Snow Tuesday Delays Work Of WPA Temporarily In This County.

Graveling on three Wayne county projects will progress this week providing weather is favorable.

Graveling started Tuesday from Winside south four miles. The road was previously graded. This gravel is furnished by WPA, and John Eining of Wayne has the graveling contract.

Grading and graveling of six and a half miles east and west five miles south of Wayne has been completed. This WPA gravel begins south of Wakefield and extends west. One more mile is graded and it is expected that this will be gravelled this week by the county.

EDUCATION COST LOW FOR COUNTY

Three Legislators Are The Guests Of Kiwanians Here Monday.

Prof. K. N. Parke of the Wayne State Teachers college, presented material he had collected on how the taxpayers' money is spent to the Kiwanis club Monday with the Young Business Men's club also invited.

Prof. Parke opened his discussion by explaining that he is not a tax expert but just a taxpayer. He has compiled these figures to know where tax money is being spent.

Prof. Parke discovered the following facts: "The total amount appropriated by the 1935 legislature, regular and special sessions, from the general fund to be raised by taxes levied on real and personal property for biennial expenses of the state is $1,480,753.

"When a tax receipt from the county treasurer is studied it is quickly discovered that the amounts noted above are small compared with the total amount of the tax money collected.

"For the rural schools, district 34 was used as an example. The expenditure of a tax bill of $100 paid by a Wayne county farmer is as follows: School district 43, $26.88; county, $41.29; free high school, $12.90; state, $18.93 with $4.79 to the university and $1.67 to the teachers college."

From these figures Mr. Parke finds that 64.5 percent of the entire tax bill goes for higher education.

"The four state teachers colleges are asking for a restoration of the 1931-33 appropriation. If this should be granted it would increase the total taxes paid by a typical city resident in the amount of 7 cents and the typical farm taxpayer 32 cents.

Prof. Parke concluded that "we in this community and the state are getting good returns for our taxes but at the present time we need more. The supply of teachers is low. The faculty is limited but the enrollment of students at the Wayne State Teachers college is increasing. The college here needs to expand."

Dr. J. T. Anderson, president of the Wayne State Teachers college, introduced the three legislators, each of whom spoke briefly. Dr. Anderson said that when he first

At the reception in the Faustman home, guests were invited by Mrs. Arthur Dahlke, sister of the bride, to the dining room where refreshments were served from a table attractive with lace cover and large three-tier wedding cake decorated in blue and silver.

Getting himself in more complicated circumstances, Thompson confessed to breaking into the Ralph Morse filling station about 2 o'clock Christmas morning and taking $1.80 in pennies. In gaining entrance he broke two doors and one window.

In county court Monday Thompson pleaded guilty to the check forgery and to the burglary charges and he was bound over to district court with bond fixed at $3,000. As he was unable to furnish bail, he was lodged in jail.

Married At York On Christmas Day

Miss Dorothy Faustman Is Bride Of Rudolph Lage At Candle Service.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Faustman and Mr. Rudolph H. Lage was solemnized Christmas evening at 7:30 at the home of the bride's father, Otto Faustman, at York, about 70 relatives and friends attending the double ring ceremony which was performed by Rev. H. Hopmann of York, formerly of Wayne. A reception followed and the couple left for a short trip after which they returned to make their home for the present with Mrs. Lage's father in York.

Blue and silver flowers, wreaths and bells were attractive in the Faustman home for the wedding. An arch of ferns over four windows in the living room, two baskets of white chrysanthemums and two candelabra, each with seven white candles, furnished the improvised altar for the ceremony.

Harold Heaton, accompanied by Miss Erma Roehrs of York, sang "O Promise Me," before the wedding march played by the WPA.

Miss Maurice Klinck, cousin of the bride, led the bridal procession. She wore black net gown embroidered with silver flowers and fashioned in princess style with full skirt and long sleeves.

Her corsage was of pink snapdragons and babybreath tied with silver ribbon. She wore black slippers. Next to enter was little Mable Jean Dahlke, niece of the bride, who wore princess style, floor length dress of pink net and carried a bouquet of mixed sweetpeas.

Miss Faustman followed. She wore an afternoon gown of jewel blue silk velvet with rippled swing tunic which was longer in back, square neckline and short puffed sleeves. Her sandals were silver. She wore a spray of rosebuds in her hair, pearl necklace and small pearl earrings, and carried a bride's bouquet of Tulleum roses and ferns tied with white satin ribbon.

Mr. Lage who entered with Earl Albert, wore conventional dark suit and each had a boutonniere of white carnations. The latter lighted the candles before the ceremony.

PASSING YEAR EXTREME ONE

Coldest And Hottest In Half Century Is Record That Will Cling.

When 1936 goes down in history tonight, what will cling in memory to mark the year as different from others? To many, especially old timers, it will be the weather with extremes never before experienced by them in a half century or more.

The weather seemed determined to be freakish all through 1936. In January and February this territory experienced some of the worst snowstorms of history.

Wayne's new auditorium, which has meant so much in community activities, was dedicated in January, 1936. Mayor M. L. Ringer, schools, churches, civic and special groups joined in a dedication ceremony.

Another major improvement the past year was H. B. Graham's addition to his Wayne plant. The building was doubled in size and lockers installed in the storage rooms. Several houses and barns have been constructed and other building improvements made during the year.

Road work has been important in Wayne county this year. Last January Governor R. L. Cochran assured Carroll vicinity of a gravel outlet and this has been completed. Gravel has been laid on the highway between Wayne and Pierce, grading and graveling have been done south of Wakefield, southeast of Wayne, south of Winside and east and west of Carroll.

In federal plans, the soil conservation, old age assistance, child welfare and resettlement programs (Continued on page four)

WPA furnished labor for much of the road work done in the county. This federal branch also provided for curbing and other street work in Wayne.

Office work has been completed on the 1936 program and contracts are being signed. The earliest possible date for payment. No payments have yet been made in the 1936 program.

Sign-up meetings were held Monday at Carroll for Deer Creek, Chapin and Sherman precincts. They are scheduled Wednesday this week at Winside for Hancock precinct and at the Kai school for Leslie. Remaining dates are: Plum Creek and Brenna precincts, Reinhardt school, Thursday, December 31; Wilbur, Strahan and Hunter precincts, court house, Wayne, Saturday, January 2; Logan precinct, Wakefield auditorium, Monday, January 4.

