

Move Forward Under the Impetus of Competition—To Be Kind to Dumb Creatures—Out of Harmony—Local Man's Hobby—War Instincts.

Railroads have learned many lessons from automobile and airplane competition, and as a consequence they have stemmed the tide of waiting passenger traffic on their lines.

We recall the annihilating service on the Southern Pacific line between Sacramento, Calif., and Portland, Ore., thirty-seven years ago.

More than any other railroad which we were familiar at the time, the Southern Pacific's employees labored in incivility.

But time with competition awakened passengers to abandon remote-landed lines and find out what was wrong.

Changes for the better were made in the Southern Pacific when the line became a part of the Union Pacific system thirty or more years ago.

Improved tracks, improved trains and improved personal service followed.

One may not like birds or animals, but he should possess sufficient human qualities not to feel like torturing them.

There are plenty of evidences in the social order that the artificial heart constructed under the inspiration of Col. Lindbergh is no more artificial or insensible than many hearts that come into existence in the usual way.

Conflicting Tastes.

We often wonder why we are so out of accord with some popular likes or some popular amusements.

The individual who likes something, but resists it because it is wrong, deserves more credit than the individual who does not like a thing and is required to use no self-persuasion to keep away from it.

An Unexpected Discovery.

We were surprised to learn that Dr. C. E. Ingham is an artisan of a high order.

For Constructive Peace.

Dr. Harry Fosdick suggests in one of his essays that war-like instincts inherent in people from the start may be translated into power for constructive peace.

DO NOT CUT HOME MOORINGS FOR AN UNKNOWN OUTLOOK

IN pulling out for other states that seem more favored by present weather conditions one should know definitely what he is going to do when he gets there. He should have enough capital to insure against hunger and nakedness until he can nail a job or make a revenue-producing investment. The world is not very friendly when one is among strangers, far from the native habitat, without money and without a job. The average locality has too many home people on relief rolls to be inspired to assure the more abundant life to newcomers who have nothing more to offer than good intentions. "Distance lends enchantment to the view," but reached, enchantment suddenly disappears before the need of something to do to keep the stomach replenished and the mind content. There are many delightful places that may be reached by a drive of 2,000 miles or less. This drought-stricken area that stretches across many states is usually delightful, and may be more so next year than fields now sought in the distance. Before one lifts anchor and journeys elsewhere, he should be reasonably certain that his destination will not bring sharp disappointment and black despair.

A high wind and dust storm Saturday afternoon resulted in a considerable damage to light poles and light masts and surrounding territory. The city was without light for about an hour and a half. The street light circuit was out for two nights and several lamp were burned out. "Most of the damage was done by broken tree branches which fell across wires. Very few poles were down," reported S. A. Hemple, engineer of the city light plant. The northeast farm lines were out until 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Some work is still being done but the lines are all in use now.

Telephone lines were also affected by the wind. South of town, nearly all the poles were down to the four-mile corner putting four lines definitely out. Four other lines were down on one line and two lines are crossed. "The weight of the wires and broken poles tend to break down other poles," remarked Miss Madeline Kauffman, chief operator.

A slight shower, registering 15 of an inch at the State National bank, brought relief from the extreme heat Saturday afternoon.

Let Yourself Go.
Lincoln Journal: The government, which under the new deal controls even such details of the operation of individual farms as to the number of acres to be planted, is discussing the merits of the proposition that farmers be given the "go ahead" signal for wheat and corn planting in 1937. The agricultural experimenters have had about all the failure they are willing to face. They have backed down to the point where they are actually discussing the proposal to take hands off the farmer and endeavor to overcome the damage wrought by nature working hand in hand with the crop reduction program in a combination that has been too effective.

The experimenters have kept up a bold front. When they set out to destroy the agricultural surplus they faced what was considered by some to be an impossible task. The surplus was large and the crop reduction efforts puny and feeble. It was argued that intensified farming of cultivated acres would make up for the reduction resulting from acres left idle.

Nature took a hand and in a few short months drought had combined with crop reduction to the point that imports were necessary in certain lines. The surplus was wiped out and the visible supply reduced below the country's normal needs. The reductionists, the new deal experimenters, persisted. Again acres were left idle and crop potentialities reduced artificially and again, the next year, nature cooperated. The new dealers still cling to their theories and once more the experiment was dooperated disastrously.

The experimenters are about ready to admit defeat. They know they cannot regulate drought and drought has interfered with their plans year after year. The shortage of agricultural products may become acute this year. Doubt in the minds of the experimenters makes fertile ground for the thought that perhaps the farmers should be turned loose next year to produce all they can.

Rebukes THE Omaha World-Herald

bares the inconsistency of Secretary Ickes in referring to Governor Landon as having supported parts of the New Deal early in the evolution of the new government order. In part the World-Herald says:

"He could impale multitudes of others on that same spear if he chose. Everybody but Mr. Hoover was doing it in the days before the cherubic child had grown to giant size, like a Colossus bestriding the republic. Now when there appears to be no limit to its growth, to its appetite, to its ambitions, those multitudes join with Landon in calling for a halt before it is too late.

