Wild Zeal MERLE Thorpe wields a trenchant pen—as one would have said before the days of typewriters. He is a regular contributor to Nation's Business—magazine primarily for business, but really of popular interest. In the current number he emphasizes the wild zeal with which government bureaus get fiction tangled up with facts in spreading propaganda, taking his cue from the photographer's idea of arranging a modern drouth scene by clever manipulation of a weather-beaten cow skull.

Time was when anything that bore the name of the United States was accepted without question. "No longer," he says, "do we accept at face value facts and figures released in such torrential flood from Washington." Mentioning that skepticism rules when inconsistencies prevail, the writer says:

"But was this state of affairs not to be expected? As we plunged the federal government into a thousand new fields, with hundreds of rival bureaus, proselytizing for public approval and appropriations, with emphasis shifting from research to promotion, and with the new order daily preaching its gospel through press, radio, screen and stage, authenticity suffers and confidence shrinks!"

The feverish anxiety with which leaders try to hold advantages without regard to facts or logic, leads the writer to offer these two concluding paragraphs:

"The fabrication of facts to buttress a cause is not of recent origin. The practice is a natural child of war propaganda, where facts admittedly are distorted, on the ground that any means justify the ends. The peace-time child is attaining war-time stature. The tendency has reached its logical and noxious growth in the one-party governments of Russia, Italy and Germany. "If not checked in America, we shall lose our democracy, for it thrives only upon the confidence of the people in the integrity of their public servants."

Barkley Annoyed NEW Dealers are having a hard time trying to please the president by supporting Senator Norris in the presence of the regularly nominated candidate, Terry Carpenter. Senator Barkley of Kentucky, who was speaking in Omaha, was interrupted by wild jeers when he tried to echo the administration's Norris support, and he had an embarrassing task in getting away from the subject. He managed to shift over to a deprecatory reference to the senatorial candidacy of Robert Simmons whose election, he said, would be a "disaster to the Roosevelt administration." This brought some cheers, but also loud cries for Carpenter who was present and smiling serenely as his regularity clashed with administration preference.

Senator Barkley's warning over what might happen to Roosevelt fallacies if Simmons were elected is one big reason why he will be elected. Simmons will win because he is against regimentation, against setting aside the constitution and supreme court, against violated pledges, against telling the farmer how to farm and the business man how to run his business, against government engaging in industry and competing with private enterprise, against wasteful flinging about of public funds and the rising tax load. Opposition to these things would at least be a wholesome counter-irritant to the wild ride of the administration if it happened still to be in the saddle. If such opposition is ground for alarm on the part of New Deal bellwethers—pulling in the direction of Tugwellian collectivism—it only emphasizes the importance of electing Simmons.

And speaking of Robert Simmons, people are impressed by the fact that he is not just another politician and that he does not shift from one foot to the other in considering public issues. He is outspoken and genuine. He says what he means and means what he says. He is the caliber of statesman who feels the need of balancing the ship of state—as well as the budget—in making progress.

Other New Dealers imitate Chairman Jim Farley's appraisal of Governor Landon as just a fellow from a "prairie state," by referring to him as a greenhorn from the country. The governor was not born with a silver spoon and probably never learned to adapt himself to all the modern social curves. Making his own way, in contrast with some others who lift their noses scornfully, he probably has not had the time nor the inclination to star in society. But he has shown executive ability of a high order and possesses common sense in abundance. Lincoln was ridiculed as a raw product from the country, but he proved one of the world's greatest leaders. Landon will make up in many substantial ways for any lack in social polish or in sweetly modulated voice. His rise to new and broadened responsibilities will throw off the incubus of fear and reestablish confidence—supreme essentials to enduring prosperity.

