WINSIDE DEATH IS MYSTERIOUS

John B. Jensen Is Found Lifeless In Car On Norfolk Road.

Mystery surrounds the death of John B. Jensen, 37, of Winside, who was found lifeless in his car on highway No. 8 about four miles east of Norfolk Tuesday afternoon.

A road maintainer went over the highway about 6 Monday evening and no car was parked on the road then. An Omaha truck going to Norfolk about 7 Monday evening saw the car but did not stop.

The trucker thought the car may have been stolen and abandoned. When he went to the machine he found both doors locked from the inside. He looked in and saw the body of a man.

Officers found the car locked and brakes set. The ignition was turned off and keys to the car were in Mr. Jensen's pocket so that monoxide gas could not have caused the death.

Jensen was employed at the Art Maroz farm south of Hoskins. He had been in Winside about 10 days and was not seen after Sunday. It is thought he decided to return to the Maroz farm and went to Norfolk and then east so as to get better roads.

Funeral services will be held at Winside after report from Lincoln is received. John B. Jensen was born in Denmark in 1900 and his parents still live there.

SCHOOL FUTURE MOST IMPORTANT

Gayle B. Childs Explains Teacher Retirement To Kiwanis Club.

"The future of our county depends upon the school since it is important in the development of the individual," said Gayle B. Childs, teacher from the Wayne high school before the Kiwanis club Monday following the regular noonday luncheon at Hotel Stratton.

Mr. Childs first made a brief survey of the general education situation in Nebraska. In 1921-22 Nebraska was 7th in the amount spent per pupil, this being $31 more than the national average.

The speaker also showed that in 1921-22, Nebraska was 11th in the percentage of total taxes paid for education and in 1933-34 was 43rd. In 1935-36 Nebraska went down to 44th place in the amount contributed by the state per pupil.

"The situation is not good," said Mr. Childs, "with 31 million dollars spent on school in the state in 1925-26 compared to 18 million dollars spent in 1934-35. At the same time that the amount spent was being lowered the enrollment was increasing. During the same period the state expenses were increased from 15 million dollars over 17 million dollars."

The Nebraska State Teachers association has a program of legislation which aims to remedy this situation in the school funds. Dr. C. F. Dienst who was made deputy state superintendent recently, has specialized in school finances and has an active part in revising legislation which deals with school funds.

BUYING CARNIVAL TO GO FOUR DAYS IS PLANNED HERE

THE next four trade days have been declared extra dollar days by Wayne dealers, and the public is invited to come and share in the bargains. Many new spring styles will be ready for buyers. Wayne county inhabitants were never more effectively bottled up by snow than they were during the first six weeks of the year. Old snow was used over and over again by the wind in refilling, cleared highways. New snow piled higher the drifts already here. Melting last week cured the idea of flinging back old snow, and so opened roads remained passable in the absence of additional storms. Believing travel to Wayne will be largely improved this week, the business district is putting on a special trade carnival. Today's Herald—part of it in tabloid form—carries many buying messages, and readers are urged to make careful study of them. Using these advertisements as buying guides, will serve important advantage. CULTURE THEME OF COLLEGE TALK

Dr. T. S. Bowdern, Creighton Addresses Students At Convocation.

"What is a real man?" asked Dr. Thomas S. Bowdern, dean of University college and graduate school at Creighton university, Omaha, in an address at the Wayne State Teachers college Wednesday morning. "A real man is an ideal man, a perfect man," answered the dean, "but what makes a perfect man or woman?" It is the duty of teachers to do the best they can to make such a man or woman from the children put in their care.

"Education is the art of teaching a boy to be a man—a real man. If the teacher succeeds, the pupils begin to approach perfection," remarked the speaker. He continued by saying that being a gentleman is something precious to anyone and something about which one is reluctant to receive criticism.

Dr. Bowdern defined this "precious thing" as culture, which is the perfection of manhood and womanhood. Culture is reached by way of education which is not a narrow interpretation of it, not only in the schoolroom but through experiences in life. Culture is the art of living like a human being. Human nature at its best is a very beautiful and inspiring creature of God.

By the use of charts Dr. Bowdern showed the relation of life, culture and religion. He pointed out how body, intellect, emotion and will constitute human nature which must be kept together by self control and discipline. As instruments of growth liberal arts and fine arts play an important part and fill the aesthetic appetite of emotion.

Religion adds a great deal of value to culture. The dean gave an illustration of the golden age of Greece which had a limited inspiration in religion and which failed to show a complete perfection in culture, deficient in moral and spiritual division of life.

