IN CHARACTER OF SANTA CLAUS FOR MANY YEARS HERE

THOUGH his health is now somewhat impaired, Wm. Hogewood is still impersonating Santa Claus in the Wayne business district. A liking for children, exhaustless patience and a gentle voice are requisites to the part, and they are possessed in abundance by Mr. Hogewood. For twenty years—excepting one year when he had an arm put out of commission by a refractory stick of wood—he has radiated the kindly qualities of the old saint, to the joy of children. In that capacity, he has served in churches, lodges, stores and at community pre-Christmas festivities. It is hoped his health will permit him to serve many more years, and children will remember him with esteem as Santa Claus long after they have reached maturity.

The honor is one of the highest given in scout work. Prof. A. F. Gulliver received a like award a few years ago. Prof. Parke has served as district commissioner in Logan Valley which includes Wayne, Cedar, Dixon and Knox counties.

About 350 attended the Fremont meeting at which Coach Roy Lyman of the University of Nebraska, was the principal speaker. Arrange To Help Wayne Children

In Need Of Contributions To Further Program Of Health Here.

Plans for aiding underprivileged children in Wayne were furthered Monday evening by the community coordinating committee of which Prof. K. N. Parke is chairman. Various groups have volunteered money for the welfare work and these organizations have been assigned specific cases. The committee needs about $100 more to provide for the first step in the movement, this being to care for eyes, tonsils and teeth. Organizations or individuals able to help in this project are asked to notify Prof. Parke and state the amount to be contributed. He will then assign health work to be taken care of for children.

Wayne Kiwanis club a few weeks ago made a survey of underprivileged children in both local schools and found about 60 needing attention. The Red Cross is providing milk in school for these children; the welfare organization is helping with clothing; and the Business & Professional Women's department of the Women's club is providing shoes. The Legion Auxiliary, Young Business Men's club, Kiwanis club, Women's club, College Faculty club and P. E. O. have made gifts of money for the health program, and the Legion has voted to assist. Prof. Parke urges other groups or individuals to make pledges so that the work may be completed.

The first aim is to take care of the immediate health needs of the children. The coordinating committee is organizing a group of about 25 who will visit homes of these children to check their diet and their health and clothing needs.

Assisting Prof. Parke on the coordinating committee are Mrs. R. W. Lacy, Mrs. F. S. Berry, Mrs. Esther Thompson, Frank Exler, P. A. Theobald and J. M. Lockard.

INCREASED TRADE REWARDS EFFORTS IN WAYNE CENTER

CHRISTMAS shopping has been noticeably speeded up Saturday's trade volume exceeded normal, and every day store clerks have been kept on the move to satisfy early buyers. Last Saturday Santa Claus and free rides for children gave parents liberty to visit stores and make selections from Christmas stocks. Music by the municipal band also was an outdoor attraction, contributing liberally to the holiday spirit. Next Saturday will be another gala day when a program, especially arranged for the children, will be given in the spacious city auditorium. Only seven more shopping days remain before Christmas, and they promise to be busy ones. Read advertisements in today's Herald carefully to ease the holiday shopping task.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS ADDRESS

Miss Margaret Schemel Tells Of Education In England.

"Education in England is not as democratic as in the United States," stated Miss Margaret Schemel in an address to the Kiwanis club Monday following the noonday luncheon at Hotel Stratton. "England says we will educate you if you want it."

Miss Schemel briefly portrayed the life of an English boy, speaking mainly of those around Huddersfield in Yorkshire. The worsted materials are made at Huddersfield. The men are rosy cheeked and hurry about their business. The lack of fruit juice, cod liver oil and such in the diets of the children is found in the school examinations. If air is healthful, the English children should be healthy because they spend so much time out-of-doors.

The English people are of average intelligence and very thrifty. The boys wear very tailored suits, and top coats are home made. They wear cycling stockings in all seasons. Their shoes are very good and always polished.

The speaker explained that the Yorkshire boys are spoiled by their mothers. The children are always obedient.

Miss Schemel told of the respect on the Sabbath shown in England. All parks, shows, tennis courts, cafes and other public buildings are closed on Sundays. The Sunday newspapers carry no news. The people go to church or chapel quite regularly. Sunday school is held in the middle of the afternoon. People in Yorkshire are very musical and it is the ambition of every boy to sing in the choir of the Church of England.

land. The children are very polite to their elders. Miss Schemel thinks this barrier should be broken down some, more as the situation is in the United States.

The English boy may start to school as early as the age of 3 if schools will take him. The standard age is 5. He may go to a public school which is private in England, or a cooperation school which is financed by the city, or a church school. From the elementary school he goes to a big boys' school at the age of 9. At 11 years of age he is given a chance to take an examination which will let him into high school and if he fails he can try again at 12 years of age. English boys must stay in school until 14 years old. If parents want the boy to continue on to high school, they must pay $75 a semester. Scholarships pay all expenses for the pupil including the uniforms the girls must wear. David Sanders of the college sang two solos with Milo Henkels accompanying him.

FORD offers two new cars for 1938—the Standard Ford V-8 and the De Luxe Ford V-8. They are different in appearance—but both to the same high standard of mechanical excellence—on the same chassis.

Because people liked our 1937 car so well, they bought more than of any other make. They liked its looks, its smooth performance, and the way it handled. We have improved on that car in the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.

But some folks wanted still more size and style, with the same Ford advantages. For them, we designed a new De Luxe line. The De Luxe Ford V-8 Sedans are longer with more room, larger luggage space, and finer appointments all around.

De Luxe cars are equipped with the 85-horsepower engine only.

The Standard is even lower priced than the De Luxe. It has graceful new lines and well-tailored interiors—with a choice of engine sizes—85 or 60 horsepower.

Before Ford made V-type 8-cylinder engines available to every one, they were used only in expensive cars. Since then, four million Ford owners have learned the genuine enjoyment of driving an eight-cylinder car, with all-around economy.

The thrifty "80" engine, especially, makes possible in Standard models a very low first cost and equally low operating cost. With two distinct designs, two engine sizes and two price ranges, you'll find a 1938 Ford car to fit your needs exactly.

