

Students and Parents Express Gratitude — Prof. G. R. China Invites Queries — Contour Farming — Rainfall — Grasshoppers — At Local Theatre—Memorial Day.

Every room in college dormitories engaged for the summer term is the encouraging report a week ahead of the reopening. It is interesting to note that during closing days of the year's work last week many students and parents sought out Dr. J. T. Anderson, president, and department heads to express appreciation for the high standards maintained at the school. Increased enrollment and evident good will clearly reflect the onward and upward course of the institution.

Prof. Allen Cook, dean of men, is pleased over the general behavior of students and their usually wholesome attitude towards education and character-building. Thus, reports from the school inspire a large measure of justifiable pride.

Pheasant Behavior. Prof. C. R. Chinn who is a good deal of a bird, bug and animal specialist, with a scientist's permit from the state, suspects that ground squirrels are often guilty of offense charged to pheasants. Prof. Chinn says a recent survey of Wayne county showed an average of three pairs of pheasants for every section of land. In an afternoon one car drove fifty-eight miles and found fifty-six pheasants. Three cars covered the rest of the county on another day and found only twenty-three birds.

Prof. C. R. Chinn asks anyone who thinks pheasants are destroying his crops to notify him by telephone or otherwise and he will immediately institute an investigation. He will dissect and find out the bird's diet. He thinks more worms than corn will be found in the pheasant's digestive machinery. But any farmer who is suspicious, is urged to call Prof. Chinn.

Prof. Chinn also wishes to advise persons who are doubtful about the identity of any plant or animal or any flying, creeping or jumping creature of the earth to let him know and he will proceed to take it in hand and duly classify it.

Trip for Inspection. An example of superior "contour" farming near Hartington in Cedar county, is to be inspected by persons interested a week from today. As we understand, "contour" farming means to plow around a hill and not over it, thus to prevent wasteful washing. The idea is to suit one's endeavors to the lay of the land, and so save the rich top soil. Everybody is anxious to prevent soil erosion.

Increased Moisture. A year ago the rainfall was considerably below normal. Moisture in April, 1936, amounted to less than an inch, while April this year brought more than three inches. May of a year ago brought a little more than four inches which constituted a large part of the year's contribution. For the past month a local gauge shows 3.55 inches, though totals vary in this area, some parts of Wayne county and nearby territory receiving double the amount recorded here. Late rains have usually soaked into the soil and put drought threats farther in the background. The prospect as this time is most reassuring.

Battle Against Hoppers. Herman Westerhaus who lives southwest of Wayne, added four hundred pounds of poisoned bran to the hundred pounds received from the government to destroy threatening grasshoppers, and he is not certain he will have enough. He believes cold rains would get under the grasshopper skin and materially help the poison method in heading off damage. He recalls from experience that hoppers flourish most during driest weather when there is the least to destroy.

Outraged Victims. A story of brutal coercion, as practiced in a night club of a large city, was told in a motion picture at the local theatre during the last week-end. It showed the murderous lengths to which gangster outlaws will go in forcing obedience from helpless victims. It showed quick dispatching of any who dared to reveal dark plots or disaboliic methods. It showed how innocence is outraged to perpetuate an impregnable ring of terror and tyranny. It presented an example of the worst phase in life.

This story which pictures a hideous night club racket, protected by groups of insensate low-brows, emphasizes the need of iron resistance to oppression and extortion. It suggests revival of the old spirit of courage that overcame the whisping of blackness and three down the gutter by a lion.

ARE UNWILLING TO CARRY LOAD

Big Need Is To Safeguard Vital Institutions Of Nation Now.

The worst thing that has grown out of the depression," said G. H. Sanberg of Rochester, Minn., to the Kiwanis club after the regular biweekly luncheon at Hotel Stratton Monday, "is the philosophy of life that someone else will take care of a person." People lack willingness to attack the problems and this makes a very serious situation.

On Memorial day one is re-inspired with real love for his country, Mr. Sanberg stated. He is grateful for what it means to his parents who came from a foreign country. America furnished him as a good place to raise a family and also to educate them. "Whatever happens in this country we as citizens should also see that every boy and girl has the right to exercise his initiative. They should not be stopped by the government but should specialize in the things they excel in," the speaker added.

Wayne should be proud to have a G. A. R. to honor on this day. These veterans should not be forgotten for the sacrifices they made. Mr. Sanberg, being superintendent of the Rochester schools, is interested in what is to become of the younger generation. The country is dedicated to certain principles whatever changes take place. "We have institutions which we do not want to pass out of the picture. The home is one of the main institutions into which the government should not enter or dictate how it should be run. Look to Europe and see how the home has been ruined, being more like the living place of animals. The home is a cherished institution which should continue."

The second institution which is important to the country is the Christian church," continued Mr. Sanberg. "We of today take the Bill of Rights, the Magna Charta and other protective acts too much as a matter of fact and forget the struggle gone through to accomplish them. We don't appreciate the cost of them. The church plays a large part in solving the problems of the past and the future. By looking to Europe again we can see the results of the dictator in not allowing the freedom of the churches."