Freedom of the press enabled the World-Herald to expose abuses carried on in the Douglas county jail in the form of a "kangaroo" court. The regular courts have taken the grievous practice in hand and propose to see that it is discontinued. It seems odd that officers in charge of the jail had to be informed or awakened by a newspaper reporter to sense an ill concealed and unquestioned abuse. It is interesting to note that Allen Dowling who got himself arrested to uncover the wrong, is a nephew of J. E. Dowling of Wayne, and was at one time a student in the Wayne State Teachers college.

William Hard, Washington news commentator, referring in a radio broadcast to Secretary Wallace's charge that Governor Landon would, if elected, have to listen to big business interests that are for him, said accordingly that President Roosevelt would have to listen to the communistic groups that are for him. The secretary's belief that an administration must cooperate with campaign supporters regardless of convictions, offers additional reason why the New Deal for which he speaks, ought to be buried under an avalanche of disapproval.

In this campaign, with future government policies at stake, the presidency and house and senate memberships properly receive major attention. The reelection of Roosevelt and an agreeing congress would mean four more years of doubtful experimentation. The election of Landon and a congress in sympathy with him would insure constitutional government and individual independence. The issue is momentous.

The Lincoln lawyer who was suspended from practice for three months on account of unethical ways of capturing business, may be a hint to any other members of the profession who have fallen below generally accepted standards.

Roosevelt As Tax Teacher. Norfolk Daily News: If the democratic state committee really wants light on the question of who pays federal taxes, why look elsewhere than in the speeches of the democratic candidate for president? Mr. Roosevelt has been voluble on that subject and some of the soundest and clearest of his political statements relate to it. For instance:

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors, because they are a burden on production and can be paid only by production. If excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms, and hence, in hordes of the hungry tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain."

Again: "Our workers may never see a tax bill, but they pay in reductions from wages, in increased cost of what they buy, or (as now) in broad cessation of employment."

Or further: "The most obvious effect of extravagant spending is, then, its burden on farm and industrial activity and for that nearly every government unit in the United States is to blame. But when we come to consider prodigality and extravagance in the federal government—as distinguished from state or local government—we are talking about something even more dangerous."

Still further: "Our federal extravagance and improvidence bear a double evil; first, our people and our business cannot carry its excessive burdens of taxation; second, our credit structure is impaired by the unorthodox federal financing made necessary by the unprecedented magnitude of these deficits."

All of these paragraphs are taken verbatim from Franklin D. Roosevelt's speech at Pittsburgh, Pa., on October 19, 1932. Reading them, one has no reason to be in the dark as to where the burden of taxation, federal as well as local, falls. No quibble of words can cloud the truth of what the president says.

Any political speaker or writer, who tries to lead the people to believe that the laborer and the farmer do not pay their share of federal taxes, is inviting a joint debate with the president himself.

Wishbones For Everybody. Nation's Business: What has happened to the morale of the American people in recent years is as much the concern of the psychologist as of the politician. Sad to relate, the variations and volume of relief reveal a national state of dependency.

It is difficult to know whether the lengthening of the public feed trough is cause or effect of the lavish expenditures of government. Possibly the indifference to strict accountability proceeds from the notion that emergency measures are exempt from the precisions of ordinary times. A cursory run of the news of any day readily shows that the people have abandoned self-reliance as a national ideal and now look to the central government for their sustenance and recreation.

The moral consequences not only dismay—with charges of administrative irregularities, political pressure and preferences, calculated waste, unbelievable stupidities, and brazen defiance of the courts—but strike alarm as well.

Breaking Party Ties. Lincoln Journal: Al Smith and Gifford Pinchot are campaigning against Roosevelt. The Baltimore Sun and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, both democratic papers, are supporting Landon. Harold Ickes and Harry Hopkins are both supporting Roosevelt.

