municipal affairs. Improvements are necessary to a live, growing community, and errors of judgment, if any; would seem worse in the direction of too little than too much: progress. Wayne cannot tank with other communities of its size by lying down and refusing to capitize passing advantages in account of the cest. A deat A. on account of the cost. A dead town has dead property values, low-priced rents, small revenues and indifferent business. People of capital and enterprise detour around it. Cerfainly Wayne has not gone shead too fast to suit most citizens. But a chance to express choice of officers to handle both, city and school affairs is a privilege which should be cheerfully granted. It is still the American way.

BASKETBALL MEET STARTS SERIES OF DISTRICT EVENTS

COME important district meet-

Some important district meetings are scheduled for Wayne. This week the district basketball tournament opened here and will continue over Saturday. Sixteen schools are represented with about 160 participating students. Fans are numerous from each interested point. The debate contest will take place March 18 and 19. Then will follow the music contest.

Then will follow the music contest April 1 and 2. The district Woman's club convention for three days beginning April 20 will attract a large crowd. All these meetings will hold sessions in the spacious and comfortable municipal auditorium. The town will extend welcoming hands and endeavor to make guests glad they came and wish to come again.

Hayes was president, and national problems following the Civil way were still unsolved Times were tough. national problems following the Civi were still unsolved. Times were tough Mr. Orr remembers he was glad to w $18 per month, the top among farm draw $18 per month, the top among tarm wages. During 1878 conditions grew worse, and the wage scale slipped. Accordingly, Mr. Orr worked for $15 per month the second year. He remembers that prices generally were low.

There was no attempt on the part of the government or lajor unions to regulate wages or hours, and Mr. Orr says he worked from daylight to dark, the longer the daylight, the longer the work day. He liked his employing farmer-who was carefully but good-naturedly Scotch, and he does not recall any unpleasant experience in the way he was treated. Mr. Orr's demands were not great, and he expected to earn all he received. Therefore, in satisfying his employer, he satisfied himself. Wants were meager sixty years ago, and content with little was the rule.

Mr. Orr remembers the strict Sabbath observance and church-going habits of primitive Idwa settlements. On one Sunday, when he was on his way to church at Shelby with his employer and family, a field of ripened grain belonging to the farm where he worked, was noticed and admired. It was ready to cut, but the cutting had to be postponed to avoid trespassing on the Sabbath. To the amazement and distress of the Scotch Presbyterian whom Mr. Orr accompanied, a neighbor was cutting his grain on the Sabbath. It is recalled that a terrific wind storm came up Sunday night and laid flat the Scotchman's ripened field that appeared promising in the morning. The question of the prior didy night and laid flat the Scotchman's ened field that appeared promising in morning. The question of the prior has of the Sabbath to the security of tured grain disturbed the Scotchman's lings, but how he settled the matter has conscience, Mr. Orr does not ow, though he knows he was a sticklen Sabbath observance.

In his long life, Mr. Orr has experience the constraint of the control of the numerous vicissitudes. His sts to the fact that a reion of pinching times has always and vitably followed war. Like others of his uong experience, he is not made unduly fearful by the downs that follow the ups in the nation's economics.

Son Jimmy IT LOOKS as though Son In Offing prince of the Roosevelt dynasty, were being groomed for the presidency or for whatever may be called the top place when the time for succession arrives. In a late issue, Time magazine parades Jimmy in elaborate fashion, suggesting that he has three Roosevelt ambitions—getting married, winning economic independence and capturing the presidency. He has attained the first two, and evidently is now out for the third. His father, the president, has put him into a secretary-ship close to the White House throne, and given him a lot of responsibility as a sort of "contact" man between the executive and the madly jostling world.

Time magazine briefly sketches his thirty years from Hyde Park to Washington. He acquired his first taste of politics as his father's page boy in the 1924 democratic convention, and he has since carefully retained the taste. He drinks three quarts of milk per day, and in that way he pacifies an otherwise troublesome stomach. The account says he smokes sparingly of cigarettes. He gets up in the morning at 8, and following a simple breakfast, he takes his eldest daughter to school on his way to the White House which he reaches at 9:15. He is happily married.

Thus, he is developing for the role of executive leadership, and he should be well qualified to step into first place, and he may do so unless the country becomes overly fed up on Roosevelts and decides to change to some other line by the time his turn to ascend the pinnacle rolls around.

The new-idea-a-day fellows should be compelled to quit mixing their cure-alls into public affairs at least until the country gets stronger.