The last institution that Mr. Sanberg spoke of was the public (Continued on page six)

COLLEGE RESUMES UNDER FAVORABLE AUSPICES MONDAY

An increased enrollment at the State Teachers college which resumes next week is a gratifying prospect. Many new faces will be seen in the student group. Many who have taught during the past year, attend the summer session for review and better to qualify themselves for their work. Wayne is fortunate in having this stimulating student spirit during the otherwise often dull mid-summer. The town can be depended on as usual to lend every possible encouragement and assistance to these sojourners who are bent on improving themselves.

Permanent Public Welfare Plan Proposed at Relief Conference

A plan for permanent federal public welfare program was one of the main topics of discussion at the national welfare meeting in Indianapolis the past week, according to Mrs. A. C. Thompson who arrived home Monday. The general opinion favored an expansion of social security to care for all welfare work. All private welfare agencies would be merged into the federal plan which would operate through the local social security setup.

The other big proposal presented to the convention by the labor party is that workers be allowed to "sit in" with employers in determining policies in industry and deciding on hours and wages. It

SUMMER PERIOD IS OPENING HERE

Registration At College Is Set For Next Saturday And Monday.

Registration for summer school at the Wayne State Teachers college will be held June 5 and 7. From advanced registrations it is expected that the enrollment this summer will be large. Rooms at Pile hall are all reserved and most of those at Nehardt. Registration for girls is larger than for boys.

According to Dr. J. T. Anderson, increased enrollment is partly due to the new certification law which will go into effect in the future. By this law teachers will be required to have more college preparation and are taking advantage of the intervening time to be qualified when the law goes into effect.

As in the past, two six-week terms will be offered. The first opens June 8 and closes July 16; the second opens July 19 and closes August 21. The same experiment is being used this summer as last of allowing students to take eight hours' work of intensified study in one subject in order to meet the college requirement. To do this they must also take one other subject. This can be done in language, industrial arts and commercial.

Additional courses in industrial arts under the direction of Prof. E. J. Huntmer and Prof. Raymond Cherry are being offered this summer.

Prof. A. F. Gulliver of the training school will assist in the education department this summer. Miss Pearl Rutherford will substitute for Miss Verna Elefson, who has leave of absence for the summer to attend school at the University of Southern California. WIDESPREAD RAIN HELPS EVERYBODY IN ALL SECTIONS

DESPITE absence of the much talked tree belts, but perhaps influenced by the prospect, rains have fallen generally during the past week. Precipitation has varied from sprinkles to floods. A twenty-four hour downpour covering western South Dakota, eastern Wyoming and northwestern Nebraska renewed the drought-stricken range territory. Discouraged livestock owners were about ready to abandon hope and were making plans to move their animals to market or to more favored sections. All parts of the country are largely independent, and so a king drought areas will indirectly and very importantly help all other sections. * * * If grasshoppers are as sensitive to refrigerated moisture as suspected, Tuesday's cool installment should have made the pestiferous insects sneeze their heads off. If the "hopper colonies" should happen to be wiped out by any one of numerous varieties of weather, we are still threatened with chinch bugs as a source of worry and fighting energy.

NEED IS TO LIVE FOR DEMOCRACY

Dr. J. T. Anderson Urges Americans Guard Rights Of Free Nation.

"If democracy fails in America, the rights and liberties of the common man are forever sealed to those now living and to millions yet unborn," said Dr. J. T. Anderson, president of Wayne State Teachers College, who gave the Memorial day address at Wayne auditorium Sunday afternoon. Dr. Anderson urged Americans to live for America.

"In America, Memorial day was appointed by law for observing the memories of those who fought in the Civil war to save the Union and to perpetuate the ideals of freedom for the benefit of all liberty-loving peoples of the world."

Dr. Anderson continued by saying that this was a day for re-education and re-consolidation of the living to the principles for which the soldiers gave a last full measure of devotion.

Formerly Memorial day programs emphasized the glories of war, and eulogies of those heroes who died on the field of battle were sounded wherever the day was celebrated. "Today," remarked the speaker, "the occasion has become more pathetic but not less heroic. Thoughts are turned to the future as well as to the present. The time has arrived when men can best serve their country by living for it. "When the chief desire of the citizens of a country is to maintain, a devotion to the homeland equal to that exhibited by those who bled and died during the Civil war that gave the nation, war within that war will be impossible; and when the people of the world shall have adopted the principles advocated by the greatest hero of all times who gave his life for all mankind, then will war among the nations of the world be impossible," commented Dr. Anderson.

"Loyal American citizens are confronted today with evils more dangerous than those of the Civil or World war days and which threaten even more to destroy our country," remarked Dr. Anderson. "Although there are no wars for enlistments in the United States army, there is a new organized warfare against us today as formerly. It is pointed out that the new social order into which Americans and the whole world seem rapidly to be moving threatens to be dominated by either communists or fascists. If democracy fails in America, the rights and liberties of the common man are forever sealed to those now living and to millions yet unborn. "In (Continued on page six)

Restoring THE Christian Science Monitor which looks aloof from partisan bias, notes an encouraging sign in national affairs in the lately increased independence of congress, its revolt in giving the president unrestricted authority in the expenditure of relief funds. The attempt to fix over the supreme court to suit New Deal policies proved an awakening influence in the two law-making bodies—a sort of backbone restorative. Labor union's dogged attempt to control industry with no effective opposition in Washington, has aroused the public to a serious threat. A recent Fortune and Gallup poll showed marked decline in the president's popularity.