"Mr. Ickes might make himself another Roman holiday of the same nature by quoting what Governor Roosevelt of New York had to say about the new deal before it was born. Against federal aggrandizement, against centralized and bureaucratic government, in support of local self-government. And what Candidate Roosevelt had to say about unbalanced budgets, about excessive spending, about the ruinous thing that would follow profligacy. And what he had to say, further, in praise of the platform, now a derelict on the bounding main, on which he was elected.

"But it is all old stuff. As a campaign argument this sort of appeal has little effect. The Roman holiday becomes a rather dull spectacle. Times and conditions have changed. Not only men and women, but historic political parties have changed with them. 'It is not what you used to be, it's what you are today,' that matters."

What's a JUST what is a "racket" as Racket?

popularly used in connection with business? In largest centers where detection is difficult and where thick-skinned consciences often cause deafness to the whisperings of justice, comparatively small lams in business or industry are regularly shorn of earnings under threat of violence by organized outlaws. Fear leads the small dealer to yield and keep still. High-powered racketeers in the congested east belong in the same category with underworld gangsters, and law-enforcement agencies are after them as they are after other criminal elements. Organized resistance on the part of victims would aid authorities in ridding metropolitan business of the racketeering terror.

"Racket" in the country is often used in reference to unusual business advantages captured boldly or cunningly through positions of influence, and this application of the word, with no evidence of coercion, suggests a combination for the conveniences of profit rather than a system breathing threats as a way to force compliance.

The word "racket" is even frequently employed—often humorously—to point out any ingeniously devised plan—lawful and proper—to rake in seemingly easy revenues. Thus, the word has a wide range of application—from the bad and sinister form in the great city to the mild, if not always approved, form in the country.

Senator SENATOR Burke's resignation

as democratic national committee man for Nebraska is demanded on the ground that he is not in harmony with all New Deal policies. He has sometimes spoken and voted in conflict with the administration, but not in conflict with the platform on which the New Deal was elected. Burke's refusal to support Candidate Carpenter is no more out of line with party regularity than President Roosevelt's open demand for the reelection of Senator Norris. Fact is, there is so much inconsistency in the national administration that the democrat who refuses to follow it, comes nearest approaching the ideal of consistency. And Senator Burke should stand higher in popular con-

Add Four Books To Wayne Library

Four new books have been added to the International Mind Aleeve at the Wayne library.

One of the books is "Finland" by Agnes Rothery. This book discusses the lives of the Finland people as well as describing the mountains, lakes and forests of the country. It takes the reader into the midst of a progressive people who are solving the problems of nationalism, debts, defense, and democracy.

"Mexican Interlude," by J. H. Jackson, is a delightful description of towns and places and the people of Mexico as they were related to two gay travelers who have interpreted their experiences.

"Aerial Odyssey," by E. Alexander Powell, provides the reader with an "airplane-view" of fascinating countries around the Caribbean, many of which are seldom visited by the ordinary traveler.

"Liberty vs. Equality," by W.

fidence by reason of his refusal to violate his convictions—refusal to take a course which he believes is contrary to the best interests of his constituents.

The Omaha Journal-Stockman notes that the blue goggles through which Secretary Wallace sees agriculture, knock his vision clear out of line with the bulletins issued by his department. Despite kick-backs on the secretary's planned economy, he persists in government direction as a way out of uncertainty and gloom. "Are we to believe Secretary Wallace or are we to believe the bulletins that his department and the treasury department are issuing by tons?" says the Journal-Stockman, which newspaper concludes: "Our lugubrious secretary is painting his dark pictures in order to impress the country with his reform policies, his ordered abundance, his ever normal granaries and his planned prosperity. In short, the head of the department of agriculture seems to be somewhat out of touch with the bulletins issued by his department."

In a recent speech before a group of democrats in Omaha, Governor Cochran made the sound and encouraging declaration that "political platforms and promises should be kept as solemn pledges to the people." We think the governor meant what he said, and based what he said on his state record. But he must have felt rather sick when he thought how utterly incompatible his declaration appeared in relation to the New Deal's failure to perform what it preached. The policy of pledging one thing and doing exactly the opposite thing stands out so glaringly in the New Deal record that the governor's avowed conviction must be accepted as an indirect rebuke. The governor must secretly feel that what is good practice for the state government must be good practice for the federal government.

The Saturday Evening Post emphasizes the fallacy of the new union party's platform plank dealing with the money question. The third party's theory that money can be raised without backing would, if practiced, destroy the value of money and ruin security. The idea is to get something for nothing, and it will not long work without disaster. Touching fanatical absurdities that interfere with sound development, the Post says in conclusion: "A lot of painful adjustments, hard work and careful thinking lie ahead for this country. And the process is going to be all the harder if people dally on the way in search of silly white rabbits and cures."

The middlewest—now suffering results of a drouth of unprecedented severity—has long been known as the bread basket of the world, and this year's unhappy experience will not lead it to surrender that distinction. Both east and west have always looked to the central states to supply meats and other substantial foods, and qualities have been considered nowhere surpassed. It is inconceivable that this great area will not come back next year and subsequent years with old-time production. Continued faith in this usually rich food-producing territory is amply warranted.