Social Security
 BEFORE his death, Ogden L. Mills wrote an article for the American Mercury concerning the social security law, and it was published in the December issue. He pointed out, as had been done by other writers previously, that social security funds are supplanted by an accumulating pile of IOU'S, and the money harvested from employees and employers is turned into the federal treasury for current expenditures.

Mr. Mills closed with these two paragraphs:
 "As I view the new deal program as a whole, two main purposes stand out: first, a determination to extend and perpetuate the power of this administration; and, second, a perfectly sincere desire to bring to the people a better life. The first objective is pursued with ingenuity, skill, singleness of purpose and unswerving tenacity. The attainment of the second objective is frustrated by bad economics, confusion of ideas, sloppy administration, and—above all—by constant subordination to the first and dominating purpose."

"The old age insurance law is just another example of this inner conflict. The administration's purpose was good—but its own need for survival had first to be provided for. Unfortunately for American wage earners, this provision demanded wage deductions amounting to billions of hard-earned dollars."

For Party Revival
 DEMAND is voiced for new leadership in the republican party with definitely outlined public policies. A constructive program that can be depended on is urged. Criticism is hurled at some former weaknesses. It is probable the most ill-advised step the republican party ever took was to nominate Harding for the presidency and open the way for the ascendancy of a group of cheap politicians, thus permitted to flourish under the Harding banner. Persons sincerely believing in republican principles were deeply incensed by the Harding blunder.

Then came Coolidge whose administration quietly set about paying off government debts. The Hoover succession followed as the depression descended, and a great statesman was obstructed in every endeavor to cushion the collapse sequent to the World War. Hoover could not come back as a presidential candidate, though probably no man in the present-day public eye has been more generally misunderstood or more unjustly misrepresented. People casting about for a man to handle a difficult task would hire Hoover, but when they vote they too often allow prejudice and glamor to supersede sound judgment. Though the sober appraisal of historians will deal fairly and generously with Hoover, prevailing needs are not likely to turn his superior knowledge and experience to advantage.

At a critical juncture Roosevelt was blazed as the country's savior. He was elected on a platform that was later repudiated. Costly experiments rode roughshod over repeated warnings. Billions of government funds were spent in trying to buy back prosperity. Scarcity of farm production was enforced to establish price parities. In this, the government had the help of nature which caused sweeping droughts. The hodge-podge of economic guessing brought too many taxes in proportion to what, and results have been huge debts, blasted expectations, gradual disillusionment, an increasing number of headaches, and a feverish quest for new cure-alls by Washington theorists.

Under the glare of Hearst publicity, happy Landon of Kansas, governor and amiable fellow, with no outstanding qualities for presidential timber, led republicans to defeat in 1936. Mr. Landon's tactful and timely announcement that he will not run again is accepted with approval.

Looking to the future, the republican party will necessarily find new leadership and follow a course in formulating public policies that will be consistent with American traditions and sound progress. Nambly-pamby disregard of the vulnerable New Deal record is quite impossible in preparing a safe, practical program. The need is for a middle-of-the-road attitude, an unbiased treatment of all classes and conditions, freedom from business restraints that increase government aid, restoration of confidence, avoidance of waste and enforcement of economy.

The wage and hour bill is the major issue in the national house this week, and many democrats, especially from the south, are disregarding party lines and joining hands in an effort to head off a new restriction on business and industry. The bill has been reported too strong in requirements for employers and not strong enough for labor unions. If the administration is bent on gaining the cooperation of industry, it should signal congress to cut out imposing additional burdens, and if labor unions have their future welfare in mind they would not demand more than employers can stand.

Japan presents charming, mannerisms when it perpetrates an outrage on other nations, mowing up American and British ships and killing noncombatants brought forth diffuse apologies. There would seem ground for suspicion that the Japs are inviting trouble and depending on Italy and Germany to help. As a rule Americans would like to see their countrymen get out of the oriental war zone, and stay out. There is plenty of willing force for defense of the home land, but little interest in going abroad to mix into the troubles of alien peoples.

Congressman Stefan's Washington letter in today's Herald contains valuable light on proposed farm legislation. The congressman voted against the bill in the form in which it passed the house. He is strongly opposed to the compulsory feature which virtually means regimentation. He does not like the idea of restraining the farmer while trying to help him. The house and senate measures, now in conflict, will be thrashed over by a joint committee and later presented for final action. Defeat of regimentation is earnestly hoped.

The perfunctory election in Russia Sunday was apparently celebrated by government execution of four accused citizens. The day was thus made more impressive. The reason Russia holds an election is said to show the rest of the world an example of unanimous support, not seeming to suspect that the world knows any opposition is likely to call for the services of the firing squad.

As to the question of whether Wall Street operations are investments or speculations, the Omaha Journal-Stockman explains that "it's an investment if you win and speculation if you lose."

Alpha Psi Omega Play Is Friday
 "First Lady" will be presented by the Alpha Psi Omega, national drama fraternity, Friday evening at the college auditorium at 8 o'clock. Special lighting and a library setting have made the staging difficult.

The play deals with a clash between society leaders, Lucy Chase Wayne, and Irene Hibbard, in which the former makes the mistake of trying to steer the nomination for the presidential candidate. The play abounds in typical George S. Kaufman wit with every line sparkling with humor.

Miss Lenore P. Ramsey, instructor of speech and English at the college, is directing the play. Miss Ramsey is also sponsor of the Alpha Psi Omega fraternity.

The cast is: Margaret Bruher as Sophy Prescott; Werner Welthert, Charles; Betty Sue Okerlin, Emily Paige; Margaret Jones, Lucy Chase Wayne; Robert Sutton, Stephen Wayne; Helen Peterson, Belle Hardwick; Irene Bastian, Mrs. Foster; Lorraine Cornell, Ann Forrester; Betty Wright, Mrs. H. Jones; Donna Rae Kohls, Mrs. H. DIVORCE.
 We have just read an article written by a lawyer on reasons for divorces many of which he has handled. He says the real causes are not often those presented or those permissible under the law, but have backgrounds of trivialities which no court would consider sufficient. Frequently men and women do not get along together harmoniously because of little conflicting habits — disagreeing mannerisms that rob one of his or her rights, but upset the balance and open the way for estrangement and finally divorce. Too late to cure a split in marital relations, the unimportance of complaints is seen and deeply regretted. Small differences should not be allowed to grow into a calamity, inviting separation. Each party to a marriage covenant has as much right to think and act independently as the other. Neither should be forced to accept the other's dictum in matters not germane to the original agreement. Harmony may be preserved and the rocks of divorce often avoided by conceding an equality of partnership, neither trying to change the other's tastes or break down the other's natural inclinations. Team work is essential in home building as in business building, and neither should permit trivial differences to interfere.