When one is doing well taxes do not seem so high, nor so hard to pay. It is when a fellow pays the least that he feels the worst. "We need to create confidence in the humaneness of our own aspirations. The extreme right in today's social thinking is just as dangerous as the extreme left. We must reject both. Our opposition, what ever its form or name must be dedicated to social and economic progress for the great mass of America. Wherever we find a useful reform, and there have been many, we must embrace it just as heartily as we cut loose from inherited mistake and errors. We must make the American system serve the common advantage and the common security of our whole people with special privilege for none. We must apply the Lincoln spirit to our modern problems.

"I have necessarily confined myself to but a few of the considerations to which all citizens regardless of geography or previous partisan affiliations must give prayerful attention. We cannot get prosperity by law. We can get it only by again releasing the great creative forces of individual initiative. Nor can we get security by giving up liberty. Thus we merely lose both. The American system made us what we are Given a fair chance it will bless us in the mew day in greater degree than ever before."

One Surplus That Isn't Burdensome.

(Omaha Journal-Stockman)

A recent monthly report of the Canadian bureau of statistics not only contains interesting information about the world wheat situation, but also throws light on how other peoples of the world regard a nation which holds surplus food products.

World stocks of wheat are still relative-ly low, the report shows. Estimated to total 615 million bushels by July 1, they will be only eighty-five million bushels larger than a year ago, when a real shortage existed.

Furthermore, the increase is entirely accounted for by gains in holdings in the United States which, it is rather enviously acknowledged, is the only country holding wheat which may be considered as surplus stocks.

In other words any world power wishing to buy wheat today has little choice but to come to the United States for it, at least until another crop is harvested. Perhaps if all the world's major wheat producing nations had surpluses our economic outlook might not be quite so rosy, but under the circumstances we have every reason to feel happy that our own granaries are well filled.

Cannot Buy Prosperity.

Cannot Buy Prosperity.
(Creston News-Advertiser)
Federal funds will continue to support life as long as they continue to be issued, but they create no lasting cure for depression. A government cannot buy prosperity. Our condition today proves it. We have already spent more than the $10,000,000,000 that LaFollette demands, and where are we?! There are at least 12,000,000 adults out of work. Some late estimates, made combined.

Baruch voices what many feel—that government should lift its restrictive hands from business—all businesses, big and little, and allow them to recover in the natural way. When the administration cooks up, some new idea, on the assumption that it will aid conditions, it too often has the opposite result, and obstructs what it assays to help. declined almost 40 percent in the last three months. Nation's Business has been asked if it is on the side of "big business" or "little business," and as it was asked the same question in 1924, it repeats the same answer given then. Editor of the magazine questions when business is big and pernicious; when it is small and wholesome. "At what point does success become sinister?" asks the editor. He mentions a crippled farmer ister?" asks the editor. He mentions a crippled farmer who made such good sausage that in time he shipped it to all parts of the world, thereby becoming rich. At what juncture in his success did he become bad? Another fellow made a fortune out of tree culture which he started in a small way. The chewing gum industry great to great proportions which he started in a small way. The chewing gum industry grew to great proportions from the initiative of a poor but ingenious candy-maker. The editor wants to know when these fellows became too successful to be ornaments instead of evils in society. Answering the question, the editor says: "We are for both! And for small business, too, the small business which sees through shining eyes a higher small business which sees through shining eyes a higher goal and is striving through the small hours of the night to attain it. Don't take that away from us, please, because that is the opportunity of the individual, and individualism is the

WAYNE BOWS TO PERU.

Peru's well-balanced team Tuesday evening proved its right to be called the 'best state college five,' by snapping Wayne's two-year winning streak on the home floor. The Bobcats had a slight edge on the Wildcats, possessing about everything a good team should have, unusual height combined with speed, ball-handling skill and accuracy at the basket. Wayne put up- a remarkable battle and almost upset the Peru giants.

The present system is a great improvement over the days not so far back when hundreds of high school teams made the annual trek to Lincoln. It became such a commercial enterprise that the new plan was formed under which eliminations are held at various towns throughout the state. TOURNAMENT TIPS.

Let's look at the field in the class A meet, Ainsworth's consistent play in pilling up a 17-game victory string without a defeat is enough to make it the favorite, but we are not so sure that western competition is as stiff as that in the eastern part of the state. Norfolk is doped to reach the finals, but Newman Grove. Madison, Neligh or Wayne are all capable of causing an upset. Pierce is a strong contender, too. This writer picks Ainsworth over the field, but he may very well be wrong.

