

Of July Joy Wrecked by Intense Heat—Lives Government—Paternalism—Drouth in the Finds Courage, Neb St. Hist. Harmless Nuttiness—The Two Conventions—Deaths on the Fourth.

The joy of July Fourth was largely destroyed by the torrid waves that swept over the country and threatened growing corn. Thus, mental distress was worse than physical discomfort, for the latter could have been borne courageously if there had been sufficient moisture to keep the heat from sucking the life out of tender stalks. No one could contemplate the real meaning of the Fourth—no one could enter buoyantly into the spirit of planned festivities—with the feeling that blistering hell was lying perilously with the country's major crop.

After the Fourth's hot wind, one would think the corn would have withered and died, but a survey of fields early Sunday morning showed no apparent damage. One farmer said serious injury would come if no rain brought relief before or during the hasting period.

An Inquiring Tramp. A Weary Willie dropped in on us early on the morning of the Fourth to get a cash hand-out for bread and butter. Satisfied, he inquired about the state of business. Satisfyingly, rather pessimistic reply, he added that it was hard to make a living these days. As beginning seemed to be his occupation, we told him the government would probably have to take over the responsibility of seeing that everybody had things to get along on, and he was pleased with the idea, exclaiming that this sort of plan would do away with a lot of anxiety.

This traveler was fairly well dressed and apparently ranked above the average tramp. He figured the government should support him without obligation or effort on his part. He had no ambition and no pride, but he seemed to want the government to insure his perfect content by relieving him of the task of begging food from day to day. How unfair to those who work and support the government is the notion that the government should support those who are unwilling even to try to support themselves!

Contrast With Old Ways. Intense heat in the early days was not relieved by electric fans but artificial refrigeration. Caves and wells were used instead of ice boxes to preserve milk, butter, fruits and other perishable things. There were no gas or electric ranges, no gas or electric stoves, no wood and coal stoves. In the old days, bakeries and other sources of supply furnished ready-made foods, and the task of preparing meals was necessarily greater even without the extra burden due to absence of conveniences. Modern washing machines, ironing equipment and vacuum cleaners have greatly reduced household drudgery, and improved window and door screens have wonderfully modified the fly and mosquito nuisance. Modern facilities for comfort and convenience have not only made life easier, but have undoubtedly safeguarded health and prolonged life's natural span.

Greatest Fear in Town. One farmer said he felt courageous enough in meeting weather and insect risks until he listened to lugubrious voices in town. After watching drawn faces and hearing words of blasted hope, he had to hurry home to recover his nerve and re-visit his determination.

Suppressed by Recollection. Many of not most—young persons press elders as nutty—usually harshly, so—over love affairs. Most elders recall, however, their own erstwhile bubbling sentimentalism, and therefore offer protests only if modern demonstrations of silliness exceed their own experience.

Wayne Pavilion Sales Are Good. Feeder pigs, butcher hogs, heifers, cows and steers were sold at the Wayne pavilion in a sale sponsored by the Wayne Sales company Monday, July 6. One hundred feeder pigs were sold, the top price being $9.45; 60 small pigs with a top of $9.80; and 20 butcher hogs with a $10 top. In the cattle, 14 heifers were sold with a top price of $25; 30 cows with calves at a top price of $44.50; 15 steers at a $5.75 top price; and 10 cows selling at a top price of $3.75.

Car Is Damaged In Taking Ditch. Charles Haselden, Wayne, depot agent at Concord, had a minor accident Tuesday morning while on his way to work. He had just gone over a hill about three miles north-east of Wayne, when he met a bread truck passing a loaded truck on the hill, forcing him to take the ditch. Mr. Haselden's car was damaged but he was uninjured.

Accidents on Fourth. While more firecrackers and fireworks were said to have been imported this year than formerly and impliedly were exploded to celebrate the Fourth, these annual sources of noise and danger were less evident and less disturbing in Wayne than usual. Besides, in the crowd of people, the celebration was overcome by the scorching heat. This happy result shows healthy resistance.

Of 330 killed in the United States on Independence day, only eight were due to firecrackers. Report says 199 had been killed in automobile accidents. Eighty-seven were drowned. So, the Fourth of July is a safe holiday.

Work Progresses For Soil Ratio

Work of determining the soil depletion ratio is progressing in Wayne county in the agricultural program, Agent Walter Moller reports. Cass county is the first in Nebraska to finish. The soil depletion ratio is the relative amount of soil depleting crops to the total acres of all land on the farm. The entire area of the county, with exception of cities, villages, streams, lakes and public lands, is taken into consideration.

In Wayne county it will take four days to complete listing sheets and make the first county summary. The figures are submitted to the state committee at Lincoln and an analysis made of them by a representative of the state committee. The soil depleting ratio is released and the county and community committees then make adjustments to reach the official ratio. It is hoped all this work will be completed here by July 25.

After the soil depleting base is figured explanation will be made as to what constitutes maximum participation in 1936.

Club Members Will Attend Camp At Lake

The camp will be under the supervision of men and women from the college of agriculture at Lincoln.

The time is spent in classes and discussion groups as well as recreation.

VACATION PERIOD URGED BY BABSON AS PROPER THING

ROGER Babson, business expert, thinks everybody should take at least two weeks vacation for its mental as well as physical value. He says more people than since 1928 are taking time from routine to replenish depleted supplies of human ginger and pep. He believes the investment pays big dividends. He does not question whether one can afford the cost of a trip and time from the usual grind or not. He evidently believes one should cut adrift from accustomed moorings and so completely forget home duties that his mind will be at perfect ease, permitted to take mental nourishment unimpeded by thoughts of unsettled obligations. Of no small importance, increased vacation-taking means increased distribution of cash and therefore greater relief from any lingering depression effects. Babson figures the 1936 vacation business will aggregate around $5,000,000,000. The average vacationist spent $4.50 per day last year as contrasted with $10 in 1930. This year Babson thinks the per diem cost may have to be squeezed up a dollar.

Child Is Enticed Away By Brother

Marilyn Jean Herten Is Missing After Taken In Car Saturday.

