Eph. Cunningham, Auctioneer and Editor, Passes At Ashton Home.

Eph. Cunningham, well known auctioneer in Wayne many years and owner of the Wayne Republican-Herald for a few years, died Friday afternoon at his home at Ashton, Idaho, at the age of about 85 years. He had been failing the past year but his last illness was short. Funeral rites were conducted Monday afternoon at Ashton and burial was in that city. D. H. Cunningham of Sioux City, formerly of Wayne, took a plane from Omaha Friday after he received word of his father's illness but he was unable to arrive there until Saturday morning.

Mr. Cunningham came to Wayne from Iowa in 1892. He engaged in the auctioneer business for a number of years and was well known in northeast Nebraska. He established the Wayne Republican and later bought the Herald, consolidating the two papers as the Wayne Herald. He sold the paper in about 1906.

Mr. Cunningham was born in Millington, Pa. In his youth he came to Gilman, Iowa, and there married Miss Jennie Horton. Two children were born to the Cunninghams, Mrs. Mae Hudson of Roberts, Mont., and D. H. Cunningham of Sioux City. Mrs. Cunningham died in Wayne May 4, 1914. Given Sentence In Winside Case

Preliminary Hearing Is Held In County Court For Three Men.

Lewis H. Collins who October 1 completed serving time on a Dixon county charge, was taken to Lincoln Sunday by Sheriff J. H. Pile to begin a three-year term for robbery of the Herman Flier store at Winside November 3, 1933. In county court Saturday Collins pleaded guilty and waived preliminary hearing. Bond was fixed at $5,000. He was taken by Sheriff Hile and County Attorney Burr R. Davis to Stanton Saturday afternoon when he pleaded guilty before District Judge Clinton Chase who sentenced him to serve three years.

James Gallagher who was an accomplice with Collins in the Winside robbery was sentenced September 17 to three years which he is now serving. Eugene Kinkaid, who had been in the reformatory on a Dixon county charge, was brought to Wayne last week to face a check charge. The action charges that on December 3, 1935, Kinkaid gave a $21 check to B. L. Stark after buying a cap and gloves and took $18.75 in cash. Kinkaid confessed that he had forged the signature. At preliminary hearing in county court he entered a plea of guilty and was bound over to the district court with bond fixed at $5,000. He was taken before District Judge Chase Saturday and given one year. He was paroled to his father and sentence suspended during good behavior.

Gaylord Burton pleaded guilty on a check charge in county court Saturday and was bound over to district court with bail fixed at $2,000. As he was unable to furnish this he was lodged in jail until he is taken before the district judge. Last Saturday Burton cashed at Kirkman's drug store a check for $8.64 made payable to Elmer Wright and signed by Swift & Co., Produce Department, Sioux City, Iowa. The check was endorsed with the names of Elmer Wright and Clair Ross.

CHILL OF AUTUMN CHANGES FOLIAGE INTO GRAND HUES

AUTUMN'S leaf-tinting marvel has begun. Tenderest tree draperies have been given gradually changing hues by sharp appearance of gold, purple, grey and brown among the leaves. Forebodings approach of biting frost. Mounding grandeur of the foliage, as icy touches spread rich colorings, heightens appreciation on the eve of destruction when the tree's garb becomes the landscape's carpet. Leaves that stood pavages of blistering drought must soon yield to frost and dissolve into the earth. Blotting foliage, with subsequent death after a brief season is just another mystery. It comes in the glory of springtime, is subject to the vicissitudes of summer, and then, after a brief season, rising to a peak of beauty, suddenly collapses in the grip of unrelenting winter. Tinting foliage hints of passing time, of nature's respite from growth, the coming of another year, with new plans and renewed hopes.

BOUND OVER TO DISTRICT COURT

Arthur T. Cavanaugh Waives Preliminary Hearing And Bond Is Furnished.

Arthur T. Cavanaugh, school treasurer, charged with converting to his own use $3,432.85 belonging to Wayne city school district, waived preliminary hearing in Wayne county court Friday evening and was bound over to district court by Judge J. M. Chery with bond fixed at $5,000 furnished by his mother, Mrs. Grace Cavanaugh.

Cavanaugh left Wayne September 7 after an audit revealed shortage in the city school fund. A former Wayne resident recognized him in Long Beach and September 20 notified officers who held him in custody until Sheriff J. H. Pile and County Attorney Burr R. Davis, who left for the west September 22, arrived there. The three started back from California Monday last week and were delayed somewhat by snow in the mountains and by rain in the southern states.

The case against Cavanaugh is expected to be tried before a jury in the district court the last of October, so the Herald is informed; Fred S. Berry is attorney for Cavanaugh.

Make Settlement In Damage Action

Ewald Klein Of Wakefield Receives Payment For Loss Of Cattle.

Damage action in Wayne county court, filed by Ewald Klein against B. C. Tibke of Omaha, for loss of cattle was settled out of court this week for $300.

Klein, who lives a mile north and two east of Wakefield, on highways No. 9 and 35, charged that August 31, 1936, he was driving his cattle to pasture on the south side of the road from the milking barns on the north side about 7 in the evening when Tibke came from the west at high rate of speed, his car killing one cow and injuring two others so as to destroy their value. Mr. Klein alleged that the view was clear and that it was light so that Tibke could easily see the herd. He also charges that Tibke failed to reduce his car speed. Plaintiff asked $100 for each of the purebred cows.

An insurance company representing the defendant settled the matter and paid Klein for his loss.

Institute Held In This County

Wayne County Teachers Are Given Inspiration and Valuable Training.

The magic and the mystery of the Missouri river, the meaning and inspiration of highways across the state of Nebraska, the struggle for freedom and brotherhood, early homestead hopes of the homeless, progressive political policy, memories of the great wars between the Indians and whites with establishment of peace, inspiration of tree planting which comes from Arbor day, meeting the deficient rainfall problem with dry farming, discoveries of pre-historic villages and stories of heroism bring a thrill to every Nebraskan. Boys and girls of Nebraska schools should have the privilege of this inspiration, according to Adalson E. Sheldon of Lincoln, superintendent of the State Historical society, who addressed Wayne county rural teachers at their institute in Wayne Tuesday.