The swing away from dangerous one-man government prompts the Monitor to say this as a concluding comment: "Most independent observers will welcome these still slight signs of a return to balance in American government. Even those who recognize that some leadership from the executive is essential for effective national action under the American system will be glad to see congress taking more initiative. Apparently legislation is still prepared by administration experts without sufficient consultation with the legislators. And certainly log-rolling, pork-barrel tactics in congress cannot be relied upon for either genuine economy, sound leadership. Congress must show more willingness to study and weed out the mass of legislative projects which is confusing the country.

"Yet there are signs of real independence both in the country and in congress. They should be recognized and applauded."

A small-town editor writing for the Saturday Evening Post recounts rural newspaper experiences, and the feverish life led in meeting criticisms and pacifying discordant factions. We have many of the experiences revealed by the writer, but most of them are pleasant ones. Criticisms accompany differences of opinion, and no matter how faithful a public trust an editor may be he is certain to arouse opposing notions. But it is our experience that these disagreements are too little expressed. Discussion is clarifying and helpful, and we would like to have it more evident in settling disputed points.

Miss Amelia Earhart who is now making her second attempt to encircle the world by airplane, was in Wayne a few years ago to speak at the Teachers college, and while she was here we tried to persuade her to give a brief talk over our radio hookup, but she could not be persuaded. When we heard her in the evening we concluded she was a better flier than speaker, and that she could not be blamed for not making unnecessary speaking appearances. But she is a wonderfully daring aviatrix, and everybody hopes she scores in her ambition to fly around the world.

John L. Lewis, labor union chieftain, may go so far in trying to dominate industry that his efforts will react as a boomerang and finally accomplish less in gaining his objective than a more conciliatory and considerate course would have accomplished. Lewis complains of force employed in defense of industrial plants against the violence of picketers. He invites trouble, and kicks because industries will not surrender, and peacefully allow property to be destroyed and their men to be coerced and manhandled. Lewis is a real threat to a free people.

More and more restrictive laws fired at business and industry by both national and state legislative bodies do not help forces of recovery and reemployment. Private industry cannot be encouraged to absorb the idle under multiplying burdens. Extravagant use of public funds to give employment has been accompanied by obstructive laws and the spreading of fear among those who must finally be depended on to supply jobs.

Secretary Henry Wallace's "ever normal granary" was knocked higher than a kite by the drought for a few years, and the experience of too much regulating downward will cause people to hesitate about cutting down promising abundance to abide by Henry's idea of "normal." Going above normal in production beats dropping below normal, as the mid-west found out to its sorrow.

War clouds have threatened anew in Europe the last few days, and least involved nations are expressing their "good offices" and offering politely phrased pleas for peace. Even a country like Italy whose Dictator Mussolini is eager to emulate the role of the ancient Caesars, is able to cover late with a smiling exterior.

The Saturday Evening Post urges the attention to find out definitely the government's numbers and conditions, and quit guessing. If the idle army has been thinned down as it should be, the spending program should be curtailed in the direction of balancing the budget and relieving the taxpayer.

Cooler and Wetter.

Omaha Journal-Stockman: Federal weather experts say they aren't ready to take up long distance forecasting as yet. So when they say that cooler and wetter summers are in prospect for the next two or three years as a result of increasing sunspot activity, it is neither a prediction nor a guess, but simply their estimate of what should happen, based on past performance.

The field of weather observation seems to be one place, at least, where the theory of natural cycles can be shown to operate. Data assembled in this country since records were kept and then extended on back through studies of tree rings clearly show that weather cycles do exist.

In one sense, acceptance of this theory may be discouraging to ambitious economists who would control everything, since it indicates that periodic drouths are natural occurrences and will continue to afflict farmers and the rest of the world from time to time, regardless of what man does about it.

In the main, however, and particularly right now, we can be thankful that weather cycles do exist. Having just experienced one of the worst drouths in history, it is cheering to know that similar disturbances in the past always have been followed by the return of long periods of wet seasons, and that no such dry spell as this last one is on the weather cycle calendar now for a long time to come.

Renewed Demand For Youth.

Omaha World-Herald: One indication that the tide has turned toward recovery is found in the reports from the University of Nebraska, telling of the demand for graduates. Industry again is asking for men and women, especially with technical training, who are leaving the universities to embark upon the business of making a living. The demand is so great, in the opinion of Prof. Miles W. Haney, that for the next 10 or a dozen years the schools of the country will be unable to supply graduates enough.

Not the least lamentable feature of unemployment in recent years has been the graduation of thousands of eager and ambitious young men and women from the schools of the land, ready to take their places in the workaday world, and finding no place open for them. Some of us have seen these youngsters, starting out with high hopes to find employment for which they had so long prepared, losing that hope at repeated rebuffs, and in the end becoming soured on the world which seemed to have no place for them. They needed all the philosophy that higher education is supposed to give the student, and too often that philosophy failed.

They—and the high school graduates who didn't go on to college—became a part of the youth problem of the land. Some of them lost faith in the American system and became the most bitter critics of the capitalistic economy. More depressing were those who lost faith even in themselves.

The problem is far from solved, but there are occasional gleams of light through the fog ahead. One such gleam is the report from the university. Let us hope it presages a spreading demand throughout the nation for the youth, whose courage, enthusiasm, energy, strength, ought never to be a drug on the market in a free country.