PREVENTION. Next week has been designated as Fire Prevention week. It was on October 9, 1871, that the nation was startled by the big Chicago conflagration, and so special study of ways to prevent fire losses is fixed accordingly. Also October ushers in use of artificial heat, suggesting the importance of removing fire hazards. Cleaning stoves and furnaces and getting rid of inflammable waste must be done early to insure greatest safety. In calling attention to the importance of safeguarding against fires, Governor Cochran says 5,048 fires occurred in Nebraska last year, causing 79 deaths and 183 personal injuries and property loss estimated at $2,404,899. He says fire losses so far in 1936 show an increase over those of 1935. Perhaps without "fire prevention week" and frequent notes of alarm results would still be worse. Anyway, people are urged to remove dangers and exercise every precaution to defeat the fire terror.

Doing More and More. Busiest persons are usually the ones chosen to do free public service. The busy person discharges every duty imposed, and therefore his services are always in demand.

COMPLAINT.

The Fremont Tribune complains of an experience that is not uncommon among publications that have audited and paid subscription lists. It says the supervisors of Dodge county have awarded publication of the delinquent tax list to a Scribner newspaper with a local circulation. The Tribune's general circulation, required by law, was disregarded, ostensibly in order to effect a small cash saving, though as a matter of fact, considering difference in service, the saving would seem to amount to a considerable loss. The Tribune points out that as the tax sale involves property titles, there is grave doubt that publication of the list in other than a newspaper of general circulation would furnish an adequate safeguard. The board is believed to interpret the word "general" as referring to any publication within the newspaper class, whereas the Tribune contends with sound reason that the legislature in passing the law meant a medium covering all parts of the county. It is our suspicion that the county supervisors overlooked the matter of service, feeling that the Tribune was a big cheese that didn't need the business anyway and that it would be a brave gesture to the Scribner community to fling some public patronage in that direction. The Tribune has doubtless learned that the more general service it gives, the more likely are official bodies to try to avoid showing preference over trailing and comparatively feeble rivals.

Article In Magazine.

"The Small Town Executive" is the title of an article written by Supt. Willis Ickler of Hoskins, and published in a recent issue of The School Executive.

The Basic Reasons.

Lincoln Journal: The criticism of Secretary Wallace's experimental efforts to stabilize agriculture lies not so much in either the motive or the results as in the fact that his aims could not be accomplished without entirely changing the economic life of the nation. The administration had no command from the people to do this. No opportunity for discussion or decision had previously been given. Those who flinched into the seats of power immediately proceeded, without a popular fiat to utilize that power to put into effect their own hitherto concealed plans. In fact, the plans they followed were not the plans they presented in the campaign.

Changing the economic life of a nation is a serious task. It ought not be undertaken in a democracy without consultation and consent of those to be affected. Business and agriculture in this country have always been governed by the results of the free play of competition. In order to insure this the government has made rules governing that competition and sought to prevent monopoly. In a trice this First came AAA, which put business in a strait jacket. Its purpose was beneficent in that it sought to protect the small business man; its results were bad because the small business man faded ill under it and monopoly secured a new hold.

Next came AAA, which had for its ultimate end complete regimentation of agriculture. Its purpose was also beneficent, but its workings contravened not only the constitution but an established economic system that had in other times worked efficiently. Both are gone, but the administration has not relinquished the idea behind either.

This topic might be expanded to the proportions of a campaign speech, but the point is that in changing the economic life of the nation it was also sought to still those forces that have made it great in the past. It sought to bring supply and demand into complete correlation at all times; it sought to tell those engaged in industry and agriculture how much they could produce or consume regardless of their own wishes in the matter; it sought to bring all down to the dead level of effort that is the controlling force in a collectivist society, and in doing so it fastened on the structure of democracy a vast bureaucracy, costly and dictatorial—in short, in the words of President Roosevelt the changes made have created a structure that in evil hands "would shackle the liberties of the people." That's why so many persons object to the new deal.

Plans For Book Are Considered

Dr. J. T. Anderson To Speak At High School Assembly This Thursday.

Beverly Strahan was in charge. The band under the direction of E. E. Melby played several pep songs and Coach Morris introduced the team.