RESPONSIBILITY.
 "Passing the buck" is a convenient way to shift responsibility. What is everybody's business is often regarded nobody's business, and the result is defeat of popular conviction. Everybody knows war is wrong. Everybody knows it violates every humane principle and outrages every noble thought. The price exacted in men and money, health and happiness far outweighs fruits of greatest possible victory. Every national leader deprecates war. Even Mussolini who reveled in the blood of defenseless Ethiopians, boasts of his peaceful inclinations. He talks of good will, though he bears the unmistakable marks of sanguinary Mars, flaunting his African prowess and defying the rest of the world. The average dictator bears an olive branch in one hand and a sharp dagger in the other, uttering peace pleas in one breath and growling anathemas and revenge in the next. As a consequence, war threats often blaze into a conflagration of mutual slaughter. Only loss and woe follow. All are against war, knowing its folly and futility, but every one feels it is the other fellow's responsibility to avoid it. Let the question of war be left to an honest vote of every country, and it would be defeated. The rank and file everywhere would favor sensible compromise, but either they cannot or do not express themselves, and if they could, or did, their opinions would, if deemed advisable, be set aside.

Conflict Or Harmony?
 Omaha World-Herald:—"It isn't going to do any good to bellyache," Joseph P. Kennedy, wealthy business man and administration champion, admonished his associates. The wise course is to try to get together with the government with joining of forces to save a menacing situation.
 Said Lewis Douglas, Mr. Roosevelt's former director of the budget: "To deal in suspicion and hatred is to revert to barbarism. To deal in restraint and reason is to be civilized."
 Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, friendly to the administration, pleading for co-operation between government and business, said: "In the effort there is no time or place for reprisals or retaliation by either."
 Secretary Wallace, emphasizing "the vital importance of capital to the general welfare," pleads with business to "take the government's word for it that government wishes it well."
 From Secretary Morgenthau and various others has come counsel to the same effect. Let's stop this senseless and destructive warfare between private enterprise and government. Let each have confidence in the other. Let's both pull together in mutual good will for the common good.
 It is excellent counsel. This newspaper has been urging it for a long, long while.
 Recently it has rejoiced to see administration spokesmen, from the president on down, holding out the olive branch, and business spokesmen responding in kind.
 And now comes the acridulous Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior, with a bitter and blanket attack upon business, the courts and the press alike. Overloads, oppressors of the poor, plotters for fascism, turning their power against the welfare of America! To the lamp post with them, is the overtone of his harangue—or off with their heads!

And senator Norris of Nebraska, the president's right arm on the senate, speaks almost as sourly, and with ill concealed contempt of the private enterprise of the nation.
 It is this kind of conduct that makes the reconciliation so difficult. Nor is it a new thing. More than two years ago Mr. Roosevelt wrote to Roy Howard, in an open letter:
 "The interests of what we broadly term business are not in conflict with, but wholly in harmony with, mass interests. We are all merely seeking but getting the recovery of confidence. Our program has now reached substantial completion, and the breathing spell of which you speak is here—and very decidedly so."
 But four months later, in his message to congress, the president scathingly attacked business and "unscrupulous money-changers...ganging up against the people's liberties"—and a new series of measures spreading fear throughout the business world were urged upon the congress.
 Confidence is not thus established. Co-operation is not thus effected. When the president invites with one voice and excoiates with another; when his spokesmen at once cajole and threaten, some praising, others denouncing; no one, in or out of the business world, knows whom or what to believe. No one can have reasonable confidence that the president himself, from day to day, knows his own mind.

This explains why capital scurries into the cyclone cellar, why industry languishes, and the unemployment rolls are again alarmingly on the increase.
 And it is this situation that the president, seriously disturbed, is now attempting to correct, lest disaster befall not alone his administration but all the people.
 It cannot be corrected in the Harold Ickes way. It cannot be corrected by speaking with two tongues. Without consistency and good faith reconciliation and co-operation are made impossible.
 The administration should decide what it really wants to do and take a stand for it. This business of mounting a dozen horses and galloping off in all directions at once is both preposterous and hopeless.

Property Deed Filed.
 Property deed filed in Wayne county December 10 by Herman R. Kruger and wife confers to Fremont Joint Stock Land Bank for $250 the W 1/2 of NW 1/4 of 26-26-2.

Who's Bellyaching?
 Sioux City Journal—Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the federal maritime commission, who, speaking in New York, charged that administration critics were "belly-aching" and that "it isn't going to do you any good," might be asked some pertinent question as to what he is doing with his own fortune. Mr. Kennedy, proclaiming he had been a new dealer all along and still was one, thought everybody ought to get behind the administration and do something "for the cause."
 This, of course, was a blow aimed at business men who were scared by administration policies and were conserving their resources instead of risking them. But what about Mr. Kennedy, himself? He is worth several millions, made in other years when there was less business regarding investments. Is Mr. Kennedy afraid to the extent that he would be willing to put his millions to work in industry, accepting the situation as it is today with reference to governmental restrictions on capital? Unless he can say he has no fear and can prove it by showing he has taken the risks involved he cannot with justice criticize and condemn others as bellyachers.