A charge of unlawfully enticing away a child was filed against Robert B. Herten, 18, in Wayne county court this week following the disappearance July 4 of Marilyn Jean Herten, 7. Officers are searching for the child whom it is thought has accompanied her aunt, Mrs. Agnes Stewart of Omaha, and brother, Robert B. Herten, to Texas. Marilyn Jean Herten was playing with Bonnie Jo Fitch at the Don Fitch home Saturday morning. Shortly before noon her brother arrived from Omaha and asked Marilyn Jean to ride with him back to the home of Mrs. Frank Herten and Mrs. J. H. Fitch. The child got into the car with her brother and was not seen afterward. It is thought he took her to Omaha.

Robert B. and Marilyn Jean Herten are children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herten, who died only a few hours apart five days ago at Pender. Mrs. Agnes Stewart of Omaha, and Frank Herten of Walthill, sister and brother of Mr. Herten, were made joint guardians of the children. The boy had made his home with Mrs. Stewart and the girl was with the Frank Hertens. Marilyn Jean came to Wayne this summer when Mrs. Herten enrolled at the college. Both have been staying with Mrs. Herten's mother, Mrs. J. H. Fitch. The Herten estate provides for payments to the guardians for keeping the children.

Training School Closes For Term

Additional Instructor To Be Added To Staff In Coming Fall.

Wayne State Teachers College training school closed Friday, July 3. The school runs on a 10-month basis. Dean H. H. Hahn, superintendent, is heartily in favor of such a school. "It is good," he said, "because it makes up for all the time lost in participating in extra-curricular activities. It also prevents the forgetting period."

Each of the grades celebrated the close of school by having a picnic on the last two days.

The total enrollment of the school the last year was 277, with 187 enrolled in the grade school, and 90 in the high school. The students come from Wayne and the surrounding territory.

The school is adding another teacher to its staff this fall. Raymond Cherry, a graduate from the University of Missouri, will be the new coach. Previous to this time, students in the college have been coaching. Mr. Cherry, who has his master's degree, will also assist Prof. E. J. Hüntemeyer in the teaching of industrial arts.

School will reopen in September 14, with the same staff as in the past. Supervisors of the grades are: Miss Alwine Luers, kindergarten; Mrs. Celia Pearson, first grade; Miss Ida E. Fisher, second grade; Mrs. Clara McCune Heydward, third grade; Miss Stella Traster, fourth grade; Miss Ruth Pearson, sixth grade; Miss Ruth A. Paden, seventh grade. High school faculty includes Prof. A. F. Gulliver, principal; Miss Lettie Scott, Miss Enid Conklyn, Miss Beulah Rundle and Miss Pearl Rutherford.

Wade Sells Main Street Building

Yesterday C. A. Wade sold the building, formerly occupied by the Democrat, to C. H. Hendrickson who says he expects to put up a new office building next year.

The building which will be torn down, has undoubtedly soaked up more democratic literature than any other four walls in Wayne county. Used to Simon-pure democracy for a quarter of a century, it is believed doubtful if it could stand up under the allied New Deal variety.

Band Has Parade. The Wayne band had a short parade in place of their regular concert, Friday, July 3, preparing for the Fourth celebration. The band paraded on the streets of Wayne, led by a "dummy" horse.

FORMER PREACHER HERE TO FOLLOW HISTORIC ROUTE

AN ambition to reenact historic experiences, is not new. Dr. J. T. House, former Wayne educator, proposed at one time to follow the one hundred miles traveled by Hugh Glass, portrayed by Poet Neihardt, taking one leg out of commission to show that it could be done with a broken leg. The plan did not materialize, but at least it was a thought which revealed the spirit of adventure. Now comes a report from Portland, Oregon, that Rev. John W. Beard, at one time pastor of the Wayne Presbyterian church, and an overseas chaplain in the World war, proposes to retrace part of the route followed by Explorers Lewis and Clark. The report explains: "With his 18-year-old son, Robert, a University of Oregon sophomore, the 84-year-old pastor of the Mount Tabor Presbyterian church here, hopes to paddle a canoe from the headwaters of the Missouri river at Three Forks, Mont., to Sioux City, Ia., a distance of 1,740 miles. If the trip is successful, Mr. Beard will have realized a boyhood ambition of a canoe journey the length of the big river. He made the one thousand-mile journey from Sioux City to St. Louis with Francis Jones of Portland in 1919."

The Hausens have five children, Mrs. Earl Duffey of Madelia, Minn., Mrs. Matt Lackas of Randolph, Mrs. F. W. Hokamp of Belden, Geo. Hensney who lives on the home farm near Carroll, and Wm. Two Years Ago and Now

THE Omaha Journal-Stockman says the prevailing drought over a wide area in which Nebraska has suffered less harm than other stricken sections of the country, is far from a parallel in severity with the experience of 1934. Commenting, the Journal-Stockman says:

"In 1934, movement of drouth distressed cattle to market began in mid-May. Shortly after the first of June, the government buying program was inaugurated. This year, dry weather didn't bring any cattle to market until the latter part of June and the areas from which there has been a real distress movement are neither large or numerous.

"Widespread areas produced almost no feed, not even rough feed, in 1934. That does not promise to be true this season. Lack of rainfall has hurt crops. It has hurt business, too, not so much because of actual crop damage as because of fears of damage that may result if no more rain comes.

"Farmers still recall what happened in 1934 so vividly that they shudder at the thought of its repetition. But don't be misled. Wheat already has made a part of a crop. Early hay yields were good in most areas, and there is still time for additional moisture to increase the hay supply. To date corn, the most important crop of all, has suffered no material damage. So don't cross bridges before you get to them. After all, the worst seldom happens."

More Than One Issue

MULTIPLIED imports of farm products which have been allowed to flood this country in competition with the American farmer, will, according to Senator Borah, constitute the major issue in the presidential campaign. Guarding home production is of course important. The folly of wasting farm products and then supplying local demands from foreign markets is of course a severe indictment of New Deal planning. Spending billions in often useless projects with a record public debt and record taxes, is another sizable issue that will haunt the administration more and more as the campaign progresses.