A Coincidence?

Omaha Journal-Stockman: It may be just a coincidence. Some people will say yes, some will say no. But here are the facts as stated by authorities, and you can take your choice as to whether crime flourishes in proportion to the amount of intoxicating liquors consumed.

The bureau of prohibition in the United States Treasury shows that from 1933 to 1936, inclusive, the manufacture of intoxicating liquors increased as follows: Malt liquors from 9,797,817 to 51,800,000 barrels; vinous liquors from 18,755,651 to 170,875,000 gallons; distilled liquors from 123,404,914 to 449,994,161 gallons.

And here are some of the things that have happened in the same period, according to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation:

"The past three years constitute 'the most terrible period of criminal history in the life of America.'"

During the "most terrible period" officers of the United States have been compelled to shoot 1200 criminals.

The underworld consists of 3,500,000 men and women at war with orderly government.

This world of vice and crime produces one felony every 20 seconds, 4,300 felonies every 24 hours, 1,500,000 felonies each twelve months. Not misdemeanors—felonies of record.

Seven hundred thousand boys and girls under voting age are criminals. Two hundred thousand persons now living in the United States will commit murder before they die. Three hundred thousand Americans will be criminally killed. A death by criminal violence every 45 minutes! An officer of the law killed by the underworld each week.

As to the revenues of the federal treasury from intoxicants, the total in 1936 was $505,464,037. These revenues were the chief argument in favor of prohibition repeal. Opposed to this revenue is the belief of the G-men that crime costs the United States fifteen billion dollars annually.

Whether one believes that the increase in intoxicants and the increasing tendency toward criminality are merely a coincidence, or are cause and effect, no one can gainsay that we are slipping along moral and law-respecting lines.

FRIENDSHIPS

Friendship as an inspiration and asset has been stressed a great deal of late. Close acquaintance increases understanding and removes prejudice. Surface impressions magnify a lot of little faults, and make one unwarrantably suspicious. Finding out the other fellow's problems develops a sympathetic attitude. When one holds coldly aloof he is likely to get the false notion that the other fellow is purely selfish, that his thought and effort are centered on self with no concern for the popular welfare. Knowing people is of surpassing importance. Rubbing shoulders mellows feelings and is mutually helpful. One finds the average person loves flowers and birds and children, and has a nature usually attuned to life's purest and noblest creatures. Cultivating friendships finds the best and builds content. The designing individual with bad motives, uncovered in the process of extending acquaintance, is an exception.

Will Perpetuate Observance. In the early years of the G. A. R., members formed in long columns, uniformed in blue and led by martial music, and marched to the cemetery to decorate the graves of departed veterans. Rapidly thinning ranks of Civil war soldiers have left few to share in the patriotic observance. The duty of the annual service has been bequeathed to another army of veterans—survivors of the World War. Not many years before the last member of the G. A. R. will have passed on, and in time the succeeding American Legion will exist only in memory. But soldier descendants of all wars will see that precious mounds on the hillside are remembered and that sacrifices are not forgotten, forever remaining objects of deepest devotion.

AGRICULTURE

In his sixth lecture before the New School of Social Research, Ogden L. Mills discussed agriculture's problems which, as he points out, are many and often in conflict. The grain grower is benefited by high prices for grain products, while the cattle feeder and dairyman may suffer loss because of these high prices. The speaker is engaged in apple growing, cattle raising and dairying. This he speaks from experience as well as from observation. He says agriculture is the most individualistic business in the world, and that its activities cannot be successfully planned in Washington. He quotes Jefferson: "Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap we would soon want bread." He believes a government can do much to help farming, but to regiment it and rob it of its freedom to initiate and complete is unwise. With reference to the desirability of life on a farm, he says: "We have long looked upon the farm as more than a mere place to make a living. I am sufficiently old-fashioned to believe that the farm provides, in goodly measure, that discipline which goes far in moulding good citizens." Regarding an overdose of government restrictions, he concludes: "The country now finds itself in the embarrassing position of buying from others the things which our farmers produce abundantly and which are not abundantly when unimpeded with restrictive measures."

Need Is To Live For Democracy

The speaker quoted Minnesota's records. Only about 6 percent of the young people enter professions; 20 percent go into commercial life; 29 percent into agriculture; 45 percent into industry. The question is how much does the school do to train these youths for the future life? He believes it hasn't done very much. The purpose of new training in the last year of high school is to see if the youth is fitted for the work he wants to follow.

Mr. Sanberg sees the need for a coordinator who will look after the young people before graduating. Students will have served an apprenticeship and should be guided into their work.

R. P. Williams, G. A. R., was a guest of the club.

Prof. O. R. Bowen reported on the birthdays of the week. He gave a short history of Jefferson Davis' life.

H. E. Siman reported on the Norfolk meeting Monday evening of last week.

Need Is To Live For Democracy

times like these—false hopes proposed by selfish, unscrupulous individuals and organizations have a profound influence upon those who have borne the brunt of this catastrophe. Many are too willing to be led astray by some "ism" which offers a ray of hope to improve conditions in the immediate future.

