Education Week Is Stressed In School Essays

National Education week is being stressed at Wayne city school November 9 to 15. A number of students in the English department wrote short essays on education and those of Alice Baker, Twila Bergt and Lora Hossle were chosen as most representative of ideas uppermost in minds of teachers and students.

Writing on the "Meaning of Education" Alice Baker's follows: "Education is the training of the physical, mental and moral powers, both by a system of study and discipline, and by the experiences of life. It involves all that we absorb from the beginning to the end of our existence in the development of the powers and faculties bestowed upon us at birth. Education includes not only systematic schooling, but also that enlightenment and acumen which an individual obtains through experience.

"Formal education is the education we receive according to custom or established rules. This form of education fixes its examples upon the mind, as all study and discipline fix their examples in the mind. Thus the habits of study and training are so fixed that they are continued daily and unconsciously.

"The information that a person receives must be kept busy or operating in the process of continuous use. The education already received must be used and applied in everyday occurrences.

"The time comes in every person's life when he must draw his own conclusions and make his own observations and tests. Then the individual must arrive at a decision or a final determination. Experiences which take place in every day life require right decisions and the determination to enforce those decisions. The individual can make and execute such decisions only by the constant use of his intelligence. Hence if a person is not able to consummate his knowledge in daily living, he has only a thin surface coating of applied instruction. Such individuals acquire only the sham veneering of knowledge, not of real education."

Twila Bergt chose the subject "Education" and wrote: "In receiving an education there are several steps. The first is to obtain knowledge and the second is to put that obtained knowledge to a practical use. Some people fail because they do not take the opportunity of obtaining knowledge when such opportunity comes to them. Others fail because they do not know how to put their gained knowledge to use or they do not know how to apply it. The mind must modify, develop, and put to use these patterns or models which formal education puts forth. The important factor is what the individual person himself receives and learns—not merely iteration of facts.

"The success of a man many times depends upon his ability and amount of skill in a certain line of work but it also depends largely upon the intelligence or the thinking power of the person. The mind must make its own decisions. Intelligence should also make its trials and tests for itself.

"If this method is not carried out and obeyed the result will be a mere thin outer covering consisting of a little applied instruction. The thing that counts is that which is really turned to use by the brain."

Lora Hossle's is also on "Education" and is as follows: "The end aim of education is to develop each individual to the most complete maturity of all the powers of the body and mind. We know, of course, that knowledge is not acquired all at one time and that something is not just drilled into our heads. The acquiring of knowledge is a slow and gradual process.

"Intelligence must be kept active, playing over the education it is receiving, drawing its own conclusions, making its own tests and its own observations; otherwise we have simply a thin surface coating of applied instruction. You have surely heard the quotation 'There is nothing so dangerous as standing still when the world moves.' The same is true with us. We must keep our brain active and not let it grow lazy. We must not take our school work too lightly, for some day we will certainly need just what the school is trying to give us.

"We must work for what we get and we will get it gradually. Knowledge comes to a person after he has worked with zest. It is not a case of 'presto change' and we have knowledge. No! We must start at the very bottom and work up gradually. We must care for the little things in our daily lives, for the little things will some day grow into bigger things. The principal aim in education must forever be to give the child the power of self control, of self management, and the sense of responsibility and of independent thought."

To Be UNDOUBTEDLY the Harding regime abused privilege, humiliated great numbers who supported it and made duties falling to successors more difficult to perform. As vice president, Calvin Coolidge kept himself aloof from the White House group, and when he fell heir to the presidency, he was not disturbed by the Teapot Dome mess that had previously developed.

Following the election of Roosevelt four years ago, the opposition became uselessly acquiescent. Indifference to New Deal policies failed to give the country the service it needed. Helping shape the course—at least trying by resolute action to keep it away from dangerous breakers—is more statesmanlike than to sulk on side-lines and wait until errors have been made to register kicks.

Carefully discriminating between wise and unwise administration policies, supporting those measures that seem desirable and stoutly opposing those that threaten ill, will constitute real public service on the part of those who have power to be heard without the power to decide.

The Motor DISCUSSING the part the motor industry is having in pushing forward economic recovery—disregarding dizzy theories and applying sound judgment—the Saturday Evening Post concludes with this paragraph: "In refusing to be regimented by men whose knowledge of the motor business was largely confined to the free cars provided them by the government; by working out their salvation under the American system; and by giving a demonstration of how that system works in the hands of intelligent, farsighted men who face realities, the motor industry has placed the country under a great debt of gratitude."

