Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are charter members of Concordia Lutheran church of Concord. Mr. Johnson served as Sunday school superintendent for 27 years. He was also one of the first trustees and since 1891 has served as deacon. He has taught the elderly people's Bible class for 47 years. Mrs. Johnson has also been active in church work and was treasurer of the Ladies' Aid for many years.

Recall Early Days.

Mr. Johnson recalls that when he came in 1884 Concord had four buildings, two homes of railroad officials, a depot and post office combined and a general store located one block west of the present site of Reith's garage. Livery stables, elevators, blacksmith shop and Concord's first school were built the following year. A drug store, another general store and more houses were added later.

Mr. Johnson relates hunting deer near Concord and seeing Indians that were traveling through harvesting brome corn for early settlers. Mr. Johnson broke all of his 160 acres with a walking plow excepting 25, acres. He also helped neighbors break prairie. Mr. Johnson found the land very fertle and moist. When driving with horses to Wayne or Concord one had to be vareful in crossing sloughs and valleys because horses, and buggies! would mire down easily. The Logan bottoms were especially treacherous and floods were frequent.

Second Round Is One-Sided.

The second round of the tourney played Thursday evening uncovered little excitement for the spectators with only one game, the Wakefield-Allen skirmish, even approaching a close contest.

Stanton, which sprung an upset in the opening round by eliminating the seeded Emerson quint, had little difficulty in defeating Coleridge 37-18. Coleridge had surprised by putting out another favorite, Holy Trinity, in the first round.

Wayne prep, led by Don Straham who counted 15 points, was too hot for Pender and tripped the Pendragons 36-23. Leading 13-8 at the half intermission, prep loosed a devastating attack and piled up a big margin. The reserves finished the game.

Dr. Frank IN FAULITLESS diction and clear-cut phrases, Dr. Glenn Speaks Frank explained New Deal weaknesses and the opposition's philosophy in a speech before algreat, approving crowd at Lincoln last Thursday night. Dr. Frank advocated a complete audit of the New Deal, freely recording credit where credit is due, and refusing to withhold indictment where indictment is due. His idea is to get down to brass tacks, study problems carefully and frame a set of principles that may be translated into action.

Dr. Frank outlined ten drifts in national policy that "if permitted to run to their logical conclusion, will effect a sweeping revolution in American life and enterprise, and result in an America not at all like the America the present administration insists it is seeking to foster." These ten drifts were explained as follows:

"I. The drift from the balanced powers of representative self-government toward the centralization of unchecked authority in the hands of the chief executive.

"2. The drift from the assumption that we should have the minimum necessary public servants toward a vast and ever expanding bureaucracy that swarms over the nation like an army of occupation, devoting an increasing measure of its energies to party rather than governments."

"3. The drift from a belief that governments of comments of the interests.

"3. The drift from a belief that governmental economy is in the interest of the people's well being toward a planned extravagance of federal expenditure.

"4. The drift from regulated freedom in conomic enterprise toward an increasing y intimate and detailed domination of pri enterprise, both small and large, by

The drift from an economy of plenty

"5. The drift from an economy of pienty through ceaseless development towards an economy of scarcity by legislation.

"6. The drift from a progressive expansion of the nation's enterprise, in the interest of higher living standards for all Americans, toward a deliberate restriction of the nation's enterprise, in the interest of which the head of the nation's enterprise, in the interest of which the description which to Americans, toward a deliberate restriction of the nation's enterprise, in the interest of a will-o-the-wisp stabilization which to the end of time, may prove impossible unless we are willing to stabilize at a lower and lower standard of living, to which present policies of government will inevitably drive us.

"7. The drift from local responsibility toward a buck passing dependence upon the federal government, which is creating a problem of human erosion more

"9. The drift from self-initiated and self-managed agricultural co-operative organization toward an increasingly detailed federal overlordship of farms and farmers.