As pointed out by the speaker, great effort is being made to substitute a program of social security that will be socially safe and economically sound, but, Dr. Anderson feels that moral security is a prerequisite to social security. Many nations have sunk into oblivion, losing their prestige, influence and power because they neglected moral security and made military courage and materialistic values the highest virtues in life. While materialism, hedonism and lust for power contributed to the downfall of nations of the past they still constitute a menacing influence for those of the present.

"Situations in this country are not perfect but it is the duty of every citizen to cooperate in perfecting those conditions which are unsatisfactory," commented the speaker.

Dr. Anderson closed his address by paying tribute to the war dead and by challenging people today to continue to march for the building of a greater nation.

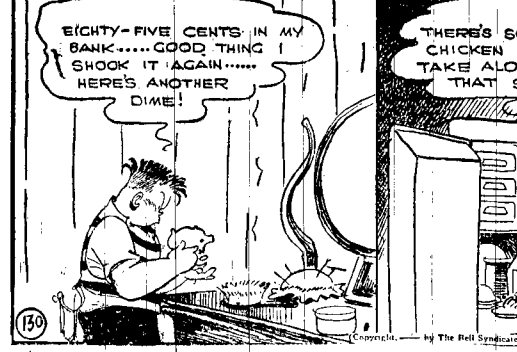

Irwin Sears post of the American Legion was in charge of the services. A. J. Hyatt and R. P. Williams, two remaining Civil war veterans, were invited guests.

The Wayne municipal band, directed by Prof. F. C. Reed, opened the program with "America," the audience joining in singing three verses. Rev. Wm. Kearns offered the invocation and Mary Sharer gave Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address." The band played another selection after which Margie Fitch spoke, "I Am an American." The services closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

The band led the line of march to the Greenwood cemetery afterward where ritualistic rites were conducted. Flowers girls, in charge of Mrs. A. L. Jacobsen of the Legion Auxiliary, placed wreaths on graves of veterans.

Prof. F. G. Dale is Legion commander. Prof. K. N. Park, G. A. Renard and Dean Allen Cook were the committee from the Legion in charge of arrangements. Dr. J. C. Johnson acted as marshal.

Little of the glamor and general jollification that marked the wind-up of other legislative sessions was evidenced when Nebraska's initial unicameral session finished its 98th day of activity and quit.

Included in new laws, effective now by virtue of their passage with the emergency clause or to become effective in August are those desired by farmers in the form of soil conservation and bindweed eradication programs.

With protein feeds very low priced in relation to grains, Walter Tolman of the Nebraska college of agriculture recommends generous feeding of these feeds.

Bandweed, Nebraska's public enemy No. 1 when it comes to weeds, can be killed by summer tillage at a lower cost than originally deemed necessary.

Using a seven-toot duck foot cultivator and cultivating from 3 to 4 inches deep, the following conclusions were reached in the experiment: "Average of intervals between cultivations on ten fields for the first year of tillage was 8.2 days and for the second year 10.2 days."

Nothing New. Lincoln Journal: The word "new" is often misused. It is also overworked. It is a short, expressive term that carries along with it the idea of a discovery of something that heretofore has been hidden from mankind.

Human welfare work of the past has been build upon that theory. The right to eat has never been denied, although in certain situations the opportunity to eat has been restricted.

It has been shown time and again that emergency measures imposed on the people during the depression are not new. They have all been tried. Under the new deal the relief for suffering comes from a paternal government. That is not new.

Harry Hopkins was not expounding a new philosophy. He was merely using a high sounding phrase for political effect. He is just another politician with a yen for spending tax money where it will do most good to his administration. That is not to deny the need for relief in many cases.

Neither does it carry along with it the conviction that, after four years of the new deal, recovery is with us.

Neither does it carry along with it the conviction that, after four years of the new deal, recovery is with us.

Race Track Gambling. Lincoln Journal: The Michigan senate defeated a bill the other day that legalized dog racing. Gov. Ammons vetoed a bill passed by the Colorado legislature that would have legalized race track gambling.

As a matter of fact friends of the sporting element hoped to secure an enlargement of chance taking privileges from the Nebraska law makers, but in the end were content to accept defeat for their more ambitious plans, that if they had been successful, would have opened wide the gates for all kinds of gambling.

Gambling is not popular among business men. They see collections slowed up and their daily trade lessened during the racing season. They hear of families in want because of parimutuel losses. Relief totals are enlarged because of gambling. Money that goes to the gamblers in many cases is taken away from needy families.

In Lincoln many people still buy chances on races that are run in other states and baseball pools and chance taking schemes will enable promoters to reap a harvest during the summer season.

Parimutuel in Nebraska has proved a wedge that helps to reopen other forms of gambling. Where the law legalizes one kind of gambling and refuses to sanction another, its ban is not always highly regarded.

Suppose Capital Should Strike. Omaha Journal-Stockman: Of course the idea is unthinkable, but just suppose that tomorrow morning or next Monday, the capital interests of the United States or of any one state or even of a single city should decide to go on strike. Suppose that not a factory, a store, a bank should open; that railroads, street cars, trucks, buses, taxicabs and all means of public transportation were to halt for a week or a month.

We repeat that such a happening would be unthinkable. Capital recognizes ten much responsibility, not only to itself but to its employees and to the public at large. To let such a thing happen for any other condition or influence beyond its own control, yet the bare consideration of such a possibility should have a sobering influence on a public which is getting accustomed to the news of some big concern being closed indefinitely by workers' strikes and should provide food for serious thought among the strikers themselves.