Dr. C. E. Condra, dean of conservation and soil survey at Lincoln university, also spoke Tuesday. He urged that teachers know and teach about the soil, creeks, etc., of their own county, also relation to other places.

Newton Gains, extension specialist from Lincoln, gave four addresses, urging that teachers fit into their communities and that they be an influence for good. He also stressed character development among children.

PEOPLE ENTITLED TO KNOWLEDGE OF PUBLIC BUSINESS

THE Omaha World-Herald's refusal to permit examination of WPA records suggests late American tendencies—tendencies toward dictatorship. In still free America every citizen is entitled to know the details of public business. It is the privilege of every citizen to know the purpose for which his money is spent. Most public bodies are required to publish their proceedings, including cash receipts and payments. School boards are exceptions. Their records are open to the public, but the law does not require them to publish their proceedings. Why legislators have failed to compel school authorities to publish their proceedings, no one seems to know. School business is quite as important as city or county business, and there would seem no conceivable reason why its affairs should not be treated likewise. It is hoped the next legislature's reform spirit will lead it to do a few things in connection with school management—make compulsory the publication of receipts and expenditures and require an audit of accounts at regular intervals. Then fifty or more years would not be permitted to pass without an audit.

Need Applications For WPA Projects

Water Conservation Is Aim In Building Dams In Creek Beds.

WPA officials in Wayne county are in need of applications for building of dams for water conservation. W. P. Canning reports that of 50 applications none have as yet qualified. WPA labor is provided for the work and the aim is to locate these near home of men who need work, especially in the west part of the county.

WPA officials explain that the object is to retain waterfall in the neighborhood in which it occurs. This may be partly accomplished by earth dams to store water which would otherwise run off.

A dam may either be in a flowing creek or a dry creek bed. The site should be such that a dam 14 or 16 feet high would provide a pond area of two or more acres. Drainage area of the water should be not less than 60 acres nor more than 1,000 acres.

The dam is made of earth, 10 feet across the top, two to one slope on the downstream side and three to one on upstream side. Spillway should be large enough so that during flood conditions the water will not flow over the top of the dam. The dam is to contain a puddled clay core about four feet wide and extending from the high water line down to the solid ground under the dam. The core prevents seepage of water. The owner is to furnish all the necessary material and water to provide enough dampness to the earth fill so that the proper compaction may be obtained. The owner and mortgagee must sign an easement which will permit a right-of-way to the pond and free use of the water when the county board declares by resolution that an extreme drought condition exists.

WPA will furnish engineers to survey and lay out the dams, also labor and team hire. Those interested in a dam are asked to see the WPA office at the court house. Wayne Legton is still considering a lake site but as yet none has been found. WPA projects under way in the county are road improvements.

Rules fixed by the state high school athletics association determine eligibility of students to play football. Wayne high school follows these rules which provides that a player is not eligible if he is 20 years of age, if he has transferred from any high school without the parents' changing residence to the new school district, if he participates under an assumed name, if he has been a member of any college; squad or participated in the training thereof, if he has earned sufficient credits to graduate, if he is not doing passing work in at least three subjects, if he does not have credit on the school records for 15 hours for the immediate preceding semester, if he has not been enrolled the first two weeks of the semester in which he plays and if he has attended school eight semesters in high school.

Who's Records?

Omaha World-Herald: High in the list of liberties cherished by the American people and fostered by the American way of government should be written, "freedom of the records."

The phrase means that, in this country, the people have the right to examine at will all records of public business (excepting only information or records which might be of comfort to a foreign enemy.)

It means that, in Omaha, any citizen has a right to go to the city hall and examine any document in the building. He can, if he has a taste for the macabre, go to the courthouse and inspect the sorry statistics of the deficit department. He can go to the state capitol and check every payroll, audit every financial account.

Freedom of the records is a symbol of the American attitude toward government. The people are the boss. The man behind the mahogany desk in the courthouse or the national capitol works for them. They have the right to peek into his cash register at any time. If columns don't add up, they have the right to fire, and possibly imprisonment, the unfaithful employee.

In countries where the government is the master and the people the servants, there is no freedom of records. No countryman who loved life would be bold enough to ask to look at the books of Hitler, Stalin or Mussolini.

Americans maintain the right to look over the shoulders of their politicians. Dictators maintain the right to look over the shoulders of the private citizens.

It now becomes necessary to note a significant violation of American freedom of the records.

Two months ago The World-Herald received rumors of unethical goings-on in the works progress administration of Pottawattamie county. This newspaper undertook to investigate (as it does with many rumors, most of which prove false).

It found that, contrary to American precedent, the WPA would not permit examination of its pay roll and other records.

Reluctant to believe that local WPA officials were carrying out the considered policy of the national government, The World-Herald wired and wrote to higher officials, including Harry L. Hopkins.

It was finally told in almost so many words (the entire correspondence was printed in last Sunday's World-Herald) that WPA would not open its records to a newspaper or any private investigating agency.

"The only investigation we will tolerate," it said in substance, "is a WPA investigation of itself, by itself."

Thus the chief spending agency of the new deal denied that the people have any proprietary interest in its activities. "You are not my boss," it said. "My records are not your records. I am independent, responsible only to myself."

A dictator, answering the same inquiry, would have been less courteous, more abrupt. But what he said would have meant the same thing.

The World-Herald's rebuff was not an isolated incident. Refusal of WPA to permit examination of its records and administrative payrolls is becoming a national scandal.

Governor Landon put the case fairly when he said in Iowa: "The present administration has pointedly resisted every effort to make public the pay rolls of those who conduct relief agencies.

"Not only would all of us like to know, but we are entitled to know, the names of all the directors, the supervisors, the administrators, the straw bosses, and the salaries they draw.

"If the administration were sincere in its approach to the relief problem, there would be no need for this demand. If it were honest with the people who, through hidden taxes, must pay the incredible bills, there would be none of this secrecy."

The kindest interpretation of the action of the WPA officials is that they are politically fearful, that they do not want to provide the enemy with ammunition.

They should remember, if they are patriotic citizens, that the republic will live long after the animosities of 1936 have been forgotten; that a free government cannot endure unless the people maintain the unchallengeable right to examine the acts of their employees.