NRA Is TALK of a revamped NRA has been heard in Washington circles since election, and the belief is expressed that legislation aimed in that direction will be attempted. The NRA was an administration blunder, and was probably the most nearly unworkable act in the New Deal's program.

Soil Conservation Being Considered Recommendations of Nebraska farmers and agricultural agents regarding the 1937 soil conservation program are being considered at a national conference this week in Washington, along with similar recommendations from other states.

and employes, and earnings in rural communities are usually not sufficient to warrant curtailment of the week's work without curtailment of the week's wages. The social security law which becomes operative January 1, will impose new burdens on employers and employes alike, and thus it is hoped another NRA nightmare will be mercifully withheld—especially withheld until the populace gets hardened to the task of creating social security.

A dramatized story of a soldier whose nervous system revolted at thought of going over the top and engaging in the slaughter of other persons, was appropriately told on the eve of Armistice day. He was stigmatized as a coward, but timely intercession, with an understanding of his feeling, saved him from the usual penalty, and he was transferred to the hospital corps in which he exhibited distinguished bravery, not hesitating to risk his life to relieve suffering.

An author points to the virtues of work as the only means of making life agreeable. Work is a panacea for many ills, and is a powerful force in prolonging life. It reinforces courage and inspires content. Not work just for monetary gain, but work to weave a fabric of useful accomplishments.

In the course of a lengthy editorial analyzing the political status following the late election, the Christian Science Monitor says: "The huge vote of confidence in President Roosevelt is, as Raymond Clapper has put it, both a challenge to Mr. Roosevelt to justify that confidence by restraint and discretion and a challenge to his opposition to be more reasonable and constructive in their criticism."

If a law taxes a business or an industry that employs eight or more persons and leaves unbundled more prosperous individuals because they hire comparatively few, it is plainly discriminatory and unfair if not unconstitutional.

The decision of Rev. Charles E. Coughlin to retire from radio oratory following the almost total eclipse of his social justice plan in the late election, will be approved in most quarters. The priest is a speaker of surpassing diction and eloquence, but his mounting radicalism wrecked his cause and left him without support.

While Dr. Townsend's extravagant old-age pension plan would appear to have received a fatal blow in the late election, it had the merit of arousing interest in some provision for those who have been unable to provide sufficient support for declining years.

Add all the relatives to those in the employ of the government, and you've got a voting force that, on mature reflection, should have made the most ardent Landon fan steer away from betting on results.

The supreme court deserves a vote of thanks from the New Deal for wiping out its regimentation of potato production before attempts at enforcement were possible.

The fact that Ohio had the national corn husking contest shows that state grew corn this year.

The annual Red Cross drive is under way, and no organization is more deserving of support.

THE MINORITY. Around sixteen million voting citizens represent the minority in the late presidential election, and by wisely directed efforts they may exercise a powerful influence over future legislation in the hands of the majority. An aggressive minority is necessary to prevent abuse of power. It is the force that will steer the ship of state away from rocks of error.

How (Continued from page one) him also abolished the office of land commissioners to which he had pinned his candidacy. His familiar and lucky name gave him an advantage, capturing the imagination and support of voters. He is still young, and he can take his name into retirement for a couple of years, and then bring it out and hitch it to some other state office which is provided for in the constitution and which therefore cannot be so easily switched out of existence.

Advice on Public Speaking. An authority on public speaking admonishes beginners not to memorize their talks, but to gather more material than needed and stress ideas, not words or gestures. The memorized speech, if not forgotten

REAL LIBERALISM. The Norfolk Daily News emphasizes a point that is probably in the minds of many persons. If Herbert Hoover had been the presidential candidate instead of Governor Landon, defeat could not have been more complete, and the country would have been given the advantage of clearer and more forceful discussion of the main issue—preservation of fundamentals. Says the News: "Landon's was a bread-and-butter campaign. Hoover's would have been an appeal to the spirit."

To Arts Meeting At Iowa College

The third national fine arts convention and dedication of the new fine arts building and the first of three units of the new university theatre was held at the University of Iowa in Iowa City last Friday and Saturday. Miss Florence Drake, who attended on the invitation of the speech department, was greatly impressed by the fine spirit of cooperation between the devotees of music, the graphic and plastic arts, and the drama.