 (Rev. Guy B. Dunning, Minister.)
 Something very unusual in special services during the coming weeks is announced by the minister. For 15 weeks, beginning Sunday, January 2, all the Sunday morning and evening services will be built around the theme, "Christ." The first Sunday morning subject will be "The Christ of Prophecy." This will be followed by "The Christ of Bethlehem and Nazareth." Sunday by Sunday every important incident in Christ's life will be considered. The 10th week the subject will be "The Christ of Gethsemane," then the "Christ of Pilate's Judgment Hall," "The Christ of the Cross," "The Christ of the Empty Tomb," "The Christ of Today," and the crusade will close March 27 with "The Christ of the Second Coming."
 While the events of his life will provide the studies for the Sunday morning sermons, Christ's teaching will be the basis of the Sunday night messages. The fifteen past months problems of today will be Christ's answer to each will constitute the night. Such themes as "What Jesus Teaches About God," "The Final Judgment," "His Teachings About War," etc. Complete announcement will be made next Sunday evening.
 Next Sunday's services as usual. Special music will be played for Bible school. Dwaine Dunning, Minneapolis Bible university student, will preach for the morning service. Miss Lila Brauer will sing.
 "The Tenses of the Christian Life" is the evening sermon subject. A string ensemble, two violins, cello and harp will play. Visitors are welcome at all services.

Blaze At Night Destroys Granary

Grain Is Damaged Somewhat
At Ole G. Nelson Place
Adjoining Wayne.

A granary at Ole G. Nelson's at the northwest edge of Wayne was destroyed and the contents damaged by fire which was discovered about 1 o'clock Saturday morning. The building was insured.

The granary contained corn, barley, a quantity of alfalfa which had been ground the Saturday before and some machinery. The granary had been closed after the ground alfalfa was placed in it until Friday, when Mr. Nelson went to the building for some feed. It is thought that opening the granary started spontaneous combustion in the alfalfa.

The Nelsons had discovered a peculiar odor about the yard Friday evening but could not locate any trouble. C. E. Nicholson noticed the fire and turned in the alarm. Prompt action of the department saved much of the contents and prevented spread to other buildings.

Besides the loss of the granary, the alfalfa was destroyed. Corn and barley were damaged some from water and smoke. Machinery in one part of the granary was not hurt.

Compulsory Farm Program Opposed

At first quarterly meeting of the Wayne county Farmers Union, held Thursday at Wayne city hall with A. W. Dolph, president, in charge, the county organization passed a resolution of opposition to the compulsory agricultural program. The Union favored widening state highway bridges to 18 or 20 feet.

John Reynolds of Niobrara, spoke on state and national Union activities. Reports were given and membership discussed. Old Farmers Union papers and catalogues were displayed for the past 17 years by W. E. Roggenbach.

G. Clare Buskirk, secretary, gave a talk.

Sells Gifts For Club

A number of spotted Poland China gilts were bought from Henry Krieger for the 4-H club at Randolph. G. F. Heady and Gomer Leuton of Randolph, came to Wayne to select the gilts last week.

Will Go Home Soon

Walter Bressler, Jr., who was injured several weeks ago in a car accident near Altona, plans to be able to move from the hospital to his home in a short time.

Leases Wayne Garage

Maurice Grant who has operated a machine shop at Laurel, has leased the former P. L. Biggs garage building in Wayne and will open a repair shop the first of the year. The Grant family plans to move to Wayne.

Finds Crescent Countries Friendly

An American traveler in countries under the Turkish crescent is given a hearty welcome, according to Dr. Mary T. Honey, who spoke to A. A. U. W. members and guests at the International Relations dinner Thursday evening at the Presbyterian church.

When Dr. Honey got off the boat in Egypt, a smiling Egyptian ran up to her with a chair and she was asked to sit down in the middle of the street. Soon the Egyptian came with a cup of coffee. This service is typical of the given travelers in this foreign country. To be sure a tip is expected, but according to Dr. Honey, it is a friendly act.

Courtesy to the American people is also prevalent in the shops. Upon entering the shop, a customer is offered a chair and this courtesy is followed by a lunch of lemonade or coffee. Prices were usually agreed upon after an hour's argument, or on the next day by taking friends one can get a reduced price. Egyptian shop keepers are very trusting of an American. Often they will tell a visitor that he may return to America with an article and send the money when he has it.

Egyptian street scenes were very interesting to Dr. Honey. Many streets have background of pretty gardens and archways. People were seen walking along the narrow streets carrying fruit and vegetables of large baskets of bread. The sun is supposed to kill the germs, laughingly commented the speaker.

Farms Are Picturesque.
The Nile river forms the background for the farms which are very picturesque with their villages of colored mud houses and water wheels for irrigating purposes. Men, women and children turn the water wheels to draw water from the river to irrigate small plots of cotton or rice. One who owns an oxen for this purpose is regarded wealthy.

From Egypt Mrs. Honey journeyed to Palestine where the people do not smile as much as in Egypt and conditions are not as peaceful. There are many religions and races and each one is trying to get ahead and to survive. The city of Jerusalem is divided into three groups—Jewish, Armenian and Mohammedan. The last group is the largest and holds the key for the church of the Holy Sepulchre. These three groups were constantly in conflict and when Dr. Honey and her group were there, they were careful of their actions in order not to arouse suspicion of any group or they might be killed.

Camels, goats and Araps on white horses are typical of the scenery around Gerash, the next place visited by Dr. Honey. Women there are given some rights—the right to keep the eggs, if there are any. Dr. Honey jokingly said that many men often ask their wives to serve guests eggs for dinner, but it is the woman's privilege to refuse.

Mosques With Minarets.
All through the Mohammedan country, beautiful mosques with minarets were prevalent. From the minarets comes the call to worship by four of those who blow trumpets to the four winds. People rush to the mosque, wash their hands, feet, head, face and mouth, line their shoes up in front of their heads and kneel twice, then touch their heads to the floor three times. No one is allowed to walk on the beautiful oriental rugs in the mosques with their shoes on. During the prayers, the travelers had to be very careful not to step on the feet of the cripples, who are religious fanatics. If any one steps on the foot of a cripple his life is endangered as the cripple might easily stab him.

One evening when Dr. Honey returned to her hotel she noticed an Arabic sheik there with his two sons. The man was flying to Paris, a surprising thing in a country so unlike civilization here. One of the sons of the sheik had never seen a stairway before and he spent much of his time running up and down the novelty.

