sheriff of Wayne county says he needs improved artillery to facilitate handling and capturing hardened criminals who come this way. The cold-blooded criminal is equipped and determined, and the under-armed officer is seriously handicapped.

In the growing desire for a change in the national administration, people may feel profoundly obliged to Senator Norris for his successful effort in bringing the presidential term to an end in January instead of March.

Chairman James Farley's growing habit of trying to belittle Governor Landon as the prairie state presidential candidate reminds one that "whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

President Roosevelt will be remembered by unborn generations—not as a great statesman, but as the greatest spender and tax builder ever occupying the nation's executive chair.

The government could balance its budget every morning by disregarding the deficit of the day before. This would be a stimulating way to start off the day's work.

Live Stock Farming Pays Best. Omaha Journal-Stockman: Here is further evidence, if any were needed, that live stock farming is the best kind of farming, for those who are fixed for it. Iowa reports the results on 726 farms co-operating with the state college in keeping records. In 1935 the most profitable group of these farms got an average return of $172 for every hundred dollars' worth of feed put into live stock, while the least profitable farms got a return of $122 on every hundred dollars' worth of feed. That's good business, for the most successful farmers, for the least successful, and on the average.

The report shows that average net farm income for 726 Iowa farms in 84 counties in 1935 was $2,530, of which 75 percent was obtained from the sale of live stock.

Net farm income of the 182 high-profit farms was $4,680, as compared with $900 for the 182 low-profit farms. Net cash income for the group averaged $1,700. Total cash income for the group averaged $5,450, for the "highs," $9,950, and for the "lows," $3,300.

Average corn yield for the group was 47 bushels per acre and the average oats yield was 39 bushels per acre. Corn yields on the high-profit farms averaged 13 bushels more and oats 10 bushels more than the averages for the lows. A combination of higher yields and the selections of more profitable crops on the high profit farms results in a $5 higher gross value of the crops per acre than the lows, an average of $700 per farm.

This record keeping business means a lot of work, but there is real satisfaction in it, and evidently profit, too. The farmer needs a bright daughter with a business head to conduct his office work, and if she makes it pay, in stopping leaks and finding the way to better returns, then she ought to have pay for the job. Even a small business in the city pays out money for book-keeping.

People Gain Understanding. Omaha World-Herald: In the national conventions of both parties, always, there is plenty of froth and fury and buncombe. There is pandering to sections and classes, to selfishness and prejudice and misery, to win votes. The same is true, intensified, in the campaign that follows.

But this year—fortunately, we think—the issue has been defining itself. The people have been coming to an understanding of it, before both conventions have adjourned.

Is it necessary, is it advisable, in order to eradicate the evils that have sprung up in our system of a free society and a free industry, and to remedy its defects, radically to change our form and theory of government and our social structure? Is there no way to curb the "malefactors of great wealth" but by providing straitjackets for all the rest of us as well? Is it wise, if we value our traditions of freedom and individual independence, to "create instruments of power in a centralized government" which, if abused, would "shackle the liberties of the people"?

There will be great talk about a multitude of things in the months that lie ahead. But thoughtful voters of all callings and conditions will study the question of how powerful and far-reaching our federal government should become and to what extent it should be dominated by an executive authority already regarded enviously by all European politicians—including the dictators.

DESTINY.

A course of reckless, living brings on such restraining or punitive consequences that we marvel at the exacting rule of cause and effect. We allowed ourselves to be drawn into a cruel and useless war, and we have been paying for it ever since. Sacrifices in the conflict were followed by an aftermath of high living and wild spending. Society was riding for a fall. Values skyrocketed until everybody thought he had the world by the tail with a down grade. People couldn't stand altitudinal living and a ruinous pace forever. They had to slow down, and economic laws slowed them. The slogan that "kept us out of war," but didn't, brought a wave of sharp resentment. Then consistently came a new party control. The ascending privilege was abused. Cocksureness in public life proved as disastrous as that in private life. Coolidge wiped out a lot of debts, and Hoover did his best against an obstructive congress and an onrushing depression. In this downward course, people grabbed for new leadership, and they happened to grab Roosevelt who, however, has proved a disappointment in violating pledges, surrounding himself with theorists instead of statesmen and engaging in the greatest spending spree in the history of the world. We have moved so fast in the wrong direction that popular disapproval is bound to call a halt. The depression brought people to their senses, and now the people will have to bring the government to its senses. No other course will insure sound progress.