Gene Howe wants to know if Mr. Roosevelt's insistence that Governor Lehman run for a third term means that Mr. Roosevelt is trying to popularize the third-term idea. Radio Programs Are Broadcast Results of the Literary Digest presidential election poll are broadcast Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at 6:15 p. m. Nashville at 650 kilocycles and Cincinnati at 700 kilocycles are stations carrying these.

William Hard, well known writer and commentator, speaks over the national network Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 6 o'clock. Yanikton at 550 kilocycles carries this program.

A western school announces the discontinuance of a practice of auctioning live stock in lieu of tuition. It will make an exception of a serviceable half-back on the hoof.—Boston Herald.

A lawsuit in Ohio revealed "pro" wrestling to be as crooked as ever. It is refreshing in this day of shifting standards to find some one holding fast to a lack of ideals.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Chief Tantaquidgeon, last survivor of the Mohican tribe, is in Boston. Seems that Unca pulled a fast one on James Fenimore Cooper and left descendants.—Boston Daily Globe.

Communism can't be considered profitable by Spain when it results in chasing Americans out of the country instead of collecting tips from them.—Washington Star.

What is so rare as a day in June? asked Lowell. Well, if you ask us, we'd say it is a national election campaign in which politicians on both sides didn't promise to remedy the plight of the poor farmer.—Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal.

Omaha Journal—Stockman: Realization of the severity of this year's wide-spread drought and of the possible consequences of crop failures and burned pastures has evidently led to precautions and preparations on the part of farmers that will in a great measure relieve the situation.

Further improvement in the feed situation resulted during the past week from additional rains and moderate temperatures and the gloomy picture of a month ago has changed to one of optimism," announces the Federal Livestock Feed agency in this week's bulletin. "Sowing of winter grains and the growth of such grain previously seeded progressed rapidly and trade reports indicate the largest winter wheat acreage ever sown is planned by Kansas and Oklahoma farmers. Sorghums, which were practically dormant during July and August, are now growing rapidly and will make a large amount of feed before frost. Pastures have shown a marked improvement and will furnish grazing in most areas for another month or six weeks and the increasing utilization of this green feed has resulted in a substantial reduction in the demand for hay and concentrates. Hay and other feeds are being offered more freely at present than at any time during recent weeks and, in the opinion of some experienced feed shippers, the peak of feed prices was reached just before the drought broke."

It appears to be just another instance in proof of the old adage that "fore-warned is forearmed." Farmers have saved all the feed they possibly could for winter use and Mother Nature has relented and favored the country with good rains and warm weather. The feed situation is still precarious but it is being better every day.

Butter Being Imported.
Omaha Journal—Stockman: Dairy interests are frankly alarmed at the increasing importations of butter from Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia. Prices have taken a tumble and further declines are expected if the deluge of foreign butter keeps up.

New York reports an offer of two million pounds of Siberian butter at 18 cents a pound. Latvian and Polish butter is offered at substantially the same figure. Some South African butter has arrived together with liberal importations from Denmark, Australia and New Zealand. Some of these importations have been due to the removal of customs restrictions under the provisions of the anti-dumping clause of the United States tariff act.

Naturally the dairymen are protesting to Washington as the domestic price of butter declines in the face of the heavy importation of foreign butter and the federal authorities are giving the matter a thorough looking into.

Senate or Woodshed?
York Republican: No one was surprised much when Senator Norris accepted a petition filing and entered the senatorial lists against two candidates named regularly by their parties. The senator has never been governed by the rules that obtain in the game of politics. He prefers to play a lone hand.

In this present campaign he has staked his personal popularity with the fading fortunes of the Roosevelt new deal. We shall know ten weeks hence which is the ruling force in the senatorial campaign. In view of what has already happened in other states it is quite likely the senatorial career of Nebraska's senior senator is approaching its finale. For champions of the new deal and candidates contemptuous of their party have not been faring so well of late with the electorate.

