Influence Of Teachers Stressed

Influence of teachers is being stressed in the public school system, a faith that if the rising generation can be properly educated the ills of society will disappear.

The speaker compared two statues in the Corcoran gallery of art in Washington, D. C., to the two-fold conception of the schools. One of the statues is perfect in every detail but lacks expression and is cold and inanimate. The other has excellent expression, and is warm and human. The speaker compared to the scholastic attainments and citizenship of high minded patriots.

Taxpayers Tribute.

The speaker concluded by saying: "Service on a school board is the highest form of patriotism in times of peace. Service in the school room transcends in importance the clink of gold in the counting house or the feverish activities in the trade market. This challenges our best and for reward, for real pay, we see an ever growing pile of invisible spalls beside every school house door. The educational stone cutters of today are transforming by the alchemy of beautiful buildings, enticing text books, and efficient teachers, the innocent children from hut and palace into intelligent, independent, fact-finding citizens. Better citizens develop a better world."

Supt. E. W. Smith presided at the banquet. He introduced Merton Farrow, superintendent of schools at Red Cloud, who was traveling with the speaker.

Miss Coila Potras was general chairman of arrangements.

Other numbers of the program consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Bethel Andersen, readings by Miss Beatrice Fuller and vocal solo by Russell Wideo.

The high school string quartet composed of Betty Hawkins, Mildred Ringer, Erna Meyer and Lorraine Johnson played during the dinner which preceded the talk.

"The tables were decorated with red and white napers and snapdragons. The speakers table was centered with a sking scene.

Guatemala Has Appeal Because Of Simple Life

The busy, satisfied life in the little republic of Guatemala, Central America, is a pleasant contrast to the speed of American life. Mrs. J. J. Ahern found on her recent trip there. Mrs. Ahern, who accompanied Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Gregg and Miss Mae Friedman of Chicago on the five-week trip, arrived home Friday. The three women are sisters.

Guatemala is a small country with rugged mountains and fertile valleys. Much of the territory is primitive. Mrs. Ahern and the party visited some sections that have been opened to travel only three years. The visitors were able to contrast the modern town of Guatemala city with the undeveloped region.

Native Guatemalans are much like Mexicans though their features are heavier and their skin darker. Many Indians also live in the country. Both groups are most friendly and one feels safe in their midst. They are very timid and especially shy when one wants to take their pictures. They live more to themselves than the Mexicans and are happy and satisfied.

Corn, some as good as here, and other grains, also many vegetables are raised by the natives! Not only the valleys but the steepest mountains are farmed. One wonders how people manage to cultivate such inaccessible places, but Mrs. Ahern found that natives like the high places for crops because the clouds hover about and provide moist air which aids growth. The warm, dry climate in the valleys often burns crops. One sees the natives start out early in the morning, barefooted, with primitive tools climbing up the steep mountains to work their fields. Each carries a lunch which always includes a pot of coffee. They return in late afternoon after work is done. The natives believe in getting up at daybreak and retiring at dark. Sheep are raised and blankets manufactured from the wool.

Though Spanish influence predominates in Guatemala, not so much color is used as in Mexico. Most homes are white, either cement or adobe painted.

Roads are being developed in the country but for strangers the driving would be most treacherous because of steep inclines and hairpin curves. Mrs. Ahern found that the natives who are accustomed to the roads are expert and one has great confidence in them. The party had two narrow escapes when strangers failed to sound their horns.

Guatemala has a democratic form of government with a president who seems to be efficient. Mrs. Ahern learned. One ruling is that the government will provide a small piece of land to a man when he has a family of three children.

The party spent a week each way on the boat, which sailed from Philadelphia, and had six days in Guatemala. Mrs. Ahern stopped a week in Annapolis with her daughter and husband, Dr. and Mrs. W. Lippold, and she also visited in Chicago with Miss Margaret Ahern and John Ahern's family.

Are To Discuss World Church Plan

Probably the greatest step yet taken toward a united and advancing world church was marked by the great conferences at Oxford, England, and Edinburgh, Scotland, where representatives of all Christian churches and of 45 nations studied and restated the nature, purpose and program of the church, both in its relation to individuals and in its relation to community, state and economic order.

American delegates feel that American churches especially need to re-think their whole conception of the church in the light of the findings of the conferences of world churches.

The opportunity for such re-thinking is offered local church people (and others) in a new series of Sunday evening group discussions, beginning next Sunday at the Wayne Methodist church, at 7:15 p. m. The first subject is: "The Church: Its Nature and Function."

Such questions as the following will be considered: "In what senses do we commonly use the word 'church'? When and why do we use the capital 'C'? Do Protestants think of the church as more divine than the state or than the family? What differences are there between the Protestant layman's attitude toward the minister, and the Catholic laymen's attitude toward the priest? On what kind of questions are we ready to accept the authority of the church? Of two positions as to the nature of the church, (to be presented at meeting) which is more characteristic of this community? Which is the more acceptable to you? To these questions, each may add his own.

USUALLY captains of industry and finance called to the counsel of the president have advised the imperative need of restoring confidence to stabilize and enliven economic affairs.

Politics should be put on a higher standard. Statesmanship should strive less for personal power and more for a straightforward to practically sound and safely progressive public policies.

Increased unemployment should shock statesmen into pursuing a more pacific course, trying to repair mistakes rather than making new ones.

Something is wrong. It does not help to engage in hateful recriminations. Remedy would seem to lie in the combined judgment of practical men, and the conferences at the White House this week ought to point the way.

THE OMAHA Journal-Stockman observes that despite opinions of some national planners to the contrary, views of most farmers support the idea of plenty rather than scarcity in agricultural production.

ANOTHER article by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, on "Why Go to College?" expresses the belief that those who have an aptitude and a desire for higher learning should be encouraged to find the way.

The late church awakening in England and Scotland and America is timely backfire on the anti-religious movements in dictator-ruled countries.

Filings have begun for public offices to be voted on next November. The primary comes August 9, and in the meantime candidates will multiply in accordance with individual aspirations.

a few points, the country could go ahead prosperously, in the opinion of Mark Sullivan, columnist. He advises abundant food supply, labor employed at reasonable wages and manufactured goods offered at fair prices.

Representative Snell's attack on what he called "hate bombs," hurled by Secretary Ickes and others ought to have a salutary influence. Time will tell.

Help For World Trade.

Norfolk Daily News: The non-partisan organization, formed for the purpose of backing Secretary of State Cordell Hull in his reciprocal trade policy, contains the names of scores of men and women in whose motives we should have every confidence.