"The ten commandments and the eight beatitudes are very important in the program for good living," remarked Dr. Bowdern. "God's dream of a gentleman came true in the creation of Jesus Christ," he continued.

Dr. Bowdern concluded by saying that for moral and spiritual perfection one must have something of art, scholar and saint.

Rev. Wm. Kearns gave the invocation. Bob Cunningham, on behalf of the sophomore class, presented the plaque to the Orpheo club for having the winning act for stunt night which was sponsored last Friday.

Legislative News and Views

Nebraska communities may vote in April this year on the option proposition so far as liquor sales are concerned unless the state senate hurriedly enacts a stumbling block. One such obstacle was overcome by a vote of 23 to 18, when, in committee of the whole, the Regan-Worthing bill, delaying vote on option from April 1937 to April 1939 was killed. Two senators were present but did not vote.

For two hours the debate continued below packed galleries holding many more people than were present when the bill was aired at open hearing.

Chief defender of the measure was co-introducer Senator Worthing of Omaha. One of his main arguments: "If we permit some towns to become dry while others remain wet, we're simply voting to permit drunken drivers to get behind the wheel."

Retaliated Senator Dafeo, leader of the opposition: "This is a question for the people, not for us to decide, and it is a decision which the 1935 legislature promised them they might make in 1937. Are we now going to say we were only fooling when we made that promise?"

Most senators who argued the bill stressed the fact it was not considered a wet and dry fight, but involved principally the matter of regulation and local sovereignty.

Bindweed eradication procedure is outlined in a measure providing for formation of bindweed districts in the state by resident owners of contiguous lands, and the assessment of eradication taxes against landowners therein on basis of proportionate benefits. Sen. R. W. Johnson and 6 others introduced it.

Senators are studying two separate and different drafts of state unemployment insurance now on file. M. C. Murphy, adviser on social security to the 1935 legislature has presented his plan through Sen. Dunn of Lancaster. G. E. Price, last session's bill drafter has his plan perfected. An Sen. Adams of Douglas is introducing Murphy's bill would enable the state to come under terms of the federal social security act.

Nebraska's anti-picketing law, enacted in 1921 following riots in Omaha stands to be repealed under provision of a bill on file. Sen. McMahon of Douglas declared the existing law was the most drastic labor law of any state in the Union, contending it was of "medieval nature."

The legislative reference bureau was given new lease on life when the senate, by resolution, voted $3,000 for its use. It operates independently of the senate counsel of three employed by the senate for the session.

Cigarette smoking in public cafes will be lawful if and when a repeal bill now pending is passed. The law was passed by a "fluke" back in 1919 at the time the state was considering a bill to legalize sale of cigarettes. A senator then offered an amendment to make unlawful cigarette smoking in public cafes, thinking the amendment would kill the bill. The bill passed with the amendment. Nothing has come of several previous attempts to repeal.

Writes L. M. Book of Omaha to his senator: "For mercy's sake don't legalize mercy death—it would simply be legalizing murder." Friends and foes of Nebraska's much-discussed "mercy-death" bill—first of its nature ever to be introduced into an American legislature, are preparing for a heated session when open hearing is held. If odds were in order, they'd stand the bill never will reach the light of the senate chamber, but die, mercifully or otherwise, in hands of standing committee.

Boosting from 30 to 90 days the minimum penalty for hit-run drivers of automobiles is provided in a bill introduced by Sen. Diers of Greenwood. Persons stopping at the scene of an accident who refuse to call a doctor or render other aid needed can be punished under terms of the act.

The February thaw brought some warm weather to the vicinity of Nebraska's capitol and not a few were the senators who glanced at the sunshine and emitted stifled yawns. It takes warm days and the odor of spring to get senators homesick. Then the wheels of law-making move.

The old battle without even a new dress has loomed again when the fight on whether farmers shall be taxed for gasoline not used for operating vehicles to bill introduced in other sessions, Sen. Neuberger brings forth the battle. His bill attempts to exempt from the gas tax, motor fuels purchased for use in tractors, stationary engines, combines and farm equipment other than trucks and automobiles. Fuel used in aircraft is not exempt from tax under the measure.