PARANOIACS. The Literary Digest devotes an article to paranoiacs—persons with an exaggerated idea of their importance—persons who have an ambition to become heroes, but who often become assassins. John Wilkes Booth who killed Lincoln, and who believed he was inspired, was a paranoiac. Jean Paul Marat, French Revolutionary leader, had an insane desire to dispossess aristocrats of everything including their heads. He nursed an ambition to kill 200,000 aristocrats in one day. He was a pronounced paranoiac. Many inexcusable killings recorded in history were due to this mental defect. The article points out that paranoiacs do not necessarily take the form of homicidal mania. It may be expressed in a thirst for the lime-light—a passion to boss people or affairs—a feverish anxiety to become a hero or a martyr. Children often pass through a period of harmless paranoiac, and elders may possess the defect without doing any damage. The article quotes Dr. Charles MacLarnin who states that while paranoiacs hold serious dangers, it is this very force which has driven men and women to much of the world's really great work and sacrifice.

PARANOIACS. The Literary Digest devotes an article to paranoiacs—persons with an exaggerated idea of their importance—persons who have an ambition to become heroes, but who often become assassins. John Wilkes Booth who killed Lincoln, and who believed he was inspired, was a paranoiac. Jean Paul Marat, French Revolutionary leader, had an insane desire to dispossess aristocrats of everything including their heads. He nursed an ambition to kill 200,000 aristocrats in one day. He was a pronounced paranoiac. Many inexcusable killings recorded in history were due to this mental defect. The article points out that paranoiacs do not necessarily take the form of homicidal mania. It may be expressed in a thirst for the lime-light—a passion to boss people or affairs—a feverish anxiety to become a hero or a martyr. Children often pass through a period of harmless paranoiac, and elders may possess the defect without doing any damage. The article quotes Dr. Charles MacLarnin who states that while paranoiacs hold serious dangers, it is this very force which has driven men and women to much of the world's really great work and sacrifice.

Barbecued Sandwiches. These require 1-2 pounds of round steak chopped fine or run through a food chopper, 2 medium size mildly flavored onions, 3 or 4 ripe but firm tomatoes, salt, pepper and a generous supply of butter—at least 1-2 pound. Also baker's rolls which are to be slit in half through the center and toasted if possible. Melt 1-4 pound of butter in a heavy skillet, season the meat, adding just a little grated onion and make up a flat loose cakes about the diameter of the rolls. Slip the cakes into the hot butter and sizzle until brown and crusted. Meantime slice the onions wafers, then to the tomatoes a little thicker; remove foaks, add remainder of butter to the pan and melt. Dip the rolls in this and then put the sandwiches together in this way: First a half roll, a slice of onion, season, meat cake, more seasoning, and top with remaining half of roll. These sandwiches are delicious if you prepare them over a picnic fire, but may be wrapped in paper and eaten cold also.

Prune Whip Pie. 3-4 cup prune pulp. Apricot or peach may be used if desired. 3-4 cup sugar 3 egg whites 3 teaspoons lemon juice Baked pie shell. Put fruit through a colander. Blend 1-2 cup sugar with the pulp. Beat egg whites until they hold a point. Add lemon juice and gradually beat in the rest of the sugar. Fold the fruit mixture into the meringue. Pour into a cooled baked pie shell and bake until filling is set 30 to 40 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve very cold. Just before serving spread with a thin layer of sweetened whipped cream and sprinkle toasted shredded coconut over the cream.