In Lebanon where Dr. Honey also visited, the people again were very friendly. From Lebanon she visited Aleppo, a city famous for its bazaars. People display their wares in open stands along the very narrow streets and much of the produce is sorted and sent to Damascus, Jerusalem, Cairo and Algiers. One often sees camel caravans at night and many fires are seen along the streets where they have stopped to camp.

Lay Dust With Water.
Another peculiar street scene is that of the children laying the dust by carrying water in their mouths or in cups and spitting it out or throwing it in the streets. Donkey carts and barrels are also used.

In Istanbul Dr. Honey visited mosques and a sultan's home. Rooms were provided for the sultan, his mother, favorite wife and rooms for the other wives. Beautiful white China with emerald and ruby sets and other jewels were in evidence around the home. Ankara, capital of Turkey, is a very old city with many homes that resemble tepees. Most of the city is quite modern, however, with buildings of red tile and peacock blue. The capitol resembles a modern European city. People have discarded their fez hats and veils.

Dr. Honey completed her talk by showing pictures of scenery, mosques and points of interest. Many drapes and other Turkish articles were displayed. Tables were centered with Turkish scenes with tents, palm trees, camels and Turks.

The committee in charge of the dinner was Miss Stella Traster, chairman, who presided and introduced the speaker, also Mrs. Raymond Cherry, Mrs. G. W. Casterman, Miss Ida E. Fisher, Dr. Mary T. Honey, Mrs. W. L. Miller, Miss Ruth Paden, Mrs. W. W. Smith and Miss Coral Stoddard. David Sanders, in Turkish attire, sang a solo, Milo Henkels accompanying him.

Women of the church served Turkish dinner and waitresses were in appropriate garb.

Sympathy is extended the Russell Harrison family in the passing of Mrs. Harrison's father, the late George Roberts, in a Wayne hospital at 11 o'clock on Sunday. Mr. Roberts was well known by many in this community, having been in the home of his daughter and family for indefinite visits.

School Damaged By Roof Blaze

Park Hill pupils and their teacher, Miss Francis Turner, had a thrilling experience last Thursday afternoon, something unusual for a rural school, when they discovered the school house on fire. They gave the alarm and it was not long before the Wakefield fire department was there with a chemical truck and several other cars came. Most of the damage was on the roof and side near the chimney, a defective chimney being the cause of the fire. Pupils resumed school duties Monday in the Emil Walter school which has been closed for a few years. Miss Turner is staying at the Walter home. They expect to have Park Hill school repaired by the first of the year.

Washington Near "Tops" in Crime.
Believe it or not your nation's capital is a wicked city. It is pretty close to the top as a "city of crime." There is not a day but there are a dozen hold-ups and robberies. There are 610,000 people in this town. There are nearly a thousand people here looking for a job every day. No one can walk down the streets without being pumpanked by men and in many cases by women who ask for money. Bandits are frequently in the streets. Shops are held up and women have purses snatched from them as they go shopping. The money is supposed to be in this town, so those after easy money come here after it.

Washington Czars.
Jobs are hard to get in the various departments in Washington. The "personnel" chiefs who are looked up to, thousands of people working for the government are "scared" for their jobs. Some departments are starting to "weed out" what they call the "lemons" selected and appointed under patronage some months ago, and it looks like a "hard winter" for some of those who used to have a "pull." So those who were appointed through patronage are trembling and "making up" to the heads of the departments, who themselves are wondering how long they will last. In every department there are young men and women who are at the mercy of somebody in power who has the say so over their present and future status. It is not a healthy sign in Washington for young America.

Soil Conservation Overhead Ton High.
Believe it or not a lot of pertinent questions have been asked during the debate on the farm bill. For instance one member wants to know—why the high overhead cost of the soil conservation program. A lot of members think the soil conservation program is all right. The farmers want the benefit payments and at the same time they help to conserve our soil. But they feel that the amount of money it has cost to administer this program is too high. They think the overhead ought to be cut down so that the farmer can get more of the money appropriated. The amount spent for the program was about four hundred million dollars. But those administering it took out forty million dollars, or more than ten percent. A lot of farmer members figure that there is too much overhead. During the last year it took a dime to get less than a dollar to the farmer.

These members also figure that the rules and regulations under this legislation are too complex. Farmers can't understand them. They don't know what's in a contract they sign. It would, take a Philadelphia lawyer to tell the meaning of some of the sections. So some of these farm congressmen have been fighting for a bill which could be understood by most anybody who could read the American language. They figure too much stress has been laid in writing farm legislation which favored lawyers, stenographers, clerks, collectors and so forth.

Farmers Paid Hog Processing Tax.
The corn-hog farmers in the Third Nebraska district should know now who really paid the processing tax on hogs. They paid it. That is now officially admitted by the department of agriculture. This was brought out in no uncertain terms in the lengthy discussion on the pending farm bill. Several members brought out conclusive evidence to substantiate this statement. Time and again the hog processing taxes come up in the discussion. For some time the department led the public to believe that the consumers paid this tax until the triple A was found unconstitutional. The department's report was brought into the debate. This report for 1937 states that the farmer paid the processing taxes on hogs, rice, sugar beets and sugar cane. On page 19 of the department's report the following language was quoted to the members:

"The evidence presented in the foregoing analysis indicates that the direct effect of the hog processing tax was to cause prices received by the hog producers to be lower than they otherwise would have been by approximately the amount of the tax. The evidence indicates moreover, that processors of hogs and distributors and consumers of hog products were not materially affected by the tax. Although prices received by hog producers were lowered by the tax, the funds derived from the tax were returned to the producers in the form of benefit payments. Such payments, added to the returns from the sale of hogs, resulted in a total income for the hog producers, as a group, about the same amount as would have been the case had no tax been in effect. These conclusions are based solely on the study of the direct effects of the processing tax, without consideration of the effects of the production—adjustment program." This ends the argument which has been going on in our district for many months and which is an answer to many, many inquiries received in the congressional office on the hog processing tax question.

Special Message From Congressman Stefan; Karl Stefan Discusses Compulsory Features of New Farm Bill Now Before Congress.
Congressman Karl Stefan, representative of the Third congressional district advises that he has been asked in many letters, to explain the compulsory features in H. R. 8505, the new farm bill, which has been debated during the past three days in the house of representatives, and which is for the purpose of conservation of national soil resources and to provide an adequate and balanced flow of agricultural commodities in interstate and foreign commerce.