SUITCASE SURPRISE

Uncle Pete hid behind one tree and Betty and Bob behind another. Then as their heads popped out the snowballs started flying. Lindy ran madly from one tree to the other barking and trying to follow each ball that was thrown. Soon Uncle Pete was running from tree to tree to dodge the twins' snowballs. Betty and Bob were winning. "Peace, peace," yelled Uncle Pete, putting up his hands. "You win. I guess I can't take it." "Won't you tell us the story, Uncle Pete, before we go to bed?" "It's pretty late for a story," said Uncle Pete, "but I'll tell you a funny thing I saw happen just before I left the coast. You know you are in California down by the ocean there is a Japanese fishing village. I was standing on the dock one afternoon watching the Japanese boats bring in their fish and unload them. The Japs have big bucket nets that they lower into the bottom of the boat. These nets are then emptied into little carts which take them to canning factories. Two little Japanese boys were watching their fathers unload fish. I heard a scream and turning I saw that one of the little Japs had fallen off the dock. But luckily he landed in one of the fish net buckets instead of in the ocean. He looked pretty funny kicking around with those fish as the net was brought to the dock. When the little Jap was taken from the net he wasn't crying but laughing and his arms were full of fish. I guess he thought he was catching fish like his daddy." "I'd like to see Japanese fishermen," said Bob. "If you just keep wishing and hoping maybe you will some day," added Uncle Pete. "My gracious, I almost forgot what's hiding in my suitcase for some good little children."

Retirement plan, which would help to remedy the situation, finds the welfare of the children the main principal in the schools. Many of the teachers are dropping out of this profession because there is not enough future for them. Thus the teaching field is losing many excellent educators. The Teachers' Retirement plan will help to counteract this tendency. The individuals will feel more secure and devote more money to bettering themselves by travel and higher education, this indirectly benefiting the children. The speaker also explained how the children would be protected from teachers who are too old to teach. It is true that some of the finest teachers are more mature but this is not always true. Mr. Childs continued to say that the central provision of the act is that the teacher put five percent of his or her salary into the state commission as an investment. When the teacher reaches the age of retirement, he is given the principal he has put into the commission, plus interest on the principal that has accumulated. The total of the principal and interest will be matched with an equal amount provided by the state government. The provision is for the teachers to retire at 60 years but if they wish they can wait until they are 65 years old. By recommendation of the school board and desire of the teacher, the person may remain in the profession for two more years but is forced to retire at 67 years without exception. This same plan is used widely in industries. The civil service has been practicing the idea since 1920. Outside of the United States nearly every country has adopted this system. Mr. Childs closed by saying that the Teachers' Retirement plan would help to restore Nebraska to the position it once held in the education field. As part of the program Monday, the Wayne high school boys' quartet composed of Kenneth Peterson, Orville Graham, Wilber Ellis and Gerald Wright, sang three numbers which were "I'll Take You Home Kathleen," "High Away Home" and "Climb Up Chillum, Climb." E. E. Melby directed the group. Betty Blair played the accompaniments. Prof. O. R. Bowen announced the birthdays of Col. Henry Waterson, Elihu Root and Susan B. Anthony, national figures, which occur this week. The club was led in group singing by Rev. F. C. Mills, J. E. Brittain played the accompaniments.

Pinchle Club Meets. Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Marotz entertained members of their Pinchle club Sunday evening. Guests were Dr. and Mrs. S. Brauer of Norfolk, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Behmer, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fenske and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hansen. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. and Mrs. Ernest Langenberg, Mrs. C. P. Bajan and Walter Gutzman. Mrs. Walter Gutzman received the traveling prize. A two-course luncheon was served. The Valentine motif was carried out throughout the evening.

Mrs. W. A. Emery returned Tuesday morning from Omaha where she had been visiting. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kai and Elmer Kai of Pender, spent Sunday evening in the Clarence Conger home. Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Knaub of Winside, were Wednesday dinner guests of Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Most. Prof. and Mrs. F. G. Dale were in Fremont Monday when the former refereed a basketball game at Midland college. Mrs. Earl Merchant spent the week-end in Sioux City with Mrs. W. M. Fleetwood, the Bert Johnsons and Frank Whiteys. Mrs. Faye Wright and son of Copad, Neb., came Thursday and visited her aunt, Mrs. George Peterson, and friends until the first of the week.