Senator Norris SENATOR Geo. W. Norris who is against party organizations and especially against the republican party which he conveniently used to get into office for many years, probably gave the least logical and convincing speech of his career in Wayne Saturday evening. This evidently was due to lack of sound footing. His ability, flanked by long experience, was manifestly unequal to the task of covering inconsistencies.

Deifying the president was done with tactful omission of things the public has not forgotten—notably, refusal to cooperate with Hoover ahead of March 4, 1933, the subsequent program of broken platform and pre-election pledges, the NRA nightmare, the slaughter of millions of pigs and bred sows, the plowing up of cotton and substitution of corn in the south in competition with the major crop of the north, reducing crop production in some sections while building expensive irrigation systems in other sections, attempting compulsory potato control, often wasting federal funds on useless government projects and piling up a burden of public debt of unprecedented proportions. The senator overlooked these serious slips in judgment as he tried to glorify the president as little short of a special gift from heaven.

In the line of federal obligations, the senator pointed out that the huge depression cost would not be felt by people of comparatively small incomes, whereas the war debt is a staggering blow to every taxpayer no matter how insignificant might be his capacity to earn and pay. This inconsistency, sharply apparent to his audience, disarmed—perhaps inadvertently—with President Roosevelt who emphasized especially in his 1932 campaigning—that the tax load, regardless of its purpose, lashed every taxpayer whether he paid much or little.

The senator's critical reference to utility companies showed him in usual form. In nationalizing industries, the senator would substitute government monopoly for private enterprise, and then, if he succeeded, he would find an insuperable task ahead to combat government monopoly. The plan that fits into American tradition is to regulate all trusts and make them serve the public at reasonable cost. Ample laws have been provided to effect such purpose. All needed is their enforcement. As an independent candidate for the United States senate in opposition to two regularly chosen nominees of the primary of which the senator was an early supporter, Senator Norris is now, in the evening of life, responding to the wishes of the president who evidently likes the Nebraska indifference to the constitution—likes his support of more centralization in Washington, more government planning and control. The senator has sometimes done well as a minority force. It he had a majority with him, he would lead where the power of the state crushes initiative and individualism—qualities that have given momentum, achievement and greatness to this country. Voters should mercifully help the senator carry out his hitherto expressed wish to retire.

One Of The Family LATELY members of the president's family have seemed carefully kept out of the foreground—no doubt for duration of the campaign—doubtless the result of the clever strategy of New Deal managers. Keeping them in leash must be a task, the size of which only those in charge could tell.

But without consent of the New Deal management, son Elliott has been suddenly projected into the limelight by the senate munitions committee in an affidavit charging him with participation in a contract to sell military airplanes to Russia. The contract which was not carried out, is said to have involved a commission of a million dollars, half of the amount for Elliott. Elliott is quoted as denying some of the obviously distasteful implications in the report. Later pros and cons touching the matter will determine the length of time Elliott will need to be out in front. If this member of the family cannot be captured and returned to the background, it will not be the fault of Chairman Jim Farley. He will doubtless do his best. The ones responsible for the revelations could not wish to keep Elliott near the footlights longer than necessary to inform the public.

Anyway, restraining members of the White House family will not last much longer. On the night of November 3 they will be at liberty to parade in front of the grandstand—either in triumph or defeat—and neither extremity will keep them from parading.

Stretching Credit GARET Garrett treats the subject of credit in an article in the Saturday Evening Post, pointing out the dangers involved in destroying credit through impairment of the monetary system. He concludes with this reference to meeting costs with printing press money in Russia: "The printing press was employed by the Russian Communists only for a revolutionary purpose. The idea that the proletariat was going to live without money, everything free, turned out to be absurd. The Soviet Government embraced state capitalism. It set up its own system of credit, money and banking. At the head of the system is the State Bank, with six satellite banks, called Industrial Bank, the Electrical Bank, the Central Agricultural Bank, the Bank of Foreign Trade, the Central Community Bank and the Cooperative Bank—anyone who says the Soviet Government's credit is not sound or who meddles with the stability of its money is likely to be shot."

Insidious New Deal propaganda sent out to teachers of the country in the hope of discrediting Governor Landon's attitude toward education is fully answered by the record. The facts show that while the governor has no authority over the schools, he had spoken before and since becoming a candidate for president in support of a strong educational system. The record shows that Kansas effected consolidation among rural schools having one to five pupils—thus, strengthening rather than weakening the state's schools. Kansas is the rival of a few other mid-western states in lowest percentage of illiteracy—a fact which disproves the New Deal assumption that our southern neighbor is a backward, hick state. Kansas takes high rank not only in education, but in all ways that indicate sound, enlightened, progressive American citizenship. The tinselled aristocracy of the New Deal's down-east branch could learn much in examples of truth and sincerity by imbibing the spirit of Kansas—a typical "prairie state."

"Shall we maintain in substance as well as in form the American scheme of government?" asked Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, in the course of an address urging the election of Governor Landon. The question stressed by Lowden is the biggest issue in the campaign. We can in time overcome the wild waste of the past few years, but a swing too far in the direction of Stalin and Moscow could make us the helpless victims of autocratic power.

Copies of the school audit have been delivered, one into the hands of the school board. The school secretary says the audit copy may be seen by anyone applying for permission to a member of the board. The Herald will endeavor soon to review the audit under proper surveillance and publish any facts that may be deemed of public interest.

The New Deal attributes much unemployment to the drouth, but slyly disregards the drouth as an influence in raising prices. If the drouth could think and feel, it would be mad at the New Deal because of its presumption as a rival in regulating crops and fixing prices.

After 150 Years. The late President Coolidge said, in a Fourth of July address in Philadelphia: "Whatever may have been the impression created by the news which went out from this city on that summer day in 1776, there can be no doubt as to the estimate which is now placed on it. At the end of 150 years, the four corners of the earth unite in coming to Philadelphia as to a holy shrine, in grateful acknowledgment of a service so great, which a few inspired men here rendered to humanity, that it is still the preeminent support of free government throughout the world..."