Women over the nation are taking a leading part in opposing the New Deal. They are usually careful readers and logical thinkers, and they can figure out what renewed license to left-wingers would mean to the future of the country. They sense deeply the value of individualism and unrestricted opportunities. Human rights restored by the supreme court will be bequeathed unimpaired to succeeding generations if the aroused anti-New Deal women have their way.

Many schools will open August 31; many others a week later. In the meantime, it is hoped the drouth will loosen its grip and permit the elements to present a combination of mellowing moisture and refreshing coolness. This combination will, among other valuable contributions, revive courage in students as they renew their studies.

Scientists have accomplished wonders, but they do not seem able to agree on what's the matter with the weather, or when it will let up and act normal again.

Ghosts of five million slaughtered and wasted pigs will haunt us until we learn that planned scarcity does not bring plenty and security.

F. Russell, will prove to be an aid to thoughtful people on the clarification of ideas which are now being discussed throughout the world in all countries where freedom of speech still exists.

KARL STEFAN.

Congressman Karl Stefan was in Wayne over the noon hour Saturday on his way to speak at Dixon's annual picnic. The congressman is kept busy smoothing the way for constituents. The drouth has increased the need for his helpful activities, and he is interesting himself in behalf of many persons as far as possible. He is not playing politics. He is making himself useful to everybody regardless of party lines. He does not regard himself the representative of only one party, but the representative of all parties in all parts of his district. In a quiet way and without burning any red fire, he has been able to accomplish a great deal for the people of his district even though belonging to the minority party. During the few weeks before election he will take enough time from official duties to do some campaigning in behalf of his candidacy for reelection. His popularity over the district has apparently strengthened during the past two years, and his return to his post with support of an increased majority seems reasonably assured.

experience of war does not require the courage involved in personal sacrifices in the course of peaceful pursuit—the loss of children, the desperate illness of those whom we love better than ourselves, the collapse of fortune that forces a man to go down to the bottom and start over again. These exact stanzas equal to that demanded in the Argonne. All the war instincts in the world could be turned with profit into peaceful channels.

It would seem wise to find out what a fellow does to make a failure of his work, and then follow the opposite course.

Not for Amusement.

Hon. Terry Carpenter, Scottsbluff, Nebraska.
My dear Mr. Carpenter:
I have your letter of August tenth, suggesting a series of joint debates. You state, "The voters are entitled to some amusement during a campaign which promises to be most interesting from your standpoint and from the public's standpoint."

To me, the issues in this campaign are too vital to be considered amusing. Any plan which has as its object amusement of the voters, would be one that failed to recognize the serious situation of this nation faces.

You state also, "Anything which opponents say about each other should be said to each other's face." As to that, you need have no fear. My purpose in this campaign is to discuss issues, and not personalities.

I must respectfully decline to let anyone or anything interfere with my plans, already made, to present the issues of this campaign to the people of Nebraska in an orderly and serious way.

Very truly yours,
Robert G. Simmons.

Mrs. Don Miller and Bobbie are visiting Mrs. Elmer Volk at Osmond, Neb., this week.

Another Blunder.

Council Bluffs Nonpareil: Add one more blunder to the new deal's "conservation" program. Under that program thousands of bushels of oats have been destroyed at a time when there is an acute shortage of feed on the farms and the shortage grows more serious daily.

As a crop reduction and soil conservation measure Henry Wal-

HOW TO VOTE.

A farmer living near Wayne expressed doubt as to how to vote for president in November, and he asked our opinion. We referred him to the broken pledges of the New Deal, the NRA nightmare that frightened and crippled industry, the wasteful slaughter of pigs, the compulsory potato restrictions that went down with the AAA, the unsuccessful attempts to force the control of agriculture and business, the increase in government bureaus and public payrolls, with a steadily ascending federal debt which present and future generations must pay. We called attention to dangers to individual liberty—dangers too apparent the last three years to be regarded differently—dangers that are sufficient without other reasons to lead farmers and townsmen alike to vote against the New Deal. The question involved is not partisan. It is a question of whether we wish to surrender traditional rights for unsound government paternalism and autocratic dictatorship. When one shakes up his mind he must look beyond this year. He must vote for restored confidence, restored independence and freedom from hobbling interference, freedom from uncertainty and fear. Under a soundly progressive order, private industry will absorb those on relief rolls, and the unemployment problem will be solved. Then the inflowing tide of prosperity will bring assurance and peace of mind.

LANDON FIT FOR CAMPAIGN

LATEST PICTURE of Gov. Alf Landon, Republican nominee for President, shows him in splendid health, fit and strong for a vigorous campaign. Photographed in Topeka, Kans., as he prepared for his eastern swing in which he expects to meet voters at first hand and demonstrate to them that he is a practical liberal, intent on reducing taxes without hurting the man on relief. He says he'll take the savings out of the hides of political exploiters.

Landon and his coteries of theorists conceived the idea of reducing the oats yield by requiring farmers who signed contracts to clip their fields—that is, head the grain stalks—and permit the grain and straw to remain on the soil, this accomplishing the dual purpose of reducing total crop yields and conserving the soil.