The congressman took the floor several times, speaking against the compulsory section of the bill and was active throughout the debate. He took the stand that farmers in his district favored a loan on farm crops and believed in the principles of the soil conservation feature, but was intensely worried over any compulsory features which would result in lawsuits and penalties of any kind to farmers.

In explaining the bill from the minority views, the Third Nebraska district congressman has this to say:

The farm bill before the house has a referendum feature, in that it provides for a referendum vote by farmers before the compulsory control provisions, as announced by the secretary, go into effect. The secretary is required to permit all farmers affected by his order to participate in the referendum. If more than one-third of the number of farmers voting, are opposed to the control program, the secretary will not put the compulsory plan into operation. The referendum of the farmers is highly desirable however. It has been stated on the floor during the debate that such a referendum may be declared unconstitutional.

Farmers in the Third congressional district of Nebraska should be most interested in the compulsory feature of this bill, and a strong effort will be made in reading of the bill for amendments to eliminate any drastic compulsory control provisions which are found in the corn title.

To explain this control provision, corn farmers living within the so-called commercial area, consisting of ten states in the middle west, and which includes 20 of the 22 counties of the Third district—Holt and Wheeler, excluded—could be regimented, inspected and penalized to the ninth degree, while the farmers living outside the commercial area would be allowed to produce, sell and feed without limit. This means, of course, there would be a rapid expansion of corn production outside the commercial area and particularly in contiguous counties, which could result in a breakdown of the entire scheme.

As an illustration, it might be well to cite some of the states not in the corn area as the bill is now written and give the corn production for 1937:

Pennsylvania, bu.	10,680,000
Michigan, bu.	58,320,000
Wisconsin, only 18 counties in commercial area, but entire state produced, bu.	76,864,000
Virginia, bu.	28,844,000
North Carolina, bu.	25,357,000
Georgia, bu.	27,368,000
Tennessee, bu.	79,482,000
Alabama, bu.	88,592,000
Mississippi, bu.	45,834,000
Arkansas, bu.	45,378,000
Texas, bu.	40,640,000

More than 50 percent of the corn produced in this country is grown outside of the commercial area, and prospects are very good under the present program to double at least present corn acreage in the unrestricted area.

The states included in the commercial area and the corn production for 1937 is herewith given: Minnesota (southern one-third of state) entire state production, 169,974,000 bushels; Iowa, 496,620,000 bushels; Illinois (except 14 counties in southern part of state) state production 434,746,000 bushels; South Dakota (18 counties in southeastern corner) production entire state 45,748,000 bushels; Nebraska (western and southern part of state) entire state production 83,106,000 bushels; (five year average 228,843,000 bushels) Kansas (34 counties in northern part) entire state production, 32,280,000 bushels (5 year average production 126,756,000 bushels; Missouri (northern half) entire state production, 124,380,000 bushels; Wisconsin (18 counties, southern part) total production for entire state, 76,864,000 bushels; Indiana (except 18 counties) total state production 209,790,000 bushels; Ohio (western half) total state production, 166,005,000 bushels.

The compulsory control scheme for the commercial corn area will now be considered. The secretary of agriculture allocates a definite number of acres of corn production for every farm in the area, and when the compulsory program goes into effect, every farmer in the area is given a marketing quota. Marketing quota means the amount of corn that a farmer is permitted to sell, exchange, give away or feed to livestock and poultry. The marketing quota becomes effective when the national supply has reached 2,900,000,000 bushels of corn. If a corn farmer produces more than his marketing quota, the excess production must be placed in storage and under seal in a suitable corn crib, subject to the instruction from the secretary. The farmer is not allowed to sell, exchange, give away or feed any of the corn placed under seal. If he does not have a suitable granary or corn crib in which to place the surplus corn, he must build one at his own expense according to government specifications.

Now, we come to the part of the program where the penalty provisions begin to operate. Should a farmer find himself running short of silage and field corn for his hogs and cattle he would be penalized at the rate of 15 cents per bushel if he broke the seal on his corn crib and fed some of the stored corn to his starving animals. The same penalty would apply should he dispose of his corn in any manner, and the penalty would be collected by a suit in the United States district court under

By Harold Titus

He threw himself forward, grappling for the man's throat. A fist dashed into his mouth, throwing him to one side. He floundered to his knees and grappled again. His hand clutched Rickman's powder horn and jerked it loose and dropped it as he swung for better hold.

Rickman hurled himself on Rodney, bearing him down, and they rolled on the ledge. Fingers held Shaw's throat, now holding him briefly while the other hand rummaged for a knife. But Rodney shook off the grip and prised the rumbling hand; rolled over; was free. Shaw worked a foot behind Rickman's, a hip against his hip. One hand over a shoulder and on the throat, the other encircling the man's waist, he heaved with all his strength and slowly his enemy yielded, fighting the leverage, making ragged sounds.

But he could not break the hold, could not stand against it. He dived from Shaw's grip as he fell, though, and went sideways and down, over the rim of the ledge, disappearing from sight as Shaw poised to spring.

With a cry Rickman struck the water and Rodney, teetering on the edge, strained his eyes to mark the place where he would emerge. He heard, but could not see. The man gasped hoarsely as he came up but he began to swim at once.

Seconds passed for Shaw, dragging out painfully as the fear that the man would escape him became manifest.

"You wolverine!" he cried. "You dog, Rickman! . . . What a man sleeps, you'd . . ."

He stifled his own breathing for an instant and heard Rickman crashing through the forest, making down-stream, far enough away to make pursuit futile.

And now Shaw returned to his establishment with half a hundred-weight of white, smooth clay in a package, with hunters trooping through his gate to stare at this burden and chatter about it and, finally, touch with old men and young men overstepping natural reverence to make voluble protestations of friendship.

That was Rodney Shaw's hour of triumph. He had discredited the Jesakid, and more. He had lifted himself in the eyes of the natives to a figure that would go down in song and story.

And in the house of the other trader was only black and murderous despair.