But the issue of greater importance than any affecting the immediate welfare is that which involves fundamental liberties. Founders of the government were not so much influenced by trade policies or by public expenses as they were by the idea of getting away from having their lives ordered and directed from London. They settled the question of independence—for all time, they thought. Now people are aroused by new fears—fears of having their lives planned by bureaucrats in Washington. Basis for that fear undoubtedly transcends all other issues. In time, we can recover trade and balance the budget, but individual freedom once forfeited, may never be retrieved.

Editor Is Mistaken

EDGAR Howard, editor of the Columbus Telegram and former congressman, sorrows tremendously over a manifest misinterpretation of the course of the Omaha World-Herald. Howard accepts the World-Herald's disapproval of New Deal policies as an attack on cherished Jeffersonian principles. On the contrary, that newspaper could not consistently cling to the ideas of Jefferson and at the same time support the New Deal—a consistency which the Columbus editor could not appreciate—at least acknowledge—and remain blindly partisan. The World-Herald's editorial page could not continue a vital force in Nebraska thought—could not maintain high appraisal and popular confidence—by abandoning democratic traditions and swallowing the political nostrums of Norman Thomas. While Howard seems to weep, many others, sensing dangers in New Deal leadership, are reassured by the World-Herald's courageous position.

New Deal Planning

THE Saturday Evening Post arraigns the New Deal's planning as a hodgepodge of guesswork. It is founded on inexperience and wild speculations. The president is quoted as advising that if a thing works, do it some more; and "if it does not work, do something else." The cost is waived along to the taxpayers. The Post concludes: "Never has there been such vehement upbraiding of everybody else for not planning or such inconsistency in its own planning as under the New Deal. Because of their persistent discovery of the obvious, and on account of their lamentable confusion of mere phrases with wise policies, the New Dealers have fooled themselves into believing that they are great planners. They have simply made a mess of things."

Enough signs of rain have been offered the past week to insure a veritable deluge. Notice how the ants have been building mounds to keep back a flood, I said one fellow gave a little tobacco an extra chew to express his feeling of certainty. "That's a sure sign!" he wheezed between gracefully arranged sprays of tobacco juice. "The sky is flecked with light clouds in the morning," pipes an old-timer, "and that means a heavy, rain-filled cloud by evening." When the wind blows from the same direction for three days rain is just ahead. That has happened during the week. As leaves turn inside out, as the barometer takes a tailspin and as the flies bite with unusual wickedness—evident the past week—rain is assured. But in the presence of every known sign of moisture, we are at this writing still waiting and hoping. But any observer driving into the country will be surprised at the healthy appearance of the corn—its wonderful resistance to heat. It is common knowledge that northeast Nebraska's deep, rich soil can stand more drouth than any spot in the world.

"Is civilization rocking in the direction of its final doom?" some one asks. Dean Inge, gloomy Englishman, used to think so. But why? The world has more uncovered wealth and more conveniences with which to achieve and enjoy than ever. Ancient nations became ambitious and strong, and then luxurious, careless and weak. Conquerors became losers. But the virile caught the thread of civilization and carried it on. Ground for fear lies in self-indulgence and weakened human fiber. We must develop self-reliance, and get away from the notion that we must surfeit ourselves on material things at the sacrifice of supremely essential spiritual values. Civilization is being shaken down, but it should rise revitalized, burnished and stronger than ever.

In wet years this area did a good deal in the way of straightening creeks, building drainage ditches and otherwise making it inconvenient for waste water to stand long in one place. This policy is now believed by many to have been a mistake—robbing the soil of moisture needed to lessen the ill effects of dry periods. There is now serious talk of building lakes to conserve water—undoing as far as possible what was done to get rid of water. If the earth's surface is still three-fourths water, we lack considerable of having our share.

The problem of how to provide relief for the unemployed will be easily solved when the country gets back to a sound basis and there are no unemployed. People as a rule prefer useful jobs and earnings consistent with worthwhile endeavor. While granting temporary and always unsatisfactory relief employment, the main purpose must be to establish confidence and thereby encourage private industry. Helping others is unhealthy unless it includes an enduring foundation on which they may be encouraged and strengthened to help themselves.

Senator George W. Norris is reported inclined to stifle his own feelings in the matter and run again as an independent to succeed himself, giving as his reason his conviction that he is needed in Washington. He reminds one of the young man who enters the ministry because he thinks he has been called.

Farm Women In America.

(Omaha Journal-Stockman)

This spring a meeting of farm women was held in Washington that was intended to be international in its scope and appeal, although naturally the attendance was very largely made up of American women. To the foreign women present the attitude and position of the American farm woman was something of a revelation.

On the other hand, the picture of the foreign woman on the farm furnished our own women with something to think about. In practically all foreign countries a "farm woman" is one who milks cows, tends a garden, works in the fields under the direction of a factor or agent, or she shares the lot of a peasant farmer operating on a small tract of land with little or none of the comforts and conveniences of a well-ordered household.

Here in America a farm woman is usually able and willing to take a hand in all farm enterprises when necessary, but she does not limit her work or her viewpoint to the drudgery some of which of necessity prevails on every farm. She is just as fully informed as her husband, takes an active interest in farm organizations, has access to telephones, drives a car, knows something about the economics of her home as well as of her husband's business.

Of course, the general standard of living is much higher on the American farm than anywhere on the continent and the farm family in this country is better provided for in every way than farm families in the older countries. With a fair income and greater opportunities, the American farmer is usually able to furnish his family with a modern home, educate his children and provide them with the essentials of such a standard as are generally recognized as luxuries in the older countries of Europe. Such an ideal is largely responsible for the demand for the development of better methods of farming, an income above production costs and, in the end, equality in agriculture.

With all these facts before her, with foreign women telling of their home conditions and frequently with the evidence of her own eyes as she travels abroad, the American farm woman can hardly be blamed for preferring conditions in this country to anything that Russia or Germany or Italy or France has to offer.