AUTOMOBILE HITS NEW HIGH RECORD AS DEATH DEALER

FATALITIES on Christmas day and over the subsequent week-end in the United States totalled 750. Over 300 were killed on the holiday. Most of the deaths were due to automobile accidents, and increased automobile travel, induced by fair weather on Christmas, was in considerable measure responsible for an unusually high record of fatal wrecks.

California had the largest number of killings. Automobiles took seven deaths in Nebraska, Delaware, Vermont and New Hampshire were the only states that escaped violent fatalities. The hit-and-run driver who plowed into a group of children in Omaha Sunday, killing one and injuring three, was a woman who admitted she had been drinking. It is manifestly hard enough to drive and avoid accidents when one is sober and wholly free from the befuddling influence of liquor.

The year closes with an appalling record of automobile tragedies—a record that will help prod state legislatures to pass more drastic laws.

WORLD EVENTS SPOTLIGHT KING

Politics Looms As Biggest Topic Of Interest In National Affairs.

Abdication of King Edward of England, probably holds the spotlight when world events of 1936 pass in review. The year had scarcely begun when, on January 20, Britain's beloved monarch, George V. died. David, Prince of Wales, became Edward VIII.

"When I shall be king, I shall be king," he stated. He decided his own problems and was most sympathetic with his underprivileged subjects. In May Edward held his first formal dinner with the Ernest Simpsons among the guests, and in June on a Mediterranean cruise one of his guests was Mrs. Wallis Simpson. Then began rumors that he planned to marry the American woman who was to receive a second divorce. The Bishop of Bradford rebuked the monarch, supposedly for not attending church services, and this blew the lid off. Conferences between Prime Minister Baldwin and Edward followed. The king was determined to marry Mrs. Simpson, and Baldwin was just as firm in asserting that he could not have her and the throne both. Edward yielded gracefully and rapidly and preferred to marry for love than to have the throne. His abdication followed and he went to Vienna, Austria. His brother, Albert, succeeded him as George VI. So 1936 marks one of the most stirring romances of history.

Two dictators, and a would-be dictator gave the world most important history in 1936. Mussolini of Italy, defied the power of Great Britain and the League of Nations in a victorious conquest of Ethiopia. (Continued on page five)

Old Globe Players Coming To Wayne
The Old Globe Theater players come to the municipal auditorium, Wayne, on Thursday evening, January 7, under the auspices of the State Teachers College, in Shakespeare's great tragedy, "Hamlet," with John A. Willard in the title role.
The company won national fame in the English village at the Century of Progress in 1934 for their brilliant presentation of Elizabethan drama. They won new laurels at the San Diego exposition in 1935, and at the Texas centennial, Dallas, in 1936.
The Old Globe Theater players are all educated and well-trained young people, who bring to their acting an enthusiasm, a vitality and a vivid realism that completely removes the cobwebs that the last few generations have allowed to grow around Shakespeare. They have gone back to the days of Shakespeare for their inspiration, using the Elizabethan stage settings, the Elizabethan dress, and the direct speech and driving action of Shakespeare's time.
The Old Globe Theater company is directed by Thomas Wood Stevens, former professor of pageantry and dramatics in the Carnegie Institute of Technology and at the University of Michigan, the former director of the Goodman theater of the Art Institute of Chicago.

Old Globe Players Coming To Wayne

The Old Globe Theater players come to the municipal auditorium, Wayne, on Thursday evening, January 7, under the auspices of the State Teachers College, in Shakespeare's great tragedy "Hamlet," with John A. Willard in the title role.

The company won national fame in the English village at the Century of Progress in 1934 for their brilliant presentation of Elizabethan drama. They won new laurels at the San Deigo exposition in 1935, and at the Texas centennial, Dallas, in 1936.

The Old Globe Theater players are all educated and well-trained young people, who bring to their acting an enthusiasm, a vitality and a vivid realism that completely removes the cobwebs that the last few generations have allowed to grow around Shakespeare. They have gone back to the days of Shakespeare for their inspiration, using the Elizabethan stage settings, the Elizabethan dress, and the direct speech and driving action of Shakespeare's time.

The Old Globe Theater company is directed by Thomas Wood Stevens, former professor of pageantry and dramatics in the Carnegie Institute of Technology and at the University of Michigan, the former director of the Goodman theater of the Art Institute of Chicago.

Costs Of INCREASED production and increased consumption by lowered prices would virtually amount to increased wages.

Demands for shorter hours, higher wages, and curtailed production would seem to force a considerable number to have less, living from hand to mouth, and sharing little in America's high standard of living.

Treating the subject, the Omaha World-Herald offers this concluding comment:

"To state these difficulties is a beginning, at least, toward solving them. The automobile industry comes to mind as an example of what can be accomplished under conditions of real competition, with wages maintained at a fairly high level, and prices reduced as far as possible in order to gain volume.

Henry Ford showed the way when he went in for volume production by turning out a car for the many instead of the few, and at the same time he set better wage standards in his shops.

"We have the natural resources, we have the capital, we have the population needing food, clothing, houses, the simple luxuries of life. What we seem to lack is the wisdom to find the way to bring these together in a national program of economic progress, which will aid, not only the less than half the population dependent upon wages, but the farmer as well.

Walter Lippmann quotes another newspaper writer as saying that some of the young and aspiring administration lieutenants have become disturbed over conservative tendencies of the president since election.

Candidates for public offices work so hard during a political campaign to be pleasant and vote-persuading that after the tension is over they often spring so far in the opposite direction that they seem to become cold and indifferent.

What Farm Legislation Next? Nebraska Farmer: Conferences of farm spokesmen and directors of farm organizations are directed toward farm legislation that may be enacted by the next congress.

It is the most natural thing that the American Farm Bureau which has its largest membership and influence in the cotton south, and the surer crop regions of the cornbelt should urge re-enactment of the original Triple A which provided for acre reduction with cash benefits based upon idle acres.

It is equally natural and far more logical that the less sure crop regions represented more largely by the Farmer's Union and groups of farmers from the insurance or farm product urge crop insurance, or an alternative the present so-called Soil Conservation program under AAA.