For the responsibility of business to the public, its customer, rests not on capital alone but on capital and labor jointly. Labor unions that have the right sort of stuff in them realize this and resort to strikes only as a last resort after every other means of reaching agreements or gaining redress for legitimate grievances has been exhausted. The idea of a strike just to "get" some industry or group of industries, as has been suggested in recent news stories, would not be considered so long as the major issues of hours, wages and working conditions were reasonably satisfactory.

Capital and labor do have a joint responsibility, not only to the public but to themselves and to each other. Working together in harmony to produce better goods, expand markets and increase production, they will find the road to mutual profit and to a higher living standard than the workers of any nation ever have enjoyed. But let them continue their bickering and tearing throats as they have been doing in recent months, and there is danger that the whole American industrial system may topple. That would mean not only government control but government operation, and if anything in this country is certain, it's that neither employers or workers want that to come.

Denver School Head Speaks

Dr. C. E. Schofield Urges College Graduates To Prepare To Live.

"Prepare to Live" was the topic of the address given by Dr. Charles Edwin Schofield, president of Hill College, Denver, at the commencement exercises at the Wayne State Teachers college Thursday morning.

The speaker made the statement that a man has to live and it is a problem of those in institutional establishments to train teachers for the educational program of society. It is important that teachers succeed in cultivating within the minds of students the ability to do rational and critical thinking. Any education disciple who contents himself with developing of skills and teaching use of tools has failed. "It is more important to understand the purpose and use of tools and the character and motivation of the life of the user," commented Dr. Schofield. "It is important that teachers in school train men and women to live," he added.

The school president pointed out three propositions which he includes in an adequate analysis of what is involved in living. The first is: "We are alive to the extent to which we are aware of the significant elements of environment." He pointed out that one of the measures of progress is the increasing sensitiveness of organisms to environment. It is part of the price paid for culture. It is from this sensitiveness to environment that culture is derived.

"Are you aware of persons as persons?" asked the speaker. People are constantly tempted to think of persons as instruments to use to their own ends. "We shall not have been prepared to live until we have cultivated the habit of thinking of persons as persons," he remarked.

The speaker also discussed the matter of being aware of the deeper meaning of everyday experiences. In this connection Dr. Schofield used the example of the automobile and the degree to which people were unaware of the inventive genius back of the car. People are unaware of the thousands of persons toiling in all parts of life making the automobile for the convenience of others. They are unaware of opportunities derived from the automobile, the building of highways and the like. He then asked the question, "What do you see in your daily life? Are you aware of possibilities of living?"

The second proposition was: "We are alive to the extent to which we are aware and to the extent to which our life is adequately adjusted to the total environment." Again using the example of the automobile, the speaker pointed out that it will not work effectively unless the mechanics are geared together properly. "The gears of society are not working together as they should," commented Dr. Schofield. He explained that with the knowledge possessed by this generation, people ought to be in a position to meet every problem of society effectively. "People have failed to bring into effective adjustment the habits of personal and individual lives over the universe in which they live and the kind of beings they are," commented the president.

The third proposition offered by the speaker was: "We are alive to the extent to which we are masters of the world in which we live and of ourselves." Two ways in which an organism can meet changes is to adjust behavior or to reach out and change environment, according to the speaker. He asked the question, "What has made possible what we have today?" No changes have been made in geography, but the changes have been brought about because people dreamed. Under the leadership of the dream they have set up changes in environment and changed themselves.

In concluding the speaker summarized: "We are alive to the degree to which we are aware to which our life is adjusted to total environment and to which we are masters of our world and of ourselves. Prepare to live."

The exercises opened with the processional followed by the singing of the "Alma Mater." The symphony band played "The Tamboula," Rev. Fay Charling Mills gave the invocation, and Prof. Russell Anderson sang, "Arm, Arm, Ye Brave." Degrees were conferred by Pres. J. T. Anderson after the class had been presented by Dean H. H. Hahn. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. C. Heidenreich.

Wayne City Library News

A new series of articles is being received at the Wayne city library on the subject of motion pictures. These periodicals include a study guide and teachers guide on current pictures. In connection with this are articles on the art of motion pictures; motion pictures and the public; pictures in the making; history of picture making. "Motion Pictures and the Family," is another pamphlet which contains comments on current films by teachers, educators and community leaders.

According to the department of library service, sponsored by the Nebraska Federation of Woman's clubs, 120 libraries have been sponsored by Woman's clubs which are partially or entirely maintained by them. Referring to the same report, "Nebraska has only one county which has voted a tax levy for support of a library. According to the state law, any library board may contact a school district, county board or township for a certain sum sufficient to cover the expense of serving such area. A library should never be spread over more territory than that which supports it, as no service can be carried on without funds."

In a list of "Noteworthy Gifts and Bequests in 1936" compiled by the American Library association, gifts range from $200 to $750,000. In Nebraska the past year several organizations have contributed gifts to libraries. Two libraries, Sidney and Mitchell, report gifts of $50 each from the American Legion Auxiliary for the purchase of books. The Nebraska Library Commission was given $1,150 by a group of Omaha business men for the purchase of a bookmobile.