No Indians except that handful which had accepted his credits appeared before Rickman to beg tobacco and wheedle further presents. The place was all but deserted by natives and his men went about the tasks of repair to which they had been assigned with hushed voices and frightened glances at the commander's quarters.

Rickman considered this and that; night raid, ambush, long waits for a chance shot from a distance. None would do. Shaw was no fool. He would not expose himself or jeopardize now. And, in a few days, his brigade would arrive and they would have men in plenty to protect him.

His face writhed in agony as he thought of those oncoming canoes. A week of trading and the Pillagers would be obligated beyond repair. So long as Shaw lived and was free to meet and greet hunters—

So long as the man was free! Then he stretched, as a man will who is suddenly at peace after prolonged trouble. And he laughed.

Rickman sat down after his laughter, and drew paper and quill and ink before him and began to write, slowly and at length. Then, staring through the panes window, he saw Conrad Rich across the enclosure and summoned him with a shout.

"Yes, Burke?"

"There'll be a canoe leave tonight," the trader said. "Four men. Select them from the best. Antoine will be in charge."

"A canoe? Tonight? For Mackinac?"

"That! And by way of Great Bay. With the current behind, it will be a quicker march."

"But . . . I don't . . ."

"No, you wouldn't even guess! It's this, Rich: the upstart trader is a fugitive. Back yonder they've only guessed his destination, it's likely this letter to MacIver—tipping the paper—it makes guessing unnecessary. And what else it contains makes impressive the necessity of having the law reach even to here!"

So a light canoe left the lake of the Pillagers and went swiftly down the Mississippi and on the third day after its departure Rodney Shaw's canoes arrived.

Goods were hustled ashore and into the trading room and Indians came hurrying, staring much and crowding greatly and talking in high-pitched, excited voices. Their futures lay wrapped in those travel-stained packages.

"That Is the Important Matter, Major!"

In the morning trading began, with hunters and their families thronging the stockade through all the hours of daylight and for long after darkness had fallen.

They moved about evading this, fingering that. Little offered was new; the great bulk of the goods were staple, and after the inspection a pipe was lighted and, squatted on the floor about Shaw, while Basile and others brought up goods, the debts were accounted. Tobacco was passed but Shaw shook his head firmly at requests for whiskey. When the trading was finished, whiskey would again be passed; not before.

For days this procedure was routine. For hours at a time Rodney sat on the floor of his trading room, bargaining, arguing, bargaining, bargaining, bargaining.

"Not thread, my brother?" he might say. "Four plums of net thread. That is all. The ball of thread is the skin. Skin for skin. Or."

"No, Zhing-wait. No spirits. No more than the taste when we end our trading. At the grand medicine I will give my brothers plenty. Not before."

After the fifth day following Basile's arrival, few hunters returned near the establishment and Rodney's men were busied with preparing the place for the rigorous seasons to follow. But some Indians remained nearby and among these was the Weasel, once ejected from the post but, in this period of Shaw's good will toward the band as a whole, tolerated within the stockade.

He was given no attention, shouldered out of the way, while Shaw dealt with more dependable individuals.

Then the Weasel would seat himself at a distance and scratch his back with a stick and lament.

Each day he performed so, but each night he paddled from his lodge across the lake to the company fort and met Burke Rickman and whispered what he had learned.

And so Rickman paced his enclosure and drank and fumed and counted the time, reckoned the miles his letter to MacIver would take to arrive, estimated the weeks it would be before the opposition fort would find itself without a leader.

The canoe reached Mackinac. Rickman's letter was handed at last to Donald MacIver. And the Scot, and other company heads read and frowned and set their minds to the task in hand.

MacIver climbed the hill and sat with the major and the grizzled old officer, veteran of many an Indian battle, was far less comfortable than he would have been under fire of hostile savages.

He grumbled and protested and roared. But he gave in, knowing a surrender in the field, in such an instance, was a lesser hazard than a disturbance in Washington, and a canoe with Capes, the lieutenant, and four soldiers, embarked that day, the warrant for Rodney Shaw safe in an official dispatch case.

And then, indeed, the major was in for it.

Flying up the hill to the fort, Annette Leclere burst in upon the old soldier. And the major eyed her before his desk and pulled at his mustache and hurriedly as he admitted that, yes, soldiery was on the way to bring back Rodney.

"But it is not so, major! It is common talk in the town that the thing was infamously gotten up to delay Rodney! Your own surgeon has said the man died from no knife wound!"

"But the warrant exists!" the major thundered. "And Leslie's man Giles does not deny the story that Shaw and his employer quarreled over the goods. What can I do?"

And his boots went clump, clump, clump as the lovely Annette dropped her face into her hands and wept.

And after a time he patted her hand and his gruff voice grew almost gentle.

"There! . . . That's better, my dear! . . . And what is that in your hand? A feather? A black ostrich plume . . . Oh, I did not know it was some secret!"—as, flushing quickly, Annette thrust the remnant of the black plume into her bodice and began to talk of Giles . . .

So down the hill again as the sun sank went Annette, dismayed but purposeful, and along narrow streets. And a few who happened near felt their eyes bulge as the mademoiselle walked alone on the beach with the grizzled and leathery Giles, now an employee in the Great warehouse.

At midnight the major roused at the rapping and descended to his door and there was Annette.

"Giles will make affidavit!" she gasped. "He tells that Leslie gave his goods to Rodney without reservation! He tells before witnesses, and he will say so to the marshal and the justice!"

"So all is settled!" boomed the major. "So when young Shaw returns he will be vindicated and free to—"

"Returns? Returns!" The sharpness of her cry, so in contrast to her look of a moment before, caused the major to hesitate. "That is the important matter, major! That he be not returned."

And so Rickman paced his enclosure and drank and fumed and counted the time, reckoned the miles his letter to MacIver would take to arrive, estimated the weeks it would be before the opposition fort would find itself without a leader.

The canoe reached Mackinac. Rickman's letter was handed at last to Donald MacIver. And the Scot, and other company heads read and frowned and set their minds to the task in hand.

MacIver climbed the hill and sat with the major and the grizzled old officer, veteran of many an Indian battle, was far less comfortable than he would have been under fire of hostile savages.