"10. The drift from coherent national policies toward conflicting group bolicies; a drift from national policies designed to be just and workable in the interest of the whole people, policies that permit no special interest to take precedence over the common interest, policies that refuse to coddle any class or any section to the detriment of the people as a whole; a drift towards policies that represent a series of surrenders to militant and conflicting minorities in return for their flicting minorities in return for their

Waste and ONE FELLOW earns more Frugality but spends more uselessly, treats credit lightly and is always in debt and always hard up. Analways in debt and always hard up. Another receives less, spends less, pays promptly, guards his credit, asks no favors and always has a surplus. The former can slip but little before landing in government relief. The latter's frugal habits enable him to save a little each day, and he has acumulated a satisfactory surplus by the end of the vear. The shiftless fellow who has had a better chance finds himself in the usual red after a year's work, but with unpaid bills happily reduced from what they would have been if he had not overly abused his credit. The careful manager does not want solicitude or special consideration, and he receives neither. He just wants to be left to his task of handling his own affairs, living within his earnings, investing within his means, expecting only a square deal and accepting without complaint the consequences of his own judgment. That is rugged individualism, and it is in refreshing contrast with a growing tendency to outshine one's neighbors and finally lean on government paternalism. receives climbed from $22,538,700,400 to $51,000,600,000. That tells a story of sage management and economy impossible to parallel in the world's history. And see what we got in return. Only more headaches.

Pictures of President Roosevelt taken when inaugurated and those taken lately show he has aged markedly under the strain of executive leadership for five years. The rest of us have correspondingly aged under the presssure of New Deal performance. In the aging business we suspect the people are running just about neckand-neck with the president.

"8. The drift from self-reliant trade unionism toward a politically nursed labor movement, which subtly transfers the hopes of the working millions from their own leaders and their own organized strength to the uncertain fortunes of politics, a transfer which in one European prairies. And the purpose is a worthy one.

IN CONFLICT.
Editor W. F. Cramb of the Fairbury Journal, democrat of the old school, can't make himself fit into the New Deal program. He is owner of some Jefseir it into the New Deal program. He is owner of some Jefferson county farms, and while he farms by proxy, he knows how a farm ought to be run, and he is wholly opposed to following plans made by inexperienced Washington upstarts. Inconsistency in government figuring outrages his old fashioned ideas. Conflict between crop reduction and soil erosion preventives leads Editor Cramb to reason in this way: "It may be that we can't think straight but if the farmers raise too much to prosper why worry about an acre a year being destroyed on each farm? If erosion keeps up at this rate the problem of the surplus is solved. Isn't that right? But the absurdity of the situation is that to reduce the surplus of farm production, farmers are farm production, farmers are being paid to prevent destruc-tion of their over-producing soil. Does not one effort neutrasoil. Does not one effort neutra-lize the other? It just doesn't make sense."

It seemed odd, in-deed, to cross a wide chasm called a river with no water in sight. We were told Los Angeles river was no river until rains descended, and then it was a handy provision of nature to 'modify dangers and damage. The waterway would seem to have been overworked during the past few weeks.

REAL VALUES.

REAL VALUES.

Whatever may be the attempts of dictators to strangle religion, the spiritual values which it represents, will survive. The spirit of man either lives on forever, or is snuffed out at the grave, and no human ruler, no matter how powerful, can alter its course. Persecution has trailed Christianity from the first, and believers in a higher life have been made to suffer under the lash of earth-bound tyrants whose shallow minds could not reach beyond the states which they arbitrarily and cruelly ruled. In chur chroppressed countries trarily and cruelly ruled. In chur c h-oppressed countries there must be a feeling—though perhaps, through fear unexpressed—that something better and nobler awaits translation from this world's trials and injustices? Certainly, this life of pains and tears is not worth while pulses it reserves. tlanity—oppressors of those who look up and beyond material considerations for hopemay wield temporary power-may terrorize subjects into ob-

Dominance Of Union Labor Is Serious In West

Dominance of union labor on the Pacific coast is a decided detri-ment to farming and business, ac-cording to C. E. Carhart who, with Mrs. Caphart swingless. Mrs. Carhart, arrived home Mon-day after spending the winter in San Diego, Calif. After seeing the results of union demands, Mr. Carhart advises against any farm-er-labor organization in this sec-tion of the country.

Observation shows that union

The shipping industry is paralyzed on the coast because of unions. Of 22,000 seamen, 10,000 are idle in the west. Labor demands make the construction of a ship cost three times in this country what it would in England. Then after the ship is built, union demands make it impossible for Americans to operate the ships in competition with foreign carriers. As a consequence, Mr. Carhart found, shipping is done in foreign camericans to operate the ships in competition with foreign carriers. As a consequence, Mr. Carhart found, shipping is done in foreign boats. Some of the biggest boat lines in America cannot operate without some help and they are now asking government subsidy. Mr. Carhart believes that the parayzed condition of shipping is due to the dominance of an alien in shipping labor.

to the dominance of an alien in shipping labor.