Criss Cross Cherry Pie. Line pie plate with well chilled rich pastry. Fill with pitted sour

Fire Does Damage In Implement Shop

Fire of undetermined origin broke out about 7 o'clock Saturday morning in the H. H. Hachmeier implement shop, resulting in damage estimated at $500 before the flames were controlled. The loss was covered by insurance. The blaze started in a partition which divided the building into office and storage space. The fire had probably been smoldering in the partition for some time and was fanned into life when Mr. Hachmeier opened up doors and windows to air out the building about 6 o'clock. Most of the damage was caused by smoke and water.

Explains The Cattle Market

(By Prof. H. J. Gramlich, chairman, animal husbandry department, University of Nebraska College of Agriculture.)
Cattle prices have reversed themselves and now housewives are entitled to know that good, choice corn-fed beef is available at very reasonable prices. Generally heavy beef produces meat which wholes at a somewhat higher price than does beef from light cattle. The tables are turned now.
To illustrate this, the report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics for Monday, June 15, quotes prices on the New York market as follows:
Choice 300 to 500 pound steer carcasses, $13.50 to $14.00; choice 600 to 700 pound carcasses, $13.00 to $13.50; choice carcasses 700 up, $12.50 to $13.50.
There are several factors entering into the present unusual market situation. In the first place there is only a limited demand for heavy cattle. This call under normal conditions comes largely from eastern industrial centers. When there are no more cattle than are needed to fill this demand, prices are on a premium basis.
Another factor is the high price of this kind of beef one year ago which turned many usual customers away from such products. Nebraska cattle feeders are today winning back beef customers in the east but at a severe financial penalty.
In relation to the Canadian trade treaty and its bearing upon present prices much has been said. It is, of course, impossible to make a definite appraisal of its effects until it has been in effect for a considerable length of time. Canada already though has shipped in approximately 70 percent of the quota of 155,000 head allowed by the treaty.
That cattle prices have slipped disastrously there is no doubt. Light cattle have gone to the scales promptly at steady to strong prices while the opposite has been true of heavy cattle.
Buyers, however, can get more for their money by purchasing the top quality beef than they can by buying inferior beef. While in Chicago recently I noticed round steak from choice corn-fed yearlings retailing at 27 cents per pound while round steak from cutter cows sold in the same shop at 20 cents per pound. Without question, the purchaser of the former could get more per dollar spent than the buyer of the latter.
It behooves every consumer to take advantage of the present market, watch newspaper advertisements, become a judge of beef and purchase where quality meat can be procured to the best advantage.

Kratavil Family Locates In West

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Kratavil and son have found a location in the Willamette Valley. Mr. Kratavil purchased a shoe repair shop at Corvallis, Oregon, a town of about 7500. A state college there has an enrollment of more than 3000. The Kratavils think the climate is ideal, seldom too warm in the summer and never cold in the winter. There is a sea breeze every afternoon about 3 o'clock. They are about 50 miles from the ocean by airline but somewhat more than that via mountain roads. The town is level, with wide streets, well shaded and many lovely homes and lawns.
They Are Here.
They still are present the departed. Into the mystery we should not fear—
The loved, the bold and the quiet hearted.
Unseen of eye they ever linger near.
Perhaps, at times, as in earth garb, they sorrow,
Seeing the things in frailty we do. Maybe they would come of our burdens borrow,
The bitter weights that cumber me and you.
Not gone are they whom we, recalling, cherish,
And even when all memory is spent,
Their spirit, deathless spirit, will not perish,
But will return, by some old impulse sent.
So, if from a star world they travel—
Kinsman or comrade to bestow their cheer,
May we accept and not too greatly marvel,
Knowing that love's wing bears them here.
WILL CHAMBERLAIN

Nebraskans in Washington.
(By Congressman Karl Stefan)