Then along came the drouth, like it did following the slaughter of little pigs. Large acreages of oats had been clipped at a time when the corn crop was deteriorating rapidly, when pastures were dried up and hay and other forage crops were being reduced by nature to a point below domestic needs.

Two instances of this blundering program are cited in northwest Iowa.

Otto Stuhr, living directly north of Laurens, clipped 26 acres of oats. When he threshed he found that if they had been permitted to mature he would have had 1300 bushels more.

A. C. Shaw of Pocahontas, land owner and attorney, estimated that in Pocahontas county alone the clipping program resulted in the destruction of about 1,000,000 bushels of grain.

Later federal regulations were changed to permit the raking of the headed straw, but in most cases the straw had spoiled.

Now most of those farmers who signed contracts are wishing they had their destroyed oats in their bins for feeding purposes or for marketing at prices which would have yielded them a profit equal to or in excess of the subsidy paid them by the taxpayers through the new deal as represented by an incompetent and blundering agricultural department.

When the price of corn touched $1 per bushel a few weeks ago a Marshall county democrat rushed up to his friends with enthusiasm and exclaimed: "See what the new deal has done for the farmers." Which was in effect claiming the administration was responsible for the drouth and for the shortage of corn and oats and other feeds and foods necessary for live stock and human consumption.

Birds Help The Farmer.

Norfolk News: The grasshopper plague has opened the eyes of many farmers to the value of the pheasant in helping keep down insect pests. Usually the farmers are found arrayed against the colorful bird, which they accuse of invading their corn and oats fields, feeding on the tender green shoots or the sprouting kernels.

But down in Platte county the farmers called on the county board the other day to petition for a closed season on pheasants in that county this year. The birds were praised as the farmer's best allies in waging war on the destructive "hoppers. The cold winter, it was pointed out, was hard on the breeding stock and a closed season would help to bring back the numbers to normal.

Any bird that eats insects or worms is enlisted in the eternal war that the raisers of crops must wage on insect pests. That is one war which will never end, for the minute we relax our vigilance the hungry hordes come down on us in increased numbers and we begin to realize that we produce our food under great hazards.

The farmer can afford to feed and protect these bird allies in this fight.

German and American Pork.
Omaha Journal-Stockman: The American farmers can sympathize with German farmers in the matter of feed shortage. The hog industry in both countries is in more or less the same fix. The pig crop of Germany this year is considerably enlarged, just as it is enlarged in this country, and in both countries the question of the moment is what to feed those pigs.

Now the German government

Always Comes Back.

Geneva Signal: The publisher of The Signal has spent practically his whole life in Nebraska. For more than forty-two years last past he has experienced all of the good weather and all of the bad weather that has prevailed in Fillmore county. He has never regretted having made Fillmore county his home. He has traveled in nearly every state in the union and he has visited neighboring countries and he has found in every one of them certain drawbacks and he has always found those drawbacks as numerous and as undesirable as the drawbacks experienced by Fillmore county people, and by residents of Nebraska in general.

Those whose business it is to study the weather have concluded that we can expect, on an average two dry years in every ten. This study covers a period of about seventy years. Drouths were experienced when only Indians were here to worry about the weather, long before the prairies of this typical prairie state that the politicians talk about were plowed up by the homesteaders.

Always in the past, which must be the basis on which to estimate the future, dry years have been followed by wet years and the abundance we always have when reasonable rains fall. We find no reason for pessimism about the future. We do find reason for all citizens to consider the facts and plan their activities with due regard to them.

We conclude that Secretary Wallace was wholly wrong, as in many other things, in meaning that Nebraska is about to become a desert. We can agree with him, and with other paternalistically inclined writers of books and brain trust experimenters, that we should accept the aid of science in planning our farming and all of the other activities of our lives. We all need to be students of history, history of our own locality and our state in particular and not go off half-cocked as Secretary Wallace has done on more than one occasion.

It is not the intention of the writer at this time to discuss the details at length, but we think it is clear that Nebraska farmers need to build more numerous and much larger modern storage facilities. Proper cribs and bins of modern construction and big silos should be in our list of modern conveniences, and we might well term them modern necessities.

Farmers who had grain and forage stored are in a position to care for their families and their livestock and if they have a surplus for sale they can now get handsome prices for everything produced on a farm.

Beyond all question, our soil needs care and enrichment it did not need a half century ago. Like a pair of shoes, a suit of clothes or an automobile, soil wears out unless it is given proper care. We learned that from our father, who was born in Maine and grew to manhood in Ohio before casting his lot in Nebraska. He took care of the soil of his farm and it repaid him well. He farmed fifty-five years in one township and he left the soil of his farm rich and productive.

The conservation of moisture has become a great modern scientific problem that needs intense and constant study. We are not qualified to discuss the means, but we are convinced that every effort should be made to find the best means of conserving moisture when it falls, and, when found, used to the greatest extent within our power.

Ford and other experimenters in the development of motor-driven vehicles did not build the modern car as we know it at the first effort. Study and effort are needed in soil and water conservation.