Wallis Warfield whose marriage to the Duke of Windsor takes place this Thursday, will not be called her royal highness, according to decision announced Friday. The couple plan a visit to the United States as a second honeymoon. A hundred thousand people walked across the new Golden Gate bridge at San Francisco last Thursday. The $35,000,000 span of 4,200 feet is the world's longest suspension span. The occasion was "pedestrian" day. The bridge was opened to cars Friday.

Hidden Taxes Dull Taxpayer's Feeling.
People who are close to this administration admit that this government will never go back to the old-time budgets which used to be around four or five billion dollars. If good times come, these people say, we may get below a seven billion dollar a year budget, but not for long. They know that the budget will always go up. It always has gone up. In answer to the many questions asked by newly arrived visitors here: "Where will it all come out?" The answer is that it will come out of the pockets of the people. It is argued that the people continue to want more and more. That costs money, people's money. So that is why there is so much talk right now about our tax structure. Some are advocating the repeal of "hidden taxes" which now produce most of the government revenue and enact instead direct and visible taxes that touch the pocket nerves of the largest number of voters. These people figure that when they touch the individual pocket-book, they touch the heart. They feel if the people or voters actually feel the hidden taxes which they do not feel so much now, they might suddenly realize that they are hiring somebody to actually spend their actual cash in hand.

Want An Embargo On Junk Metal.

Although it has been going on for quite a few years, members of the House and Senate have suddenly awakened to the fact that America is being denuded of scrap tin and scrap iron, which is being shipped to Japan and European countries, where it is being turned into engines and munitions of war. Junk dealers all over the United States have been gathering the castiron metals in quantities and shipping it out, until at last the metal interests of the United States are crying for an embargo before our country is stripped of metal which is needed here. Only a short time ago we went into a war to end all wars and to make the world safe for democracy, and now a bill has been introduced in the Senate asking for the control of junk metal and it may come up for discussion later with some very interesting revelations.

City Wants More Money.

So fast is this City of Washington growing that the commissioners of the town are formulating a five year—seventy-five million dollar improvement program for the district. Although plans are under way by the city government to increase taxation here, the people of the town are focusing their eyes on Congressmen, wanting the taxpayers of the forty-eight states to contribute a little money toward the expense of this city.

Crowds of Employees Amaze Nebraskans.

Wonderment is written on the faces of Nebraska visitors who go down town at 9 o'clock in the morning and see thousands of well dressed young men and young women hurrying to get into the office buildings. They come out again by the thousands at four or four thirty in the afternoon. During those hours the streets are jammed with buses, street cars, taxis and private cars. It is a street traffic problem twice a day; morning and afternoon.

Nebraskans say they see such crowds once a year—that's when the circus comes to their town. Washington has a circus crowd twice a day, only the Washington crowds are about twenty times the size of our circus crowds in Nebraska.

"What God Hath Wrought."

On 14th and "F" streets, here in Washington, stands a telephone pole which marks the spot where the first telegraph office in the United States was located. It might be of interest also to know that the first telegraph ever sent was "clicked off" on a telegraph key by Samuel F. B. Morse on May 24, 1844, and this telegraph was sent from the old supreme court room in the capitol building to Alfred Vail, who was a partner of Morse and who lived at Baltimore. The telegram read as follows: "What God Hath Wrought." Vail had gone to Baltimore which is a short distance from Washington for the express purpose of receiving this message and testing their new invention.

The old supreme court room which was the first sending station of telegrams, is threatened to become an inner room, because plans show a bill has already passed the Senate to change the entire front of the nation's capitol. The bill will be given a hearing in the House committee on buildings and grounds, which committee, a year ago, defeated such an attempt.

New Efficiency and Economy.

People at home ought to know that several committees have been appointed to study government bureaus and government spending and that these committees have made their reports. The president's message on executive reorganization was the result of a committee which was appointed by the executive. One committee dwells

THE 1st REALLY NOW MOWER IN 75 YEARS. It's the new Oliver "Clip-Cut" the new "Clip-Cut" bar with more knife sections and guards—starts cutting instantly, and keeps right on cutting faster and cleaner. The guards are greatly improved. No matter what kind of crop you're cutting, you take smaller "hits" and more of them. You do the same amount of work a lot easier. Even in stony land the same guards do the job. Lifetime gears lock off the axle to take weight off the horse's necks, run in a constant bath of oil in a leak-proof, dust-proof housing. Because of the "Clip-Cut" action and running-in-oil principle, the Oliver pulls a full 10 to 15 per cent easier. The long one-piece axle and the rugged four-square frame are added features. Come in and see the new "Clip-Cut." It means as much in mowing as the name "Oliver" means in plowing. OLIVER H. H. Hachmeier PHONE 62 WAYNE, NEBR.