SLOGANS.

Mark Sullivan, newspaper writer, does not think much of the value of campaign slogans beyond their vote-pulling strength, and he advises people to be led by carefully considered facts and not by catchy phrases which in the past have proved worth nothing—sometimes less than nothing. He suggests building "stout sales-resistance" against slogans. "I kept us out of war" was a popular slogan during Wilson's second campaign, and five months later the slogan was knocked into a cocked hat by entering the war to make the "world safe for democracy," which proved a huge joke by the subsequent business of strangling democracies and establishing arbitrary dictatorships. The New Deal's slogan, declared by President Roosevelt, is "Economic Freedom," which freedom was bogging at an alarming pace under the NRA until the supreme court ruled it was unconstitutional. Chucking a fellow into jail for charging five cents too little for pressing a pair of pants and other equally senseless prosecutions showed how the administration had high blood pressure in struggling to enforce the beautiful theory of economic freedom. This all-year sport of saying one thing and doing another should not catch people napping.

To Present Plays At College Here

"He and She," a three-act comedy by Rachel Crothers, will be presented this evening at the college auditorium at 8 o'clock by an all-star cast of students with previous experience in dramatics, under the direction of Miss Florence M. Drake. The preparation of the play has been entirely extracurricular; the young people have worked industriously but with an economy of time. The play demands excellent acting and a feeling for the message of the author. It furnishes several gripping scenes depending not so much upon acting as upon idea. The theme of the play has to do with the place of woman in the home and in the professions, particularly in relation to marriage. It is clean and wholesome and leaves the spectator with something to think about. In the cast are Dorothy Peterson, Ruth Heflinger, Eltona Heflinger, Dorothy Terry, Margaret Bruner, William Day, Donley Feddersen and Arnold Peterson.

"Daisy Mayme," a comedy of character by George Kelly, will be presented Wednesday, July 22, at the college by students of the dramatics class under Miss Drake. It is rich in action, comedy, characterization, and even pathos, if one can sympathize with a typical middle-aged woman whose little schemes for the advancement of her family have all failed. The cast consists of Frances Tomjack, Florence Drake, LaVerne Rundquist, Peace Kingston, Helen Aiken, Milton Evans, Lewellyn Whitmore and Robert Brown.

Appreciation.

I wish to express sincere appreciation to neighbors, friends and relatives for their acts of kindness and for flowers and other remembrances during my stay in the hospital. Mrs. Anton Granquist.

CONGRESS.

Adjournment of congress, providing an interim in the law-making routine, should be and doubtless is accepted with profound relief by the country. The past three years the nation's legislative branches have functioned largely as a puppet side-show to the White House. No congress on record was so completely dominated by an executive. What the president thought or was prompted to think by his bureaucratic advisers was usually lapped up by the congressional majority and hurried into the legislative hopper. Anyone frowning on the will of the president was considered sort of lese majesty. Congress was weakly obsequious. Its members acted like juvenile me-too's, giving assent whether they knew what they were assenting to or not. They were anxious to stand in with the executive, and have a share in distributing political plums. With child-like obedience they followed strange notions and fanned at the feet of the president even though often secretly not in accord with his course. It is hoped the next congress—old and new members alike—will take their duties more seriously, do more of their own thinking and act more like separate statesmen and less like a bunch of automatons strung together for convenience in operation. Congress is the law-making branch of the government, and it should have too much independence to turn the job over to an executive who led by none too carefully selected professors with no practical experience in economic affairs and with more courage than sense.

Increased Interest Noted In Building

Edward M. Slater, state director of the Federal Housing administration, has noticed an increased interest in home ownership and the building of new homes. The reason for this change may be due to the Federal Housing administration or to the depression which has made people more determined and has caused them to attribute more importance to fundamentals, states Mr. Slater. "The FHA has assisted in making money available and it has also created a plan of lending which the public feels safer in using," adds Mr. Slater.

The sentence was suspended during good behavior and providing she refrain from use of liquor. The young woman was in a car with others northeast of Wayne on the Fourth. A passerby saw the machine and thought the party had car trouble so he stopped to help. Martha jumped out of the parked car and into the other machine and the driver of the parked car then sped away. The young woman was intoxicated and the man brought her to Wayne where she was lodged in jail to sober up.

Tradition Rich
In Pennsylvania
City Celebration

Old England, Colonial days and modern progress join in the city of Berwick, Pa., which the past week celebrated its 150th anniversary. The city is "C. W. Fortners" former home, and a 96-page edition of the Berwick Enterprise brings a glimpse of the past and present—a glimpse of a settlement that is about three times as old as this section of Nebraska.

Berwick is named for Berwick-on-Tweed, the city which stands near the mouth of the beautiful river which separates England and Scotland. Edward I and Elizabeth, English monarchs, erected two strong ramparts at Berwick, the "gateway to Scotland." The coat of arms assigned the city is a bear chained beneath a tree. This old English tradition was brought to this country by the little group of pioneers who came in Colonial days and picked a site in Pennsylvania resembling their native Berwick.

One is taken back to Colonial days through the stories of Indian days and early British settlement. The Indian population in Pennsylvania was never large, not exceeding 35,000, but the red men claimed it will for untold ages over the rich river lands. A carefree hunting race, after some massacres and other troubles, gave its home to the whites. Then followed the struggle between the whites when independence from British rule was gained.

With such a tradition, Berwick has progressed for 150 years and has built a modern city structure typical of present day America. And the city looks forward to even greater strides. What a wealth of tradition to inspire future progress!

Appeal Is Filed In Hoskins Case

Lincoln Journal: E. H. Luikart, judicial receiver for 200 failed state banks, filed an appeal Thursday with the supreme court from a ruling of District Judge Chase, filed last April, removing him from the receivership of the Hoskins State bank in Wayne county and appointing the state banking department in his stead. This is one of a number of such actions brought or threatened to be brought by a special assistant to the state's attorney general, carrying out the wishes of Gov. Cochran for centralization of all state bank receiverships in the department.