The exhibit of paintings in the Memorial Union are the property of the university, and the exhibition of figure painting and prints by French artists on display in the fine arts building were loaned from other museums.

Saturday evening the university theatre was opened to a guest audience with the premiere performance of the play "Two Hundred Were Chosen" by E. P. Conkle, formerly of Peru, Neb. The theatre is, without doubt, the best equipped in the country for the presentation of drama.

The Paul Olson family helped Reuben Olson celebrate his birthday Thursday evening by having coffee in his home with a group of relatives. The Jack Soderberg family were at Laurel Sunday afternoon as guests in the Fred Soderberg home. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Soderberg accompanied them.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ring, Ralph and Larry Joe were in Sioux City Monday when they purchased cattle. Mrs. Dick Sandahl and Bob Nelson accompanied them. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Pierson visited the former's brother-in-law, Gurney Prince, at a Norfolk hospital Wednesday afternoon and called at Jas. Chambers' that evening.

"hang together." The same family will live on the same farm for several generations. They are not hospitable to a newcomer.

"Co-education is an experiment," said the speaker, "in England's schools. In the school at Leeds, this works very well because of the competition between the boys and girls."

Athletics is important in the English schools for all students. Pupils of school are divided into four or five groups to compete in sports and games. The games played by teams of girls or boys are football, soccer, net ball and hockey. One of the problems in the English schools now is how to get athletics in and yet not have the children do all of their studying at home in the evenings, said Miss Palmer.

The destiny of our country will be in their hands during one of the most trying periods of history. We must help them to make good today as preparation for tomorrow.

The Jangled Parties.
Omaha World-Herald: It is cheering to hear a few hopeful republican voices here and there. "He knocked us down," they say, "but we're not out."
In evidence it is pointed out that Governor Landon polled 16 million votes—more than were cast for Hoover—and that these were 37 percent of the total. And it is bravely contended that a party with such a following, however badly defeated, is anything but dead.
There is something to that. The trouble, however, is not to be met by citing numbers.
If there were 16 million American voters united on a policy and a program, standing for a sound and definite body of doctrine, and with able and appealing leaders, though they were in every state a minority they would be a force to be reckoned with.

But this is not true of the republican party—after election any more than it was before election.
For the party has, and had, no affirmative program. Upon such policies as it may be said, in courtesy, to have, it is at war within itself. It has no recognized outstanding leadership. It is made up of discordant groups. It can make no powerful appeal so long as it is reduced to the sad expedient of making clever or not so clever policy plays rather than lead a bold and united fight for principle. A party merely of criticism, criticism from every angle, criticism in debate with itself, can never get very far.

That is why even as a party of opposition the republican party has sunk to a condition of impotence. It cannot command popular confidence. It can hold out nothing adequately to satisfy the hopes and hungers and expectations of the people.
The democratic or new deal party is likewise divided, composed of inharmonious groups. If its radicals, its reddish-pinks, it is impossible for them long to act in unison, though in the campaign they accomplished that difficult feat fairly well. But the party has, and had a leader—the ablest and most agile of his generation. That leader, despite his shattered platform pledges, had behind him a record of vigorous action, of bold policy, of definite achievement. He is a crusader, with the sort of political mysticism that appeals powerfully to an imaginative people.
Against him an inchoate and incoherent opposition strove in vain. And with "Wall street," the Liberty League, the du Ponts and Hearst, the simple and honest progressive, Governor Landon, was bewildered by the company that forced itself upon him, and lost in the jumble of the inconsistent appeals trumpeted in his behalf.
Today no one knows that the shattered republican party stands for; no one at all.
No one knows, as a matter of fact, what the administration party stands for, though many believe, or hope, they know. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt does know. If so, he will within a year, reveal his purposes, the actual direction of his leadership. And when he does his present mixed pickles following will begin to fall apart. Then we may have once more a democratic party. Or it may be a radically leftward collectivist party. In the one case the old party alignments will be reformed. In the other there will be, under whatever names, two new parties, that will come to death-grips over the continental European as against the traditional American way of life and government.

For the present there is marking time and the "breathing spell." And for the present the republican party is a wreck, awaiting the coming of men and women of vision and purpose to give it new life and make it once more the powerful factor it should be in our national development.