The world is confronted with a choice between increased regimentation, leading to growing international friction, or the restoration of international trade and sanity," these men assert in their statement to the public.

It requires no argument to convince anyone who has studied the condition of the world today, that the great need is not for crop limitation, food destruction, birth control among meat animals or a central bureau in Washington to tell the farmer or the business man how to operate.

The German people, for example, are in pitiable need of foodstuffs of which we have too much. But conditions prevent our selling our wasting food to undernourished Germans.

Therefore, if a way can be found to trade what we have too much of, for what other countries have too much of, without increasing our own surpluses, the people will applaud the discover.

This will not be as easy as it seems. In the first place Germany is deliberately going without food and clothing it needs in order to put its available gold into war equipment, because it thinks it may have to fight some one.

GRATITUDE.

A REASON.

It is a safe bet that individuals who have attained high positions in big or small industries have never dodged duty or shirked responsibility.

The president left for a special message his proposals for curtailing monopoly. Undoubtedly such proposals, if carefully considered and soundly administered, can help to smooth out the ups and downs of business and save the capitalist system from abuses which gravely threaten it.

It Depends On Whose Ox Is Gored.

Omaha Journal-Stockman: In his message to congress, President Roosevelt, referring to the conflict between the A.F.L. and the C.I.O. suggested that in order to fix responsibility it might be necessary to incorporate labor unions.

In other words, Mr. Green wants business and industry to be "subjected to government regulation and domination" but insists that organized labor should have a free hand.

Are the Opponents All Unworthy?

Omaha Journal Stockman. — Sometimes it appears difficult for Secretary Wallace and other proponents of federal control of agriculture to find words mean enough to apply to the men who oppose their plans.

The country, however, cannot help but wonder what epithets these self constituted saviors of the farmer would apply to such men as Dr. Joseph S. Davis, director of the food research institute at Stanford University.

I am not so sure that speculative interests would be injured," he said, "but others would be. Farmers would probably be helped little by increased price stability, and hurt both by a lower level of prices than would otherwise prevail and by regulation of their production and marketing, except as these were rendered palatable by government subsidies."

Dr. Davis said that under the Wallace plan the consumer would be singled out for processing or sales taxes "imposed to relieve other taxpayers" and that merchants and processors would suffer from "added uncertainties" arising out of political administration of the scheme.

From the standpoint of American farmers, the doctor continued, "the most serious objection is that, without realizing it in advance, farmers would be selling their birthright for a mess of pottage." Except perhaps at the outset, their maximum gains would gravely disappoint them.

The system would lead, not late, but soon, to compulsory regulation of acreage, production and marketing of the specified crops (wheat, corn, rice, cotton, tobacco) and probably others not yet named. The substantial degree of freedom farmers have truly enjoyed and deeply prized would be replaced by a large measure of government fiat.

The above is the opinion of a well qualified critic whose motives are above suspicion and it is a matter of considerable conjecture just how Secretary Wallace and his band of agricultural planners, who advocate federal control of farming, would classify and characterize such an opponent of their program as Dr. Davis.

Both Ends Against The Middle.

Nebraska Farmer.—There is an old game known as both ends against the middle. It most commonly is played in politics. One of the most recent illustrations of it was made by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in which he urged farmers to quit opposing the wage-hour bill now that congress is about to pass a bill ostensibly for farmers' benefit.

So far as we know there is not a single farm organization, either state or national, that has not vigorously opposed the wage-hour bill that came near getting by in the special session of congress, but finally was sent back to standing committee.

The reason farm organizations and farmers were so bitterly opposed to the wage-hour bill is that they know it will increase their costs of operation along the entire line. The folly of such a law at this time is clearly indicated from a recent statement by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in Mr. Wallace's own department, in which Mr. Black, chief of the bureau of agricultural economics, stated: "Farm taxes are rising; farm machinery and repair costs are higher; farm building costs are up."

This year's production will cost farmers about $500,000,000 more than in 1936. This half-billion dollar increase in cost of production almost exactly offsets the increase in farmers' income for 1937 compared with 1936. The wage-hour bill, proposing as it does to shorten the week and raise wages along the entire line, would mean a far greater increase in farm production costs than occurred last year.

It has been the unfortunate lot of the farmer that if and when anything was given to him by the federal government, it usually was immediately offset by greater gifts to other groups.

It was beneath Mr. Wallace, with his good understanding of economics, to make a play like this. Evidently, he did it at the insistence of his superior, but that does not lessen the offense. Farmers should promptly resent it and should petition their congressmen to oppose the wage-hour bill with all the means at their command.

Price of Liberty.

Sam R. McKelvie in Nebraska Farmer.—The loss of 'liberty' which many farmers regret 'will prevent a catastrophe.' That, according to an Associated Press dispatch, is the way Senator Norris referred to the new farm bill in a letter to Mr. C. L. Dietz, master of the Nebraska Grange.

To say, however, that it is necessary for the farmer to sacrifice his liberty in order to prevent a catastrophe is to admit at once that the American form of government is about to be scrapped. Liberty is the thing that brought our America into being.

Obviously farmers are coming awake to the seriousness of the threat that is being made to independent action in managing their farms.

It often has been said that the present leadership in Washington may not be consciously intending to erect a new form of government in this country, but by their acts they will bring it about. The new farm bill, with all of its provisions and implications for compulsion, clearly indicates that. There is one way to prevent it.

Three of Nebraska's congressmen, Messrs. McLaughlin, Luckey and Bunderup voted for the farm bill in the house and so did Senator Norris. Congressmen Coffee and Stefan voted against it, as did Senator Burke.

The reason farm organizations and farmers were so bitterly opposed to the wage-hour bill is that they know it will increase their costs of operation along the entire line. The folly of such a law at this time is clearly indicated from a recent statement by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in Mr. Wallace's own department, in which Mr. Black, chief of the bureau of agricultural economics, stated: "Farm taxes are rising; farm machinery and repair costs are higher; farm building costs are up."

comes out of the conference committee and again is considered on final passage.

The matter is of such vital importance that action should be taken without delay, and it should be made clear to the congressmen that petitioning farmers intend to vote as they petition. Also a word of commendation to the congressmen and Senator Burke who voted right will be appreciated.