Seven thousand farm women were in Washington last week to attend the third conference of the Associated Country Women of the United States. The Nebraska delegation consisting of about 100 women, arrived in Luses Saturday night after what they said was a delightful trip from Omaha through Iowa, Michigan, parts of Canada, spending a day at Niagara, and coming through Pennsylvania to Washington. Monday they attended their first session of the conference and attended receptions and social functions given in their honor by the officials in Washington. Wednesday the Nebraska delegation spent most of the day visiting the house and senate office buildings, the congressional library, the nation's capitol and points of interest around Washington. The late Speaker Joseph W. Byrns delivered his last public speech to 37 Nebraska women at 11:10 Wednesday morning. These women were mostly from the Third congressional district, and by special arrangement they were invited to the speaker's private office to meet him personally. For nearly fifteen minutes the speaker spoke to the Nebraska women. He shook hands with nearly every woman present, and told them how he was raised on a farm in Robertson county, on Tennessee's northern border. He told these Nebraska women during his last public speech that he has never forgotten how his father and mother worked on their farm and although he had become a lawyer and a statesman, his heart was with the people who derived a living from the soil. The Nebraska ladies were terribly shocked when news came of his death early Thursday morning. The delegation was also honored

CONGRESS

The war-like conditions in Europe and in the far-east are discussed with much interest here. The general consensus of opinion among the house members who are willing to talk about it openly, is that the majority of the house members are for a strong defense, but that there is no likelihood of any war so far as Uncle Sam is concerned. These members who talk about this subject say that "if there is any war, there will no longer be any "profits" in war for anybody, and that this Congress would vote against any war except one to protect the United States from an attack.

Any future war—if this Congress has anything to do with it—would result in the conscription of all the wealth first, and manhood last. That seems to be what most of the members say about it when they talk about war. Most of those who voted against big expenditures for the army and navy during peace time say they will be the first to vote for the most adequate defense bill offered.

Thousands of telegrams and letters have come into Washington from nearly every state, many from Nebraska, asking and demanding that PWA be given some of the WPA relief money. An attempt in the house to earmark some of the billion and a half relief money for PWA failed because of a parliamentary ruling against the amendment.

The president may do something about it, but present indications are that the entire amount will go to WPA with instructions to use some of it for resettlement administration and also for PWA.

Farm conditions around Nashville and throughout Tennessee are not so good. While the corn is about a foot high, it had to be replaced in many places. The farmers are complaining about dry weather. They haven't had rain for many days.

Throughout Ohio the crops are in excellent condition, although corn is barely coming out of the ground. The clover crop will be enormous, but the wheat crop will be short, due to a freeze.

A bill was passed by the committee, which will send to Puerto Rico, four members from the senate and four from the house, and some other officials from Puerto Rico and at Washington to investigate the economic conditions in Puerto Rico where considerable trouble has been brewing. Demands for statehood and demands for independence have been made with the result that an investigation is to be made.

Recently an American was assassinated in one of the principal cities of the island. The commissioner from Puerto Rico, Santiago Iglesias, is in favor of the statehood. He says Puerto Rico could never survive as an independent nation. Bills by the score are being pushed through the house because of the close approach of adjournment. Among the several conference reports passed on today was the one on construction of public works on rivers and harbors and flood control, which carried many, many items and which called for an agreed authorization of $300,572,300.

Those voting against the bill did so on the grounds that it was a bill with considerable "pork" in it. A desperate effort is being made to discharge the rules committee and get the anti-lynching bill up for a vote before this session of congress ends. This anti-lynching bill, of which there are thirty or more, is up against the same thing the Frazier-Lemke bill was up against. The proponents of the bill have placed a petition on the clerk's desk and members are asked to sign it. If 218 signatures are received in the next few days, the bill will come before the house for a vote. 192 signatures have been placed on the petition within the last two days; requiring 6 more signatures to get the bill away from the powerful committee. The southern bloc is fighting this anti-lynching legislation.

Compromise on Back to the Farm. (Omaha Journal-Stockman) An analysis of the 1935 census statistics would seem to indicate that the conflict between the farm and the city has resulted in a dog-fall—an increase in both suburban residents and farming.

The cold census figures show that under the impetus of a "back to the land" movement under way for the last five years, the farm population of the United States is reported to have reached an all-time peak of 31,800,907 in 1935.