From the standpoint of farmers in Nebraska and all territory similar to it there is but one alternative among the three programs. That is crop insurance and commodity loans. However beneficial the original AAA may have been temporarily a continuation of it under normal conditions would be well nigh fatal to our farmers and especially so to those in regions of submarginal rainfall.

The years of 1934 and 1936 proved beyond question the failure of any plan that encourages the middle west farmer to reduce his acreage of staple crops, grains doesn't put on and take off agreeable manners as one puts on and takes off an overcoat to suit his feelings. He likes the world and the world likes him, and this friendly attitude helps him in performing his public duties.

The passing of Arthur Brisbane, journalist of high rank, shocked millions who had been reading his daily column. He had prepared his column before the fatal heart attack. Mr. Brisbane was rich in knowledge—kept posted on everything—and the information he passed out from day to day was presented in the simplest, most readable style.

The editor of a metropolitan newspaper told us recently that he felt he must keep himself in the best possible state of repair in order to give his institution the benefit of his best endeavors. He believed he would be cheating his newspaper if he did not take proper care of himself.

Nebraska's unicameral legislature will soon prove what, if anything, it can do better than the two-house body. Fewer authorized to make laws centralize power and reduce representation. The plan may be more efficient and radiate more wisdom, but it leans away from democratic ideals for which in the past America has been willing to pay liberally.

One thing we want and one thing we do not want the coming year: We want return to agricultural abundance, but we do not want war. Even Secretary Wallace will admit that his department and the weather proceeded perilously in the work of crop reduction, and that they should now work together for old-time normalcy.

While confidence in next year's agriculture is renewed, farmers, in view of past experience, will reduce chances by diversifying their crops. They will not put all their eggs in one basket. Therefore, more small grain than usual will be raised in this hitherto almost exclusively growing area.

National and state lawmakers will soon be in session, and it is hoped they will visualize the boat of the average citizen and make the going as easy as possible for him in the way of taxes and other burdens.

It should be understood that as living costs go up, wages and salaries, already curtailed, are virtually compelled to suffer additional reduction.

Falling snow is a pleasing suggestion that ample moisture may appear next year to mellow the ground and stimulate production.

Laziness puts an unfortunate limitation on what might otherwise be achieved.

Late air tragedies encourage sticking close to the ground in one's travels.

SUPPRESSION.

We wonder how much injury is done to sensitive youths in school by the belittling influence of overly inflated student egotists. How much has the superiority-complex of one increased the inferiority-complex of another? The latter with normal talents shrinks before the show creature, and he avoids circles dominated by the latter. The ultra-sensitive student fails to demonstrate his qualities of mind through fear of becoming the butt of jest or slighting disparagement.

Dynamic

fluence, and they wouldn't if they could.

Proof of Good Feeling. On every Christmas for many years W. H. Hoguewood, an old-timer here, expressed his good feeling by distributing gifts of apples produced on his place near Wayne. But it is remembered that fire destroyed his orchard the past year, and he had no fruit of his own raising to distribute.

Passing Year Extreme One

have had an important part in social life this year. Soil conservation replaced AAA, which last January was ruled unconstitutional. Resettlement has aimed to keep farmers on their land, and other programs have helped elderly people and children in need.

Political interest started with the primaries last April and the campaign became more heated as months advanced. The November election brought victory for President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Brief review of the year brings to mind a few of the many happenings which were important to Wayne county persons in 1936.

LINCOLN.

Sometimes gentle, husbands have ugly, disagreeable wives; sometimes wives have inconsiderate and brutal husbands. One is reasonable and the other unreasonable, and thus they go through life. Sometimes both are unreasonable and they are never harmonious unless aroused by a mutual enemy.

Freedom from discord passes unobserved because it is the rule and makes no noise. The story of Lincoln's married life, told in a recent magazine article, reveals how a wife may be a terrible nuisance. Failing to capture the polished Stephen A. Douglas, Mary Todd angled for and finally won the awkward Abraham Lincoln. It is suggested that if Ann Rutledge had lived and he had married her as planned, he would have been happy, but that he would not have become president.

Education Cost Low For County

found out that he was coming to Wayne, he was told that Wayne college has one of the prettiest campuses and the territory is the most productive part of the state, but that Wayne is not easily accessible.

Emil Brodecky said in his short talk that he usually spoke with his violin when he was asked to appear in public. He spoke of how impressed he was by the opening of the Kiwanis meeting. Persons can be glad that they live in this country because in Spain to every soldier who is killed, three other citizens are also killed. "Your feelings are my feelings," said Mr. Brodecky because he lives near and many from his community attend the college here.

L. C. Nuemberger expressed appreciation for the value of meetings with legislators. There should be more of them and the legislators should listen to the wants of the people. Mr. Nuemberger said that Wayne college does not belong to Wayne but to northeast Nebraska. Wayne derives more commercial value from it but this part of the state gets educational values from the college. "If the college is criticized or boosted, it is done for our children's sake." The members of the unicameral group are not magicians; they can go only as far as the taxpayers will stand. They do not refuse some of the wants because requests are from Wayne.

It is because the taxes can't stand them. Mr. Nuemberger expressed himself opposed to concentration of power. He is not in favor of taking the power of self government away from voters by having the elected officers appointed. He does not want his children or grandchildren to have to live under a dictator.

Emil VonSeggern said that he had always had a sympathetic feeling for Wayne city and college. He had been here for the dedication of the hotel. Mr. VonSeggern praised the work and feelings of the late August Biermann had for Wayne and Wayne college. He was a sincere friend to Wayne. Mr. VonSeggern said that all in this district will do the best they can for the college here.

The guests at the club meeting were: Prof. K. N. Parke and Mayor M. L. Ringer were with Dr. J. T. Anderson; Maurice Wright of Boulder, Colo., was with Carl E. Wright; C. M. Graven had J. G. Miller as a guest. Those from the Young Business Men's club were Armand Hisscox, president, D. H. Larson, Harold Preston, C. A. Orr, Prof. C. H. Chinn and Prof. J. R. Keith.

Rev. F. C. Mills announced that the retiring president, F. L. Blair, has had perfect attendance all year.

Jobs Are Best Social Security.

Nebraska Farmer: To those of the estimated 9 1/2 million unemployed who would rather have a job in private industry than to be on government relief, the new social security act offers a dry bone. The collection of security taxes from employers and employees will actually delay the return to gainful occupations of those now without jobs, because the tax funds so raised are taken from the stream of normal commerce and turned over to the government to spend as it sees fit, for non-productive governmental activities.