"Amid all the clash of conflicting interests, amid all the welter of partisan politics, every American can turn for solace and consolation to the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States with the assurance and confidence that these two great charters of freedom and justice remain firm and unshaken. Whatever perils appear, whatever danger threatens, the nation remains secure in the knowledge that the ultimate application of the law of the land will provide an adequate defense and protection... If there is any one thing among us that is established beyond question, it is self-government—the right of the people to rule. If there is any failure in respect to any of these principles, it is because there is a failure on the part of individuals to observe them."

Publish The Taxes. Sam McKelvie's Issue: Attorney General Cummings caused it to be known to the public that under a wartime measure never enforced but still on the statute books, it was an offense punishable by a fine of $1,000 to publish the amount of direct or indirect taxes attached to any article on sale. Mr. Cummings' outburst was prompted by retailers who have been justifying their higher prices by indicating to the purchaser on the price tag just how much of the sale price is represented in taxes. That would be a sore point with the New Deal for never has any administration at any time been so guilty of imposing indirect taxes upon the public.

It should be the law not only in the nation but in every state that whenever the amount of taxes on a specific article is or can be known, that amount should be published as a part of the sale price of the article. In Nebraska we have a law exactly to the contrary; that is, with reference to gasoline tax, but it is a bad law and should be repealed. The more the people can be told about the amount of taxes that is being passed on to them in the things they buy every day the sooner we will get at the net of economy in government.

DIFFICULTIES. In these days when the popular cry to relieve distress purposely or thoughtlessly includes removal of all difficulties, we are led to turn to the philosophy of Dr. L. P. Jacks of Manchester college, Oxford, Dr. Jacks says the alleviation of suffering is always commendable, whereas sweeping aside difficulties destroys incentives and does more harm than good. Suggested by Jacks' reasoning, man is given certain equipment for use in meeting hazards, overcoming difficulties and attaining the hitherto unattainable. If a portion of society makes useless and keeps undeveloped inherited faculties by clearing away all obstacles from another portion, the latter suffers permanent injury. It is manifestly not in the eternal plan to have a life of undisturbed ease. Perhaps hardships are necessary to strengthen and burnish the soul. Anyway, here is one point in Dr. Jacks' discussion: "Our preoccupation with the relief of distress which, by itself, is much to our credit, has become so absorbing that the need of providing the incentives aforesaid has almost ceased to have a place in the outlook of the social reformer. Yet without the incentives to the lacking of difficulty all attempts to relieve human misery, on the social scale, admirably motivated though they be, will come to grief."

TEN POINTS. William Hard, commentator who is heard nightly over the radio, recently emphasized the need of both idealism and common sense—the former to shape high purposes and the latter to fashion workable economics. One uplifts; the other sustains. For practical, sound recovery Mr. Hard suggests ten points which we will epitomize as follows: Free business from the president's power to change the dollar. Give business financial certainty. Free business from destructive taxes which prevent new enterprises which create new jobs. Free business from penalizing taxes which prevent saving money to put into new expansions for making new jobs. Free business from the danger of inflation. Free business from incessant political attacks on the machine process which has given us our progress. Free business from the atmosphere of alarm and hesitation. Begin to discriminate. Punish crooked business. Stop smearing all business. Free business from governmental competition. Stop suicidal subsidizing of public enterprises against private enterprises within the same industry. Free business from the threat of a revived NRA. Keep business competitive. Free business from agricultural policies which hurt both the farmer and the business man by reducing the volume of output. Reduced output reduces labor needs and thus government contributes to unemployment. Free business from private as well as public monopolistic controls. Mr. Hard insists that his ten points are consistent with social justice, and that one does not have to abandon idealism in order to have and exercise common sense.

Borah's Niece in Landon Ranks

Arrive From Trip To Michigan City

Dr. and Mrs. G. J. Hess arrived home Monday evening from Bay City, Mich., where they went to see the former's sister, Mrs. Mary Schatzlin, who died a day after they arrived. Funeral rites were at the home of Mrs. Chas. Mayne, daughter of deceased, in Detroit. Dr. and Mrs. Hess and Mrs. Hugh Drake and Hugh, Jr., the last two of Lincoln, spent most of two weeks in Bay City with Dr. Hess' sister, Mrs. E. W. Funnell, who was here two years ago. They also visited in Sebawa, Mich. Conditions in Michigan are the best of any state visited and much building is going on in and near Bay City. People there predict Michigan will go republican in the election. On their return the party called at Streator, Ill., on Mrs. Donald Williams, formerly Miss Beryl McClure. They arrived in Lincoln Sunday. Miss Anna Young who went from here to stay with Jean Drake at Lincoln, returned with Dr. and Mrs. Hess.

This is the only solely touring organization in the world, resembling the strolling players of old.

"Safeguarding Democracy." Omaha World-Herald: If you believe—

That the safe path of escape from communism and fascism is toward state collectivism—

That the way to save free enterprise is to arouse the people to hate and fear it—

That the way to strengthen liberty is to create instruments of power that can be used to shackle it—

That freedom thrives on bureaucratic regimentation of the lives and activities of the citizens—

That democracy is forwarded by an aggrandizement of federal power under executive domination—

That "our industrial plant is built" and that what now is required is a planned economy under which government shall control its management and operation—

That the way to overcome error is to compromise with it on a 50-50 basis—

Then you can agree with Mr. Roosevelt that under his leadership we fare making great strides in the safeguarding of democracy and that the president himself is at once our truest conservative and our wisest liberal.

In Pope's "Essay on Man" it is written:

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien, As to be hated needs but to be seen;

Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face, We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

Those who see clearly the worldwide drift toward collectivism, who recognize it as a menace to human freedom and dignity, who regard it as a monster of frightful mien, find it hard to reconcile themselves to a method of combating it that depends upon compromise, concession and tolerant acceptance.

They know that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. They have learned from history and experience how edgy is the descent to Avernus. They are reminded of the warning about the tent and the camel's head. And they believe that the one way to meet this danger is to fight it on all fronts.

Other great and enlightened people have tolerated, compromised—and lost.

There are millions of Americans who love kindness as Mr. Roosevelt does; are devoted to justice and square dealing; are as patriotic as himself, who do not want to see the United States of America continue trustfully and with excellent intentions to follow the same course.