Mr. Luikart was appointed early in 1932 and one of the bases of the appeal is the disregarding by the court of objections filed by a depositions committee to his removal. He alleges that the decision of the court is contrary to the law and the evidence; that the order of removal is arbitrary, capricious and without cause; that it is an abuse of the sound discretion lodged in the court; that there is no law authorizing the state department of banking to act as a judicial receiver, and that not being a legal entity it cannot accept the appointment and act as such judicial receiver. The department has 90 failed state banks in its charge under a law that makes the department a state receiver but not a judicial receiver.

Fruit Growing Is Of Interest
To J. O. Drake

Spending their winters in Florida and their summers in Ohio, brings variety to the life of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Drake who were in Wayne visiting their niece, Miss Florence Drake, the past two weeks.

Mr. Drake has a six-acre orange grove near Lake Wales, Fla., with 550 orange and grapefruit trees planted, 96 trees to the acre. The 13-year-old trees are placed 15 feet apart in a row, and they are now so large that the trees almost reach each other. They are approximately 12 feet high. Mr. Drake does little of the work on the grove himself, but lets out the land to a caretaker who also cares for other groves. The work is done by tractors and sprayers. Most of the oranges are sold to individual parties who pick their own oranges.

Lake Wales, where the Drake's live, is the home of the famous Bok Tower carillon bells. The largest of these bells weighs 11 tons and the smallest is three pounds. At times there have been over 15,000 listeners at these famous concerts. Programs are given four times a week during the winter months. The Drakes returned to their home Monday. They plan to drive to Florida again this fall.

Two Small Fires.
Wayne fire department was called to the L. G. Larson lots east of Bressler park Saturday evening to extinguish a grass fire started by a toy balloon. The department put out a blaze Sunday morning near the Wm. Broschett residence on east Third street where railroad ties had caught fire.

Fire At West Point.
Fire started by firecrackers destroyed the West Point feed barn and damaged several trees in that city on the Fourth of July. Fire Warden Scribner and Beemer the departments put the blaze out.

Is Named Postmaster.
Frank Kroger, son of Mrs. M. Kroger of Wayne, has been appointed postmaster at Newcastle. He took up his duties this week. He had been administering government relief work at Ponca.

Pay Clough has assumed his duties as postmaster at Allen.

begging for rides, 100 horses kicking and being exercised for the big races here for the Fourth, horse owners were busy. Much preliminary work must be done before any race. The horse's diet must be watched, animals must be familiarized with the track, and hoofs must be trimmed. E. L. West of Hayes Center, has four horses here which he hoped to enter in the race. He has just placed in the Ak-Sar-Ben where his 2-year-old colt, "Rum Dum" placed in a race. He has been racing about four years. Mrs. West is traveling with him for the first time. "I enjoy watching the races but that is all I enjoy about traveling around the tracks," remarked Mrs. West. Speaking with a western drawl, Jim Andrews of Montana, told of his two horses which he had brought up from Kansas. The horses have been fortunate in previous races. Andrews has been particularly around Texas, and he is now on his way home with them. H. L. Phillips is the jockey for Mr. Andrews. He has been riding for about a year and will always carry a scar on his leg which he received from a wound when a horse stepped on him after he had been thrown. When asked if he had been thrown often he remarked, "Oh, lots of times."

many in Wayne county. He has won many races in this part of the country, but did not race at Omaha. G. Steward was jovial about the races. He is entering two horses which have never raced before. H. Lindley is also entering one horse, "Colie Said It" which he has never raced. A double tragedy on the Omaha race track last week resulted in the death of two horses. Monday, June 29, the horses became crowded together and one of them had his hind legs stepped on, which caused the ligaments to be torn loose. Another horse, in the same race, was hurt on the gate when entering the track. Both horses had to be shot. Wednesday night in the same week, a jockey, not seeing the track drag, ran his horse upon it, killing the horse instantly. The life of a jockey as a jockey is short. A jockey must be light, weighing between 100 pounds and 116 pounds. The best jockey weighs about 106 pounds. Apprentice riders should weigh about 98 pounds. Few of the owners had their jockeys with them but hired them for individual races. Horses must qualify for a race. They must try for the one-half mile race and any other distance race. They are eliminated in different races up until the last race. Owners believed that a Derby would be run the last day of the Wayne races. Wm. Wetzel returned Monday from a two weeks' vacation in Minnesota.

Pioneering In North Dakota

The North Dakota prairies lie brown and barren, with patches of dirty snow here and there in the bright sunlight of early spring. In the left window of a little unpainted house, beaten by the rawness of bleak winds to a soft-toned gray, a little fair-haired girl hangs rapturously, breathing deeply the first real smell of spring.

Yesterday there was an icy wind blowing down from the north, from snows five thousand summers old. Up near the Canadian line, spring comes almost overnight—it is cold with a biting wind one day and the next, a south wind fills all the little sloughs with pungent smelling snow water.

The little girl in the window of the weather-beaten house is one of many little girls whose parents drifted to newer lands with the promise of free homesteads in the early part of the century. Though winters were long and hard for the struggling band of settlers, spring seemed to bring a fresh hope of a better year.

The snow is gone now, and the little girl finds every hollow filled with downy ercuses—"mayflowers" to her. Kneeling in the softness of the new grass she gathers the short-stemmed blooms with reverent fingers, burying her small freckled nose in their dewy sweetness. A girl whose early years were spent in the Dakotas will never think of spring without a feeling of nostalgia for the days when she gathered all the mayflowers her brief pinfold would hold to take home to mother. No vase was ever shallow enough for the short stemmed flowers so they were arranged in saucers which spilled over on the red-checked tablecloth. Later there would be waxy buttercups and whole fields of wild roses but the mayflower was first in the hearts of the prairie children.

Early summer: How beautiful the wheat fields are in the shimmering sun, their gray-green, heavy-headed stalks waving gently in the soft breeze! Together the settlers have looked over the fields of wheat, the acres of potatoes in blossom, and the fields of flax. "Yes, it will be a good year—plenty of rain so far, and wonderful prospects." The little girls of North Dakota are glad—a good year means that the strained look will go from the eyes of the mothers and fathers—it means that there will be warm clothes for winter, possibly Christmas in the homes of all the settlers.