At a time when recovery is on the upward swing, this drain of funds needed for consumer supported business expansion, which is so essential for the creation of more jobs, can only slow down the wheels of recovery. In other words, the amount of the pay roll tax in the social security act, used for industrial expansion and consumer-busting, would help prime the pump of recovery more effectively than any other factor.

Not only would improved business provide more jobs for the 9 1/2 millions of unemployed, but it would automatically reduce expenditures for government relief which are now taking such a heavy toll from the taxpayers and increasing overhead which must be added to the cost of commodities. Thus, the two-fold benefit of more jobs and less tax would accelerate the momentum of recovery and consumer-income, so vitally essential in restoring prosperity and balancing the budget.

Weight well, then, this desired objective, with the situation that probably will result when a gigantic tax fund of billions is accumulated under the security legislation and turned over to the government for so-called safe keeping and investment. What investment can a government make except in its own bonds, issued to finance its own public expenditures?

Those at the helm of government should not ignore the indisputable fact that private enterprise has no substitute in bringing about recovery. It creates wealth and income, through jobs, commodities and services, which is the only source of taxation to pay the debts that government incurs.

Read the Herald want column.

Fortunate America! Omaha Journal-Stockman: For one reason and another, there has been a great deal of talk these last few years about the way things in this country have gone to the dogs. Depression, and reduced prices for all products, have given the professional crepe-hangers opportunity to picture the lot of the average man here in the United States as most desolate, and to offer all sorts of panaceas to bring about a return of better conditions.

As a matter of fact, however, such talk can be justified only by comparison with our own hey day back in the twenties. Contrasted with the situation of other nations, the United States at its worst still offers advantages which no other country can match.

Consider, for example, the fact that while only about 10 percent of the world's population is in this country, we consume half of the world's coffee, three-fourths of the world's silk, and two-thirds of the world's crude oil. We eat more meat and have more telephones, automobiles and radios, than any other people on the globe, and our homes are better and more comfortably equipped. As these facts would indicate, our purchasing power is greater than that of all of Europe put together.

The truth is that America is and always has been the envy of every other nation. Things may not always be as good here as we would like them to be, but they will still be far above the average of any other country. The more firmly American people get this in their minds, the less apt they will be to run off after foreign isms and ideas which, at the best, have produced nothing to compare with our own development.

Minister Speaks At Club Meeting

Candidates For Board of Directors Of Business Men.

Rev. F. C. Mills addressed the Business Men's club at a regular meeting Wednesday evening last week. In his talk he conveyed the idea that Christmas is a spirit of charity and kindness to others. He expressed a belief that many present Christmas customs are pagan thoughts and ideas.

The club voted to sponsor a project to assist the band in securing funds.

Three men were nominated for board of directors, two of whom will be elected. The nominees are: E. Brown, Earl Merchant and Elton Sanberg. The retiring directors are Wm. McEichen and Norbert Brugger.

L. W. Ellis gave a brief report on the financing of the Christmas festivities.

The meeting was preceded by dinner at Hotel Stratton.

Electrification Is Favored In Dixon

Fifty-five farmers attended the rural electrification meeting in Wakefield December 15. Herman Kramer, Fred Ruser, O. K. Bart and Herman Muller of Concord, Logan, Wakefield and Springfield precincts were elected as local chairmen to set up rural electrification work in their respective precincts. Plans were made to hold precinct meetings about February 1. G. J. Long, REA representative from Washington and Wayne Thurman of the college of agriculture, Lincoln, gave a brief explanation of how lines would be built to serve farmers.

There is a great deal of interest in this project. Meetings will be held in all precincts in Dixon county. Information is being gathered to furnish to the local committees for outlining a preliminary survey. Information as of November 15 shows that there have been 12 allotments made to 12 different projects in the state of Nebraska which constitutes about 17,000 miles of line and 8,686 stamers. Contracts have been executed on five projects of 1,322.1 miles of line and 3,352 custom-ers. There were 988 miles of line under construction as of November 15 which will serve 2,452 farm-

Many farmers in Dixon county believe that a district will be organized in this county that will serve them with electricity at a rate high can be paid for. Continued showing interest in this project shows that organization is entirely possible in Dixon county.

WAYNE IMPROVES DESPITE DROUGHT

Building Activities Hereabouts Good Considering Unusual Handicaps.

The closing of 1936 marks another year of building activity in Wayne and vicinity. Eleven homes were built, and two new buildings in the down town district and many other improvements were added to property of local people.

New houses were built by H. G. Hostetter, E. E. Fleetwood, J. E. Brittain, John Kay, Harry Howarth, Miss Lottia Bush, C. P. Foster and Ed. Chester. S. B. Whitmore had twin houses built on north Main street. Henry Claussen had a new house built on his farm two miles south and one west of town, and a new home is being built by Henry Ley.

A new lunch building was built by Sam Sadden on east Third street, and a filling station is under construction by Walter Savidge.

Many Wayne people had buildings repaired and remodeled. Art Ahern had a new porch built on his home and had the building repaired. The house belonging to Louis Schutte was raised and a new foundation built along with other repair work. The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance company had all the buildings repaired and repainted on a farm seven miles west of town.

A new porch and other improvements were added to the W. D. Shields property. The new home of Carl Nicholaisen is undergoing repair work which was necessary due to a recent fire. D. Hall had an addition built to the house at the south greenhouse. A new sun porch has been added to the Wm. Robinson home.

Other repair work has been done at the Ames Beckenhauer house. A concrete porch has been built at the Mrs. Nettie Call home. Herman Sund is enjoying a new sun porch at his home and Otto Heithold a new enclosed porch.

Garages have been built by Ed. Sandahl, Mrs. Wm. Gildersleeve, Pete Davison and L. Way.

Rev. and Mrs. Most are enjoying new improvements in the parsonage at Our Redeemer's church.

Racing fans in Wayne county appreciate the new horse barn built at the fair grounds this summer. The barn is 34 feet by 100 feet and stables 30 horses.