Wakefield Team Wins Close Game
Last Friday the Wakefield high Trojans conquered the team that for the past three years has seemed to be their jinx when they defeated Pender high school by the score of 25 to 0.

The game was more evenly played and the two teams were better matched than the score would indicate. The Wakefield team again showed power especially during the first half. The blocking was especially good as time and again the ball carriers went through openings with two and three men ahead of them. Pender proved they had a very strong line. Most of the Pender yardage was made on power plays straight through the center of the line.

Offensively for the Trojans, Carl Benson again turned in a dandy job of running interference. Nuernberger proved to be the best ball lugger. He intercepted a pass and ran 60 yards for the longest run of the game. Wakefield later scored their third touchdown as a result. He also scored on a 30-yard run from scrimmage and plunged twice for touchdowns from the one yard line and seven yard line. Wakefield's last touchdown came on a beautifully executed pass from Bud Paul to Allen Keagle. Pass and run were good for 40 yards. On the defense Bob Johnson and Bud Killion were outstanding. Both boys broke through the strong Pender line to spill the ball carrier for losses several times.

The line-up at the start of the game was:

|-------------|-------------|
| RE | Yehings |
| Stipp | Bourks |
| Benson | Fuhrman |
| Killion | C |
| A. Johnson | Wentke |

| Nuernberger | Blus |

First downs, Wakefield 10, Pender 4; passes completed, Wakefield 2, Pender 2; passes incomplete, Wakefield 3, Pender 4; passes intercepted, Wakefield 1, Pender 1; penalties, Wakefield 25 yards, Pender 25 yards; fumbles, Wakefield 3, Pender 1; tumblers recovered, Wakefield 4, Pender 0.

Next Friday the Trojans go to Wisner for their third game of the season. Last year Wakefield won from Wisner by the score of 6 to 0.

The Golden text: "Beast the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh unto God, and he will draw nigh unto you."

A passage from the Bible in the lesson-sermon is from John 2:13: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. . . All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "Sin, sickness, and death are comprised in human material belief, and belong not to the divine Mind. They are without real origin or existence. They have neither Principle or permanence, but belong with all that is material and temporal, to the nothingness of error, which simulates the creations of Truth." (page 286-7.)

Senator Speaks Here Saturday

George W. Norris Commends New Deal Legislation In Address.

"Partisanship is the one greatest evil of government," began Senator George W. Norris of McCook, in an address at Wayne auditorium Saturday evening. "Partisanship causes men to lose their reason, to be led astray, to do things they would not do under ordinary circumstances. Putting party above country causes an official to lose his ability to help the people and the nation. Let us try to put country above party," the speaker urged. "Let officials and individuals be moved solely by that their consciences tell them is right. Their many controversies will disappear. All should criticize but should do so constructively." Mr. Norris urged that voters consider the success of the government and the welfare of the people when casting their ballots. "This presidential campaign, state the speaker, is more than a partisan controversy. It is a question of economy, upright living and the future happiness of the entire country."

The senator expressed belief that this country was on the verge of panic and revolution because of bank failures. The depository insurance act placed federal support back of financial institutions and prevented losses. The New Deal was commended for passing the revenue bill which taxes undistributed dividends of corporations. The senator also explained the holding company bill which places extra taxes on pyramid corporations. A law prohibiting corporations to issue bonds and securities without government supervision has been enacted. The social securities act with its pension and other provisions is, the senator believes, a step in the right direction and that it will change and amend. Rural electrification which will carry power into light to farm homes wherever practical is another of the measures commended by Senator Norris.

President Roosevelt is charged with extravagance, the speaker continued. "Yes, the depression and drought have cost money." The senator feels that Roosevelt has tried to help humanity. "It would have been a crime if he hadn't unbalanced the budget." With an increasing national income, explained the speaker, government income will naturally increase and care for the burden.

The president has made mistakes. The vast machinery has weaknesses, admitted the senator. Efforts are being made to remove ignorance and corruption, and the government is endeavoring to help humanity, concluded the senator in speaking of the administration.

Senator Norris explained that he is a candidate for reelection by petition. "I promise to try to do my duty," he began. Senator Norris told that he is the only man now in the senate who voted against this country's entrance in the world war. "And the war left only vacant chairs, mountains of debts and repudiation by nations we helped."

Dr. Walter Benthack, chairman of the county democratic central committee, presided Saturday. He introduced Wm. O'Gara of Laurel, speaker of the house at Lincoln, J. J. McCarthy of Poplar, former congressman, and John Havesok of Hooper, candidate for congress. Dr. J. C. W. Lewis spoke of Senator Norris' record and introduced him as one of Nebraska's two nationally known statesmen, the other being the late Wm. Jennings Bryan.

Wayne Municipal band furnished a half hour of music before the program.

Advisory System Used In School

The advisory system in Wayne city school is designed to give to each student the personal help and counsel of a particular member of the faculty. In order to realize the finest benefits of this relationship, advisers and students must "carry on" together in the spirit of friendship. The adviser will always be on guard for each member of his group and each member of the group will always be loyal to advisers and comrades. And each student will do well to bring his parents into this inner circle of success and happiness. Faithfulness to opportunity and advisory will insure good grades in school and what is even more important, good friends throughout life.

Ribbons, Laces and Flounces Typical Styles of Gay '90's

With the Woman's club planning a fall fashion show of early period styles, one's attention is turned to costumes and entertainment of the 1880's and '90's, when "Grandma was a girl."

Yards and yards of lace and ribbon are typical of the early dresses. One local woman describes one of her most prized dresses as having 20 yards of "beautiful black material." It was made with large leg-o-mutton sleeves which were tight at the wrists. The waist was a close-fitting basque, pointed in the front and back, and the dress was lined with pink and covered with pin-tucked taffeta which in turn was covered with lace. Heavy black trimming outlined the V-neckline. The basque, which was made in many pieces, had a whalebone stay at each seam. The dress also had a very full long skirt.

Another local woman describes her wedding dress, back in 1901 as being from white India linen and trimmed with quantities of lace insertions. The long skirt was edged with two ruffles. The skirt was gored and made very full in the back. With this dress, she wore black hose and high black shoes. White shoes were an unheard of thing in the early 1900's.

