

Of Fourth of July Patriotic
Needed — Passing of Neb. St. Hist. Soc. Jan 1937
Chautauqua — W.F.
Groups in Headlines.

While we are trying to hang to our independence, celebration of July Fourth with renewed warmth would be stimulating and reinforcing. Return of the old-time patriotic orator would seem in order. We need revival of the spirit which inaugurated July Fourth as an important American holiday.

Decidedly provincial were primitive settlements, and Independence day celebrations—neither elaborate nor costly—were etched into memories as brightest spots in the year's experience. Every community had its favorite picnic grounds. A few days in advance, a platform for the program was built, terribly hard board seats were put up, and refreshment stands and a circular swing completed the arrangement.

Anticipation disturbed sleep, and people were up early on the morning of the Fourth. The parade, headed by the town's band and constituted otherwise by a group of girls representing the states on a hayrack and a company of callithumpians, marched to the grove, arriving an hour late. An invocation, songs and reading of the Declaration of Independence preceded the creation of the day which was usually made loud enough to hear above the unrestricted popping of firecrackers. The speaker glorified events of the Revolution and cracked down on King George and his soldiers subjects.

The afternoon was devoted to some minor sports and to visiting and extending acquaintance. The prospective candidate for office kept his face wreathed in captivating smiles. His lively interest in everybody was no mystery when his aspirations had leaked out. The evening's fireworks closed joyous day—usually hot and dusty, but so different from accustomed humdrum that memory of the experience lingered happily on and on through subsequent months.

When settlers loaded themselves into lumber wagons and started homeward over bumpy roads, they were tired and sunburned, but within them were resounding fires of patriotism. They returned to taping the prairies with renewed resolution and increased content.

More Fourth of July celebrations with patriotic orators shouting the progress of American independence and the incomparable virtues and advantages of the American democracy would help.

Before the Radio.
Guy MacLaren, electionist or reader, revives memories of chautauqua days by groups of reminiscences told in recent issues of the Atlantic. She explains how chautauqua circuits were organized and managed, and how talent rushed from one point to another to keep engagements. The first chautauqua in the United States was held at Lake Chautauqua, New York in 1874, and its sessions lasted all summer. From this beginning chautauquas sprang up all over the country. The author says 40,000,000 Americans attended chautauquas in a single season. William Jennings Bryan was the leading attraction, drew the largest audiences and the largest pay.

Northeast Nebraska towns were included in the chautauqua circuit. Wayne had one each year for a long time. We remember that Judge J. M. Cherry and the late A. R. Davis and J. G. Mines were leaders in the movement here, and they had plenty of assistance. Thus, the Wayne area was privileged to bear most of the chautauqua nobodies through the years.

The chautauqua heyday was reached before automobiles came into general use—long before introduction of the radio and perfection of the motion picture. One supporting enthusiast explained that most families could not afford trips to distant points to enjoy the world's best talent, and that the chautauqua supplied the need at small cost.

The chautauqua served the demand for cultural values. It drove away dull monotony and made people think along wholesome lines. The chautauqua had its day, and left an impress for good. But with the coming of radios and motion pictures, the chautauqua passed out, doubtless never to return.

Antedating the chautauqua was the camp meeting, held to reform sinners and to warn over those whose religion was cooling off. Many attended to experience a spiritual awakening, some out of curiosity and others to while away idle time. The hell-fire often preached made an impression on credulous souls, and frequently made a bad actor change his ways for the better—at least temporarily. Backsliders were numerous, and they had to be recaptured and reconditioned at regular intervals.

odic charm and permeated with a perpetual freshness. The revision for American band instrumentation was made by Harold Brockman and Clifford Liffy.

The next number is "Patsy," the Swanky Drum Major by Middleton. A descriptive musical sketch of swagger. This number is followed by "The Call of Bagdad" by Boieldien. This overture has long been a band favorite but has recently been released in a new and effective arrangement.

"Minuet by Wood" is next. This work is based on four Manx folk-songs. Modern harmonizations and a richness of instrumentation are used throughout. The Harvest of the Sea, a hymn of thanksgiving sung by the fishermen, brings the work to a dramatic close. The last number on the program will be "The Vedette" by Alford. Kenneth J. Alford is regarded as the English Sousa for his many fine marches. As evidence of his genius here is a march now over 20 years old that is up-to-date as the latest popular song.

Kentucky Derby Most Interesting

Walter Miller and Geo. Hogue-wood returned Monday from Louisville, Ky., where they attended the Kentucky derby race Saturday. Approximately 85,000 people were in attendance, the largest crowd in the history of the derby. Mr. Miller reported that it is a thrilling and lovely sight to see the races. The shrubbery and flowers seen in pictures of Churchill Downs are as pretty as they are pictured.