The Dull Side is on the Outside

SMART SIDE Note the smooth flat texture of the reverse side of a stocking—it's far duller, far softer in tone.

RIBBED SIDE Ordinary stockings have the rib outside. Each separate ridge reflects the light—increasing the sheen.

Smart-side-out Hosiery recommended by Munsingwear.

Six Superiorities

1. Exquisite, sheer—flawless, ringless chiffon—with the dull flat surface on the outside.
2. Extra dullness makes stockings appear twice as sheer, twice as clear.
3. Wavy rear seams are prevented because the ribbed surface is on the inside—it grips the skin, holding stocking in place.
4. Legs look more slender, far more stunning, because stockings are twice as dull.
5. The smooth, flat surface resists snags and runs.
6. While stockings appear sheerer, the close weave actually conceals skin blemishes.

Return to the salary schedule of two years ago is requested. For repairs, material and equipment the increase asked is $118,749.

vice as now constituted does not answer the question because no system of examinations and tests can be devised which will be an acceptable substitute for actual training. Every college in the land is the mecca to which industry and commerce go for replacements for their staffs, but no college has ever been asked by the government to supply its official needs. We all know the reason why. We should insist on a changed situation.

Life In Ministry Is Satisfying To Eighty-Year-Old Wayne Man

Celebrating his 80th birthday Thursday, November 5, Rev. P. Pearson of Wayne, recalls the horse and buggy days of 25 years ago when he preached his initial sermon at Concord, Neb., on his 55th birthday.

Rev. Pearson went into the ministry in 1890, his first charge being at Rankin, Ill. In 1911 he came to Concord and served both the Concord and Hartington Lutheran churches. The minister remarked that people were much more spiritually minded in those days than at present. It was common to see people hitch their horses to a carriage and travel over 11 miles to church. Many times it was necessary to start out at 8 o'clock in order to attend the services and these people would not be able to reach home before the middle of the afternoon. Nevertheless, the church would have a good attendance.

One of the many hardships of the minister was the inability to reach his parishioners. One time he was called out in the country five miles to officiate in a baptism. The roads were so bad that the family had to take two carriages. One of the carriages had to be helped by another team. Finally the two girls rode the horses to town and four days later they went into the country and brought back the other children but he feels that he has been rewarded in being firm.

The minister has received his greatest satisfaction out of his confirmation classes. He considers it a privilege to give spiritual teaching to youths at the 'teen age and to be an aid in helping them to mold their characters. The young people do not realize the importance of their early teaching but as years go by they receive a great deal of pleasure from it.

Organizer and builder, Rev. Pearson has performed his duty as a minister to the fullest extent in Concord the church and parsonage were built under his tutelage. He later accepted a call to Hershey where he aided in building up the church membership and he solicited so that the congregation might have a new church. He has been instrumental in organizing Ladies' Aids, Luther Leagues, Dorcas societies and Brotherhoods. These organizations are important in the church as it gives both young and old people contacts through the church. Rev. Pearson receives special joy through the work among young people.

Although he has received calls from larger cities, among them Peoria and Chicago, Ill., Rev. Pearson has always declined as he felt it was much wiser to raise a family in a smaller community.

Before he became an ordained minister, the local pastor served as lay preacher and he has been preaching over 60 years. He feels that he has been amply rewarded and receives a great deal of enjoyment from his work. "The more trouble there is the more enjoyment one gets from it," he remarked.

One receives greatest compensation from work as a minister in baptisms, confirmations and taking people into membership. Rev. Pearson has confirmed and baptized over 400 people.

Rev. Pearson served as a member of the Mission Board of Nebraska Conference of Augustana Synod for one term of three years. He retired from the ministry in 1935, having lived a bountiful life through his work.

Honored on Birthday.

Wednesday and Thursday friends from surrounding churches paid great tribute to Rev. Pearson. Wednesday afternoon the board of deacons from the Salem Lutheran church of Wakefield surprised him. Rev. Arthur L. Peterson represented the congregation and presented him a gift.

Concord Family Recalls Early Days

One of Concord's oldest families is that of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Lundstrom. Last spring the couple celebrated their 57th wedding anniversary.

The couple was married in 1879 in Sweden and two weeks after their wedding they came to the United States with Mr. Lundstrom's father and sister. Mr. and Mrs. Lundstrom have never returned to their native country.