More than 1,333,000 persons joined the farm (folks of the nation between 1930 and 1935, according to the census statistics. Areas around industrial cities and those often described as "subsistence farming" as well as mining sections showed large gains.

"This increase, in farm residents reflects, in a major degree, the back-to-the-farm movement of over 2,000,000 persons and the checking by the depression of the flow of farm folks to the cities," the report shows. "During these five years thousands formerly employed in factories, mines and other industries moved to unoccupied farms or returned to the farm homes of their parents."

If we interpret the census figures correctly they indicate that there has been a slight reduction in population in congested centers as well as a slight decrease in the number of families out on the land, actually farming. Part time farming on suburban acreage has shown some increase.

Undoubtedly this condition has been brought about by the automobile, quick and cheap transportation of people and products. And it seems certain that suburban life will show further increase as the years pass. It is sort of a compromise between life in the cities and life out on the farms.

Early Days from the Wayne Herald for June 24, 1920: Jesse Randol and Harry McIntosh were cut and bruised when a car struck the tractor they were riding north of Wayne.

Clarence Thomas of Wakefield, suffered internal injuries when the wagon in which he was riding when helping his brother, Carl

June Wedding Is Very Attractive

Miss Marjorie Missetfeldt Is Bride Of Mr. Neal Grubb Friday Afternoon.

On Friday, June 19, at 3 p. m. at the home of her parents at Winside, Miss Marjorie Marie Missetfeldt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Missetfeldt, became the bride of Mr. Neal Alison Grubb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wylie Grubb of Tilden. Rev. A. E. Fowler performed the ceremony, in the presence of 31 guests. This date also marked the 24th wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

Preceding the ceremony Harry Vogt of Tilden, sang "At Dawning," and Miss Mildred Moses of Wayne, sang "I Love You Truly," with Miss Ethel Lewis at the piano. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bridal party entered and took their places in front of a background of a white lattice, flanked on either side by palms and baskets of flowers.

The bride wore a white satin dress, with white rose-petal trimming. The sleeves were long, and the skirt, beginning at the closely fitted waist-line, drifted into a graceful train. The long white silk net veil was held in place by a coronet of seed pearls and orange blossoms. A large spray of calla lilies, baby-breath and ferns was carried by the bride. The bridegroom wore the conventional dark suit.

Miss Virgine Missetfeldt, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore a floor length dress of shell pink organza over satin. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses, baby-breath and sweetpeas. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Ralph Grubb, of Tilden. Following the impressive single ring ceremony, a reception was held. The bride's aunt, Mrs. R. H. Thompson, was assisted in serving at the tables by Miss Wilma Lewis, Miss Florence Nellis and Miss Neville Troutman, intimate friends of the bride. White roses and a large three-tier wedding cake decorated the bride's table, at which her silver and crystal were used. The ice cream was served in small white baskets made of cake, decorated in white spun sugar rose buds, the handles tied with tulle bows. On the smaller tables the bride's colors of pastel shades were carried out in the flowers, and also in the basket decorations.

The bride graduated from the Winside high school and attended Wayne State Teachers College. She taught the Apex school for five years, and had the distinction of developing the first superior school in Wayne county. The bridegroom completed his education at Wayne State Teachers College, receiving his A. B. degree from that school. He served as principal and coach at the Carroll high school during the past year and will continue in that capacity for the ensuing year.

Out of town guests present for the wedding and reception were: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Rosenbaum of Blair, grandparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Grubb of Tilden, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Grubb, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vogt, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Wallin and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lindahl, all of Tilden, and Miss Florence Nellis of Belden.

Grass the Life of the Soil. Omaha Journal-Stockman: Interest in pastures continues. To make the land yield a fair return through grass, and at the same time to build it up, appeals to many farmers, for obvious reasons.