Sections of the country that are troubled with too much water and a water surplus at the wrong time complain just as much and have just as many crop difficulties as Fillmore county farmers. And so it is everywhere we have been. In every section of the United States, and we are sure this applies to every other country, there are difficulties to overcome, quite as serious difficulties as the people of Fillmore county are compelled to meet and are able to conquer by the use of intelligence and the persistent application of sound systems of production.

For a Clean Campaign.

Lincoln Journal: The other day Col. Frank Knox spoke at Connorsville, Ind., and among other striking blows dealt at the opposition promised that this would be a campaign of issues, so far as he was concerned, and not a campaign of personalities. That followed a pre-campaign prediction by Jim Farley that campaign to come would be a mud-slinging, dirty affair.

Of course no one can control all of the campaigners on either side of the fight. Some will deal in personalities, some will forget the issues where it appears to be more effective to deal in personalities, and some will mix issues and personalities in the manner that seems best to them. That will be done on both sides. Nevertheless if the leaders, men like Roosevelt, Garner and Farley, and Landon and Knox and Hamilton, can hold the controversy on a high plane that will go a long way toward controlling the lesser leaders. The pledge seems to have been made in advance on the republican side, and we may await with some interest for a corresponding pledge, redeemable in performance, to follow republican leadership in this matter.

made the issue, on which he hopes to fight, very clear. He is for free enterprise, business and industry unhampered by government bounties, nor hindered by the government in business. On that matter Vice President Garner has expressed at least part agreement, by saying that he was interested in the business of getting the government out of business.

The republican vice presidential candidate has made a good start. He has defined the issues on which he will fight. He has made himself clear. He wants business to go ahead once more, not fettered by fear nor hopelessly hobbled by governmental red tape. He is for more local government and less federal interference. He wants self-reliant business men of the country to feel free to go ahead, to employ men, to remove the necessity for the dole and public works made on the pretense of helping the unemployed. He would remove unemployment thru private enterprise taking the risks, instead of seeking industry hobbled by government administrations playing politics while they are not spying on each other.

Verzal Reports On Farm Success
R. W. Stromer of Adams county, is a farmer who has made good despite the ravages of drought and grasshoppers, according to Ray L. Verzal, rural resettlement supervisor. Since last spring Stromer borrowed $854. He has grown a fair wheat crop, repaid his loan and reestablished his credit with local banks and still has enough money to start him next year.

Eastern States Unaffected By Severe Drought
Reporting that conditions are good east of Indiana and that the weather is much cooler there than here, Carl J. Nuss, who with his wife arrived home Tuesday evening after spending the past two weeks in Chicago, New York and Pennsylvania, brought back a favorable impression of the east.

Mr. and Mrs. Nuss left Wayne for Chicago August 2. They saw a great deal of scenery and in the eastern states enjoyed the flowers and green lawns, which have required mowing. The weather has been much cooler particularly in the Pennsylvania mountain region where they visited relatives. The temperature at night is always around 50 degrees and the hottest day has been 90.

Mr. Nuss visited a number of factories, among them a silk and fabric plant and a steel industry. These are now being operated in three shifts of workers. A wide concern in which quantities of wire are being stored for future use, also proved of interest.

While Mr. and Mrs. Nuss were in Woodbury, Penn., they were able to hear both Father Charles E. Coughlin and President E. D. Roosevelt speak. The latter was inspecting the flood area. Father Coughlin is greatly admired in the section visited by the Nusses. At the time that they heard Father Coughlin, he was five hours late and approximately 20,000 people waited patiently for him to appear.

Mr. Nuss derived a great deal of pleasure out of questioning New York "newsmen" concerning Nebraska. Many of them admitted that they had heard of the Lib but were ignorant as to where it was. One young man said he had studied about Nebraska in geography and was quite concerned as to whether there were cars there yet. Mr. Nuss believed, however, that the last had not in earnest.

To the average New Yorker, when a person is out of New York, he is in the "sticks." Chicago is considered merely a suburb of the metropolitan city.

While in New York, Mr. Nuss did a great deal of his Christmas buying.

We are making decided modern improvements in the construction of our new cold storage rooms which are to be equipped with modern up-to-date meat lockers wherein we are building a special room in connection with the installation that will be used for cooling, cutting and processing meat before wrapping it and putting it into the locker. An excess amount of refrigeration pipes is being installed to carry very cold temperatures and the walls of the cold storage rooms are being built a foot thick. In fact, no expense is being spared to have this system of cold storage lockers perfect in construction and efficiency in temperatures as well as in sanitation.

We will have butchers in our employ who will go into the country, select either hogs or cattle of a weight you desire, bring them to the plant, cool them, cut them, wrap them and mark them and place them for storage at very low rates.

Funds For Needy Aged Are Lower

Large Number Applicants Necessitates Smaller Grant Amounts.

Funds available to Wayne county for old age assistance for the 12 months ending June 30, 1937, amount to $26,220.21, according to state director. This is $2,068.98 per month and when divided among 144 the monthly grant is $21.31.

