

Often Dragged... by Among First Settlers... Revealing in the Past... Nature's Store of Evil... Giving Up Everything... Not Like Most Kings... Fatigue... Envy a Boomerang.

One thing of which first settlers had plenty and to spare was time. They had time to do anything that happened along, and usually too much time happened along to keep them busy and drive away their monotony.

Settlers looked out for one another. All were equally deficient in conveniences. No one's possessions were enough to brag about.

Like a railroad, the flouring mill was eagerly sought by every early settler. Often a bonus was raised for the purpose.

Taming the west and bringing it under cultivation were regarded by common folks as often little to do with, made little to do, and then heavily hanging time, in the humdrum of isolation, added much to the hardships endured.

To Keep People Busy. Nature seems to have an exhaustless magazine of evils on hand to dish out to inhabitants to keep them busy dodging dangers and modifying losses.

Supplanting the Poor. A fellow who kept all the commandments and did not know what else to do to possess a full measure of righteousness was advised to give all he had to the poor.

commodity loans will not help these unfortunate farmers, so the plea is made for work relief.

Session Ends.

The first session of the Seventy-fifth congress ended at 7:22 p. m., Saturday, August 21 and what an ending.

The last hours of this congress were very much like an auction block. You "scratch my back and I'll scratch yours" was the prevailing sentiment.

Often, the concluding twenty-four to forty-eight hours of a session of congress are more momentous than the preceding seven or eight months.

Bankhead Team Gets Results.

The south got a three-cent cotton subsidy. An outright guarantee on cotton prices. The measure was slipped into the third deficiency appropriations bill without a hearing.

It was strange the way this particular cotton subsidy bill went through. The house members were put at ease by a resolution to pass a real farm bill next session along with a wages and hour bill.

"Now," said the teacher, "which boy can name five things that contain milk?"

"I can," shouted a freckle-faced youngster, "milk, butter, an' cheese, an' ice cream an'—an' two cows."

took out two millions from relief funds to give them more free parks and they told the Virginians how they got money for free parkways and they "sewed up" the program in this sectional manner.

The Wisconsin progressives joined the Nebraska and Iowa members in their fight against the cotton money unless corn and dairy farmers were given something, but the steam roller just flattened them out.

No Economy in Last Session.

It has been a very expensive session for taxpayers. The amount of money authorized or appropriated will run close to eleven billion dollars.

Government employees are not in favor of any reorganization plan which may result in the loss of their jobs.

But that is coming because protests from home against useless expenditures have reached the ears of powerful committee chairmen who have much to say about major legislation.

Earthquake Gives Novel Experience For Sisters Traveling in Mexico

Being aroused from a nice, comfortable sleep by a tapping sound on the window and the swaying of one's bed is a rather startling sensation, according to Miss Leta Scott who arrived home Monday night after a week of summer vacation in Mexico. Her sister, Miss Mittie Y. Scott of Chicago, accompanied her.

While Miss Scott and her sister were in Mexico City they were awakened from sleep by a peculiar noise which seemed to be someone tapping on their hotel window. Later they experienced the peculiar sensation of having their beds sway. Miss Scott's sister ran into the hall and found several people frightened by the same sensation. A girl from California, who was a member of the Kirkland tour with the Scotts, assured them that it was a small earthquake. Damage in Mexico City was small but nearby cities had quite severe shocks and two people were killed. Experiences by different members of the tours and reactions to the quake were interesting. One lad, just out of high school, from Mobile, Ala., sent his father the following telegram: "Am in an earthquake. What are my legal rights?" He often wired his father, who was an attorney, for advice during his trip. A high school principal from St. Louis, who was traveling with her sister, insisted that a man was under her bed. Others of the party stood in the street feeling that safer than being in a building; still others were in the theatre where they could see the chandeliers swaying. This was the first earthquake Miss Scott had been in.

Mexico City was the headquarters for the Kirkland tour and all trips were directed from that place. The party was divided into cars; each car with a foreign but English speaking driver. Also accompanying each party was a guide who would describe places of interest.