Numerous farms also added improvements the past year. A new barn was built on the Clara Sorensen place, general farm repairs on two farms owned by Mrs. Henry Vahlkamp, a new barn at the Mrs. A. M. Jacobs farm, a new chicken house on the Emil Barclan farm, a new cattle shed on the Mike Draght farm and a new chicken house at the Clarence Beck farm. Maungo Ulrich also had a chicken house built on his farm, a cattle shed and corn crib were added to the buildings on the Charles White farm, a new granary was built on the John Russman farm and a machine shed on the Herman Heinemann farm.

Edward Grubb had a full basement dug under his home which was moved to a new location. Re-plastering and remodeling were done, as well as the addition of new fences and a new water system.

Although improvements were not as many as in 1935, they do not, considering the drought handicap, fall below reasonable expectations.

Few Veterans Remain. Nebraska records show only 107 living Civil War veterans, among them being A. J. Hyatt and R. P. Williams of Wayne.

Suffers Back Injury. Ed. Perry suffered a wrenched back Monday last week when he slipped and fell on the steps at the Garhart office. He was obliged to remain in bed several days but is improving nicely now.

CONGRESS

AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN

Congressman and Mrs. Karl Stefan left Norfolk Monday. They will stop in Chicago to visit with their daughter and son-in-law, and then proceed to Washington, arriving there January 3. The congressman expects to write to this paper while enroute. His regular weekly letter reporting Washington affairs will start after his arrival at the capitol.

Interview at Norfolk last week, Mr. Stefan stated that he will introduce most of the bills he introduced in the last congress and that he has already decided to submit several other bills on which he is now working for some time. Among these, will be one to save the taxpayers of the United States many million dollars a year by withdrawing the idle American army which is now in the Philippine Islands, and one to combine the army and navy for the promotion of peace and economy. He is opposed to the expenditures of unnecessary money for the regular army and navy during peacetime, but favors appropriations for the reserve army — the aviation department and appropriation for actual protection of our shores against invasion. He is opposed to any movement which would tend to any war which would take one solitary American soldier, marine or blue-jacket from our shores to fight on foreign soil.

Congressman Stefan said that his work in the seventy-fifth congress would be concentrated on farm legislation. He proposes to continue backing any legislation which will bring a lower rate of interest to refinance farm loans; believing that normal times will not come back to the third district until there is trading in farm land again.

He will reintroduce his bill to pay feed and seed loans, bushel for bushel in kind, a bill to have a commission to study the farm dollar; a cereal grain bill, which he believes will save the American farm a market for millions of bushels of corn and grain; he will work for a tariff against the importation of foreign oil from Brazil, which is threatening to take away from the American producer of fats and oils a market amounting to $250,000,000; he expects to ask for more intensive work by the agricultural department for the eradication of binweed; he will work for the continuation of the present interest rate on farm loans (this expires next year).

Several other important bills are being studied by the Third district congressman who expects to take these matters up with his farm group which he states will be again organized for the purpose of having an organized minority of congressmen in Washington working on legislation which will help Nebraska and other farm states. Congressman Stefan was successful in making possible the farm-to-market road program, which he states will and must be continued throughout the United States.

Karl Stefan served in the seventy-fourth congress with considerable distinction, notwithstanding the fact that he was the only republican congressman from Nebraska. His first act was to join a group known as the "Farm States feeding 10 pounds of molasses in combination with silage and cottonseed cake. With corn high in price Wayne county farmers are interested in the results.

An experiment at Guthrie, Okla., showed that on two fields of equal size, planted to oats, the virgin land yielded more than 40 bushels to the acre and the soil-washed, eroded field yielded 11 bushels. If oats are selling for 40c, the difference per acre would be $11.60.

Water and soil conservation go hand in hand. The cheapest and most practical small reservoir on a farm is the earthen dam. Such dams may be built across a drainage line or may enclose an artificial depression.

Canned grapefruit or orange juice may have much of their original taste restored by airing. Pour the liquid from one container to another and the air will be restored to it and the taste will improve.

An eight-year experiment shows that gilts are more economical breeding animals than mature sows. Pigs from gilts are raised at less cost per pound.

These groups were tested in the experiment—mature sows, gilts from mature sows, and gilts from gilts. Pigs from the second group were raised to a marketable weight at 47 cents a hundred pounds less than the first group of pigs from the third group at 42 cents a hundred pounds less.

One of the advantages in using gilts for breeding, E. Z. Russell points out, is that if a gilt should prove to be a non-breeder, the animal still would sell well as a butcher hog.

There was no drop in the production ability of the gilts from that of the sows, as the records show that at the end of eight years their litter average 1,420 pounds at 190 days of age, the best record of this group for the entire eight years.

Russell sees only one risk in the use of gilts for the entire breeding herd. If only one boar is used it is possible that he may prove to be an inferior breeding animal and the grower would be compelled to use sow pigs sired by him for the next year's crop of pigs. For this reason Russell suggests that it would be best to use only proved sires or to keep a few proved sows for a part of the breeding herd.

When farm-type concrete mixers are used to scarify hard-shelled seeds, such as sweetclover, protalaria and lespedeza, to improve germination, best results are obtained if they are operation with the axis rotation more nearly horizontal than is customary in mixing concrete, the U. S. bureau of engineering advises. With the mixer in such position, seed and gravel fall a greater distance when picked up by the mixing blades and the scarifying action is more rapid than when the mixer is set at a steeper angle.

Best results probably will be obtained with the volume of gravel one to two times that of seed, and with the mixer not more than half full.

Gravel that will pass a 34-inch mesh but be retained on a 1-2-inch mesh screen will give good results. The larger the gravel particles the more rapid is the scarifying, but if much larger than one-half inch they are likely to crush the seed.

Farmers who have tried strip cropping and contour farming, "crooked farming" as many have called it, are surprised to find it easier than square farming, once they are accustomed to the change. They have found it easier to farm on the level and go around the hill rather than be endlessly climbing up and down. A number of men report they can cover a third more ground in a day, their horses are in the better shape and, best of all, erosion is retarded.

Packing-house by-products such as meat meal, meat-and-bone meal, beef scrap, blood meal and "steak" in the poultry ration increase egg production but in some instances the eggs do not hatch as well. If the supplement contains a fair proportion of liver the hatchability and production are good.