The little girl awakens from a restless sleep—how hot it is! The unfinished walls of the loft are sticky with resin barking out of the bedposts. The straw ticking of the bed is prickly in the early morning heat. Slipping into her blue calico dress with the Mother Hubbard yoke makes a short process of the dressing business. She looks down at her bare feet and remembers that she slipped into bed last night without washing them in the tub outside the door.

Last evening mother and father and the smaller children had walked in the moonlight around the smallest field of wheat to the east of the house; the beautiful field had taken on a shimmer of silver in the twilight with the moon just over the edge of Esvik's grove. (There were many Norwegians settling in this part of the country.) The little girl thinks of the coolness of the evening before as she eats her porridge in the hot little shanty kitchen. Mother keeps going to the door and looking off to the south, a worried pucker between her eyes.

By noon a hot wind has sprung up—one of the dreads of the wheat farmers. The wind blows steadily like a blast from a fiery furnace, for three days it blows from the south. At the end of the third day the beautiful wheat fields are withered and sere; the leaves of the potatoes crumble to the touch. Mother grows paler, father's shoulder droop just a little more; they are quiet with the quietness of despair. There is no rain—the wells are drying up—there's typhoid in the towns.

Each time the bucket is let down into the well it comes up with a little less water; every drop must be boiled and the flat tasting, tepid stuff used sparingly.

Often the hot winds were followed by soaking rains and a little of the once-promising crops would be saved—enough to pull the hard working families through the winter. Sometimes it was hail that beat the tender wheat stalks into the ground; the settlers' children all knew and feared the hail clouds—ragged black masses, edged in a peculiar sulphur colored light. Hail usually came in mid-summer and in late afternoon.

Late fall: The last of the potatoes are in pits; threshing had been finished in September. Tonight there would be frost and the last of the garden must be gotten in—there is a pang of dying summer in the air, a smell of brush fires and the far-off wail of wolves to herald the approach of winter. The family turns out to bring in the few remaining pumpkins, the last of the tomatoes.

Tugging at a heavy pumpkin the little North Dakota girl wonders how a tree with real apples on it might look. There are no trees on the plains except the spindly cottonwoods the settlers have planted—no shade in summer, no windbreak in winter. Just a bare sweep over which the wind blows all year long. Twilight is quickly gone in the northern states and a frosty chill hangs in the air even in early September.

Winter: Down from the north, with a swoop and swirl, the first blizzard is on—for three days and nights the wind howls around the little house. The nail heads in the bare loft room are white with frost and little drifts of fine snow spill from the window sills. Frost on the windows downstairs is a half-inch thick and the youngsters amuse themselves making bunches of grapes with mother's thumb on the thickened panes. Drifts are higher than the house at the end of the third day which dawns clear, with temperature dropping steadily hour after hour. Water dropped on the kitchen floor freezes in blobs of ice.

Snow packed through blizzard after blizzard until the soft white-held an iron crust. Fine for coasting but difficult for travel. Weeks passed through the long winters when the settler's wife never saw another woman—little wonder there were homesickness and silent tears in the small hours when the rest of the household slept.

After ten years of long cold winters, drouth, hail and prairie fires and a ceaseless struggle to keep body and soul together, many of the settlers left for the states from which they had originally come. The light hearts of ten years ago were heavy now—all the savings of the full years had gone into the pilgrimage and now there was nothing. Again the emigrant cars were packed, this time in an exodus away from the land which had taken so much and given so little.

Land agents who had beguiled the settlers into homesteading the land, always taking their victims to see the prospective "garden spot of the world" in the spring when the stony soil was covered with a heavy mat of prairie grass, received many a bitter tongue lashing. Seeing the same land after a wall of flame exposing the naked plain with its million of rocks, was a disheartening sight to the emigrant families who had burned their bridges behind them and found it too late to return.

Only the children loved the prairie—loved the feel of the ceaseless wind, loved the rocks which were their only playthings. Only the children cried bitterly when they knew they were leaving at last—most of them had known no other home. Ties of fruit trees in full bloom, of boughs bending under the weight of fruit, of pasture lanes where lowing cattle came home through the cool of the evening, of whole fields of swaying corn, where there was no drouth and no hail, no hot winds and where the winters were bearable—all these meant nothing to the Dakota children. They were merely pleasant stories to which they listened eagerly during the long winter evenings.

Time to go at last! Nebraska again and already a new light twinkles in the tired eyes of mothers and fathers. The little flaxen haired girl is heavy-hearted—she isn't allowed to take her favorite white stone which has been her companion for five years! She is told there will be dolls with long curly hair and moving eyes, but "Geranium" has been a stony-hearted pal too long for that to make any difference.

She thinks: "I won't ever come back. I have to go away from Miss Reversion and I'll never ride to school in the bus again with Gerta. I even like Albert a little better than I did and I hated him so for sticking his gum in my hair so I had to have it all cut in front. He made fun of me for wearing boy's shoes—I kicked him, too, and he cried. I'm sorry now."

The smelly school bus took on an aura of romance as she thought of the Norwegian children with whom she had played guessing games during the long rides, of the struggle over the charcoal foot warmers, and the scrapping over who should sit next to the driver.

It was over now. There would be full years ahead when mother and father might be happy and jolly again. There would always be plenty—never any little gnawing pangs of hunger when the larder ran low—never any burning thirst when you were afraid to drink because someone else might be even thirstier.

The emigrant cars moved slowly to the south and away from the land which had been master for ten long years. Other would come, but these few would never return.

Attend Family Reunion.

Dry weather has hastened ripening of small grain much of which is being cut for hay. Very little of the grain filled out. Threshing will be light. Corn has stood the dry weather well and will advance fast if rain falls soon. Some wells are drying in this vicinity. Many are allowing growth to stay along roadsides so that grasshoppers will remain in this and stay out of the fields.