Recipes

- Apple Pie Substitute.
Make a baking powder biscuit dough using the following proportions: Two teaspoons baking powder, three tablespoons shortening and one-fourth teaspoon salt to a cup of flour. Enough milk to make a soft dough. Line a pie tin with the dough and spread generously with heavy sweet cream. Cover the pie with circular slices of apple that have been cut about one-fourth of an inch thick and from which the core has been removed and arrange them to overlap. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake from 20 minutes to half an hour in a hot oven. If the apples are a kind that do not cook up quickly, stew the slices a few minutes in a small amount of water, but not long enough to cook out of shape.
- Banana Cream Pie.
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks, beaten
2 cups scalded milk
grated rind of 1/2 lemon

When and Where to Cut is Problem.

The statement of the public debt of the United States came to each member along with the president's budget message. The statement shows our debt is over $37,000,000,000 and the budget message indicates that because of the new depression there is no chance to balance our budget this year. Our receipts are still far below our expenditures. The president told members that he wants to start cutting wherever possible but when he suggested a cut of $220,000,000 in roads, he met opposition. Most everybody admits we should start cutting, but no one will suggest or agree to start cutting on any particular government activity. There is a general feeling that a uniform cut of 20 percent in all activities would pass the House. But the army and navy won't stand for any cuts in their appropriations. So when and where the cuts are to start seems to be a problem. Departments which do over-lapping work don't want any cuts in their activities. 121 Millions Forgotten. Believe it or not—there are $121,842,955.26 worth of Uncle Sam's obligations outstanding which are matured and on which we have quit paying interest. All of these are payable at par on demand. They include some postal savings bonds, first, second, third, fourth Liberty bonds, Victory notes, etc. Somebody has these government certificates. They are either buried, lost, or just forgotten in safety deposit boxes or in storage somewhere. Anyway Uncle Sam isn't paying interest on them, but is willing to pay in full if the holders present them for payment. Boycott Would Ruin Japan. If the United States and Great Britain put a boycott on Japanese imports, Japan would go broke. The British empire and the United States, Hawaii and the Philippines bought about 63 percent of all Japan's exports last year. In ten months we have imported over one hundred and sixty million dollars worth of Japanese goods, but while figures do not lie, they fail to tell the whole truth when it comes to foreign trade. Imports from Japan are valued in Japan at the cost of production there, where the 10 and 12 hour day is common and factory wage scales are about four or five cents an hour. The price paid by American consumers of Japanese products was at least double the import valuations and probably several times that amount. We not only furnish Japan war supplies but we are also furnishing them money with which to fight. Uncle Sam keeps Japanese industries busy while our own unemployed continue to walk the streets in increasing numbers. Japan Short of Raw Materials. If Japan should go to war with a great power she would not have enough raw materials for war purposes to last her many months. She is dependent on foreign countries for much of her war materials. Ludlow Resolution Raises Great Debate. In spite of Japanese-boycott nothing and do nothing without enforcement?" No Willingness to Pay. The treasury debt statement shows that foreign countries still owe Uncle Sam $12,017,075,933.60. Very few of them are showing any willingness to start paying. It Takes a Half a Million Dollars to Support the Presidency. What does it cost to run the White House? This question is settled in the first appropriation bill which the house is disposing of this week. For the executive office and the executive mansion and grounds in 1939, it will cost the taxpayers very close to half a million dollars. This includes the $75,000 a year salary for the president; includes the $135,000 for his secretaries; the $50,000 for contingent expenses of the president; the $25,000 for entertainment expenses of the executive; and the $145,750 for executive mansion and grounds upkeep, etc.—total executive office for the next year will be $449,910.00. If the independent offices appropriation bill passes both houses as introduced in the house, it will call for expenditures in 1939 of

CONGRESS

AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN Hanson Was President Under Articles of Confederation. A lot of Americans have come back from Sweden recently where they attended the tercentenary of the first Swedish settlements in America. With their return some of these voyagers point to the technical fact, that John Hanson, a Swede, and not George Washington, was the first president of the United States. John Hanson, a son of Maryland, was an American patriot and he was chosen as president by our continental congress on November 5, 1781. However, this event took place in the days of the confederation, during the loose union of our 13 colonies which was to become, after the constitutional convention in Philadelphia, the United States of America. So Washington, after all, was its first president. However, the Swedish people have had a great celebration and they have paid great respect to the memory of John Hanson. Why Weren't Laws Enforced? Monopolies are again in the foreground in political discussion. The speeches here about trusts and monopolies sound much like the days of long ago when our grandfathers were young and an "anti-monopoly party" was in bloom. In July, 1890, after months of debate and strong lobbying, in opposition to its enactment, the Sherman anti-trust law was put into the federal statutes. Within two years most of the states followed with similar enactments which should have torn all the trusts into shreds. Simple and rigid enforcement of state and federal laws would have made "combinations in restraint" of trade obsolete. Since 1890 trusts have been more bold and more aggressive than ever. But the anti-trust law has been there all of this time. Many trusts have been prosecuted. Some were dissolved. And today it is alleged that the price-fixing by monopolies has contributed to causing the new depression. New laws to curb trusts are being planned. Some are already before congress. And at the same time the old Sherman law is on the books, with many other laws to aid its enforcement, all alive and ready for application. The power of big combinations has been known under all administrations for more than half a century. Now at the end of that time it is proposed that we shall "pass a law," but—ask some old-time members, "Why pass new laws which will cure nothing, curb and war scares, many Washington officials who ought to know, say that America will not go to war with Japan. The Ludlow anti-war resolution will be debated in the house early in this session. There are more debates on this resolution right now in the offices and cloakrooms among members of congress than any other question. There is a great division among members. Some say that if the resolution for constitutional amendments is submitted by congress and ratified by the states it would lead to war earlier. Others say it would end war. Never has any other piece of legislation been so much debated unofficially around Capitol Hill.

Foreigners Compete for American Favor.

There is unusual activity among the foreign diplomats who live in this nation's capital. The most active people here are the social secretaries to the various foreign representatives. These social secretaries want to make their bosses popular in America and among Americans. There seems to be a contest between these social secretaries as to which country is going to be most popular among Americans. In this manner foreigners indicate how badly they need America. Some of these social secretaries can either "make" or "break" a foreign diplomat by making social errors. Diplomatic questions are solved many times in a tea room or at some social function which is not bill paying. The foreigners know how to play a lot of serious games behind smiling faces. Americans are sometimes gullible. As The President Spoke. The president's message was received with unusual serenity on the part of the house membership. Members on both sides of the aisle figured the president's attack on monopolies was less drastic than had been expected. Some members figured the chief executive had "pulled his punches" so far as these monopolies are concerned, but he hit plenty hard against the members who had voted against his wages and hours program. The president looked very well physically as he came to the speaker's rostrum on the arm of his son, James. The chief executive looked as if he had lost some weight during the last few months, but his mane was ever present and he looked in the pink of condition. A Missouri judge ruled that there is nothing in the law to prevent a man's criticizing his wife, but he carefully refrains from recommending it as a policy.—Kansas City Star.