Wayne people were particularly interested in the Kentucky derby, as Irving Anderson of Hoskins, rode in the race. He was the youngest jockey in the race this year. During the racing meet, Irving placed second in one race and rode in five races the day before the derby. No jockey riding in the derby race this year had ridden in the derby at a previous time.

Following the races in Kentucky, Irving, who rides for the Calumet stables, will race in Chicago where he will be until August.

Mr. Miller reports that there is great deal of rain all through the state he crossed. He left Wednesday and was in rain all the way to St. Joseph, Mo.

Installation of officers, as Dr. J. T. Anderson's talk, took place with Muriel Arends, president; Mary Ramay, vice president; Alicemar Young, secretary; Jean Nielsen, treasurer; Kathleen Cihler, social chairman; and Jean Vandenberg, publicity manager.

A flute solo by Billie Bolton was called "Luggage."

The "Itinerary" as explained by Betty Brunson, another delegate to the district convention at Ames, contained more conference notes.

"New Thrills" were provided by the nifty footwork of six girls: Dorothy Hook, Gwenn Raber, Marjorie Divoky, Helen Ruffcorn, Helene Hamblin and Billie Bolton who presented a tap dance to the tune of "A Bicycle Built for Two."

The program closed with "Generating Ability," the final goal, as title of a brief talk by Miss Esther Dewitt, sponsor of the W. A. A.

Wayne Is Easy Winner In Meet

Cold Wind and Soft Track Keep Performances Down Friday.

Wayne won an easy victory in the annual invitation track and field meet which featured parents' day at the college Friday. Coach W. R. Hickman's athletes piled up 70 points, a lead of 45 points over the nearest opponents, Chadron, with 25. Omaha university was third with 23. Morning-side made 18. Yankton 11. Western Union of LeMars and South Dakota University of Vermillion each 10.

A cold wind and soft track held performances down in Friday's meet. No records were broken.

Russell Bradford and Irvin Retzlaff of Wayne, took three wins each to star an individual performers. Wainright Barnum of Chadron, made two firsts.

An unusual fact was that Retzlaff and Simpson of Wayne, and Allison of Morningside, finished first, second and third in two events.

Three records were broken at the meet. Erbst of Bloomfield, was responsible for two of these. He tossed the javelin 164 feet, and made the broad jump in 20 feet, 1 1/4 inches to set new marks. Kathol of Hartington, set the other when he headed the shot 42 feet, 8 1/4 inches.

Burton of Pierce starred by winning three firsts, these in the 100 and 220 dashes and in the high hurdles.

Interesting Sights In East Are Visited By Evelyn Larsen

Although Washington and Baltimore are only some 30 miles apart, the two cities are completely different," wrote Miss Evelyn Larsen in a letter to the Business and Professional Women's club recently. Miss Larsen went to Baltimore a few months ago to accept a civil service position. Baltimore has "narrow streets and very narrow sidewalks with steps leading from the pavements directly onto the walks. These steps block traffic and it is almost impossible to walk in a straight line; one is continually dodging steps or people," writes Miss Larsen. "Washington on the other hand has wide streets and one has the feeling of more freedom of movement both in walking and driving."

When Miss Larsen arrived in Baltimore, everything was very dry and it seemed to rain for days at a time. Everyone carries umbrellas on rainy days and she noted that Lexington street is literally a sea of umbrellas, and not until it is night walking through that mass with your face a target for every shaving timer! The rainy weather did not continue and Baltimore has had a nice appearance to her. Trees, shrubs and flowers are in full bloom. Trees are numerous in beauty with most of the trees lined with a row on either side.

Visits Washington. Miss Larsen's first visit to Washington was on Washington's birthday, having her first glimpse of the capital on a cloudy, misty day in a distance which gave the dome the appearance of a phantom. About a month later when the sun was shining the dome, the trees beginning to burst into bloom and the long green cherry blossoms were in bloom earlier this year due to the warm weather. Miss Larsen commented that they were more numerous than she had ever seen, especially those which are pink, purple, and white.

Beautiful Baltimore Valley. In describing Baltimore and vicinity Miss Larsen writes, "I have seen some of the most beautiful valleys and hills I've ever seen. The old Baltimoreans, descendants of the old aristocrats, have their homes built out in the hills which overlook beautiful green valleys. After seeing some of these places I have an idea of what the south looked like prior to the Civil war days, as many of these homes are of the colonial type. Nature appears to be in its natural state, but one sees men working around and everything is kept in perfect condition. Modern landscaping would be completely out of place amid such surroundings. Baltimore, among other cities, also tried to rent a home to the Duke of Windsor, and this place stands high on a prominent hill and appears to be a massive stone structure."