The state office reports a number of letters protesting that the grants are insufficient. It is thought the program may not be understood. In the fall of 1935, a special session of the Nebraska legislature passed several acts setting up a program of assistance for needy aged individuals. This is not a pension law, as many seem to believe, but is a form of relief for those who can qualify. In order to be eligible one must be at least 65 years old, must have no children or other relatives legally liable for his support who are financially able to care for him, and must be in need of assistance, as well as certain other requirements of residence, etc. To be classed as needy, a person may not have liquid assets, exclusive of the home in which he lives, exceeding a fair value of $500.00. Assistance not to exceed $30.00 per month may be granted to eligible and the amount must be the difference between their budgetary needs and income, if any, provided sufficient funds are available to the county, and the grants are based entirely upon the needs of the applicant. State law makes it mandatory for state funds to be distributed to counties in exact ratio that the county population bears to the state as a whole. The actual number of applications received to date have far exceeded the estimate made at the time appropriations were determined by the legislature. Due to these circumstances, the state assistance committee and the county board find it impossible to approve grants as large as was anticipated.

Special Shipping Rates Are Granted

Special shipping rates are being allowed by railroads in drought areas on livestock shipments to pastures and other areas. This will entitle farmers to reduced freight rates on all livestock that is shipped to points other than marketing points and that will not be slaughtered within 30 days. Blanks for certification for shipment will soon be available at the office of Agent Walter Moller.

Children Give Unique Plays In East Park

Heat and drought seriousness do not penetrate into the imaginative minds of the youngsters who may be found playing any afternoon in East park. Croquet, swings, and other games afford diversion to these active minds.

Most fun, however, comes from the plays which are made up and presented by part of the group for the entertainment of the smaller youngsters. The "Hill Billy Wedding" was given last week by Leah Jeanne Cauwe as the parson, Marjorie Thompson as the bridegroom, Betty Jo Gildersleeve as the bride and Marcelline Long as the bridesmaid.

The bride was gown in a long blue dress over which she wore a veil made from a lace curtain. The bridegroom wore overalls and the parson wore a long black skirt. The young couple were married in the city park with an automobile hearse representing the Bible. The bride's bouquet was made up of weeds gathered in the park. A three-act play, "Grandma," was also given recently. Hazel McPherran took the part of grandma, Marcelline Long was grandpa, Leah Jeanne Cauwe was mother, Betty Jo Gildersleeve was daughter, and Marjorie Thompson was daughter's sweetheart.

The same costumes were used for the latter play. The curtain became a shawl for grandmother and the sweetheart wore the overalls. Other long dresses were used by the leading characters in the play. Miss Roberta Baker, Miss Wilma Baker and Miss Margaret Mau are supervisors in the park during afternoons and lead the children in games.

Planting Of Rye Being Recommended

Planting a good acreage of rye as soon as fall rains begin should help the livestock feed situation, according to Agent Walter Moller. Rye pasture is available in the fall, through the winter and early in the spring. This year it will prove an effective means of reducing grain requirements for livestock.

Seeding of fall rye is especially important this season as a substitute for high-priced corn in the feeding of hogs. Circular 216, which may be obtained at the office of Agent Walter Moller, gives valuable information on the feeding problem.

Prof. W. J. Loeffel, swine authority, says he looks for rather heavy marketing of hogs during early fall months. They probably will be a very heavy percentage of unfinished animals which will depress the market, he thinks. After this distress marketing, Mr. Loeffel looks for hog prices to go higher.

20th Anniversary

Twenty Years of Mounting Success

TWENTY YEARS AGO the first Delco light and power plant was manufactured. The plant started with one model. There are now thirty-two models and six different batteries. From 750-watt capacity the plant grew to 6,000-watt capacity. Plants may now be had with capacities ranging from 150-watt to 6,000-watt. The price range is from $59.50 to $1,145.

The plant proved so successful that demand grew rapidly from the start. Distribution and satisfaction everywhere attested to the superiority of the product. It is interesting to note that 73 per cent of all farm lighting plants are Delcos.

Delco Light and Power Development was soon followed by the introduction of Delco water systems for deep or shallow wells, Delco vacuum sweepers, Delco oil burners, Delco gas, Delco electric irons, fans, motors, and the justly popular Delco radio.

In due observance of the Anniversary, Delco products will be more elaborately displayed than usual at the Dixon county fair at Concord next week. See the exhibit at the fair, and if you are interested in any of the conveniences and joys insured by Delco service let us give you a demonstration and explain superior qualities.

INTERLOCHEN BAND CAMP TRIP AWARDED YOUTH

Maurice Wright Is Among Northwestern Students Playing With Renowned Musicians In Michigan.

Chosen as one of five from Northwestern school of music, Evanston, Ill., to attend Interlochen music camp, Maurice Wright of Wayne, spent an interesting vacation. He, with four colleagues left Evanston at the close of the summer term and went up through Wisconsin in the heart of the dairy district. It was interesting to note in that part of the country that fine stock is more important to these farmers than good farm buildings. From here they drove on up to Interlochen in northern Michigan.