What is commonly called a "going away" dress today, was called a "church dress" when this local woman was married. For a "church dress" she wore a gray wool which was lined with cambric. The bottom of the dress was lined with velvet so the wool wouldn't scratch her shoes.

"The materials at that time were very good," remarked Mrs. Mary Brittain, who vividly recalls the earlier days. Bustles, small hoops, full skirts, tight waists were characteristic of these early period costumes. Whenever anyone was invited out, it was imperative to dress quite formally. Also every woman had a beautiful black silk or moire dress. "Many times it merely hung in the closet but we all had one," commented Mrs. Brittain.

This "painful era," as it has been jokingly termed, demanded that one walk very carefully. Most of the dresses in the late '80's had trains and one had to turn with great precision to swish the train in the right manner. When one danced there was a small loop on the inside of the skirt which was carried on the arm so that the skirt would be kept off the floor.

The wraps worn were very short and had loose sleeves; many times the tabs of the sleeves hung almost to the knees. Very fussy lace collars were worn over plain dresses. Longer jackets remind one very much of men's swallow-tailed tuxedo coats.

Dresses have undergone a great many changes since the last of the '90's. Sleeves have lost their fullness, dresses have become more plain and are shorter. These changes have come about gradually and each period shows the dresses less extreme.

Babies' styles have changed as much as their parents. Visualize some of the local business men and women wearing dresses, which when they were being carried, hung to the floor. Little girls had much more fussy and frilled dresses than they now wear.

Sports styles of clothes have also changed. The popular costumes for bicycle riding in 1936 are cutlets, shorts or riding habit. When grandmother was a girl, however, she wore the immodest costume of a divided skirt under which were worn long full bloomers of the same material as the over-skirt. With this she wore a cotton shirt-waist.

The bathing suit was not the abbreviated suit worn today. It is described in the Demorest's Monthly magazine of 1881 as "a very becoming bathing dress, combining all the requirements of convenience and comfort. It is a perfectly loose combination garment confined at the waist by the belt to which the skirt, plain in front and shirred at the back, is attached. A deep sailor collar and full sleeves complete the design, for which twilled flannel or serge are the most appropriate materials, as these materials do not cling to the figure when they are wet. Rows of alpaca braid, or white galoon, or bands of wool delaine, of a contrasting color, are the most suitable trimmings."

Entertainment Undergoes Changes. With no movies to attend, one had to entertain oneself. Many parties were held, and different groups indulged in card playing and dancing. Tennis and bicycling were the major sports. One party which was enjoyed by many Wayne people was the New Year's day reception. These receptions were held in every home which was large enough. Many women would entertain together in one home. Then the men would call and leave cards. Hours were worn from 2 in the afternoon till late in the evening. Often the men would dress in costume. One year an Irish party was held with the men and women both dressing in costume. Decorations consisted of both the well and blarney stone.

Other entertainment consisted of church socials and school parties. A great deal of time was spent in singing also. Although times were hard and clothes very beautiful, each one of the women remarked that dress was much more sensible and above all, more comfortable today than the gay '80's and '90's.

Mrs. Kenneth Jones, 34, of near Rising City, Neb., daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Jones of south of Randolph, was killed Friday night when an east bound freight train, traveling slowly, struck the car in which she was riding with six others. Funeral rites were held at Columbus Monday and the John O. Jones family went to attend.
Mrs. Jones, who was driving the car, said that the train stopped for water and he did not notice it start up and went on across the tracks. The train and his car were traveling slowly and when he saw the train coming he tried to speed away. The freight hit the car just back of the door on the side where Mrs. Jones was sitting, holding her baby. The door swung open and she and the baby fell out between the rails. Mrs. Jones was fatally hurt and the baby daughter suffered a cut lip and several bruises on the face. Mr. Jones and two other children, Carl Seaburg, brother of Mrs. Jones, and a neighbor, Charles Bonne, were unhurt.

Passage on British Queen Mary Is Described by Wayne Teacher

Passage on the Queen Mary, Great Britain's majestic new ship, brought many interesting experiences for Miss Margaret Schemel, who went to Leeds, England, as exchange professor this year. Miss Schemel drove east with Miss Lenore Rintsey the last of August to sail from New York. They were in Middletown, Pa., Landon's native city, the day after the presidential candidate had addressed a very large gathering there. "We passed through beautiful farm country after leaving the higher mountains at Jundia. . . We reached the ramp over Newark and Jersey City at about 5:30 p. m. and proceeded to drive off the ramp by error. A young cavalier in light-car directed us through the mazes of Newark traffic; a cop completed the task and we were enroute to the tunnel through which we reached the city by midnight."

In New York Miss Schemel met Miss Doris Palmer, her exchange professor from Leeds, England. Miss Schemel went to the home of Lyle Dowling, former Wayne student and visited with him and his wife. Another guest there was Frank Hanighen, world event reporter and author, formerly of Omaha, who had played tennis in Wayne in 1916. Mr. Hanighen knew Frank Morgan, Paul Harrington and many others. Mr. and Mrs. Dowling gave Miss Schemel a copy of their newly published "Hot Jazz," translated from the French by Hughes Passasier and inscribed by Mr. Dowling, "To Margaret Schemel, the person who taught me all the French I ever knew," to which Mrs. Dowling added, "and I am poorer for the lack of it."

Miss Ramsey and her sister, Miss Palmer and a nurse from Port Chester hospital accompanied Miss Schemel to the boat August 26. Excerpts from Miss Schemel's letter to Miss Clara Smothers follow: "We proceeded to the dock, pier 90 at foot of 5th street. The bags taken care of by the Cunard help, we proceeded up the stairs with the imaginary passes which the ticket taker credited me with having provided my family and I proceeded to the center of the dock where Margaret Farrow and Pat O'Neill soon put in their appearance. I secured five passes and we got on the Queen Mary with the huge crowd of others, passengers and visitors. We went through the entire tourist class parts and part of the cabin class, general lounges, dining room, etc. The cabins were a little smaller than I had expected but very convenient with two hogan furniture consisting of two double-deck beds, small chest with mirror in center of room, flanked by two night stands, two upholstered chairs, a lavatory, a double closet with ample space and hangers and a private enclosed toilet. The beds are equipped with comfortable mattresses, two pillows, a very heavy white blanket and heavy spread. Pipe ventilators on both sides, slits in a panel of the door and an electric fan over the door provided ventilation. There was a great draught of air constantly coming down the ventilator so I did not mind being in an inside cabin and did not ask to be changed. I later learned that there was considerable space available so evidently it would have been very easy to get a room with porthole. On the whole, however, it proved better to remain since I drew a very desirable cabin-mate, a quiet, unobtrusive Philadelphia woman, a bookkeeper, who agreed with me on being considerate of each other's rest. I know of no one else who had so fine a cabin companion, barring several who were alone."