The political foes of Senator Norris, no matter how bitter their enmity, are compelled to admit that he has been a useful public servant and a member of the senate who has been blind and deaf to the blandishments intended to weaken the conscience of good men. Many of his fellow Nebraskans, while admitting his force and power, sincerely regret that he has not been able to work happily with others and by cooperative effort, rather than by lone workmanship, achieve an even greater success along the line of betterment of national government.

In the coming campaign a great many former loyal friends will be compelled to forsake the senator. They cannot go with him into the Roosevelt camp. They can't trade sturdy American policies for the experiments of the new deal. They will forsake him reluctantly but their decision will be none the less positive and irrevocable. He is making too crucial a test of his own political popularity. The outcome of the contest will hardly be to his liking unless at the bottom of his action is the expectation of political retirement.

Material sense expresses the belief that mind is in matter. This human belief, alternating between a sense of pleasure and pain, hope and fear, life and death, never reaches beyond the boundary of the mortal or the unreal." (page 298).

AROUND NORTHEAST NEBRASKA

Atkinson had an unusually large crowd at their free day last week. Business men were kept busy all day long making bun sandwiches which were given away to all visitors. Atkinson is one of the liveliest cities in the district and business men there are hopeful that some day new improvements will be made in that enterprising community.

People from every party of Boone county cooperated in making their fair successful and it bids again to be one of the leading county fairs of the state, a record which it had for years. On Thursday afternoon it was estimated that 10,000 people attended the fair and that same evening at least 15,000 people were on the grounds. Osborne Patterson, a pioneer of Boone county who attended the first fair 52 years ago and at that time won a seven dollar premium and turned it back for the second annual fair, was present last week. Among the other promoters were Frank Mansfield, Bert Mansfield, Maricle brothers and Ed Woodworth, who has been in charge of the baby show every year. He was in charge of one hundred babies this year which was the real attraction of the fair.

Letters are coming in now from farm loan associations indicating that many of the borrowers will be unable to pay the principal and the interest on their loans in the next twelve months, due to the drought. Many foreclosures are pending and delinquencies are increasing rapidly.

In the closing session of the last congress, an amendment was passed to extend the 3 1/2 percent interest rate to June 30, 1937, and providing that after that date the rate would revert to the original contract rate which in most cases will amount to 5 percent, 5 1/2 percent and even 5 3/4 percent. The farm group in congress is determined that the lower interest rate must be extended as long as these emergencies exist, and this perhaps will be one of the first pieces of legislation to be taken up in the first session of the seventy-fifth congress.

The Athletic club, which in reality is the Community club of Osmond, Neb., gave its annual colt show on September 22. One of the largest crowds that ever attended the Osmond celebration was present at this year's event.

People in Osmond missed the late Colonel Welch, who for 40 years was marshal of the day for the parade. Nearly 600 school children were represented in the parade. The colt show attracted unusual attention.

Mrs. Moore, who is 86 years old and blind, met many of her old friends in the crowd which packed the beautiful Osmond park.

Some pieces of winter wheat are coming up in fine shape in Dodge county, and also in Merrick and Nance counties. On Wednesday, September 23, a terrific wind was blowing on the way from Fremont to Scribner, and it was accompanied by considerable dust. Only the rain of recent days kept the dust from blowing. More rain is needed for the winter grain.

Some of the farmers are predicting an early frost—others predict a late frost. Those who say we will not have a frost for some time say that is because the cockleburrs are not yet ripe. They believe the frost will not come until these cockleburrs ripen. However, the tumbleweed is beginning to blow over the roads, and fall weather is general over the Third congressional district. Farmers are beginning to plan for the winter supply of meat.

Everbearing strawberries are said to be sweeter this year than they were last year. Some of these berries grown on the Glatfelter ranch in Merrick county are among the prize winners in the district this year.

People who drive between Fullerton and Central City are pointing with pride to a field of corn on the west side of the highway which is said to yield 45 bushels to the acre. This is one of the most unusual fields in the district because generally speaking, there is no corn to speak of in our district.