The relief problem continues to be a major one on the west coast and a number of city mayors recently visited Washington to secure more aid. Mr. Carhart found numerous federal projects being promoted to furnish employment, many of them seemingly useless.

Opinions on the New Deal are very decided on the west coast. Those who are opposed to Roosevelt are very bitter in their feeling, and those favoring his policies are enthusiastic.

The Carharts left San Diego just about the time the heavy rains

Monday Night.

Seniors had the largest number on the honor roll of the Wakefield high school for the past six weeks. The requirements for the honor roll have been changed somewhat. A student must now have at least two A's and no grade below B. Under the previous plan it was possible for a student to get on the honor roll with a grade that would average no more than 88 percent. For the country over the general honor roll requires an average of 90 percent or what would correspond to 90 percent.

Music Festival.

Saturday Wakefield plans to be represented in the county music festival at Ponca by approximately 70 pupils. The band, boys' glee club, girls' glee club, mixed chors, several small groups and soloists will take part. Patrons or persons interested in aiding the music departments are asked to help transport the pupils to Ponca. Gas and oil will be paid. Those able to take cars are asked to inform the superintendent, W. G. Loebel or Miss Katherine Kemphorne. The music organization needs the cooperation of the community in these events in order to keep the interest up and the work progressing.

she purchased last year during her exchange year of teaching in England.

Two of the books belong in a set and the fly leaf is inscribed with the name of Parnell. Miss Schemel purchased the books in Dublin and believes that they belonged to the famous Parnell family of Ireland, particularly since one of the books was given to Mr. Parnell in 1829 when he was attending Eaton college in England. The two books, "Marmion," 1821 and "Rokeby" by Sir Walter Scott, 1821, are leather bound and are beautifully decorated with gold leaf engraving.

"The Evidence of Christian Religion," by the Right Honorable Joseph Addison, was written in 1756. The book was published in Glasgow, and Miss Schemel bought it in Liverpool. Another book which she purchased in Liverpool was "Miscellânies" by Dean Swift which was published in London in 1742. These books are also leather bound.

Library News

The 1937 annual report of the febraska State Board of Agricul-ure has been received at the Vayne city library. Volume 1 and Nebraska State Board of Agriculture has been received at the Wayne city library. Volume 1 and 2 of the Nebraska Survey of Social resources by Maud E. Nuquist, director, for the year 1936, are proving to be very interesting books. The books include care of the aged, report of the industrial home for women, a study of the physically and mentally handicapped and what has been done in the state.

The February circulation at the library totaled 1410. One hundred and ninety seven non-fiction books were checked out, 807 fiction and 406 periodicals.

Are Brought Here

Miss Margaret Schemel brought spine English recipes home with her from London. Different kinds of potatoes are found in England. French fried potatoes are called chips; small potatoes fried whole are chief; and thickly sliced potatoes dipped in a batter of egg and flour then fried are called collops. These potatoes are sold on the streets at noon, from 4:30 to 6:30 in the evening. Fish and chips are eaten for supper at 9 in the evening.

For picnics, holiday catering, luncheons and suppers, meat pies of many kinds are bought in England. Some of the various kinds are steak and kidney pies, gala pies, Scotch mutton pies, Melton Mowbray pies, St. Neot's pies and home-made pies. This strikes me as being a very sane way for a school to offer a course in administration. "Moreover, in other courses the problems on which we work are taken from actual school situations. Occasionally we take a trip to the school in question and study the situation on the actual grounds where it exists. Of course a great deal of our work consists of library and research procedure but it is not overbalanced in this direction. "My program this way le rather.

but it is not overbalanced in this direction.
"My program this year is rather heavy," states Mr. Childs, "since I am combining the work for two degrees. Horvard offers a master of education degree which is based upon two years of graduate study. With my year's work at the University of Nebraska I will be eligible for this degree in the spring. I have decided to take this degree in order to have something concrete to show for this year of study. Then in order to complete the doctorate program I will have to complete an additional summer's work and a doctorate dissertation. The dissertation I can complete after leaving school and I hope that I can stretch my resources sufficiently so that I can remain here in school this next summer. Since the program for the master's degree is somewhat different from the doctorate program.