Guadalupate located about 100 miles from Mexico City was one of the places of interest. The party visited the three pyramids which have been built there. The Pyramid of the Sun is larger in area than any of the Egyptian pyramids. The Pyramid of the Moon and the La Grotto which is a cave are also located there.

The Desert of the Lions at Talca was also visited. Friday in Talca is market day when people from all over gather to sell their wares. Pottery, baskets, linens and many other articles may be purchased at the open market.

Knockmilo or the "Floating Gardens" is an ideal place to spend a quiet and peaceful Sunday, according to Miss Scott. When the Kirkland party arrived, they found a canoe decorated with flowers with the word "Welcome" awaiting them. Many Mexican families were out on the water for the day and one family in a canoe had two daughters who sang for the American tourists and one of them did a Mexican dance. The Americans had to return soon, however, as several in the party wanted to attend a bull fight in the afternoon.

The summer home of the late Dwight Morrow, former ambassador of the United States to Mexico, is located at Cuernavaca. Miss Scott reports that Morrow was very well thought of in Mexico and the natives are particularly concerned when his name is mentioned. Cortez palace is also located at Cuernavaca. This is also supposed to be the place where Lindbergh courted Anne. An artificial stone basin is one of the beautiful spots of the city and it is there that Empress Carlotta and her maids bathed. Miss Scott played on the piano which belonged to the empress.

Taxaco, a silver mining city, is picturesque. Streets are very narrow and hilly. This is one of the favorite haunts of artists. It is laid out in no order but all of the buildings seem to be jumbled together.

The drive to Pueblo was very pretty. Three snow-covered mountain tops are visible on the highway. Two of the mountains, "Old Popo" and "Sleeping Lady" are extinct volcanoes. Orizaba is not always visible.

Chalula is a city of churches.

Miss Scott jokingly remarked that there is a church for every day of the year.

One morning the group took the train from Mexico City to Cordoba which is about 14 miles from Orizaba. This is supposed to be the "Tri of 1,000 Wanderers." The scenery is lovely, remarked Miss Scott, with large orchards of bananas, coffee beans and pineapples. Gardens are plentiful and many trees are hung with orchids.

Excitement, and not always pleasant, seemed to accompany the Kirkland tours. As the group prepared to leave Mexico City they divided, planning to meet again in San Antonio. Miss Scott and her sister stayed over in Mexico City for another day; part of the group visited in Monterey and the remainder of the party took the special train, City of Mexico, for San Antonio. The third trip for the new special met with disaster enroute to Texas and was wrecked. Several members of the Kirkland tour were injured and two quite severely. Among those injured was the St. Louis high school principal, Miss Scott and her sister visited some of the injured members when they reached San Antonio. One of them described the accident. It is thought that the train was built to travel at too great a rate of speed for the road bed. The cars were tipped on one side and it was necessary to walk on the berths in order to leave the train.

The weather in Mexico was always very pleasant, according to Miss Scott, and the sisters always slept under two woolen blankets. Evenings were cool enough so that one felt comfortable wearing a coat.

After reaching the states Miss Scott and her sister drove to Houston, Texas, picked some cotton, and then crossed into Louisiana. Of particular interest in Louisiana was the Evangeline country at Lafayette. They visited a curio shop owned by a descendant of Evangeline Oak, a character made famous by Longfellow. Loyal to his ancestors he gave a lecture about Evangeline and a lecture was typically pro-French.

Miss Scott and her sister toured through New Orleans, lower part of Mississippi and stayed in Alabama for a few days. They visited Muscle Shoals which is supported by three towns, Tuscumbia, the home of Helen Keller, Florence and Shuffield. They visited the nitrate plants and were impressed by the manner in which people speak of the nitrate. Rather than mention war it is said that the nitrate is used for fertilizer and for defense purposes.

In Tennessee the women visited in Columbus at the former home of President Polk, the Andrew Jackson hermitage in Nashville and the parthenon. The parthenon is the exact replica of the parthenon in Athens.

Crossing Kentucky into Indiana, the two instructors visited the Indian mounds at Vincennes, Ind., and the monument erected to George Rogers Clark who saved the northwest territory for colonies during the Revolutionary war. They also visited the library at Crawfordville where Lew Wallace wrote Ben Hur.