"Having put the flowers Miss Palmer brought for me in water, I emerged to find Gertrude Gunther in the passage, she having secured a pass in my name at the Cunard downtown office. We all proceeded to one of the lounges where the chief steward was making table reservations. I chose second sitting and drew table 100."

"Approaching 12:30 the officers began to shoo all visitors off the boat. Lenore had found an erstwhile friend in the lounge and threatened not to reappear. Meanwhile the rest of us said 'goodbye' and after Lenore's reappearance and passage down the gang plank I went into my cabin for a moment. Gertrude had left a box of candies and there were several other packages and a heap of letters which later proved to be 52. 'If I had not consumed mother's lovely candy before leaving Wayne and Lenore and I had not gotten away with Fern Crawford's box enroute to New York, I probably would have died of indigestion before reaching England. Miss Wallace, my companion, also had several packages of candy which she left open. Shortly after entering the cabin a telegram came from Barbara Sweeney, regretting inability to come to the dock. I rushed to the deck to see if I could see the family and really did. I think I was in the mass of humanity gathered at the end of the pier. The usual amount of weeping, a chorus of goodbyes and God bless you's, a Jewess monopolizing one's receptive capacities by shouting in my ears, 'Tell Gussie goodbye, Tell Sam goodbye, etc.' until she must have covered the complete roster of her acquaintanceship. Finally we slowly moved out of the narrow berth and the waving of kerchiefs, white and colored, began. I distinctly saw what I believe to have been members of my family waving bits of white in that vast sea of arms and hands. We moved out slowly, turned and proceeded. The accompaniment from the dock continued even after the figures were a mere blur on the pier. I was stirred by the New York shores with magnificent buildings which struck me more forcibly than ever before. The gap which occurs between the buildings of the 50's and 40's and the Wall street section gave me opportunity to marvel anew as the latter group of amazing buildings loomed large before us. Between Governor's island and Ellis island with their formidable looking buildings. Past Devil's island and the goddess who has not stirred me yet. Perhaps if I should enter the harbor at night after a long absence and see her lighted, I should be thrilled."

"I descended to my cabin after we passed Devil's island; made ready for lunch which was (second sitting) at 2:45, although regular sitting was scheduled for 9, 1:30 and 7:30, which suited me perfectly throughout. To my left, at table 100 were Mr. and Mrs. Whelden from New York City on a three weeks' vacation in Europe; then Miss Josephine Schain (accidentally seated next to Mrs. Whelden with whom she had been at Smith.) To my right was Beth Moore from Chicago, a rather young person, very attractive and nicely dressed. Next, appearing rather late, a dynamic little lady of 28, I later learned, Kathleen McElwee from Glasgow, Scotland, returning from a three weeks' tour to America. Most of the tourist passengers were on these special tours either starting from America or England—a fine plan at this time of year to keep the boats filled. The people in general were not a very attractive lot. I suppose that I compared them with the fine lot of young women and men who went over on the Lafayette to study in France in the summer of 1930. At any rate, our table was nonparial, as every one of us said. The Wheldens are a delightful, childless couple of about 50. Mr. Whelden was in Dartmouth in 1916 and is in the wholesale shoe business. Mrs. Whelden is a charming unaffected person who is the acme of good sportsmanship. Miss Schain proved to be the most distinguished person in tourist class, going to Brussels to preside over a world peace discussion. Just before leaving New York she received a cable from Lord Robert Cecil asking her to preside over this meeting which task she was somewhat dreading. She has a place in Westchester near Carrie Chapman Catt whose successor she is in the Cause and Cure of War movement. Her house, put up in the 17th century, is the one built and lived in by the man who captured Andre. She is also interested in Woman's club work and is to be in Nebraska some time in the fall; also ex-head of girl scouts of America. She is altogether a grand person, 50-ish, gray, but with dark-fringed dark eyes, a sweet young voice and a never ruffled, altogether charming manner. After the first day we were about together considerably, went to movies, and promenade around the first class deck each afternoon. Miss Schain invited me to call her when I get to New York again, which I certainly shall do."

"I cannot go into the details of the day's events—each was delightful for I was not seasick—only a slight suggestion the Saturday we strained every engine to break the speed record. The Queen Mary on this, the fifth crossing, beat the world's record for passenger boat speed across the Atlantic. Then the tables rocked and a rail was put around to keep dishes and food from careening into our laps. My bed had a jittery motion that sent everything stacked on the upper berth down in an avalanche on the floor and me. The food-excellent meals were too full, with eight and ten courses for luncheon and dinner. I had breakfast in my cabin in twice but otherwise attended meals regularly. Never took tea except Sunday afternoon when it was served on deck and in lounges. There were movies every afternoon so I saw "The Petrified Forest," "Misses" and a Lupe Velez film. There was toy horse-racing for sailors' and orphan benefit. All dressed for dinner the second, third and fourth nights. There was no jollification the last night as there was on the Lafayette. Each day we were given some new kind of menu card as souvenir. The first day we received the tourist passenger list. No name stands out. I looked at first class list and noticed Bernard Baruch, Jr., Harvey Firestone and Mrs. Eleanor Boardman, also Larry Adler, a young Jewish-English actor who presided over the ceremonies at the concert program Saturday evening in the main lounge. During the dancing our group of the Wheldens, Miss Schain and Mr. and Mrs. Lord (also friends of the Wheldens) from New Jersey, generally gathered in the smoking lounges on the promenade deck where we played cards or just visited. I usually took a walk on the aft deck before night. The last evening we had an especially nice party."