Up in the Devil's Nest, north of Bloomfield, Alfred Hahn will harvest 1,000 bushels of corn. Farmers agree that whatever corn there is will make unusually fine seed.

The consensus of opinion among farmers the district over is that they would be in fairly good shape, notwithstanding the drought, and the loss of the corn crop, would not be for the high taxes and indebtedness. Of course, the farmer with a hundred head of hogs on hand and no feed would be a heavy loser. But if he did not owe money, and if he did not have to pay a tremendous high interest rate, he could get through. Interest and taxes are what is hitting the farmer today according to this discussion among many farmers.

Many of the sales pavilions are doing a fairly good business. On Thursday and Friday nights the roads are well filled with trucks loaded with livestock for the following day's sales. The managers of the pavilions state that while many farmers are selling off livestock to balance their feed supply, the recent moisture has resulted in more spirited buying and selling. At some of the sales pavilions hay is being sold for from 80 to 85 cents per bale to those holding stock at the pavilion until sale is made.

One farmer who has lost his crop in the drought has undertaken to keep together a flock of 250 laying hens. Unless he received some assistance, he would be forced to sell the flock which, until another crop can be raised, appeared to be the source of living for himself and the family of four. He applied to the resettlement administration for an emergency loan with which to buy feed for the hens. He has been told that the resettlement administration deems it inadvisable for him to make any large investment in the flock of hens and that he will be better off to sell the flock down to not over three dozen of the best pullets.

Agricultural Notes. What about the 1937 seed corn situation? Agent Walter Moller says there are far sources of seed—old corn, ears from 1936 crop though they are "nubbin'" seed from irrigated areas and corn shipped in. Experiments show that corn stored up to five years still has good germination and yields well. Some ears of the 1936 crop have kernels that will germinate well. It is believed that corn from irrigated areas can also be used satisfactorily on uplands as far west as North Platte. Sources of shipped-in corn should be checked so as to get that having a smooth, dimple dent and kernels composed of hard, flinty starch rather than rough, deep-kerneled, soft-starchy ears.

It's been a hard year on trees and Agent Moller urges special care.

After the first killing frost the leaves fall or turn brown and a thorough soaking of the ground is of vital importance because plants with their roots in dry soil are very susceptible to winter injury, he said. Fall and early winter is an excellent time to replenish the depleted soil moisture supply and the deep penetration of moisture now will have a direct bearing on the thriftiness of the tree next summer. After growth is stopped, the trees need a thorough soaking. If fall rains are abundant, provision should be made for the moisture reaching the soil underneath the trees.

In water a large tree, foresters at the Nebraska college of agriculture ask people not to depend on surface sprinkling. Instead the job can be done thoroughly and efficiently by boring a series of 8 to 12 inch holes 3 to 4 feet into the ground under the outside edge of the crown and watering should be done through these. Keeping the holes filled for 8 hours twice a month will do more good than daily sprinkling.

Ernsion control work in Nebraska may prove helpful in restoring large numbers of valuable birds, according to H. L. Whitaker, in charge of wild life management for the soil conservation service in Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska. With thousands of acres of badly eroded cultivated land being returned to trees and grass, there is expected to be an increase in the number of quail, meadow larks and other ground feeding birds.

Annual field day is planned this Thursday at the college of agriculture in Lincoln. Nebraska farm poultry has already proved its dependability as a source of livelihood during drought and depression. Practical ways and means of making farm poultry flocks serve most usefully will be considered at Lincoln. The meeting continues until Saturday.

Recent rains and resulting growth of fall rye and wheat have increased production in the Nebraska Dairy Herd Improvement association. The August average was 25.1 pounds per cow. An increase is looked for this fall with improved feed conditions.

A Lincoln report states that statistics indicate that the number of sows that will farrow in the corn belt states this fall will be only 82 percent of the number that farrowed in the fall of 1935, and that only 29 percent as many will farrow in Nebraska. It is estimated that there will be a decrease in the corn belt of 18 percent and in Nebraska of 40 percent of the number of sows bred for spring litters.