Pasture farming is not only one of the oldest kinds of farming, but makes up a large share of the farming business in those countries where agriculture has long maintained itself profitably on the same lands or soil, points out W. A. Albrecht, of the Missouri college of agriculture. Observations in the Old World indicate that the length of profitable life of a soil seems to be extended accordingly as pasture farming occupied a greater share of it. This more extensive use of grass cannot be disregarded as one of the reasons why soils producing much of it regularly have continued to produce well, and have carried agriculture long enough to be considered as older agriculture.

Over in Ohio two farmers report that through the use of lime, phosphorus and nitrogen they have made grass on rolling land yield three times as much as untreated pasture. Up in Michigan Prof. Brown has a temporary pasture that he figures will carry a cow and a calf per acre this summer. What's that worth, as measured in net return per acre? Incidentally, some experienced stockmen say that a cow with a calf at side will get more out of pasture than any other live stock combination.

County Four-H Groups Convene Here For Judging Work Tuesday

Poultry Groups In Session At Omaha Cold Storage Plant In Afternoon.

VISIT NEARBY FARMS

"How the heck do you spell the name of those chickens?" a freckled, healthy looking youngster, asked looking up from his reason card, with a worried pucker between his eyes.

"Aw, its B-r-a-m-a," supplied a tall, blue-headed superior, "can't ya even spell?"

"Rats," said number one in disgust, "that ain't right. Say, somebody, how do you spell it?"

"B-r-a-m-a," suggested the Wayne Herald reporter. The lad's face cleared and he grinned shyly. The business of compiling reasons for judging the last class of poultry for Light Brahms, continued uninterrupted, L. P. Vance, of the department of agriculture at Lincoln, was in charge of the group, gathered at the Omaha Cold Storage plant Thursday for instruction in poultry judging.

"All right, boys," Mr. Vance glanced around at the lads, sitting on sacks of feed, egg crates and block salt, "we haven't much time left and we'll have to speed this up in order to get through on time. Jack, how did you place these four hens—remember, this time we're judging for market birds?"

"Well," responded Jack, "I placed three first—it has shorter legs and better padding around the hips and breast. I place two over four because four hasn't much weight, even if it is the biggest."

"The boys had earlier taken the birds from their wire cages, poked at them—"hefted" and pinched them.

The next youngster asked to give his reasons for the way he placed the birds seemed to have his lesson well learned. Without preamble he stated:

"I put three first. It has better looking hair (this brought a burst of laughter from the gathering.) I mean feathers. I put two over one because it's heavier. Four has more fat and better finish than one."

"That's a good list of reasons," Mr. Vance agreed, taking the floor. "Now, boys, there are a lot of things I want you to remember in judging birds. Market hens must have full breasts; good red, healthy combs; good, smooth feathers and a nice finish. When you judge a bird, implant its qualities so firmly in your minds that you can wake up out of a sound sleep and see the fowl."

Taking the hen labeled 1, out of its pen, Mr. Vance called the boys' attention to the following: "Look at this bird—its flesh is a dark color; the feathers are broken—it has a thin back and not much meat on the breast. Now let's look at number 2. It's heavy—better fleshed—it has more finish—more fat—good coat of feathers. Here's number 3. Boy, look at that bird! Her breast is smooth—you can hardly feel the bone. Her feathers are in nice condition—a few broken, but not enough to interfere with dressing."

Taking out number 4 from the cage, the instructor exclaimed: "Say, this is a big one! Heavy, too."

"But she's skinny," protested the lads, almost in unison.

"Right," Mr. Vance agreed. "She has a big frame, but she's thin enough so that you can feel almost every cartilage in her breast. No good on the market."

Mr. Vance asked Dick Pinkham, manager of the Omaha Cold Storage plant, to explain something to the boys about the method of grading eggs and the method of packing laid by the firm.