Upon settling in the states the Lundstroms' first home was in Red Oak, Ia., and from there they moved to LaPorte, Neb. Twenty-six years ago the couple moved to Concord where they have lived since.

Like many others the Lundstroms recall vividly the snow storm in the late 1880's. The storm was so fierce at that time that it was necessary to light lamps in the windows of the house to guide their steps to the barn.

The Concord folks remember the days when there were no conveniences such as modern highways, radios, cars, airplanes and modern home appliances. When they desired to visit their neighbors and go into town they had to travel across the bottom lands.

Mr. and Mrs. Lundstrom have two daughters, Mrs. Carl Johnson of Laurel, and Miss Hilda who is making her home with her parents.

general abandonment of what the republican campaigners succinctly described as the American way of living. This way was exemplified by the pioneers who out of a sturdy self reliance and an unconquerable attitude in the face of difficulties thrust this country into the forefront of the nations of the world.

It is one of the characteristics of the human race that it refuses to recognize conditions as menacing or dangerous until it finds itself in the midst of them. If it has courage and resourcefulness it may fight its way back; if it has lost these attributes it becomes the slave of despotic power as in Italy, Germany and Russia. Where it trades individual liberty for security it loses both in wide measure.

Thoughtful men may well stand in awe of a condition where men and women disregard broken pledges and overlook waste and extravagance in government because for the time being they are the beneficiaries and vote to continue an administration in power.

Channing Pollock, author and critic, in an article that appeared some time ago in American Mercury said that there is "no hope for a democracy more interested in golf than government, in lotteries than in learning and in Bill Powell than the bill of rights." He said that "unfortunately America has gone over to easy thinking, easy living, easy money, unreasoning prejudice and meaningless slogans. If this sound like a diatribe reflection may convince the few still capable of reflection that the facts justify and the dangers compel it."

Dr. Henry C. Link, director of the psychological service center of New York City, in a recent book writes: "One of the most common symptoms of an inferiority complex or of personal failure is the desire to change the social order, usually in one's immediate environment, often in the world at large. The youngsters, suffering from personal failure, often want to change their families, not themselves. The student who fails in his studies wants to change his teachers or the marking system, not himself. The employe who fails to get the desired salary wants to improve his employer, not himself. The worker, unable to get or hold a position, wants to change the economic system."

A Changed People.

Lincoln Journal: One inescapable deduction of the election nationally is that the morale of millions has been sapped to an extent that to many seems alarming. Whether this is the aftermath of the depression which reduced so many millions to penury or because of the system of widespread doling out of grants of public money, either in the form of money for legislative favors and privileges, is not clear. It is quite evident, however, that there has been a quite

THREE WELL LOCATED NEBRASKA FARMS
80, 160 and 80 Acres Fertile Land

The Johnson-Moseman 160. 3 miles southwest of Emerson; the Thinius 80, 2 miles west of Thurston, and the Doffin 80, 2 1/2 miles northeast of Pender. Will be offered to the highest responsible bidder.

AT AUCTION
In The Pender Motion Picture Theatre
Monday, Nov. 16
Pender, (Thurston County) Nebraska
Sale Starting Promptly At Two o'clock

The Johnson-Moseman Farm—This 160 acres of land about three miles southwest of Emerson, nine north and one west of Pender, is a well improved tract in one of the better farming territories of Nebraska. The farm has a costly house. It has a number of outbuildings, but is in need of a good barn. The place also needs an owner operator.

The Thinius 80 Acres—Two miles west of Thurston we have the Thinius 80. We have had a number of prospective buyers for this tract which has no buildings chiefly from men who wanted the place to seed to alfalfa. This is one of the many choice alfalfa and corn farms of Thurston county. It is well located—just a 1-4 mile on a good road from state highway. These are the sort of farms that bring in the revenue.

The Doffin Place—We have had a lot of good land in Thurston County and we yet have some splendid places, but we have had nothing better from the standpoint of earning ability than the Doffin or Zvacek 80. This is as good soil as the Logan Creek valley affords. It is on a splendid highway. It is capable of paying for itself in a few years with alfalfa or corn. Within the last five years it has raised corn enough in one crop to pay what this place will probably command in this forced sale.

SALE TERMS—Announced Day of Sale.
The Johnson farm is leased to Roy Surber, Emerson. The Thinius 80 to Thos. Frey, Thurston, and the Doffin place to Theodore Doffin. Leases will be assigned to purchasers.