Fascism Means Slavery Of Individual to the State

Speaker Warns Against Danger

Liberty Is Appreciated By Those Who Have Felt Fascist Heel.

"We do not want fascism in our country," declared Mrs. David Simms of Hastings, state international relations chairman for A. A. U. W. and Woman's club, when she spoke to A. A. U. W. members and guests Thursday evening at Neihardt hall. Mrs. Simms toured the Mediterranean region last summer and studied conditions as they exist in Italy, Germany, Egypt and other countries.

"Fascism, which is not all good or all bad, is seeping into other countries, and it is up to the people to face the fact and learn and study about it," continued the speaker.

Mrs. Simms described the ship on which she traveled, explaining that the type one chooses has lots to do with the trip. German boats are very clean, and the English boats emphasize hospitality. Mrs. Simms sailed on an Italian boat for her Mediterranean cruise. She laughingly told how the Italian boat, Rex, wrecked Jimmy Walker on its maiden voyage. The boat broke down and Mr. Walker reached New York five days too late for nomination for governor of the state. Mrs. Simms sailed on the Rex, with many American Italians. "The Italian people are fine, grand people," remarked the speaker. She divided the Italians into two classes—high and low. The high class are superior and the low class are the very lowest. Both kinds were traveling on the Rex.

When the Rex sailed to Gibraltar, Mrs. Simms was impressed by the beauty. The color of the rock is cream and the green trees, vivid flowers, blue sky and the very blue Mediterranean presented a wonderful color scheme.

Beauty and War Contrast.
Upon entering the port of Gibraltar Mrs. Simms saw many black Moors, the bravest soldiers from northern Africa. Airplanes were flying overhead as the Rex sailed into port; submarines, battleships and the soldiers contrasted with the beauty of the landscape made one ask, "Why has man ever brought war into the world?" Hand organs on the streets of Gibraltar grinding out the song, "Yes We Have No Bananas," and youngsters serenading Americans with "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round" added to the picture of the town.

Mrs. Simms was told that natives have three ways of distinguishing an American woman—she is either powdering her nose, fixing her hair or pulling up a shoulder strap. Native women do not have shoulder straps as their clothes hang from the hips.

Objectives of Fascism.
The American traveler entered into conversation with a boy, who was a member of the black-shirted fascist party of Mussolini. In the course of the conversation he remarked, "We all die sometime. What difference does it make when I die? But when I die, Italy will be a great nation." These remarks gave the speaker the clue to the objective back of the movement. Every boy in Italy is raised on that ideal. "When I die, Italy will be a great nation." "The fascist government," according to Mrs. Simms, "magnifies the state; individuals amount to nothing. People are to be used for the advancement of the state." Mrs. Simms observed, however, that it really magnifies the dictator.

From Gibraltar the traveler boarded a Russian boat to Egypt. Her roommate on the boat was a German girl, who introduced Mrs. Simms to others on the boat who had organized into a "League of Nations" with eight countries represented. The group was most anxious to have the United States represented in the League. Throughout the trip this group discussed world affairs and each person was earnest in his study of conditions. The group tried to get down to the truth of vital world questions which demanded much understanding and sympathy of the questions. One of the questions which the group asked of Mrs. Simms was: "If England goes to war will the United States go with her? What is the relationship between the two countries?" Mrs. Simms remarked that if the two English speaking countries combined they would be a great force.

Around the Mediterranean the people realize the strength of the England-United States combination and are afraid such an alliance might materialize.

Alexandria, Egypt, is a fascinating port, observed Mrs. Simms. Thousands of ships were in the harbor. Boys dressed in their native costume of long robes with red fez hats, and, if they belong to the Mohammedan religion, turbans, came to assist the travelers from the boat.

Egypt Is Fascinating.
Always something new occurs in Alexandria. Vendors selling wares, men sitting at long tables together on the streets talking and smoking, and many, many children, presented an impressive sight. As the car in which Mrs. Simms was riding stopped, she glanced at the many children around her and sensed something was wrong. When she looked into the eyes of the children she was amazed at the number of sore eyes and many children with just one eye.

Palaces and estates in Alexandria are beautiful. They show enormous wealth. Egypt has no middle class. People are extremely wealthy or are poverty stricken. Children in Egypt have been organized into gangs which are presenting a major problem to the Egyptian government. The children are taught at an early age to steal and beg and they dare not return to headquarters without something. This gang spirit has spread so that the government faces a major problem in determining how to stamp it out.

Mrs. Simms traveled along the Nile to Cairo to see the Sphinx and pyramids. The two and crags along the Nile are wonderful, commented Mrs. Simms. Dirt is so precious it is cured for as well as babies in this country. All of the ground is irrigated. Crops have been raised for thousands of years in that region and the soil is still fertile, while, explained Mrs. Simms, the soil in Nebraska has been cultivated less than 150 years and is losing its fertility.

Highest Civilization.
The pyramids are piles of stone which represent the highest civilization man has ever known. One must be educated to understand them. The tombs were particularly interesting to Mrs. Simms. Tombs are dug into the stones and were burial places for the emperors. The tombs have seven and eight rooms, the largest having 31. Hieroglyphics in gold and silver carved over the tombs were placed there to make an impression on God, according to early Egyptian belief. A tomb is also inscribed over the tomb giving the details of the emperor's life. The belief is that the more an emperor has done the more highly placed he becomes in God's hand and the higher the people of his period become.

Cairo also has sidewalk cafes at which men and women never sit together, commented Mrs. Simms. The average Egyptian woman always looks like a bolt of black cloth has been draped about her. A few of the women still cling to veils with only part of their foreheads and eyes visible. They wear a great deal of "paint" put on in patches, lay stockings and very fancy shoes.

Egyptian Women and War.
The guide, who was employed by the group headed by Dr. Will Durant and of which Mrs. Simms was a member, was a fine philosopher. One day Mrs. Simms questioned him about the Egyptian women and war. The speaker is of the impression that if people keep hammering away for world peace that public opinion will smash war. Slavery and dueling were killed by public opinion. The guide answered that Egyptian women are very much opposed to it. However, the peace movement comes in waves. In one of these peace waves the women would gouge out one eye of all baby boys to make them unfit for war which accounts for the many one-eyed children in Egypt.