Miss Scott and her sister drove to San Antonio visiting enroute at universities and state capitols through Kansas, Oklahoma and in Texas. They also attended the centennial and frontier fiesta at Fort Worth, Texas. The fiesta had one scene, House of Tomorrow, which depicted the theme of the four best sellers of the year, Gone With the Wind, Lost Horizon, It Can't Happen Here and Wake Up and Live.

Miss Scott's sister remained in Chicago and her niece, Miss Arlene Scott, who had been in Ann Arbor, Mich., attending school this summer, accompanied her to Wayne, Miss Arlene will teach at Randolph this year.

Sightseeing Trip In Eastern States Proves Of Much Interest to Travelers

Edison institution at Detroit contains interesting reproductions of things that have been important in history and science, it was found by Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Laedtke, Miss Dorothy Liedtke and Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Martin, the last of Genoa, who arrived home August 21 after spending two weeks in the east. They saw the reproduction of "Independence" which covers an eight-acre area. The development of transportation, agricultural implements and manufacturing were displayed as well as Admiral Byrd's plane, the Floyd Bennett plane and the earliest locomotives and cars.

Greenfield Village, also located in Detroit, is a collection of buildings brought from other places by Henry Ford and set up exactly as they were when seen by him. Among these are Edison's workshop and home, the courthouse in which Lincoln practiced law, the chair in which Lincoln was sitting when he was assassinated, and it also displayed rails which were split by Lincoln. There are 50 buildings in all.

Leaving Detroit the Nebraska folks crossed the Ambassador bridge into Canada and followed Lake Erie to Niagara Falls. They remained overnight there in order to see the colored lights which are flashed on the falls in the evening. Candle power used in the lights is approximately 1,300,000,000. The mist is heavy over the falls and in some places it appears to be rain. In Queen Victoria park, located near the falls, flowers and lawns are beautiful, according to Mrs. Liedtke. The falls were viewed from both the Canadian and American sides but loyal to their own country, the American view seemed the prettiest to the Nebraskans.

The next jump was to New York where the group toured the NBC studio located in one of the buildings of Rockefeller center. From the top of the RCA building, which is 82 stories high, they watched the Queen Mary sail from the harbor for a trip to Europe. They also witnessed a rehearsal of Peter Van Steen's orchestra in preparation for a Walter O'Keefe program.

All tickets for broadcasts must be obtained from four to six weeks in advance.

Other places of interest which were visited included the aquarium in Battery park and the sta-

Aviation Thrills Youth

Flying is the ambition of many a young man, but to Bob Theobald, who visited here last weekend with his father, this ambition has been realized. At the present time Bob is a member of the first pursuit group, 27th squadron, A flight at Selfridge Field, Mich.

After attending school in Oregon, Bob went to Randolph and Kelly Fields in San Antonio where he had a year of flying school with the United States army air corps. He was graduated last February as a flying cadet and then was transferred to the first pursuit group at Selfridge Field, Mich.

Mornings at the school are spent in flying locally around the field practicing maneuvers, formation work, individual combat, ground gunnery and aerial gunnery. Instrument flying is becoming a very important thing. All types of navigation instruments are used and they are placed similar to a dashboard on a car. By these instruments and weather data, such as division and speed of wind at different altitudes, one can figure how much the ship is drifting with the wind. During practice with the navigation instruments, a hood is placed over the cockpit and one flies entirely by the instruments. A two-seated plane is used, however, with a safety pilot in the back seat to grab the controls if necessary.

Radio is also very important in flying. A pilot may follow a radio beam from city to city on all air lines. Radio facility charts give the frequency and direction of the beams. According to Bob, one may go almost anywhere in the United States by way of the air lines.

One seldom hears of air collisions. Air traffic is regulated by the department of commerce. When flying by compass from 1 degree to 180 degrees or east one maintains an even altitude either two, four or six thousand feet. When flying 181 degrees to 360 degrees or west, a pilot flies at odd altitudes such as one, three or five thousand feet. Following these regulations is extremely important in bad weather.

Among other of Bob's flights is the navigation flight in which six planes or a squadron visit all parts of the country within a radius of 1,000 miles of the field. Flying by