What Prairie Farm Group Tried To Do
(By Congressman Karl Stefan)

Since returning from Washington last week, a good many people have called at the congressional office in Norfolk to say hello and ask about things which came up in the recent congress. Old timers say this was the most difficult session in years and it would be impossible to go into detail about all the serious problems which had to be considered. However, I feel that the people in our district are most interested in the things that I would like to say something about the work of the congressmen who formed the "Prairie States Group." I can think of no better way of reporting on the work of this group than to quote a letter from Congressman Gillette written shortly before adjournment:

"Hon. Karl Stefan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Colleague:

The organization with which you and I are affiliated here in Congress, known as the Prairie States Farm Group, has been an instrumentality of such real and permanent benefit to farming communities that I wish in this letter to briefly call attention to some of the high points of our efforts. At the same time I wish to express my appreciation of the aid you personally have given to our work.

"We organized a little over a year ago on an unofficial, non-partisan basis, with the sole thought to give united study and support to legislative proposals of particular interest and value of the ten states comprising the prairie group. Working quietly and earnestly, we believe we have accomplished much in the way of fulfilling the purpose for which we organized. Here is a partial list of the things we were able to do:

By sustained and unceasing efforts we succeeded in securing, first, an interest cut on all Federal Land Bank farm mortgages for 3 1/2 percent for 1935, and 4 percent for 1936 and 1937. Within the last week we have succeeded in securing house action approving the extension of the 3 1/2 percent rate for the coming two years. In addition we have never ceased in our efforts to bring the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing plan to the floor of the house for successful action.

"We have fought and continue to fight to secure such reorganization of the Farm Credit Administration as will insure the large measure of borrower control that was contemplated in the original act.

"We were able to secure the large sum of money for the emergency feed and seed loans last year to meet conditions of hardship resulting from the drought. Within the past week we have secured an extension of this loan policy.

"With the weed problem becoming a national menace, we have secured national cooperation by the Bureau of Plant Industry with the various state organizations, and an appropriation for the work.

"We have introduced, supported and are still advocating various measures for enlarging domestic and foreign markets for our farm production. Corn-alcohol, fuel blends, corn sugar, slash-pine paper, and building materials from corn stalks, straw and waste material are some of the fields we have investigated.

"We have been fully alive to the question of the importation of farm products which might be in permanent competition with our own production.

"We have conducted numerous hearings and have had subcom-

Child Assistance Is Well Started

Wayne county has received to date 11 certificates for aid to dependent children from the state child welfare bureau, representing 26 children, according to the statement issued today by County Assistance Director Mrs. Esther Thompson. These certificates represent $250.22 per month of state and federal funds coming to the county. There are approximately 13 cases yet to be investigated and certified.

When the dependent children program is in full operation in this county it will represent a total monthly expenditure of state and federal funds of $524.76. The administration of this fund is under supervision of Mrs. Maud E. Nutquist, director of the state child welfare bureau. All appropriations of grants to families are made on the basis of family needs and income. These data, along with the investigation that is made, constitute the public record which supports the spending of state and federal funds granted the county, supplement the mother's pension fund which is raised by local taxes. Many mothers are able to have more adequate grants for their children because of this fund.

Under requirements of the law the state child welfare bureau is stressing the need for making very careful and thorough investigation in each case. Children's needs are considered carefully because their future depends on what is done for them now. Many institutional care cases and cases of future dependency can be prevented by making adequate plans for children who are in need of assistance. It is this social service work that is so important in connection with a child welfare program.

The state child welfare bureau has held regular schools of instruction to assist the county workers, one of which was in Wayne July 1. From a recent bulletin Mrs. Nutquist is quoted as complimenting the county assistance directors in the state who have taken hold of the child welfare program, studied the bulletins and attended the schools. She feels the directors in the state have made a fine start in this pioneering work of caring for the needs of Nebraska's children, and hopes that the workers in the state will maintain the high standards of work they have kept in mind in doing their children's work.

Guests were Alfred Janke, Mrs. Rosa Eckert and family and Rev. and Mrs. H. M. Hilpert.

CHURCHES

St. Paul's Lutheran Church. (Rev. H. M. Hilpert, pastor) Sunday morning worship in English, 9:20. Sunday school, 10:25 a. m. Sunday morning worship in German, 10:40. Holy communion celebrated in both services with registration Friday and Saturday, July 10 and 11. There will be no services on July 19 and 26.

Methodist Church. (Rev. A. E. Fowler, pastor) Sunday school at 10 a. m. Morning worship at 11. Mrs. Fowler will be in charge, and will give a very interesting sermon by J. E. Bennett, delivered in Washington. Mr. Bennett is a New York lawyer. Rev. Fowler will be whether the president shall take over all the powers of government formerly held and to some extent still held by congress, the courts, state legislatures, governors and local and municipal governments. All power to be centered in a benevolent gentleman at Washington, D. C., with unlimited powers to do as he thinks best for all classes, including spending all the money there is regardless of how it is obtained or who is to pay the enormous debts he incurs.

"It is easy to promise but not so easy to perform. Therefore, the appeal of the New Deal party will gather in the votes of those who look only at the opportunity to get, one more slice of bread today even though they are hungry tomorrow. But the thrifty class who look forward to tomorrow, who provide in the summer for the cold of the winter, are not entirely sold on this new form of paternal government. They realize that Santa Claus cannot last the whole year 'round without something going bust.

"To serious-minded thinkers, the situation is scary. Fortunately, the Roosevelt popularity has waned considerably since the two national conventions. If the trend away from Roosevelt continues the danger will soon be passed and the nation will once more go on its accustomed way, escaping narrowly, it appears, a fate which has overwhelmed other experiments in democratic government in the past.

"It would seem that ordinary intelligence would make voters loyal to principles rather than party names. If a party is captured by an adventurer and a new set of principles substituted for those upon which the party formerly stood, there is no obligation of the voter to continue to support the party. To follow a mere name is a sign of lack of intelligence or possibly inertia which causes a voter to take the old, familiar route rather than to take the pains of finding out that someone has turned the sign post the other end to.