"I spent no time on deck excepting to walk and do not regret it, for I ate, rested, walked, read in the lounge and tried to write but could do little as the boat jittered so. An engineer of the boat told me that the Queen Mary, the hull having been laid some eight years ago, was not planned as high speed a boat as she now is required to be. Originally she was supposed to beat only the Bremen and the Europa. With the Normandie to challenge, he questioned the advisability of straining her engines to such a degree. Well, anyway, we beat the world record today, out time being 4 days, 6 hours and 50 minutes, and are the British people proud of it! Every available excursion boat, speed boat and what-not, crowded about us from early this morning on, for the race had been won last night when we reached Bishop's light house on Land's End. Miss Schain and I had gone into first class lounge to see the electrically controlled shiplet moving rapidly across the map high up on the wall. It was a few minutes later that Bishop's light house was reached although we didn't hear about the record's being broken until later."

"The last night was a terrible one. We reached Cherbourg at 2:30 a. m. and put off a number of passengers, including Miss Schain. There was little sleep to be had. All heavy baggage had been collected the night before (Sunday) and I ate breakfast and packed the rest (with memories of my good friend, Clara Smothers) by 10 a. m. Then a restless waiting and watching the celebration as we passed the Isle of Wight and the other coast cities, each one sending out its quota of celebrators. The decks of the small steamers seemed covered with moving confetti which later proved to be the people and rows of gayly colored flags strung up and down over the deck. There were also numerous planes, a destroyer and a pick-up boat which follows air maneuvers in the channel. It was a gay time and I am happy to have participated in it."

"I disembarked finally at 2, spent no time in the customs for had to open only one bag (to show Clara's camera) which the officer passed with a wave of the hand; took a taxi to the station where I waited until 3:20 for my train to Salisbury where I now am after a run of about one hour through the lovely Wiltshire countryside with its green meadows, brooks, brick-and-thatch cottages and its lovely wayside and garden flowers."

AROUND NORTHEAST NEBRASKA

Bindweed eradication is being discussed all over the district. In some places farmers are meeting with representatives of the agriculture extension service to discuss methods of eliminating this weed. In one county twenty thousand acres of farm land is infested with bindweed. Fred Albach, a farmer living five miles west of Hadar, finds by deep plowing he eliminates most of his morning glories. The farm group in congress during the past two years worked on this problem for many months and respected very little help except the promise that experts at Muscle Shoals would experiment in an effort to produce chlorate at a low price. The present price of chlorate is prohibitive. Experts in Washington stated that by application of chlorate, bindweed could be eliminated but the price is too high at this time. Many farmers are sinking their plows deep in the ground to kill this weed.

Twenty farm boys living in the vicinity of Wausa, and Osmond want to know where they can get a job. These boys range in age from 18 to 22 years and have left school when they finished the eighth grade. Some of them tell the congressional office that they find it impossible to get jobs in this vicinity. They want to know what is in store for them in the future. Some are advised to take advantage of the national youth movement in order to continue their education and others are informed of agencies where work may be possible. A large number of young men from this district have gone to the western coast states and letters from them indicate that a large portion of them have secured jobs there. For some unknown reason a large number of people have left this district for Oregon, Washington and California during the past few months.

Questions on naturalization are coming into the office these days. Some aliens are asking what to do if their first papers have expired. The answer is that they will have to refile for their first papers and continue through the process of naturalization. The federal court clerks will be very busy with naturalization cases in the next few months.

Many old people are coming to the congressional office asking why they cannot secure an increase in their pensions. These questions come from nearly all of our 22 counties. The real reason is that there is no more money with which to pay. The government is giving fifteen dollars. In Nebraska the state legislature had no knowledge as to how many people would apply for this pension. As a result the amount of money appropriated by the state was not sufficient to take care of all of the applicants. As an illustration, in Madison county there are 588 persons on the old age pension list. The county get $7,026 each month to pay these 588 persons an old age pension. This amounts to about $13 per person. Applications by new people wanting to get on the pension rolls come in regularly and counties can pay only what money they have and this is being distributed equally among all the applicants. The new legislature will be faced with new appropriations for this pension.

Cases are continuing to come to light wherein drought stricken farmers have sought emergency WPA employment and have been certified to work on projects so far removed from their homes as to involve an almost prohibitive amount of driving to and from work.

In addition to the inconvenience of so much daily travel, the men so employed are finding that it is costing them as much or more to operate their cars daily over that driving distance than they are able to earn at their jobs. It has been obvious that some cure of this condition is essential. One remedy, of course, is the provision of additional projects which can be authorized in the communities situated nearer to these WPA workers. Pending the time that the situation can be solved that way, the WPA has consented in the most outstanding cases to provide a grant for the farmer and his family, independent of the otherwise accompanying requirements of daily employment. This will tend to help those men who had complained of their working conditions until such a time as additional and suitable projects may be provided for them.

The district looks somewhat better than a few weeks ago. Fall pastures are almost assured in some localities but some farmers still report that their pastures are dry and rain and more rain is needed. Some of the fall sown grain is doing well but in spots it is slow in coming up. Livestock can be found in the corn and grain fields. The additional pasture is helping with the feed supply and the demand for hay is not as heavy as it has been. However, farmers feel that after the first heavy snow the hay demand will be again prevailing.

Open season on political candidates. About four weeks more and the voters will give the answer to a lot of questions asked by the candidates who are now over the country.

St. Charles Parish, in Cuming county, is presided over by Rev. Peter Grobbel. He has a great history of early Cuming county pioneers. Believe it or not, St. Charles is older than West Point.

William Clausen, who runs the taxi line in West Point, is a collector of automobile license plates. Probably he is the owner of more varied collections of these plates than any other collector. Auto plates from nearly every state in the union and the Canadian provinces decorate the walls of his office.

Old time baseball players have been asking what has become of Meadows Zacek and his brother Casey Zacek. Meadows, who used to catch for the Western league runs a blacksmith shop in West Point. He keeps his own box score of the world series for the baseball fans there. Casey is the operator in the Northwestern depot in the same town.