He grumbled and protested and roared. But he gave in, knowing a surrender in the field, in such an instance, was a lesser hazard than a disturbance in Washington, and a canoe with Capes, the lieutenant, and four soldiers, embarked that day, the warrant for Rodney Shaw safe in an official dispatch case.

And then, indeed, the major was in for it.

Flying up the hill to the fort, Annette Leclere burst in upon the old soldier. And the major eyed her before his desk and pulled at his mustache and hurriedly as he admitted that, yes, soldiery was on the way to bring back Rodney.

"But it is not so, major! It is common talk in the town that the thing was infamously gotten up to delay Rodney! Your own surgeon has said the man died from no knife wound!"

"But the warrant exists!" the major thundered. "And Leslie's man Giles does not deny the story that Shaw and his employer quarreled over the goods. What can I do?"

And his boots went clump, clump, clump as the lovely Annette dropped her face into her hands and wept.

And after a time he patted her hand and his gruff voice grew almost gentle.

"There! . . . That's better, my dear! . . . And what is that in your hand? A feather? A black ostrich plume . . . Oh, I did not know it was some secret!"—as, flushing quickly, Annette thrust the remnant of the black plume into her bodice and began to talk of Giles . . .

So down the hill again as the sun sank went Annette, dismayed but purposeful, and along narrow streets. And a few who happened near felt their eyes bulge as the mademoiselle walked alone on the beach with the grizzled and leathery Giles, now an employee in the Great warehouse.

At midnight the major roused at the rapping and descended to his door and there was Annette.

"Giles will make affidavit!" she gasped. "He tells that Leslie gave his goods to Rodney without reservation! He tells before witnesses, and he will say so to the marshal and the justice!"

"So all is settled!" boomed the major. "So when young Shaw returns he will be vindicated and free to—"

"Returns? Returns!" The sharpness of her cry, so in contrast to her look of a moment before, caused the major to hesitate. "That is the important matter, major! That he be not returned."

LONDON, ENGLAND.

Football in England.

Although the regular football season is ended in the states, British football is only at mid-season. The British season will end in March, just before the cricket season opens.

Last Saturday for a while it was thought that some football games would have to be postponed, but at noon the fog cleared sufficiently to make it possible for the spectators to see what was going on. It is said that Englishmen can play golf every day of the year. The same applies to football, although in both cases fog and rain sometimes make play rather uninteresting if not quite out of the question.

British football is technically association of soccer football. There are eleven players on each side. The costume includes shorts, usually white, bright jerseys and socks and cleated shoes. The players are scattered in pairs all over the field. The man-to-man play is reminiscent of basketball. The use of hands and arms except by the goalkeeper is forbidden. The ball is advanced with the clever use of feet and head. Experts can kick the ball sixty yards, can look in one direction and kick the ball in another, can push the ball down the field with their feet at a great pace, and can intercept a ball in flight with the forehead so as to direct it toward a team-mate who has broken away from his opponent and is in position to kick toward the goal.

There is always plenty of action. The ball goes round and round and back and forth as in a basketball game. The goalkeeper has to guard a net possibly twenty feet wide and six feet high, but he is permitted to catch the ball with his hands. Usually he does catch it and then kicks out to mid-field.

At cricket, England's summer pastime, the spectators never boo, but they approve of a good pitch, knock, or catch with cautious clapping. On the other hand, an English football crowd is like an American football crowd in that they boo the referee and boo the player who trips another unless the offender is playing for the home club. Crowds of 70,000 attend some of the Saturday afternoon professional games, but many of them stand packed like sardines in the 50 cent sections rather than pay a dollar and a quarter for a seat.

In addition to the professional clubs there are many private football clubs which are supposed to be amateur. Professionalism has crept into amateur football until one newspaper writer has coined the word "Shamateurism." University football is comparatively insignificant since with the exceptions of Oxford and Cambridge British universities pay little attention to organized athletics.

Comparatively few women attend football matches. Recently when a married woman was elected secretary of a football club, a man complained to a reporter: "We don't want women even to see the matches for very often they only complain of the language. Thousands of men go partly to get off steam which they can't do at home. They don't want women-folk there at all."

When a 3-year-old boy toddled in front of a car in Kansas City and was seriously injured, the city's record of 427 days without a child traffic fatality hung in the balance. But he had finally recovered and the city still holds the remarkable record.

Exhibits at the national inventors' congress in Los Angeles included cow tail binder, fearless onion peeler, walking bathhouse, greaseless and odorless hamburger machine, water-walking shoes, gliding garters, double chin eliminator and dimple-making machine.

Wm. Perry, 76, of Abubton, Ia., has not uttered a voluntary word in 50 years. It was 50 years ago that Perry was left at the altar and he then vowed not to speak until his girl returns to him. His wedding suit is neatly tucked away and he wears it only on Sundays when he goes to church.

Four years ago a hollow needle inserted in the lung of Wm. Best, now 12, following illness of scarlet fever and pneumonia, broke off and disappeared. X-rays have shown it in three different places in the abdominal region, but it can't be found. Pittsburgh council is offering $500 for surgery to search for the wandering needle.

A colored girl in Washington, D. C., was so badly burned that doctors have been unable to heal her wounds properly. Surgeons plan to join her body with that of a cousin much like Siamese twins, using a tube down one side of each

A woman was elected county judge for the first time in Illinois history.

Twin great granddaughters of a Pennsylvania man were born soon after he reached 100 and they are now his greatest interest.

Police chief in St. Paul took one look at a burglar suspect and then called in all policemen. The suspect was wearing a police badge.

A 4-year-old girl adopted from a Chicago orphanage by Mrs. Muriel McCormick Hubbard, granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, became heir to a fortune estimated at seven million.

North Carolina girl thought a ring she saw on the 5 and 10-cent store counter was a bargain. It was. The ring had been lost by a store executive's wife and the girl received a reward for its return.

When a police quartet in Oklahoma was rehearsing "Rock of Ages" for a church performance, a youth in court in the next room "malted" to the words and confessed four robberies and a car theft.

One of the by-products of a pig farm in Illinois is silverware. The owner feeds his pigs with table refuse and seldom does a day go by but that he finds some piece of silver. He has a chest of 400 pieces.