Mr. Pinkham responded: "You always want to remember that a good fowl will produce a good egg and a poor fowl will do the opposite. Eggs from a thin, poorly fed hen will not weigh out." He demonstrated weighing of an egg, picking one which looked rather small. The egg weighed 12 ounces—the S. U. standard size. Another egg slightly larger, weighed a few ounces more and Mr. Pinkham explained that this size was called the Douglas egg and is used for commercial purposes. A No. 1 egg has an air cell the size of a dime—if the air cell is larger, the egg will not weigh out and goes into the second grade. Mr. Pinkham told the youngsters to remember that eggs should always be cooled before packing into an egg crate, and that they must be kept in a cool place from the time they are gathered. If eggs are packed in crates immediately after gathering, with the animal heat still in them, and then kept a part of the week, there will be a large shrinkage of the eggs in the bottom of the case. Grade 1 eggs should weigh from 59 to 61 pounds a case.

At the Wayne high school 4-H girls' clubs held an all-day session, judging advanced and beginning sewing. "The Hows and Whys For Young Cooks and Meal Planning Preparation."

The girls judged baked goods which were furnished for them; they also brought a number of articles which had made themselves. Articles of clothing displayed at county and state fairs were judged by the girls under direction of Miss Allegra Wilkins, Miss Ripzaph Douglas, Miss Eleanor Dixon, Miss Dean, Miss Jessie Greene and Miss Miriam Frasier, all of the agricultural extension service, Lincoln.

The dress and suit winning first prizes at the national fair in Chicago were displayed and girls learned much from examining the quality of materials and the exquisite workmanship. National blue ribbon slip and underwear with handmade fagoting set an ideal for the girls of the sewing clubs.

Girls were instructed to base their judging, first on design and material, second on workmanship. They had previously judged first on workmanship, but were told that, while workmanship was of great importance, the cut and material of a garment were far more important.

Florence Suber of Wayne, received five excellent ratings on her score card, and placed highest in the groups in judging. Her sister, Irene Suber, placed second with three excellent.

Livestock groups gathered at the Harry Baird farm in the morning to judge calves. Walter Talman, M. N. Lauritsen and Mr. Rosenquist of Lincoln, instructed the youngsters in these groups.

At the Ole Nelson farm near Wayne young people were instructed in methods of judging hogs; the R. O. Stringer farm was the scene of sheep judging Thursday morning. In the afternoon the youngsters were taken to the Willis Noakes farm for work in judging Guernsey cows and heifers.

Baby beefs are judged according to distance the body of the animal is from the ground; amount of compact fat an animal carries; texture and glossiness of the coat, width through chest and hind quarters.

Judging teams will be selected from the various clubs at a later date and these young people take their training very seriously. It means a lot to the future farmers and farmers' wives of America!

The training given these boys and girls in early youth will eventually put America at the top of the list in master-farming and homemaking.

County Board. Wayne, Nebraska, June 15, 1936. Board met in regular session. All Members present. Action on bids for bridge work for the year 1936 which was deferred from the meeting of June 8th was taken up for consideration, and it was moved and seconded that all bids be rejected and that no further advertisement be made, and that the board buy such material and hire such work done as needed upon the open market. It was voted as follows: Ayes: Exleben, Rethwisch, and Koch. Nays: None. Whereupon Chairman Exleben declared the motion carried. On motion all certified checks deposited with bids which are this day rejected are ordered returned to the bidders. Comes now B. W. Frederickson and states that for the year 1935 he was assessed with a Dodge sedan 27-1895 in Logan Precinct, tax amounting to $7.02; that he paid said tax under protest for the reason that the money from the sale of hogs was used to buy such car and that a double taxation exists since he also paid taxes on the money. He asks that the county treasurer be ordered to refund such tax. On motion such protest is rejected and the county treasurer is ordered to distribute such tax. The following claims are on motion audited and allowed and warrants ordered drawn on the respective funds as herein shown, warrants to be available and ready for delivery on Friday, June 26, 1936. Receive Letter From Mrs. H. C. Capsey Written On Board Steamer "Aurania"

On board the Cunard White Star line steamer, "Aurania," Mrs. H. C. Capsey, bound for London, Eng-land, writes the following, dated June 6, and received by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beckenhauer Friday:

"We are nearing the end of our long journey. We arrived at Plymouth at 10:30 this morning and quite a number of passengers disembarked; we are now on the way to Havre, France, which we hope to reach at 11 o'clock tonight. Others will leave the boat there and we will be off immediately for London. We hope to be safely in port sometime tomorrow afternoon.