Concord Man Century Old Frederick Rose Honored Wednesday at Open House for Birthday. One of the oldest men of northeast Nebraska is Frederick Rose of Concord, who reached the century mark December 30. Mr. Rose lives with his son, Frederick Rose, Jr., on the farm which has been the home of the family for 45 years. Open house was held in observance of the anniversary and many relatives and friends called to honor Mr. Rose. Mr. Rose is in good health for his years and takes a daily outing regardless of the weather. Though he assures one that he does not need the cane he takes with him on his daily walk, he uses it from time to time. Mr. Rose walks around his quarter section for recreation. Mr. Rose is not bothered by heat or cold, and attributes his good health to wholesome food, rest and daily exercise. Mr. Rose is a native of Brandenburg, Germany. He married Carolina Boeh in 1866. He and his wife and three children came to America in 1865 with a sister of Mr. Rose, making the trip on a sailing ship. They located in Cincinnati, Ohio, that city then being a village. Mr. Rose worked on a fruit farm. Later he took his family to Iowa and still later to Omaha where Mr. Rose was employed on the railroad section. Mr. Rose liked farming, so took his family in an oxen drawn wagon and went to a home-stead near Wahoo, living there until 1891, when they came to Concord. Mr. Rose died in 1902 and afterward that year Mr. Rose visited his native Germany. Mr. Rose made another trip to Germany in 1905, remaining until 1926 when, at nearly 90 years, he became homesick for America and his children and returned to Concord. His son met him in New York. Mr. Rose has been a great reader and has discarded glasses after having used them for some years. His original set of teeth are in good condition, and he has a heavy head of snowy white hair. Mr. Rose is a hearty eater and seldom misses a meal. Only two of the six children in the Bose family are living. They are Mrs. C. F. Knutzen of Bruning, Neb., and Fred Bose of Concord. The song was written December 24, 1818, when Mohr, parish priest, asked Gruber to compose accompaniment for the song which was to be used for the Christmas service. The Gruber family has never received any remuneration from the song, but it is planned to erect a memorial to the composer. Mrs. Hollister attended a college in Wayne some years ago. Modern Thrift. Omaha Journal-Stockman: In his recent statements, the president of the United States has promised to do big things in the matter of governmental efficiency in the next few years. Through a policy of consolidation and coordination of federal agencies, he has said that he hopes greatly to increase the ability of the federal government to serve the nation. In the same breath, however, the president adds that he is not so much interested in "minor economies," and we are led to wonder just what minor economies are in the official mind. With a government dealing chiefly in billions, a matter of a few hundred million dollars might easily be regarded as of minor importance. It was reassuring a while back when Mr. Roosevelt talked of scaling down budget requirements of the various bureaus and departments when the next congress met. Whether or not that will be possible also remains to be seen, since it will depend chiefly on needs, real or fancied, of relief agencies, the amount of pressure that other bureaus can bring to bear on senators and representatives when the voting is done, and the wishes of the president at that time. What the public would like to see, no doubt, would be a little more attention to these minor economies which statesmen seem to consider so inconsequential. Since childhood we have been taught that "a penny saved is a penny earned," or "look after the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves." In relation to the case of government, those probably could be paraphrased to read "a million saved is a million earned" and "look after the millions and the billions will take care of themselves." On copy books thought perhaps the copy books that should be revised and brought up to date. Then our children would get a better idea of thrift than they seem to be learning from the old and antiquated maxims. Farmers in Legislature. Omaha Journal-Stockman: A canvass of the membership of the new Nebraska unicameral legislature shows that of the 43 members, 18 are farmers, 10 are lawyers, one an educator, four are merchants, two are clerks, two medical men, one a banker, two sell insurance, one is a publisher and two are retired, one having formerly been a farmer and the other a merchant. While farmers do not make up a majority in the body, they far out number men from any other walk of life, as is fitting in a state as largely dependent on agriculture as Nebraska. How wise the voters' choice among individuals were is something that remains to be seen, but their selection of representatives from different lines of business appears to have put the emphasis in the right place. Harry Hopkins is reported to have declared that he will resign as WPA administrator unless he is granted $750,000,000 to carry on relief work through next June. From his sick bed at Vatican City, Pope Pius spoke by radio to the world Christmas eve, early Thursday morning here, and urged world peace.