"The editor of the Omaha World-Herald has always been a loyal Democrat. He has followed the party at times, it would seem, against his better judgment. But always he has been a Democrat in name and principle. But it seems now he has come to a full realization that there is no longer a Democrat party. There are two major parties in the field, the New Deal party and the Opposition to the New Deal party. The New Deal party carries on under the old name of Democrat while the Opposition party has taken over the political machinery labeled Republican.

Suit in Pender

Pender, Neb. What is believed to be the first prosecution in Nebraska under the 1935 old age pension act was filed in district court here against Joe Junek of Thurston.

Co. Atty. Fuhrman charged Junek made a false statement in his old age pension application, an offense which under the law carries a penalty of $100 and 30 days in jail or both. The charge asserts Junek represented in his application, filed March 10, 1936, that his total income in the preceding 12 months was $180. The complaint alleges, however, that Junek received $2,000 in cash on October 21, 1935 as well as a $900 note and mortgage for the sale of personal property.

"Typhoon George"

Geneva Signal: Last Thursday Senator Norris of Nebraska had luncheon with President Roosevelt and spent two hours with him discussing political matters. After the conference Senator Norris indicated to reporters he would go on the stump for re-election of Mr. Roosevelt. An eastern reporter has nicknamed Senator Norris "Typhoon George." A typhoon is a hot wind.

Real News

Geneva Signal: When a successful metropolitan daily newspaper like the Omaha World-Herald, long acknowledged to be the chief organ of its party in a state, refuses to subscribe to the personal platform and practices of the nominee of its political party, its announcement of its repudiation of that nominee is news.

From a Democrat

Editor W. F. Crumb, Jeffersonian democrat, writes these comments on the New Deal for his Fairbury Journal:

"The real issue in this presidential campaign is whether America shall change its government from a republican democracy to a form of absolutism or paternal dictatorship. There is no doubt that a benevolent dictator can get results quicker than a slow moving democracy or a representative democracy such as we have. But history seems to show that no benevolent, paternal, one-man government ever gave the people permanent a desirable form of government.

Germany Is Traveling Uphill In Low Gear Visitor Observes

Rev. H. A. Teckhaus Finds That Country Had Narrow Escape From Bolshevism Following Period Of War.

"As far as I can see Germany, as a nation is traveling uphill, although in low gear," writes Rev. H. A. Teckhaus who, from Wayne to his native land in May to spend the summer with relatives.

"This country, with its 65,000,000 inhabitants, has only 1,500,000 out of work statistically. In 1933 every third German workman was out of work and many had been out of jobs at that time more than five years! All factories and plants of industry are working over time at present. The average citizen appears to be well fed and dressed and is in a happy frame of mind. A wonderful change has taken place since 1927 (the time of our last visit to this country) when bolshevism was about ready to overthrow the socialist form of government. Restlessness and dissatisfaction could be observed among the proletariat. It was a period of decadence. Germany, though principally a democratic nation, was nominally at peace with itself but in reality on the verge of a communistic upheaval which was curtailed only by the rise of the national socialist counter revolution. If Chancellor Hitler had done nothing but annihilate bolshevism in Germany he would have inscribed, on this account, his name in the annals of history. Western Europe should thank him for this heroic accomplishment. If the authorities of France do not keep a watchful eye over the communistic propaganda, that country will be ruled by radical bolshevism in the near future.

"The German nation owes its 'Fuehrer' much: Freedom, unity, self-respect, strength, a new joyful aspect of life, enthusiasm, brotherly spirit of cooperation during times of joy as well as of hardship, most of all work, employment and where work is there is food, shelter, happiness. Germany has become once more a hard working nation without beggars and 'lazy bones'. It is marching at the front with other self-respecting nations in science, art, education, social welfare, and last but not least, sport, which the Olympic games of next August will show. Although the victory of Max Schmeling over Joe Louis June 19 may not have been to the liking of many, the national attitude of trying to be fair will offer credit to the best man who in this case was Schmeling. My father and I listened to the fight by radio though it was 4,000 miles away."

In describing his trip to Germany, Rev. Teckhaus mentions that he, Rev. Carl Goede of Blue Hill, and Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Gohde of Bennington, left May 24 by car from Bennington, reaching Clinton, Iowa, a distance of 400 miles, the first night. "We passed through wonderful farming country. Comparing farm improvements and living quarters of Iowa farmers with Wayne county farmers, in my judgment Nebraska is just as good and even better than Iowa." After spending the night in the home of Clinton's chief of police the party left for Chicago. They arrived at Maywood to visit Dr. E. Klotsche, former teacher at Midland college, Fremont, and then proceeded to Chicago where they visited Mrs. W. Knipprath, formerly Miss Ann Jacob, and her mother, Mrs. Jacob. In the evening the four continued their journey and reached Valparaiso, Ind.

The following day the party went to Fort Wayne, Ind., where they stopped to see the city which is beautiful. Rev. Teckhaus said that highway No. 30 was excellent to that point but farther east is not in good condition, being rough as far as Pittsburg, Pa. They traveled through Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia and found the last named state especially beautiful. After an overnight stop at Pittsburg the party went to Harrisburg, stopping enroute at the battlefields and burial grounds at Gettysburg. There they visited the Lutheran seminary which was transformed into a hospital during the Civil war. They stood at the very place "President Lincoln" delivered his well known address—indeed a sacred ground for all patriotic Americans.

Leaving Harrisburg at 4 a. m. the four arrived in New York about 11 a. m., covering the 1,500 miles from New Orleans in less than four days. This included time taken for routine repair in Pennsylvania. "This last trip into New York City was very exciting and in places even dangerous because it takes a car driver with iron nerves to keep his mental equilibrium while observing the driving rules and avoiding accidents. But my son-in-law handled the wheel with the greatest of ease" so that no New York policeman had any reason to make sarcastic remarks about the people "coming from the sticks." In general we found the traffic officers very courteous. In one Pennsylvania city a policeman hailed us in the center of a market place and asked us to stop because he noticed a Nebraska license. He told us he was a native of Fairbury, Neb., and was