"We have had a very cold trip and have worn pur winter garments and coats every day and have not been able to sit out on deck very much. The sun shone yesterday afternoon for the first time and I expected to see a glorious sunset but was disappointed. We had lots of fog the first three days and a tram freighter very nearly collided with us. The captain did not go to bed for three days at the beginning of the voyage. Last night he planned on being at the farewell concert but it was announced that he was on the bridge steering us toward Plymouth.

"The captain is a very fine English gentleman; I know, for I have met him personally. I was among a group of five women invited to have tea with him Thursday afternoon—we had a delightful hour and 15 minutes with him. His little lounge up 'on top' was so cozy and quiet that it didn't seem like we were moving. He told us we would have a different opinion if we were in a rough sea.

"Norman and Hazel were very sick for three days and I had to have the ship's doctor for Norman. Poor lad was so very sick—he enjoyed 'bud' back home in Wayne and thought of all the good things there and wished he had never wanted to see England. He is better again and having a big time on board.

"There are some very fine folks on board and I have met some very nice women and my correspondence will be longer than ever when I return to Wayne for we have promised to write to each other.

"We had a get-together dinner and party one evening—a carnival dinner and dance another evening and the farewell dinner and concert last night. There was a children's party yesterday afternoon so we had a lot to enjoy besides the deck sports. I have never traveled on a ship where the captain and all of the officers have done so much to make the voyage enjoyable. Last night at the Seaman's Charities—the purser announced that it was the largest given since he had been on the ship. It amounted to $70.

"The children enjoyed the church service last Sunday morning. It was more impressive than ever to me for the fog siren was blowing every minute, and the ship stopped twice during the service owing to the fog. It made us realize how utterly helpless we were without the true Captain of our lives to guide us. Sunday evening the fog lifted and we passed 21 ice bergs. It was very cold. We also passed more icebergs Monday morning but the Capsey family were too seasick by then to raise up and look out the porthole. There was more fog Monday and it was that night that a tramp freighter tried to cut us in two.

"There are some people on board who are going to Harne Hill where my sister lives. They are returning to London after living in Toronto for 16 years. We expect to see each other while being so near."

The remainder of the letter is written from England after the arrival of the Capseys:

"Well, it's Monday noon—6 in the morning with you, and unless you are washing I'll bet you are not up yet. I am at my sister's at last and don't know whether I'll have any time to write for I think I can talk until time to go back to old Nebraska—we have so much to tell each other.

"We reached Havre, France, Saturday and it was a beautiful sight from 10 p. m. until we docked at midnight. We watched the harbor lights, the lighthouse beams across the waves and the different green and red light signals of ships and boats. We left Havre at 12:30 and headed for London where we arrived yesterday afternoon at 3:30 but it was almost 5 before we docked and got off the boat. I saw my sister and her husband and Mr. Capsey's brother and wife on the dock through my field glasses long before they could see me. The boys took off their caps and waved their umbrellas (it had to rain of course) as soon as they saw me. We were another hour in docking close to the shore—it looked impossible for such a big ship as ours to steer through all the little boats and freighters. We did bump into a cargo of timber. We had two tugs guiding and pulling us in but it seemed hours to us with our friends on shore.

"My brother-in-law had obtained a special pass and he and my sister came on board—they were the only two allowed to board the boat. I was able to show them all over the ship while we were waiting for all the baggage to be taken off and in line for the customs' inspection. I also got through the customs before anyone else owing to Harry and the 'Thomas Cook' man. I certainly felt a very privileged person for 'Thomas Cook' found all my baggage and got it through in a hurry. 'I shouldn't like this big house to clean—wish you could see the lovely flowers in the garden greenhouse—oh, I wish you could see it all!

"We will be coming back on the Queen Mary August 19, most likely."