At Interlochen is located the oldest national band and orchestra camp. The camp has met for the past nine years for an eight-week study. The camp is made up of high school musicians who come there and are trained by outstanding artists.

The American Bandmasters' association had a four-day convention at the camp and it was to attend this convention and to play in band concerts and broadcasts that the five students went to the camp. The purpose of the association is to promote better music through the use of concert bands. John Phillip Sousa, world renowned bandmaster, was the first honorary member. The organization now has almost 80 active members.

"The camp provides a beautiful setting for these concerts," remarked Maurice. Situated near a lake, the bowl is in the open with the seats set back in the trees. Herbert Clark, famous cornettist from California, expressed the desire of having such a camp in California.

One evening's program was what is called the annual bandmasters' frolic. This concert is given once a year at midnight by a band made up of the bandmasters. Among the musicians this year were Glenn Cliff Balmun, head of the Northwestern school of music, who played the snare drum, and Austin Harding, director of music at the University of Illinois, who played the bass drums. The concert was broadcast but it is more for humor than music.

On their return trip from the camp the young men visited the Conn Instrument Factory in Elkhart, Ind. This was particularly interesting to Maurice as he had just completed a study on instruments and parts. One does not realize that there is as much minute and detailed work on an instrument until he visits a factory. Some men sit all day just boring holes in the instrument for the keys and springs. Other work is just as specialized.

The local young man is an instructor of music in junior high in Boulder, Colo. Next term will be his second year. The total enrollment in the Boulder schools is 2,500 and there are five full-time music instructors.

Northwestern university has one of the outstanding music schools. The attendance this summer far exceeded any previous records, the 475 students representing 44 states and several foreign countries. By being located so close to Chicago the school has advantages over other institutions as it is possible to get the Chicago symphony and other famous orchestras and directors.

While making the trip to the camp, the young men had the experience of going through a forest which a short time before had been partially destroyed by fire. The forest fire fighters are now quite well organized and every precaution is taken to prevent fire. When the boys entered this territory they were warned not to smoke or throw away matches. The license number of their car was taken, their destination and the time they should arrive. Record is kept of every person going through the forest. That whole region is very dry.

Maurice returned to his home here Thursday morning. He received his M. A. in music this summer and will be at Carl Wright's until going to Boulder.

TWENTYSIX YEARS.

(Geneva Signal)
Our congratulations to our old friend, E. Huse of the Wayne Herald, who reviews with considerable satisfaction the twenty-six years that have elapsed since he bought that newspaper and began making it a real county newspaper. Some folks say the Herald is the best newspaper in Nebraska. Our natural modesty prevents our committing on that point, but we are sure that no words of praise for the Wayne Herald and its publisher would be too strong. The Herald is considered an exceptionally fine model of what a county weekly newspaper ought to be. May it live long and continue to prosper greatly under its present very able management.

Then Indian warriors and six squaws came into town and commenced preparations for a war dance. Four of the men sat around a big drum on which they beat and sang a pathetic song. Then two bucks, gaudy with war paint, began to prance around in a circle. After jingling their bells, yelling weird phrases, spitting the earth with their feet and wailing their tomahawks, they pushed the hat. The collection was not as large as they expected so the Indians became angry, wrapped up their blankets and ran out of town.

WITNESS FOREST FIRES

Witnessing a forest fire was one of the most interesting and unusual features on the vacation taken by Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Mildner who returned from their trip to the Black Hills and Yellowstone park last week Tuesday.

As they left Gillette, Wyo., the Mildners noticed what appeared to be a large white cloud, but as it didn't move, they realized it must be smoke from a fire. At that time they were 150 miles from Newcastle, the place of the disaster. When they reached Sundance, Wyo., they were informed that this fire was raging on the timber of the Homestead Lumber company between Deadwood, S. D., and Newcastle, Wyo. Trucks of fire fighters were being taken to Newcastle. A week before, a forest fire had just been put out in Sundance. This fire had destroyed 8,000 acres of timber in a course of six weeks. The Mildners drove to about ten miles from the blaze. Fires are fought by means of bombs and backfires. They are difficult to fight as the fires burn from the tops of the trees. A fire which starts on the ground burns up a tree and then spreads from the top branches. They may burn one or two miles in this manner. One must always be on the lookout for a changing wind when fighting. Ranch buildings are protected by water but often it is necessary for families to leave their homes. The dense smoke clouds are a result of the tree top burning fires.

Ranger stations are located in forest areas, but due to the extremely dry weather there have been more forest fires this summer than previously and it has been necessary to enlist C. C. C. boys to aid in the fire fighting.

Many cattle are lost in the forest fires also, but the number is surprisingly low since as many are taken to the ranges for grazing, the Mildners were informed. The cattle have a unique way of protecting themselves. They seek refuge in the ravines where there are streams of water. Often a fire will jump completely over the ravine and one may see cattle apparently unharmed by the fire.