Cold storage holdings of eggs are slightly less than a year ago and materially below the five year average. Receipts of fresh eggs at the terminal markets have decreased, according to a Lincoln report. The number of eggs that will be marketed in the middle west during the fall and early winter will undoubtedly be smaller than last year. This is due to the shortage of home grown feeds and the advance in the price of all poultry feeds which has caused a rapid marketing of hens and pullets.

Wayne County Calves Place Among The High Ten In Inter-State Show

Of the 65 baby beeves raised by Wayne county 4-H boys and girls, 38 were entered in the inter-state show in Sioux City last week...

Beeves were sold last Thursday with D. H. Cunningham as auctioneer. "The 4-H movement is the most worthwhile in the livestock industry," said Mr. Cunningham.

Professor And Dairyman Are Two Candidates

The Omaha World Herald of September 25 tells of legislative candidates for this district as follows:

The Sixteenth unicameral district includes Wayne, Stanton and Colfax counties. It will choose between a former professor and a dairyman.

The dairyman is Emil Brodecky of Howells, who served as democratic state senator in the 1933 and 1935 legislatures.

The former professor is J. G. W. Lewis, 60 of Wayne, who headed the department of history and political science at Wayne Teachers' College from 1910 to 1935.

He opposes new taxes, believing the first job is to get more efficiency out of present forms of taxation.

He favors rural electrification and is "friendly" to all legitimate demands of education.

Club Members Take Interest In 4-H Project

Lester Lutt and Champion Baby Beef

Wayne county 4-H club members were in their hey-day when they displayed their year's progress to parents and friends at a fair supervised by Walter Moller, county agent, and his able assistant, Mrs. Anne Walters.

Perhaps one of the proudest members of the club was Lester Lutt, high school freshman and son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lutt, whose calf was judged the grand champion. Lester bought "Billie," the champion Hereford, in November last year.

Lester's older brother was in 4-H work for eight years and is now leader of the division to which Lester belongs. He likes the work fine and plans to continue in it.

Another boy in the same division as that of Lester, is Leland Herman. Two of his calves placed in the exhibit at Wayne and also placed in Sioux City where they were sold.

The club members also take a great deal of pride in the appearance of their animals. Lester's champion Hereford was very clean and the hair was evenly curled.

The girls also have household interests in connection with their 4-H work as sewing and cooking group are organized. Twila Herman was also a winner in this division. The girls learn to make dresses and other garments.

Arlos Back, a senior at Wayne high school, is interested in the cooking division of the club. Her mother, Mrs. Will Back, is the leader of their group. Girls learn to make cakes, cheese dishes and to plan and serve meals. Their group also had two booths at the fair and one of them placed third.

Many Are Guests Of Wayne Women

Address By Rev. F. C. Mills Is Featured In Program For Many Guests

"Home architecture, modern equipment, beautification of house and grounds, the science of home-making are all important, tremendously important, but not self-sufficient something remains to be said concerning the people who live in these homes," began Rev. F. C. Mills in addressing Wayne Woman's club and guests Friday at Wayne auditorium on the subject of "Home Responsibility for Desirable Citizenship."

"What the Scripture speaks of as the abundant life must include the spiritual and human factors as well as the material and the concrete."

"We have too much abdicated the opportunity and duty of the home in favor of the school and church to say nothing of all too probable counter-training of the street, etc. We must return to the home emphasis. The school and the church, valuable and important as they are, are coming to see that most of our problems are home problems."

In approaching the suggestions to parents Rev. Mills urged the women to ask themselves these questions: "What is my emphasis? What is my example? What is my teaching?"

Fundamental virtues which are indispensable to desirable citizenship are truth-telling, honesty, charity, kindness, loyalty, brotherly love and sincerity.

Respect for environment and for law and order, a constructive understanding plus devoted stamina, are necessary. Rev. Mills added.

