velt republican against a republican who had attacked the New Deal, indicates the political drift in Michigan. Everywhere is a growing determination to uphoid constitutional government, pre-serve fundamentals and keep safely aloof from collectivist possibilities. In every land and every age people have wanted and still want to be free—free to think and act as conscience dictates and experiences abroad and group activities here have aroused new devotion to American tradi-tions, and renewed resolution to preserve our system of government while making progress and improving conditions. The best social security is not increas-ed government paternalism, not old-age pensions, not a system of federal doles, but a government order that frees the spirit to plan and strive and hope. A ma-jority of Americans will be found made of the metal that brooks no interference with govenbert. Drouth CHARGES made by the Fargo Forum that drouth pictures in Pictures North Dakota were fixed to make drouth conditions appear worse than facts warranted brought a Washington report that the Forum editor had betract-ed. This rekindled the editor's ire and led him to renew the charge. In reviewing the matter, the Lincon Journal offers this comment: "If the WPA chooses to make an issue of it, the paper continues the Fargo Forum is well content. The fact of the matter if that the WPA in its use of this picture, did the resettlement administration in its use of the skull picture have done untold damage not only to North Dakota but to every state in the great plains area—and to what purpose—to what end? "The Forum again explains that the exittle pictured were not starving range cattle, but dairy cows, belonging to a Bis-marck dairy, man. These and other cattle have wandered through the capitol grounds for years and watchmen have instructions to drive them off. The capitol sits out on the open prairie, bordered on three sides by farm land. The picture might have been made any time, any year, since 1883." In this country where individual initia-

In this country where individual initia-tive and individual effort count, corpora-tions or group organizations are necessary to support great numbers of employees. If existing corporations were wiped out, as some think they should be, instead of regu-lated, as others contend, new corporations would have to be developed to function in directing big industrial operations. Not only must we have organizations of capital to meet production requirements, but we must permit them to build up reserves to take care of improvements and meet the exigencies of lean periods.

Audit of the local school district's rec Audit of the local school district's rec-ords must be popularly endorsed as fully justified by results, and it emphasizes the fact that every branch of the public ser-vice in which public funds are involved, should be submitted to a thorough check-ing by expert accountants at regular inter-vals. An audit is ordered not, necessarily to detect intentional irregularities, but to find but and correct always possible mis-takes. Officers given responsibility, as well as the public served, are manifestly en-titled to periodical audits.

September moisture has renewed pas-tures and made possible a liberal third cut-ting of alfalfa. It has also given promise to lately planted gardens and quick-grow-ing crops. The landscape presents an agreeable and hopeful contrast with what it was in mid-summer.

North Dakota WPA workers threaten a state wide strike to secure more pay. One county's workers have already struck. They demand an increase from 40 to 50 cents an hour with 120 instead of 100 working hours per month. Federal rath-than state authorities regulate wages and hours, and the result may be the abandonment of public projects and there-fore fewer opportunities for employment. A general WFA strike in North Dakota will relieve the burden of finding projects to justify employment.

The recent prediction by Dr. Charles I Abbot of the Smithsonian Institute that there will be no appreciable loosening of the drouth in the north central states be-fore 1938 was based on the record of a 1 cycle in rainfall, which will not reach its low point until 1938 or 1940. At about the time this prediction was made another learned man, Dr. William Humphreys, scientist and meterologist of the federal weather bureau at Washington, stated that the world's aridity is progres-sively increasing, but thinks that complete bread basket will not become necessary for four or five thousand years.

JUDGMENT. JUDGMENT. With acquisition of facts must come development of sound judgment to enable one to move serency in life's cur-rents. A fellow whose habit is to say and do tactless things, is seriously obstructed in reach-ing otherwise deserved goals. To escape being known is an edu-cated "nut," the learned indi-vidual must have simultane-ously taken a course in com-mon sense. No matter how much he knows of book lore, no matter how well he can reel off facts, he must have a corres-ponding metsure of sound judg-ment. If he is inconsistent in his thinking, reflected in his words and deeds, his education is seriously burdened. Judgment to generat attention and persistent development. ## THE CONSTITUTION

THE CONSTITUTION. September 17 is designated as constitution day, because it was on that day in 1787 that the condititution of the United States was adopted. The first draft of a constitution was found to contain so many de-fedts that representatives of the states met in convention at Philadelphia from May 29 to September 17, 1787, to perfect the fundamental document. It was a big task, engaging the best minds of the period, and it was finally completed and adopted. Threats to the con-stitution the last few, years make its emphasis more im-portant than ever a this time.