Amsworth over the field, but he may very well be wrong.

In the Class B meet at Wayne, the battle seems to be among several teams of about equal strength, Penca, Emersøn, Holy Trimity of Hurtington, Wakefield and Wayne Prep. Ponca has won 11 out of 15 games this senson, defeating Laurel 25-14 in the final contest. Holy Trimity hasn't met many tough opponents in recording its 11 wins in 15 games, but Coach Stevens has a diminutive forward. Don Kneifl, who has scored 129 points in 12 games. Wayne Prep has been playing its best basketball in the last few games and may be expected to make a strong bid. Wakefield is a good tournament team and has a fair chance to repeat its triumph of last year. Of the lot we pick Wakefield and Wayne Prep, just to be guessing.

AND NOW, WATCH FOR UP-SETS.

S. Collector of Internal Revenue. Collector of Internal Revenue. Collector of Malley pointed out that, to receive old-age benefits under the provisions of the Social Security act, it is necessary that an employee be credited on the records of the Social Security Boaid with the amount of wages he has earned. He pointed out that the information concerning the amount of wages paid an employee is required by the government in order to calculate the benefits under old-age insurance which the government has obligated itself to pay workers when they reach the forkers when they reach the 65, or to their estates in the of their death. It is, there-

Without this information, Mr. O'Melley' explained, it would be impossible for the Social Security board to credit an employee with the amount of wages he had carned and with this gap in his received, there would be a consequent reduction in the amount of insurance which he ultimately will receive, since this amount of wages he has been paid. Three Wayne State Teachers orations won the right to compete to the Nebraska Intercollegiate oratory competition with speeches given in the college oratory consett last Thursday evening. The winners were Muriel Hanson, Wakefield, in women's oratory with the oration, "Mereiless Marihuana". Robert Sutton, Inwood, Ia, in peace oratory with "The State of Mind;" and John Kyl in Idd line oratory, speaking "The Greatest Fraud."

John Kyl, who was declared winner in the old line oratory, waived his privilege of participating in the istate contest in order to have more time for concentration on debate. The honor was florefore awarded to Rosset Gibson of Hastings, who spoke "The Game lof the Glants," rated only slightly lower than Kyl's oration, Gibson will compete in the state or contest orates.

Other speakers in the local con-est were: Women's oratory, Mar-arl Prichard, Schaller, Ia, with 'Lliquor and Youth,' men's ora-ony, Warren McGonagle, New-astle, with "Those Economic Walls," Gerold Burney, Harting-ion, with "Americans for Amer-ca;" and Budd Bornhoft, Wayne, with "The Menacing if Percent."

The cost of education per pupil in Nebraska was $7.65 above the average spent in the United States 10 years ago and last year it was $1.25 below the average, ranking 31st place in the United States.

"Nebraska ranks 39th in average analysis $772, whereas the average salary is $772, whereas the average salary is $772, whereas the average in the United States is $1,283. The only states below [Nebraska are seven southern states and the two Dakotas.

Prof. Bowen quoted the following figures showing the decrease in the appropriation for Wayne college since 1920-31: 1929, $405,548; 1931-33, $385,270; 1933-35, $308,216; 1935, no change and in 1937, no change. Taking 1929 as the base the present uppropriation is 76 percent or 24 percent reduction.

"In the study of 74 state teachers colleges in 1936 jit has been found that, taking 1929-30 as the base and considering it 100, all of these 74, although the average dropped below 100, during the depression, has made some recovery. The north central group, in which we are, is now 96. Even the southern group is 100. Wayne remains at 76. No change since 1933. In alter study of 118 teachers colleges, during the past year, there has been an additional 3 percent increase. Wayne remains the same and is still 76.

Last week's debate which fre-ceived considerable publicity was on the Docking and Nicking of Horses (Prohibition) bill. Lord Merthyr declared that a horse was given a tail to get rid of flies where there were for twitching fly muscles. Docking left part of the horse's body exposed and unpro-tected.

Lord Noel Buxton who also supported the bill felt that it was an assthetic question. He declared that with no law of prohibition some people would rather die thind turn up at a hunting meet on a horse with a long tail. He recalled his own hunting days when it was so unfashionable to ride a long-tailed horse that he felt it squite intolerable to do so. Supporters of the bill recalled that in the coronation procession there were no docked, horses and pointed to the regulations which forbid docking in the army.