Honored at Dinner.
Proceeding the address about 45 A. A. U. W. members had dinner together at the college cafeteria with Mrs. Simms as guest. Tables were attractive with snapdragons and blue tapers. On the committee were Miss Louise Wendt, Miss Beulah Rundle, Miss Marie Hove, Miss Louise Kimmel, Miss Helen Gildersleeve, Miss Mildred Barrett and Miss Florence Vlach.

Drama group will present a play for the February 10 meeting which will be in the Woman's club rooms. Hostesses will be Miss Miriam Huse, Miss Beatrice Fuller, Miss Helen Eppler, Miss Maude Curley, Miss Ruth McDuffee and Mrs. F. W. Nyberg.

very modern conveniences. Everyone was working although one group of men was working with the foreman standing over them with a black whip. Questioning revealed that they were a group of men who will not work unless forced to. Men on the island work very hard and are so tired at night they return to their homes to sleep, not to gather with other men. At the end of the week their checks are given to their families.

"Fascism on that island," declared Mrs. Simms, "looks good and people are frightened by their reaction to it." "What is wrong?" is the question Mrs. Simms asked. There was efficient, advancement and seeming progress. People appeared to be cared for, particularly in Germany. Yet Mrs. Simms kept feeling that there was great danger.

Children In Army.
In Italy, where Mrs. Simms returned, she saw women in rags with small children doing work which should have been done by men, women digging ditches, pushing heavy carts and on the streets were soldiers, too young. Children at 4 and 6 years of age are being sent to military camps. Two years ago, 8-year-olds fought in Ethiopia.

Mrs. Simms was determined to find out more about these conditions so she visited a friend in a steamship company, who was wearing a fascist button. He explained that before joining the faction he had two sons whom he raised in poverty stricken conditions. They are now grown and married, are illiterate and shiftless. He has a young son who is in one of the military camps, drilling and receiving an education. This is given him by the fascist government at no cost to him.

In Rome, large maps were placed in black and white marble. One shows Italy as it is today and the other as a Roman empire including much of Europe. Seeing this Mrs. Simms recalled the words of the young Italian, "When I die, Italy will be a great nation."

Learns of Poverty.
On the return trip home, Mrs. Simms made the acquaintance of four Italian boys of 12, 18, 19 and 22 years of age. The 18-year-old boy told her that at the age of 13 he was left with a family of seven to support. He was not a member of the fascist faction and had difficulty in securing work. He did find a small job at which he received 56¢ a week. With this he bought one loaf of bread a day and two bags of macaroni. His mother planted tomato seeds in the cracks of dirt around the house and with this the family did survive. Joseph, the 22-year-old lad, received a salary of 46¢ a week. In the United States he gives permanent in New York City and receives a wage of $25 a week and has freedom. Although he is a naturalized citizen in the United States, he must not dispute the teachings of Mussolini or his 85-year-old mother would suffer in Italy.

Fascism Is Slavery.
The boys remarked that the minute a person joins the fascist party in Italy, he becomes a slave and a piece of machinery for the advancement of one man. "There is no slavery like fascism," stated the speaker.

Upon entering the New York harbor, an American chanced to remark upon the ugliness of the Statue of Liberty, but when Mrs. Simms turned to her four Italian friends, they had tears in their eyes and stated, "Here in the United States, the greatest country in all the world, lies liberty."

Mrs. Simms was introduced by Dr. Mary Honey, president of Wayne branch of A. A. U. W.

Weather In Far North Is Like Spring Again

The first sub-zero weather came to Nazko, B. C., Canada, December 23, according to a letter written December 31 to the Wayne Herald by Mrs. W. L. Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Libengood of Wayne. The first drop was to 12 below, and Christmases saw 34 below. Weather continued cold until December 29 and since then it has been like spring. The sun was warm and the sky was a beautiful blue when Mrs. Robertson wrote. Leaves were dripping water, and a light chinook wind was blowing.

going straight up tonight and there's no wind at all." Mrs. Robertson wrote after she had just returned from conducting a Siwash funeral. The people of that religious sect think it a great honor to have a white person conduct their funerals. "They came last night and wouldn't take no' for an answer. They even brought a sleigh but that meant a trip back for them, so," writes Mrs. Robertson, "I rode my saddle horse. It was 24 miles there and back. I conducted a simple service like ours. The Siwashes will have a big pot latch (supper) and sell everything the deceased owned to pay the expenses of burying. The funeral dance is this evening. They wanted me to stay but I don't dance and no other whites were there so I declined. I can't talk Chinook lingo so we never accept their invitations. Others report the dances very nice and very quiet.

"The anniversary of the fur post will be celebrated January 15 and we plan on going for that. Everybody, whites and all, will attend. Even officials of the Hudson Bay Fur company will come from Montreal. "The Siwashes are very musical. Most of the men can play any instrument given them. The women are, very quiet. They never have much to say unless you meet them alone. "The moose and deer are very scarce in the valley as the black timber wolves are keeping them bunched in bands of seven to 12. There's safety in numbers. The Siwashes won't kill the wolves as they are superstitious — afraid of getting sick — even though there is a bounty of $15 besides the fur value.

"We had a nice mess of lake trout caught through the ice. They weighed from 2 to 4 pounds and were excellent. "The mail leaves Sunday. We get mail once a month. The mail man leaves Nazko the first Monday of the month and is supposed to be back the following Saturday at noon after a hard trip of 150 miles. Usually he does not make it. The mail is at a post office and one goes there to get it. Some come 30 and 40 miles. It's no snap waiting that long for mail." Mrs. Robertson writes that she will be glad to answer questions which any wish to leave with the Libengoods. The James Tibbles family lives 35 miles from Nazko. Mr. Tibbles is a son of Mrs. Marilla Tibbles and a sister of Mrs. S. J. Hale of Wayne. The Robertsons send best wishes to their friends at Wayne.

London Letter

By ALFRED LARSON,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

January 4, 1938.

The English do not have a holiday on New Year's day, but they celebrate New Year's eve in ways familiar to Americans. Night clubs and hotel dining rooms were solidly booked days in advance. There are two great outdoor focal points for Londoners on New Year's eve, Piccadilly circus and St. Paul's cathedral. Piccadilly circus is merely a spacious intersection where many streets converge like spokes of a wheel. Tens of thousands packed into the intersection as midnight approached on New Year's eve. Tens of thousands of others crowded the streets and steps leading to St. Paul's. Traditionally the Scots predominate at St. Paul's, and though at St. Paul's is rougher and tougher than the assembly at Piccadilly. This is partly a matter of location. Piccadilly lies perhaps a mile and a half west of St. Paul's, and in London going west means leaving the slums and approaching "respectability."