To maintain and develop democracy is essential. "Let the home be a miniature democracy—each child a separate individual—equality of the sexes—allowance of individual judgment and initiative."

An ideal sex life with understanding, sympathy, scientific detachment, high ideals of purity and comradeship, is best. Rev. Mills added. "Without proper preparation for marriage and parenthood we are walking in a blind alley."

The changing social order, from individualistic to collective, must be considered. The parental attitude should be courageous and constructive, thoughtful and venturesome.

Other numbers on program. Mrs. F. I. Mpses read a paper on "Present Changes Affecting Farm Homes," and Mrs. Willis Noakes had one on "Adequate Insurance for the Family."

Conclude Hearing In Bank Action

The action in which the state banking department is seeking to recover $17,500 from stockholders of the closed Carroll State bank was taken under advisement last Thursday evening by District Judge C. H. Stewart after testimony had been taken for four days.

The state department charges that a dividend of this amount, paid in March, 1931, was not legal. Plaintiffs have 30 days to file a brief and defendants have 30 thereafter to file reply briefs. Decision in the case will be given after that time.

Quantities of Food Necessary To Feed Hungry College Students

Behind the scenes with the cafeteria managers at the Wayne State Teachers college provides one with insight into the daily lives of these busy people. Planning and buying the food for 260 lunches and over 200 dinners for hungry students is the duty of Mrs. Lillian Miller, supervisor. She is also in charge of the twenty-six student assistants who help with the serving, dish-washing and cleaning.

Two men who have seen many students come and go, are the colored cooks who have been with the college for a number of years. Albert Johnson is the pastry cook and Wilson Pyle, the chef. Mr. Johnson's pastry kitchen is spotlessly clean and his white uniform is always immaculate. Five pie pans which hold six pies each are filled daily, and often as many as 75 pies are baked in one day. Each pie cuts six pieces. Besides pies, the pastry cook bakes puddings, rolls and cakes. He usually bakes three large cakes which cut between 60 and 70 pieces each. Students are also treated to fresh rolls every day. Three gallons of dough are necessary to bake the 20 to 25 dozen rolls required by the hungry students.

Mr. Pyle prepares the meats and vegetables. His kitchen is just as spotless as that of Mr. Johnson. He has an enormous range with two ovens, a slicer, two large tubs for washing the dishes and other conveniences which are necessary for cooking for so many students. A washing machine is also provided for washing of the towels.

Quantities of food are necessary for so many meals. Between 20 to 25 gallons of milk are used daily, three and one-half bushels of potatoes are consumed each day, and one-half a beef is used per week along with several hams, twenty-five pounds of wieners, veal, fresh pork and bacon. The dishwashing and scraping table is approximately 10 feet long. All of the dishes are scraped here when they come from the dining room and then placed in wooden trays which, in turn, are placed in the dish-washer. The water is scalding and every dish is washed as carefully and as sparsely as if it were done in a private home.

The ice boxes are also cleaned thoroughly and are very sanitary. The temperature is kept at 38 degrees in all of the compartments. The fruit box is approximately ten by five feet, the meat compartment, five by five. "The larder is not allowed to get down as low as it gets in your home," remarked Mrs. Miller. Supplies are purchased in very large quantities and kept in the refrigerators for use.

Mrs. Miller budgets her buying according to the amount of sales from the dining room. She finds that more meals are served during the summer than winter as fewer students work for their meals during the summer months.

"Students on the whole are not hard to please, but they demand good wholesome food," remarked the supervisor. One thing which she found odd was that the summer students were not so fond of watermelon as the students this fall, although the melons were much more expensive this summer. Different groups like different things and one must accustom oneself to these variances of taste. Two things which every group of students likes both summer and winter are hot soups and ice cream.

Mrs. Miller likes the cafeteria plan for a college as it gives students the opportunity of inviting friends and parents to meals with them without making advance reservations.