The Mildners saw other places where fires have wrought a great deal of damage but the fire in the Black Hills was the only one witnessed in action.

week to attend the rodeo. Marlene McNutt went to Winside Tuesday evening to spend several days with her aunt, Mrs. Roy Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Parker entertained Saturday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Matt Holt, Jr., and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Horstman and Delpha, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schneider and family of Hoskins, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Holt of Wisner, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Holt and family of Dalton, and Mr. and Mrs. Matt Holt, Sr.

Mrs. Joe Renfroe and Martha Jean of Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. Aug. Kruse and Marjan spent Sunday in the Alfred Linke home at Hartington. All went to Charter Oak, Iowa, Tuesday to visit relatives and friends. The Kruse family plans to return in a couple of days and the others will stay longer to visit at Charter Oak and Demoson.

Hold Turkey Meetings.

With more turkeys being raised in Nebraska this year and the tendency toward cooperative marketing of the birds increasing each year, Wayne county farm people interested in turkey production were notified this week of a series of gatherings scheduled to be held the latter part of this month.

Turkey growers in this section of the state will gather at Ainsworth the evening of August 22 for their meeting. Cotton Holds Place In Textile World
While rayon and other textile fibers may be taking the place of cotton in some uses, the King crop of the south is more than holding its own in the textile fiber bureau says Rodney Whitaker, United States department of agriculture. The increased use of cotton for industrial purposes has helped to maintain the crop's position as a textile fiber. Whitaker reports. He cites the automobile industry as one of the many industrial uses of cotton.

In 1929, a peak year, the automobile tire industry used more than 700,000 bales of cotton. A sharp decline was noted during the depression years, but in 1935 more than half a million bales were used in automobile tire manufacturing. Additional quantities of cotton were used in car tops, upholstery, and seat covers.

A study of the cotton situation over a long period shows the total cotton used has more than doubled since 1890. Use of all textile fibers has a little less than doubled.

Freight trains nowadays act like express specials. New freight schedules are so fast, sometimes wonder if everything has to be delivered day before yesterday.

Many of our passenger trains are running faster schedules, too. Well, one thing is sure. We can make faster runs, but the first railroad commandment is still "Safety First." That's one rule they won't change.

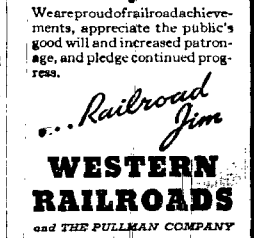

Western railroads and allied industries provided jobs for 750,000 workers last year. Some of them live in our town. Good neighbors.

Passenger fares are now the lowest in history with substantial reductions on round trips. And no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

This new Free pick-up-and-delivery of less than carload freight—I heard some traveling salesmen talking about it on the train yesterday. They said it saves shippers a lot of money and centers all responsibility on the railroad. The railroad picks up the freight at shipper's door and delivers to receiver's door. Of course, local delivery men get the haul from door-to-door and car-to-door at both ends. The railroad handles the whole transaction.

When railroads are busy, I notice towns along the railroad are prosperous. The merchants put more ads in the newspapers.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

History Of Rayon Booklet Is New

Booklet Reveals The history of rayon, one of the leading fabrics on the market, is still quite young. Twenty-five years ago, according to a bulletin issued by the Du Pont Co., and received here by R. H. Jacques, rayon first became manufactured on a commercial scale. By 1921 its consumption had reached almost 20,000,000 pounds. In 1936 it had shown an increase of more than 1,000 percent.

Rayon is widely used in the United States and in Paris. This man-made product shows some decided advantages over those materials coming from animal or plant life. Silk which comes from the silk worm has limitations as to the methods by which it is combined into threads since the silkworms spin a filament of a certain size. There are the same limitations on the wool from sheep. No factors are yet known by which the length, strength, uniformity and size of the wool can be controlled. Hence in rayon, which has such minute scientific processes, it is possible to make it uniform as to quality, to make it in fine or coarse filaments, in short lengths or long, to make it lustrous or to make it dull. In short, whatever is desired in a yarn, it is possible to work toward that quality in rayon.

Rayon is made from the cellulose of spruce wood and of cotton linters or from a combination of the cellulose from these two sources. Man is doing with spruce wood or cotton what the silkworm does with the mulberry leaf—taking out the cellulose and spinning it into a thread. By various chemical processes, the cellulose of spruce wood or cotton is converted into a liquid which has about the same viscosity of castor oil. The size of the spinnerette holes may be changed at will.

The luster of the rayon may also be regulated. In the beginning rayon was very lustrous. As this quality was considered undesirable by the stylists some chemical processes were perfected to make the yarn more dull. With other yarns this cannot be done. Another advantage of the man-made yarn over that of plant or animal fiber is the uniformity and strength of the threads. It has been said that rayon as irregular as the most regular natural yarn available would be unsalable.

One of the greatest of the scientific achievements in rayon improvement has been to reduce this filament to a point where it is now finer than the silkworm filament. The most important fabrics in which rayon has figured are transparent velvet, rough crepes, materials, sheers, satin-back crepes and other crepes and plain weaves as well as braids and trimmings. Rayon is an important fabric to the fashion world. Due to the luster of the material many brilliant color effects can be achieved. Cross-dyeing effects are possible and since the weight of the threads can be varied many new materials have been developed.