The accepted ritual in one of these gatherings on New Year's eve calls for a bit of vocal practice when you arrive, so that you can do your best at singing at the proper time. Then at the stroke of midnight, if the thousands of English examples provide an acceptable criterion of appropriate conduct, you are supposed to kiss members of the opposite sex who happen to be in your party. Then the practice is to join hands and sing Auld Lang Syne. There follows impromptu singing and dancing, evidently on the principle of "Every man to his own taste." The effect on an innocent bystander is one of bedlam. People charter taxis and ride on top instead of inside. Policemen open lanes for ambulances. Policemen try to keep people from being pushed into shop windows and to keep people out of windows that are broken. Balloon vendors do a big business, but no balloon lasts five minutes.

Toward 1 o'clock the crowds begin to disperse. People at St. Paul's make their way to Piccadilly and vice versa. Some from both places turn off to Trafalgar Square, where they try to avoid falling into the pools while they gaze up at the Nelson monument, sing, or express their affection for the huge bronze lions recumbent at the base of the monument.

What Englishman, you may ask, would behave like this? Isn't the Englishman supposed to be a matter-of-fact, unemotional fellow, polite, gentlemanly, reserved, and unperturbable? People like to generalize about the English character, but it is easier to generalize than to find a specimen that fits the generalization. The Englishman's reserve is illustrated in an English story. A ship capsized in mid-ocean. The Englishman in the party swam around aimlessly and silently for two days before he could bring himself with profuse apologies to intrude upon another swimmer by asking him the shortest way to Southampton. The Englishman's unperturbability is illustrated in a Christmas story. An Englishman who was carving the turkey applied too much pressure at one side and inadvertently allowed the bird to slide into the lap of a lady at his left. The Englishman without a pause continued his story to his conclusion. Then turning to the lady he said with admirable coolness, "Madam, I'll thank you for that turkey."

By and large the average Englishman probably is a little more polite, a little more reserved, and a little more cool in the face of difficulties than is the average American. It might be contended that an explosion on New Year's eve leaves an Englishman in a mood to face the new year with a greater calm than the following day.

CHAPTER IX—Continued. They spoke rapidly and loudly; word ran from group to group until it reached the knot of hunters about Rickman, smoking his tobacco but complacent of a man who had been driven out of his lodge.

"There, Conrad! You're more alarmed than even I, and I must confess that it has not been a tranquil day for me. "But Burke is at the medicine encampment. The men saw him there within the hour. He has been there since early morning. "I have come for your help," she said. "Oh, just counsel!"—as he stirred and gulped, plainly with an awareness of his own inadequacies. "I'm alone here, now, Conrad. I encamped last night near Lieutenant Capes. I attempted to persuade him to stay on until Rodney should at least be warned of the threats made against him, but the major's orders were beyond mistaking. The lieutenant was displeased to leave me, but I assured him that with Rodney Shaw here I was in no danger."

"All right, he was here! All night he waited, ready to shoot Burke like a man 'd shoot a wolf!" "Conrad? Do you suppose he's in danger now?" "Danger's all about. But Rickman, he's with the Indians. He's been there all day."

"True. It comforts me. I . . . You see, Conrad, it is necessary that I talk with Rodney at once. There are so many things for me to say. I harmed him grievously and I want him to know it and my regret from my own lips. And, also, he must be warned of the threats Burke makes against him. "It's no warnin' he needs! Why, they've be'n like hostile dogs ever since Mackinac. Rickman'd tried Shaw once and last night Shaw comes here ready to blast our trader into kingdom come." "He broke short, jaw sagging. Over his shoulder he could see Rickman entering the gate. "He's comin' now!" he rasped. "Rickman! At th' gate!"—dragging her from the doorway. "If he found you here, there's no guessin' . . . Here! This window! Outside, and leave him to me 'til you get a chance to slip away!"

there's none to babble that I had a part in it. The trade's mine, now. It's mine, at last, for the company. He's no bourgeois to collect his furs! His Basile's like a faithful dog, but he's no head for trade. . . . But that's a bauble, a trinket, Rich! There are other things a man values higher even than this trade and I go for one of these now!" He reached beneath his bed and dragged out a jug and lifting it to his lips drank deeply. . . . Annette slipped around the building and fled for the gate.

"I'll pull her claws, now!" the trader boasted. "Impose a fraud on me, eh? She's here, alone with her boatman. Capes is gone and all day, Rich, all day I've waited. . . . He drank again, lingeringly, and the liquor mingled with the intoxication engendered by his passion and his sense of achievement. "Capes is gone and Shaw is dead and she's a woman without a protector in the interior!" "Sleep with the men, Rich. Tonight, this—with a sweeping gesture—"becomes a bridal chamber!"

As Annette ran through the gateway her boatman, lounging by the canoe, rose. But she did not go to them. She stood a moment, staring up the lake, shielding her eyes from the descending sun. She saw men gathered before Fort Shaw, saw others running from the stockade with burdens and began again to run herself. She neither staggered nor sobbed, now. Her feet were firm beneath her, and though her breathing was ragged, her eyes were dry. She ran as she had never run before, lightly and swiftly.

From the head of the last little cove she must skirt before reaching Shaw's fort she saw them launch a canoe and cried out. They did not hear. She slowed to a walk for breath to scream more loudly, but it did no good. Her heart's beating crowded her throat, her blood's roaring was loud in her ears. Walking did no good, and she ran again. So, just as she settled herself in the stern, to Basile's ears came a strangled hail, his name, the admonition to wait. "We cannot wait!" he called. "Shaw has been shot down. We go!"

"Where? When?" She was in the water, to her knees, grasping for the moving canoe. "Yonder! If he lives, he has lain alone since noon. We go to—" "I go . . . with you!" she sobbed, all but collapsing into the canoe. "Oars!" Basile growled, and the four blades caught the water in unison. Good men at the paddles; the best the fort boasted, with Basile at the steering oar, goading them on.