"Who do you suppose is coming to see us?" asked Betty. "I guess we had better get dressed and find out," said Bob. "It sounds like someone important." Betty and Bob came running into the kitchen. "Mother, who's coming to see us? We heard you talking on the phone." "You couldn't guess with a hundred tries," answered mother. "Our city cousins?" questioned Bob. "No," replied mother. "Guess again." "That school teacher friend of yours?" asked Betty. "Wrong again," said mother. "I guess I'll have to tell you. It's your Uncle Pete, the one who is a sailor. He is having a vacation because of the shipping strike on the coast and is paying us a surprise visit. Your daddy has gone to town for him already." "Oh, goody, goody," cried the twins. And as usual when they are excited, they jumped up and down and clapped their hands. "The twins could remember when their Uncle Pete had visited them before. They liked to have him come because he was so jolly and always had lots of stories to tell about his experiences on the ocean. "I'll have to have two good helpers," said mother. "If we are going to have things ready for Uncle Pete. You children can clean up the house while I get some food dooked. You know your Uncle Pete does like home cooking." "Oked," said the twins. And after they had eaten their breakfast they were as busy as bees making the house shine. "Honk, toot, honk, toot," came from the front gate. "Oh boy! They're here," cried Bob. Uncle Pete and daddy came walking up to the house. "Well, hello there Betty and Bob," said Uncle Pete, taking the children into his arms. "How are my niece and nephew? My gracious, how you have grown! Soon you will be big enough to like a trip on my ship. You can't guess what I have in the suitcase for two good twins." Uncle Pete, daddy and mother talked for a long time. Betty and Bob were real still and listened to interrupt when grown folks were talking. But the twins kept wondering what Uncle Pete had for them in the suitcase. They were beginning to worry for fear he had forgotten about their gifts. Betty and Bob did enjoy listening to Uncle Pete and especially seeing him laugh for he was so fat that he wiggled all over. "Sort of like jelly," thought Betty. "Well, well," said Uncle Pete turning to Betty and Bob. "You twins have been such good listeners, how would you like to go outdoors and have a snow fight with me? You know I've been out on the California coast where we don't ever see much snow. Just look at the fun I've been missing in not being able to play in the snow. I would like to see if I can still throw a snowball." "That'll be keen," said Bob. Betty put on her wraps too but she thought she would like to know first what was in that suitcase. Uncle Pete hid behind one tree and Betty and Bob behind another. Then as their heads popped out the snowballs started flying. Lindy ran madly from one tree to the other barking and trying to follow each ball that was thrown. Soon Uncle Pete was running from tree to tree to dodge the twins' snowballs. Betty and Bob were winning. "Peace, peace," yelled Uncle Pete, putting up his hands. "You win. I guess I can't take it." "Won't you tell us the story, Uncle Pete, before we go to bed?" "It's pretty late for a story," said Uncle Pete, "but I'll tell you a funny thing I saw happen just before I left the coast. "I'd like to see Japanese fishermen," said Bob. "If you just keep wishing and hoping maybe you will some day," added Uncle Pete. "My gracious, I almost forgot what's hiding in my suitcase for some good little children."

Uncle Pete opened his suitcase and took out two sailor suits, one for Betty and one for Bob. They were alike with hats and everything just like Uncle Pete's. "I want you to be real sailors and come out and visit me this summer on my big ship," said Uncle Pete. "Aren't they keen," exclaimed Bob. "Whoopee," cried Betty. "Won't we have fun playing sailor?" "Now off to bed for two sleepy heads," said mother. "It is pretty late for my twins. You can have some more fun with Uncle Pete tomorrow." "Goodnight," called the twins as their little feet went pitty-pat, pitty-pat up the stairs.

Some 60 years ago—when prairie settlements were young—every sprouting village had its community general store. And truly general it was for it served as the post office, grocery, dry goods and hardware store, repair shop, drug and cigar counter. Barrels of dill pickles, crackers and ginger snaps stood about the room and provided refreshments for the village "dads" who congregated each day around the old stove to settle problems of big moment. Since the slavery question had been settled in the Civil war, they looked upon themselves the responsibility of trying to figure out why Uncle Sam agreed to the Louisiana purchase and what would ever be done with all this land west of the Mississippi. But they usually concluded that if new settlers did come in and buy the land at $2 an acre the present owners would become wealthy.

In the good old days the parlor was used only when visitors came. Haven't you looked at those closed rolling doors and wondered what was in that room? And then, when you did finally get an invitation to the musty, dark room these life-

HEN MOTHERS TURKEYS.

A hen at the Myron Colson place is the proud mother of two little turkeys. The chicken took a notion she wanted to set about January 14 so Mr. Colson decided to satisfy her by letting her have four turkey eggs. Two of the eggs hatched last Thursday and the first little turkeys of the season appeared at Colson's. The birds are quite a novelty this time of year for turkeys are not usually hatched before late in March or in April. And the little turkeys like their chicken mother.

Those who were children 25 years ago will remember the organ grinder who made the territory each spring. It was a pretty good sign that winter was over when he visited town. But where's the monkey? Of course the longer you gave him pennies and nickels the more music he would grind out of the organ. But it was most fun to have the monkey come around to collect the pennies.