Limitations Made On Loans For Feed Definite limitations on livestock feed loans from the resettlement administration were announced today in field instructions sent to county supervisors by Cal A. Ward, regional director. Relationship with other federal lending agencies, responsibility of private lending agencies, non-disturbance agreements and livestock limitations were enumerated in order for the applicant to qualify. Ward said the regulations were made necessary because of the extremely limited funds with which to care for feed needs of resettlement administration clients. In the future in order to secure a feed loan they must comply with the following conditions: (1) The total number of livestock must not consist of more than 12 animal units. Such units will be defined by the local RA supervisor when feed borrowers apply. (2) Feed loans shall be made only for the maintenance of the necessary subsistence livestock and will not be made to those maintaining stock in excess of 12 animal units. (3) No loan will be made to any person now indebted to either a Production Credit association or the Regional Agricultural Credit corporation except where a standard resettlement client already indebted to these agencies needs an emergency feed loan to protect the interests of the resettlement administration. (4) No loans will be made in the future without a non-disturbance agreement from any agency or private institution having chattel mortgage against the livestock to be maintained. The non-disturbance agreement must not expire prior to August 1, 1937. "We feel that in numerous instances," said Director Ward, "local financial institutions should be able to extend loans to those persons desiring to feed more stock than our regulations permit. In any event we cannot and will not go outside these limitations." Larger operators, Ward pointed out, should be able to arrange credit from other sources. "We believe that local banks and other private lending agencies are willing to bear their full share in caring for the needs of farmers other than those eligible for our feed loan program." The resettlement feed loan, supplemented with such roughage as the applicant already has on hand, should be sufficient, Ward said, to carry the subsistence livestock of a majority of drought stricken farmers through the winter. Shorter Hours. Omaha Journal-Stockman: We think there are no exceptions to the desire to see men who work for wages receive the highest possible pay, for their good and the good of all concerned. High wages promote business, for one thing. But the drive that is being made at this time to shorten hours and days of work per week, if successful, would mean a much greater cost than appears on the surface. Beyond a certain point higher wages mean paralyzed business, the greater burden of which would rest on the workers themselves. Railroad labor unions are all set to push their six-hour "basic" day labor bill through congress. It is estimated by the Interstate Commerce Commission that such a law would increase the cost of operating the railroads over $600,000,000 per year. "But it means much more than this," according to the Transportation Association of America. "The public remembers the increase in freight rates of 40 percent during the period of federal control due largely to increase in wages of rail labor, and this new demand completely ignores the ability of farmers and shippers to pay, and the rights of investors. Everybody who knows anything about railroad rates realizes that such an increase in our freight bill would be a prelude to protest, which might lead directly to government ownership. In turn, this might very probably lead to government ownership of natural resources." A river can rise no higher than its banks. There is a limit to what business can pay for labor. Trying to go beyond that limit, by means of a temporary acquisition of political power, might easily bring about the ruin of organized labor, impose an unbearable burden on the individual worker, and have far-reaching effects in the demoralization of the business of the country. Streaming Production. Omaha Journal-Stockman: If industry in this country has a shibboleth, it is mass production. Producing in quantities, goods can be made both better and cheaper than when they are manufactured in small lots. Lower costs mean increased use, and that paves the way for further expansion. Gerald Swope emphasized this recently in a letter to the stockholders of the General Electric company, of which he is the president, when he said that the only avenue to real progress is through increased efficiency and lower, rather than higher prices, making available "more goods for more people at less cost." Citing an example from his own industry, Swope pointed out the Mazda lamp which once cost several dollars. Nowadays it can be bought for only a few cents, yet the present day lamp is three times as efficient from the standpoint of light produced for power consumed, as its predecessor. In 1902, he went on, generators required three pounds of coal to turn out one kilowatt hour of electricity. Those built today produce an equal amount of current from one pound of coal. Yet because electricity is cheaper and much more commonly used the amount of coal consumed by light and power companies is thirty-six times greater now than it was then. Other illustrations which might be used include the automobile manufacturers, who are turning out speedier, more efficient and more comfortably appointed cars every year and at the same time steadily lowering their prices. Then, too, there are the railroads, which today are reaping a harvest of business by offering faster service and far more comfortable travel than ever before at reduced cost. Live stock producers, as Prof. H. J. Gramlich pointed out in a recent speech over in Clinton county, Iowa, are accomplishing a similar result by breeding better stock and finishing it out at younger ages. The result is better meat and also a much larger amount of meat for the feed consumed—a streamlined system of production, as he called it in modern parlance. Obviously a principle which some of the nation's leading industries can follow so successfully must be fundamentally right. So it naturally follows that any business which is not developing along this line is due to find itself out-distanced in the race before it has gone very far. New Year

"Fast away the old year passes..." and once again we set our course for twelve new ports of call. May yours be a calm and happy voyage, and may your ship come in well laden with a goodly store of whatever you may seek.

This is the season when we regret, a little, the passing of old customs. We'd like, just for today, to go back to the days when it was customary to keep open house on New Year's Day, just so we could be sure of seeing each and every one of our customers and friends and add a hearty hand-clasp to the greeting we print here, "HAPPY NEW YEAR."

Close-Up Pictures Of Irish Life Given By Miss Margaret Schemel On Recent Trip to Emerald Isle

Limerick and Cork and Tipperary counties, each thrilling the heart of true Irishmen and all those who have ever visited the fair Emerald Isle—brought new and happy experiences for Miss Margaret Schemel who spent a few days in Ireland on a short vacation from Royds hall at Huddersfield, England.

Before leaving on the day's trip which took them through Irish countryside and to cities of special interest, Miss Schemel and her friend visited in Dublin at St. Patrick's cathedral, where she went to preach, part of the day, at the fair of Dublin. "Ragged and dirty urchins everywhere, some of them begging of us. Past the police station and one of the oldest lending libraries in the world and we were at the side entrance of the great old cathedral. It is evidently composed of an old church upon which the cathedral is superimposed. This could be seen from the irregular old stones in the part upon which rests the tower. Unfortunately all gates leading to it were closed and we contented ourselves with walking through St. Patrick park adjacent to it and on down the streets of ugly houses, past the one in which Dean Swift lived and over to the Anglican Christ church cathedral. This is the finest church in Ireland and is also evidently of two periods. Part of it dates back to the time of the Danes in the 9th century. Everything in the cathedral is of the finest and one could not help feeling what a privilege it would be to attend services in it."

After walking along the quays again and peering in at the many book displays, the two instructors took a tram to the Great Southern railway building which is patterned after the Paris Opera. "Found it almost entirely closed as Sunday train service in Ireland is almost nil in length as it began to rain—we found an official in a small hut who advised us that we had better make our intended trip to Cork by bus. We evaded raindrops as best we might on our return to Nelson square where a rapid transfer to another tram soon landed us back near Hotel, Russell, our headquarters, where we found ourselves at the dirty little bus depot on the quays ready to depart for Cork.

"We pass through Dublin streets that are now thoroughly drenched with rain. Along the quays, past the many boats that are lying in wait to transport 'Guinness' from the factory nearby to the ocean going vessels. Past the grey feudal Dublin castle gates and towers. Through a rambling village where a pack of beagle hounds are being led. The country cottages have a fairly prosperous appearance in the center of the green pastures about them, but these people are truly very poor as most of them live from the land alone.

"All of the business sections of villages are built with low houses flush with the sidewalk in front. Their fronts sometimes display signs that indicate that they are places of business. Often an open door shows it to be a home through which one can look into the back open space beyond.

"We reach Kildare and see a large number of barracks and drill grounds. It is a military encampment of a very large one. There are brick and hawthorn hedges at the roadside where there are no stone walls. The road winds past, cottages, prosperous two-storied farmer's house or manor house. The cottages are of stone, cement or sometimes stone with brick trim. Almost all are white with a colored trimming at doors and windows. Potted geraniums are on the window sills. There are occasionally shutters. Sometimes goats, more often cows, graze in nearby pastures. Flocks of sheep are sometimes on the low hills. Ivy clings to the stone walls and about the trunks of trees. Everything is very wet today.

"Cinema signs in the larger towns are the same here except that all films here seem to be six months or a year behind the showing in the United States. There are 'George White's 1935 Scandals,' 'The Magnificent Obsession,' 'I Dream Too Much' and 'Mutiny on the Bounty.'