I'm no big company myself, just because I tell a good big company's oil, etc. This business is mine, and their oil has to show my customers a heap longer mileage and cool smoother operation, or I wouldn't make near as safe a living. A lot of my trade comes from clear out around, because nothing but my Germ Processed oil will Oil-Plate their engines. Repair Grade Out In Floods Railroad Tracks West Are Repaired Monday After Two Washouts. The railroad grade two miles west of Carroll, washed twice by flood waters the past week, was repaired Monday so that trains could run regularly again. Though Carroll received only a light shower of rain Monday night last week, flood water from north-west swept through the valley early Tuesday morning and took about a half mile of railroad track out two miles west of town. The track was repaired by Thursday and was ready for use when flood water again came through the valley early Friday morning. This carried a half mile of railroad track about a quarter mile and wrapped it around a bridge. The road bed was taken out with this wash. About 80 men have been at work each day since, Sunday included, and have rebuilt the grade and lines. Several trainloads of rock and cinders came in for the grade, 27 cars of cinders arriving Monday this week to complete the work. The train made the run between Wayne and Carroll each day last week. Rains in Carroll registered 41 of an inch Monday and Tuesday last week but the amount was much heavier northwest. The rainfall in town Friday was 1.6 inches. The amount, then was heavier north and west. It is estimated that in Laurel and Randolph vicinities rainfall totaled 6 to 7 inches last week. Water flooded the north part of town to the depot. Fields were badly washed in the valley by last week's rains. Considerable soil will have to be replaced. Some bridge approaches were washed out, and trees and telephone poles were damaged, many by the wind. Telephone lines were down.

Farm Bureau News (By Walter L. Moller.) The more gullies a small stream has, the fewer perennial feeders and the more flash floods it is likely to have. Gullies promote quick floods. It is rainfall that sinks in that supplies the spring and feeds the brooks. Gullies drain off the water before it can sink into the soil. It is estimated that 200 million gullies have been added to the topography of this country as the result of erosion. The conservation program seeks to heal old gullies and prevent the formation of new ones. The time to start controlling a gully is before the gully "grows up," says the soil conservation service. A little attention to natural waterways in the early spring or late fall may save a big "doctor bill" later. Before a natural draw in a cultivated field shows signs of gullying, it should be seeded to well-adapted grasses. Vegetation in the waterway spreads surface water more evenly and lessens the danger of erosion damage by preventing its rapid concentration in a narrow channel. Such vegetated waterways can be mowed and often provide a supplemental hay crop. State recommendations should be followed with regard to kinds and amounts of seed mixtures to use. Rates of seeding should be slightly greater than for general pasture or meadow seeding because a denser and more rapid growth is important. If a nurse crop of small grain is clipped when nearing maximum height, the tops lodge in the stubble, provide a mulch and give added protection to the young grass plants. Contour furrows on land in pasture or hay crops trap escaping rain, allow it to settle into the soil and almost always result in thicker plant growth along the furrow. Shallow furrows closer together are better than deeper furrows farther apart. From a practical standpoint an untreated split post may be better than an untreated round post. If the round post has a great deal of sapwood around the heartwood, then the staples may not reach the heartwood. Split posts may be set so that staples may be driven directly into the heartwood where they will hold long after the sapwood has rotted away. When a post is treated with a preservative, such as creosote, then the round post is best, with the exception of red oak. The heartwood on other trees, especially white oak, red gum, Douglas fir, and southern yellow pine, will not absorb much of the preservative even under high pressure, although the softer sapwood readily absorbs the protective creosote. Either the heartwood or sapwood of the red oak absorbs the preservative. The outstanding improvement in recent years in marketing eggs, say officials of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, has been the marketing of eggs under government grade. One of the advantages of marketing eggs by grade is that the eggs carry the grade designation through the various marketing channels from producer to consumer. Producers selling according to government standards realized the value of quality in eggs, and are induced by the dollar and cents factor to produce higher quality eggs. Wary of having motorists whizz by him was a young hitch-hiker from Houston, So., on the highway near Eagle Pass, Tex., he tried out an idea. He piled rocks high on the road, halted cars "for inspection." First car he stopped was driven by Sheriff Herman Lehmann. He got a "hitch" ... to the Eagle Pass jail.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Blake of Murray, Neb., decided they couldn't afford to keep their dog. They started for Lincoln and after they had gone a ways found a pocketbook missing. They returned home and on the way found the dog coming toward them with the pocketbook in his mouth. They changed their minds and decided to keep the dog.

At Lakehurst, N. J., a survivor of the Hindenburg crew saw a robin on a nest in the blackened framework of the former queen of the air and viewed it as a good omen. Heinrich Bauer visited the wreckage, saw the nest, a blue egg in it, and remarked: "It is a good omen. The Hindenburg is dead but from its remains springs new life. So, lighter than air craft shall take on new life."

The Florida legislature at Tallahassee today weighed a proposal to give a full confederate pension of $40 a month to Branch Givens, Tampa, who was only 9 years old when the Civil war ended. Sponsors of the bill said that Givens ran six miles in 1865 to warn a detachment of confederate troops of the approach of a larger force of union troops.

George Priggie of Scottsbluff, was puzzled when he saw a crowd gathered about a ditch in which he had been working. The crowd was puzzled, too, when it saw Priggie. The men in the ditch were digging for Priggie's body. Priggie, a plumber, had walked away to get some cement just before the ditch caved in. No one had seen him leave, so fellow workers began feverishly to remove several tons of dirt, thinking he had been buried.

A New York woman broke the police glass and pulled the hook. Three engines, two hook and ladder companies, an assistant fire chief, two fire boats and other fire apparatus arrived. "Where is the fire," demanded the policeman. "It's no fire. I want an ambulance to take my sister to the hospital," the woman replied. An ambulance came for the sister and a patrol wagon for the woman. The judge was sympathetic and dismissed the charges as it was an innocent mistake.