Annette's hands were clenched in her lap, her face white, and, rousing after a time, she stared ahead, un-mindful of the occasional slap of spray which came sizzling past the men to drench her face. On they went to the sunset, into the cool of evening. Basile had called the strokes and barked for speed. Shoulders and backs and arms worked in swift cadence; the canoe leaped and lunged on its way. But it was not enough. "Faster!" the girl called suddenly, half rising to her knees, throwing a look of appeal upward at the startled Basile. "Faster! He may be yet alive but dying for want of your speed!" And the backs bent further, the arms swept harder; they boiled on their way. They grunted under the strain to which she forced and held them. In the stream, though they slowed their stroke, groping through darkness, cautious of snag and shallow. A deer splashed from the water before them; ducks rose with a clatter of wings. "It's beyond the arena, their lodge!" "No, below. I remember." "Still there needs to go." (TO BE CONTINUED)

COED FROM LAST SOD SCHOOLHOUSE ATTENDS MIDLAND

Fremont, Neb.—Ardith Wales, Midland college freshman from Ainsworth, claims to be the only American college student who received her high school education in a sod schoolhouse.
 Miss Wales was graduated in 1937 from Lakeland high school, 28 miles southwest of Ainsworth in Brown county. Reputedly the last sod schoolhouse in the country, it was built in 1934 by ranchers who could not send their children elsewhere to school because of low prices being paid for beef on the hoof. Two teachers form the faculty.
 Miss Wales rode horseback three miles and a half to and from school each day, but found time after her other work was done to earn the grades which made her class valedictorian and eligible for a Midland scholarship.

The Undefeated Wayne Wildcats Face Crucial Test At Peru This Saturday Evening

Wildcats Takes Eighth Victory

Triumphs Over Midland And Buena Vista Keep Slate Clean.

Coach Hickman takes his unbeaten Wildcats to Peru Saturday for a crucial game with the powerful undefeated Bobcats that evening. The contest will be a headliner in state college sport circles this week with the two teams rated at the top by sport writers. The outcome will have an important bearing on the N.I.A.A. race.

Stinging a great comeback after a bad start, Wayne's Wildcats ran their victory string to eight with a 47-41 triumph over Midland college on the Warrior floor Tuesday night. It was Wayne's second victory over Midland this season.

Midland's tossers were decidedly hot in the first half, piling up a 16-0 lead in a short time on sensational shots by Paul De Preeze, Peterson and Bundgaard. After playing a fine game, Bundgaard was injured in the first half, and his removal from the game did the Warriors no good.

Wayne rallied to bring the score to 26-27 at half and went ahead in the second half. Lingenfelter and Retzlaff led the second-half attack as the Wildcats ran off with the game despite a gallant threat by Midland. Most of the shots in this period were short ones.

Lingenfelter, Wayne, with 15 points and Bradford, who scored 12, were leading scorers. Paul De Preeze counted ten for Midland.

Defeat Beavers, 36-30.

Wayne Teachers fought off a late Buena Vista rally to clinch their seventh straight victory, 36-30, in a fast and furious contest here last Saturday evening. Coach Hickman used 14 men in an effort to find a smooth consistent combination, with five freshmen finishing the game in complete command.

Wayne High Breaks Even In Two Tilts

Blues Tip Neligh But Fall Before South Sioux Cage Team.

Scoring six points in the last three minutes, South Sioux City nosed out Wayne high's fighting team on the Cardinal floor Tuesday night, 32-26, in a close contest. It was the first defeat of the Wayne team away from home as they continued their road trips.

Tomorrow night the blue team encounters Norfolk there and next Tuesday they go to West Point. The evenly matched fives were tied several times during the game Tuesday, 10-10 at half and 20-20 at the close of the third period.

Wayne's second team outplayed the Cardinal seconds 20-17 although their opponents were much taller.

Hirschert, South Sioux guard, led his team with 12 points. Wright was high for Wayne with 10.

Edge Neligh, 17-16.

One free throw was the margin of victory for Wayne high's cagers as they trounced Neligh 17-16 in a tight game on the Neligh floor last Friday evening. Each team collected seven field goals, but the Wayne boys converted three out of six gift shots as compared with two out of six for their opponents.

Both teams employed a zone defense which held down the scoring on the narrow Neligh floor. Dalton and Kryger, guards, tossed in three long baskets to help give Neligh a 7-4 lead as the half ended.

The blue and white came back with a brief but scorching attack at the beginning of the second half. Graham, center, slipped in two short ones while Fitch and Berry arched in two shots in quick succession. Wayne now held a 12-7 advantage.

In the time remaining the teams fought for open shots, which were extremely scarce. Neligh's determined attempts narrowed the margin to one point before the game ended.

Belden Pirates Stop Wayne All-Stars 36-31, In Hard-Fought Charity Game

Several hundred fans were thrilled and amused as they enjoyed an evening of volleyball, basketball and band music all put on for the benefit of Wayne's underprivileged children at the city auditorium last Monday evening.

Cold and stormy weather cut down the attendance, but nevertheless over $21 was cleared to aid in providing for unfortunate youngsters.

Wayne's town team (unofficially dubbed the All-Stars by followers) gave the undefeated Belden Pirates a tough battle all the way but faded in the last few minutes, within two points of the visitors, and lost 31-36. It was Belden's eleventh consecutive win without defeat.

It may have been a charity tilt, and indeed there were charity tosses aplenty, but both teams displayed a Scotchman's frugality in converting the gift shots into points. Something of a record (in this writer's knowledge) was hung up when the two teams made 19 out of 21 tries from the free throw line.

Wayne had a perfect night with nine out of nine, while Belden missed but two out of 12.

Former Wildcats Play.

The Wayne cagers, recruited from the ranks of Wayne college alumni, the Teachers "B" squad and local high school alumni, started in impressive fashion. They began sipping from the corners in deadly style to lead by 8-1 before the Pirates could break through for a basket. By half-time, however, the visitors had found the range and forced ahead, 16-13.

The second half saw the Pirates put on full speed ahead and sail away to a fast-sized lead before the Wayne team again rallied to make the count 30-32. Desperate basket tumbles failed to narrow the margin, and Belden salted away the victory with a few more baskets.

Rivalry Is Keen.

Friendly rivalry put a sprinkle of spice into the battle with former college players opposing each other. Maurice "Mac" Christensen, former all-conference forward at Midland, played a brilliant floor game and scored 11 points. Elwood Mink, former Wayne Teachers all-conference guard, led the Wayne team with his sparkling floor play and fine shooting which

Wayne Prep Cops Two Cage Victories

Last-Quarter Spurt Defeats Wakefield; Also Beat Coleridge.