"No Distinct Type. "At Maryborough we note the grey crenelated top of the prison and the grim stone wall about it. The people on the street even in these remote villages are dressed just as they might easily be transported to any place in which I have ever been and pass as native. I see no distinct 'Irish type' here. The children are blond or dark, just as in England or America, and I do not see any outstanding type with the black hair and blue eyes that we ordinarily think of as Irish. Of course, this is a land of mixed races too. Gael, Dane, English, French Huguenot and Scotch have become native here, one sees from Irish history.

"The distant hills are grey with low hanging clouds; we wind around near them but are never in them. In the foreground remain the cottages with their thatched or red-tiled roofs—they are frequently in groups or connected with out-buildings and surrounded by a low whitewashed stone wall. Their yards are often

This, we learn later, is the second day of the hunting season. (We saw them together in one of the villages before we reached Wicklow but none at that time were in hunting costume. A huge pack of hounds was in the place where they met.) "We move along slowly. The prevailing shade of salmon cottages is the deep wash pink. Here is a bright blue one which is not ugly with its green background. Three high wooden swings, brightly painted, occupy a vacant lot in the next village—they were in use last evening as we passed by. A gypsy caravan is beside the road. The wagons are, as always, green decorated with many fancy patterns at both ends—they are very picturesque.

"Arrive at Limerick. "The towers of Limerick loom up in the distance—a vine completely covers the front of a little grey stone house. The hills are coming nearer—they look more and more like Devonshire. We are approaching the city. The pavement is brick; the houses are neat and orderly. We are in a fashionable residential district where each house (usually brick) in the street (they are all built against each other, i.e. attached) has a fine garden in front, enclosed with a brick wall surmounted by a grilled iron fence. Roses in profusion are still in bloom. A fine wide cemented pavement leads into O'Connell street, the main artery of traffic. The houses at its far end here look like those of Bloomsbury—they have Georgian portico with the fan tops.

"We stop in Limerick an hour for lunch. The buildings are four-story for the most part—the streets wide and clean—it is a very modern, prosperous city. We eat at a very nice and large cafe, the Stella, which has an orchestra. I have roast goose after the kidney soup, also Brussels sprouts, roasted potatoes and apple dumpling with tea. As we return to the bus we see a jaunting car with its two seats back to back.

"At River Shannon. "To our left as we leave the town is the river Shannon. Gulls in large numbers are upon it. There are the ruins of an old stone church and of King John's castle, a school building with children playing. There are villas, very neat, outside the city. We are in the open country. To our right about two miles from Limerick are the ruins of a high building; there are five windows, one above the other; practically nothing but this one wall with little support remains; the stone is very ancient; a pit next to it perhaps furnished the stone of which it is made. Beech trees with their naked-looking grey trunks now line the roadside, they harmonize with the ancient ruins of which there are so many. A filling station and a modern note; there are also more pumps but the building is only an Irish cottage converted. Here is a cluster of six or more houses which seem to be unusually bright; one group is especially bright colored. We are on the level ground but there are hills in the distance. In an enclosure which serves as pasture for cows are geese with them. Near Cork we saw at one cottage a flock of turkeys. (I marveled that they could be raised in this damp climate.) As we move on a cluster of deep buff cottages comes into view. They have grey slate roofs.

"Ivy In Abundance. "Here are the trim trees of an estate, but one cannot see the manor house through the iron grilled entrance gate of the drive. Next to the estate are thatched, whitewashed cottages with geraniums in bloom at the windows. Thick masses of ivy in bloom stand several feet above the top of the high wall, also hang down in graceful festoons over its sides; I have never seen it in such thick masses. Beeches are everywhere about; they are almost denuded of their leaves hereabouts. The country no longer has the rich russet and gold tints of County Cork. It is better land, however, for there is not so much stone outcropping and is much greener and more regular in contour. The pastures are larger; there are not the numerous hedgerows to divide it into bits as in County Cork. The low walls which divide them here are evidently very old for they are crumbling away.

"Valley Is Colorful. "A lovely valley is in the distance. It contains a picturesque village of which we see only the outline. The hills beyond are a very deep blue. They seem cut by hundreds of hedgerows. Once more the tones of russet, scarlet, russet, tans and copper appear in "The landscape. An orchid-flowering shrub shows its bloom among the hawthorn berries on a stone wall. A truck waits at the crossroads for us to pass. Heaps of peat stand out in a bog to our right. A man on a cart jogs down an intersecting lane with his peculiarly shaped milk can.

"The slate roof of a very long cottage seems to have made each of its two sections sag away considerably from the middle height; a low wall surrounds it and forms a barnyard as well. Honey-suckle blooms in the hedge. The orchid vine reappears at a cottage front. The hills are very near now. They are gently rounded at the top; their general color is dull green due to the clouds that cast a shadow over them. There is, however, an occasional bit of tan or beige on them. A gracefully arched stone bridge spans the stream behind the ochre-colored cottage with unadorned door in its center and a window on either side.

"We follow the railroad tracks, or it follows us, as I suspect this road has been here for countless ages. To the right is a little church with leaded ogive windows. To our left a road flanked by pines will shortly meet ours. Each of the tall trees (whose genus and species are hidden) supports its own ivy which deprives the entire lower trunk of leaves. The first, green-tinted house appears on the landscape. An inspector from the Dublin bus, which just met us, climbs into our bus.

"A lake of considerable size is to our left. Rifts in the clouds spot the distant hills with light. There are fewer farm houses or cottages now. A hideous cement block house at the next farm attests to the prosperity of its owner. Here is a pale blue cottage with bright red door and window frames. The colors reappear in the outbuildings. The hills are now lovely with their myriad interlacing of hedgerows. The spire of a church comes into view; the monuments of the cemetery (traditionally adjacent to the church) are in the shape of early Christian crosses that we saw in Dublin national museum.

"Arrive in Hills. "A herd of cattle is in the road. We are actually in the hills now. An unbelievably beautiful mass of autumn color riots at the roadside ahead of us; it is made more lovely by the contrast with a clump of pines nearby. Sheep graze in the pastures. How snug the thatched cottages look! Occasionally a woman stands at the half open door to watch the bus pass.

"Almost no ground is under cultivation. Valleys, deep and gentle, are at both sides of us now. We pass a cart drawn by a Shetland pony. We climb again and overlook miles and miles of valley with little variation from the usual bright green of grass and the deeper green of hedgerow. Far in the distance our eye catches a bright spot crowning a distant hill—the sun has again pierced the clouds.