Wayne Prep made two victories the past week by subduing Wakefield's Trojans 21-19 with a timely spurt in the last quarter here Tuesday night. The score was knotted 7-7 at half and 15-15 at the end of the third quarter as the teams fought on even terms.

Ragged passing spoiled much of the game for both players and spectators with many tosses to teammates going wild. The second half was much better, though, with Tell, 6 foot 4 inch Wakefield center, and Bob Hickman, sugged prep center, putting on a duel themselves.

Tell flipped in four fielders to keep the Trojans in the game, while Gulliver, Hickman and Heikes scored important points for the prep team. Wakefield couldn't match the final prep rally, however, which gave them a 2-point victory.

Wakefield's reserves won from Wayne's reserves 8-7 in a nip and tuck game.

Wisner plays at Wayne prep tomorrow night in a conference game.

Preps Beat Coleridge, 38-18.

Starting out slowly, Wayne prep picked up speed as the game went on to crush Coleridge 38 to 18 in a conference tilt at Coleridge last Friday night.

The preps couldn't get under way in the first quarter but managed to gain a 17-9 lead by the time intermission rolled around.

The second half saw much improvement with Bob Hickman outstanding. His floor play and basket-making from the center position boosted the score for Wayne. Most of the prep basket, were made after working the ball in for setups.

The victory, the third for the prep team, placed them second in the conference standings, behind Pilger.

Belden Town Team Trips College "B"

Belden's Flying Pirates, undefeated town team, made the Wayne Teachers "B" team its tenth victim of the season at Belden last Friday night, winning 34-29.

Wayne had difficulty in piercing the tall front line defense on Belden's narrow floor. Score at half was 22-15 in favor of the Pirates.

Warren Lamson, former Wayne athlete and now principal at Belden, and Maurice Christensen, former Midland star, paced the winners. Lindahl, Wayne guard, was outstanding.

Rural Boys Lose To Concord Seconds

A team composed of Wayne high rural boys lost a close basketball game, 13-15, to the Concord reserves last Tuesday night. Marvin Feddersen, high school instructor, accompanied the boys to Concord and refereed the Concord-Dixon first team game.

The rural students have been practicing during the noon hour. They may play a return game with Concord here later.

1932 Budget Report Out.
The 1932 budget report is a book two inches thick with 908 pages. It contains the report of every government department on how much money each department will need to run another year. Each member is allowed only one of these books. It would take a month to read it all. But briefly it shows that our budget is pretty sure to remain around seven billion dollars a year instead of the three and a half billions we used to spend each year before the depression.

Pastor Confers on Indian Affairs.
Rev. Waldemulder of Winnebago, Neb., who is engaged in religious work among the Omaha and Winnebago Indians, has been in Washington several days in conference with officials in the office of Indian affairs.

Washington Visitors.
Mrs. Joe Kreebs of Humphrey, Neb., is here visiting with her son, Warren, who is a student at the Georgetown university. The annual meeting of the Woman's club and the annual meeting of the Legion Auxiliary are bringing to Washington a large number of Nebraska women, among them, women from northeast Nebraska who have been connected with these national organizations for several years. Mrs. Walter Kiechel of Tecumseh, president of the Nebraska Federation of Women's clubs, is attending the national meeting of her organization in official capacity.

Are You One Of These?
Just what is in a name? The social security board recently compiled a list of the most common American names. Here is part of the list: Smith, 294,000; Johnson 227,000; Brown, 164,000; Williams, 156,000; Jones, 147,000; Miller, 137,000; Davis, 123,000; Anderson, 115,000; Wilson, 96,000; Taylor, 81,000. One man here discussing these names says that under our good old American system any of these names can become a Rockefeller, a Ford or even a Cohen if they have the ability.

$100 Worth of French.
There were more people looking in from the outside as spectators than those seated around the tables at the Jackson day dinner here the other night. The menu for that $100 plate dinner had to be interpreted to several guests. Noted on the menu were the following: "Capon Farci perigourdine" and "Pommes parisienne," "eroute suChaud." Anyway the foreign words didn't mean much to some of the diners who later referred to some foreign language books.

Trade Conference Lobbying Starting.
A lot of the British trade experts are here to be on hand when the American-British trade conference begins. British Ambassador Lindsay who lives here will head the British delegation. A lot is being said about these trade conferences in Washington these days. While the agriculture bloc is worried about imports of foreign farm commodities, the New Englanders are starting to talk in the lobby about importation of foreign merchandise. One member from Massachusetts says he has 27 shoe factories in his district making a woman's low priced shoe. Seventeen of these factories have closed and some others are working only part time because a certain European country can now send in a competitive shoe.

Decline In Meat Prices.
To the desks of a lot of congressmen today, came a report from the "Institute of American Meat Packers." This statement says that beef prices have declined from 8 to 35 percent from the levels reached in mid-September, when prices were at their peak; fresh pork prices are 21 to 49 percent lower, smoked cuts 16 to 32 percent lower, and lamb 7 to 11 percent lower. Members from Montana and other states where they raise sheep say there is no market for wool. They are afraid of trades with Britain. In fact, they fear Australian wool. The statement of the packers says nothing about imports of Argentine beef. A clerk in a big chain store here says he hasn't heard of any American canned corn beef for years and that his shelves are now being filled with South American roast beef.

Two Appropriations Cut.
The treasury and post office appropriation bill is now going through the house and will be passed this week. The post office department will get $789,689,659 and the treasury department gets $1,400,552,286. These funds are to run these two departments for the fiscal year 1932. The committee having these bills in charge did considerable pruning and expects to show quite a reduction in these appropriations when compared to recently preceding bills.

Costs of Peace.
Our navy is second in size to that of Great Britain. It is now being increased by a billion-dollar program. It is not giving out how much money is now available. In addition to direct appropriations, there are many more millions which have been set aside from relief funds. Then, too, the maritime commission has $200,000,000 for ship building. Recently it made a grant of $10,000,000 for the construction of a lot of oil tank ships by the Standard Oil company. That company will provide $14,000,000 of the funds. When the tankers are built they will be owned and operated by the Standard Oil company, but the boats will be subject to call by our navy in case of war. Preparing for peace by preparing for war is costly.

PWA Still At Work.
Although the PWA has been on its way out for nearly a year, it still has 2,980 projects under construction contract or allotment, which will cost nearly two billions of dollars. It has completed 23,491 projects at a cost of $2,303,000,000. Its administrative forces have been greatly reduced, but still more than a year will elapse, possibly a longer period, before PWA passes completely out of existence.