Fruit raising is quite common in Baltimore, according to Miss Larsen. Flowers are also plentiful.

One sees flower vendors on every street corner with gardening supplies for 5c each, and carnations for 25¢ a dozen.

In describing Fort McHenry, where Francis Scott Key wrote the "Star Spangled Banner," Miss Larsen remarked that it is surrounded by a beautiful green lawn dotted with trees. The barracks and buildings are all in perfect condition. It is hard to realize that the cannons, so peacefully overlooking the Patapsco river, once were used in a fierce battle with Britain. Even the dungeons are as they were in former days. Leading into the fort is a drive for cars which is lined with small markers; one for each state in the Union, giving the date each was admitted to the Union.

Family Reunion Held in Wayne

For the first time in 19 years, members of the Chin family have been together this week-end at the Prof. C. R. Chin home in Wayne. Sam Chin of Ravenna, Ohio, Philip Chin and Mrs. Alta Chidcott of San Jose, Calif., Mrs. Susie Richards of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chin of Scottsbluff, and Prof. Chin and family were in the group.

The brothers and sisters, members of the Richard Chin family who lived at Walkerville, many years, were interested in comparing family group pictures. One taken in 1898 showed the brothers and sisters as children. Another taken 20 years later showed them grown to manhood and womanhood and one taken this week pictures them with their hair turning gray.

Three California folks plan to leave today and others left for their homes Tuesday and Wednesday.

Ohio Visitor Contrasts Farm Methods Used

Farming in Ohio is quite different from that practiced in northeast Nebraska, according to Sam Chin of Ravenna, Ohio, who was here from Sunday until Wednesday visiting his brother, Prof. C. R. Chin, and attending a family reunion.

About 80 percent of the land in Portage county, where Mr. Chin resides, is waste unless reclaimed by fertilizer and lime. The fertilizer costs $32 a ton and each acre requires about 250 pounds annually. A half ton to nine tons of lime are used per acre. Mr. Chin, who manages land there, has made test plantings to determine the results of using fertilizer. Through crops planted without fertilizer get as good a start as others, with fertilizer make greater headway later and produce more. Mr. Chin thinks the cost of fertilizer is more than paid for in increased production and he feels that Nebraska will soon be doing the same.

Farms are smaller in Ohio than in Nebraska. Mr. Chin supervises farming on 30 acres. Other land is under oil leases. He has 10 acres of corn this year though most farms raise only three or four acres of corn. Mr. Chin has 15 acres of wheat. The average is four to five acres and two acres of oats. Ohio farmers sell their corn and stalks, taking everything from the soil. This is one reason they may use fertilizer.

Rainfall in Portage county, which is near Lake Erie, averages about 40 inches a year. Mr. Chin reports that region has been very dry this spring with no moisture since April. In coming here Saturday Mr. Chin traveled in rain from Illinois west.

Mr. Chin reports farming very modern in Ohio though he has one neighbor who uses oxen in field work. The animals are slow but dependable.

Fall plowing is impossible in Ohio as ground packs hard quickly.

The Chin farm is on a highway and Mr. Chin reports travel exceptionally heavy. He counted 240 cars passing his place in one minute on a Sunday and this is the rule.

Strikes make conditions most unsettled in Ohio, according to Mr. Chin. In the little city of Ravenna, with about 5,000 people, textile mills were closed last summer by a strike which had no basis and are still closed. These workers have taxed their credit until stores are in hard circumstances.

Workers in a rubber plant, asked to take a cut in salary so the plant could continue to operate refused. One group after another strikes and shuts the whole plant. Labor is so organized there that manufacturers are threatening to move their plants to other sections of the country where they can deal with workers. These strikers, most of whom have foreign faces and can't speak English, do not know what it is all about. A leader tells them and as a consequence the workers and the whole country suffer.

Sentiment in Ohio is swinging decidedly against the New Deal. Laborers who have been out of work for long periods are revolting, says Mr. Chin.

Ohio is joining in celebrating the 150th anniversary of the settlement of the west. A covered wagon drawn by oxen is traveling from New York to Portland to re-enact the trip. The wagon is a duplicate of the early models. Men accompanying the caravan are dressed as those of 150 years ago. They started months ago and are in Ohio. At each town they entertain audiences and at the rate of about 10 miles a day they expect to reach Portland in 1940. They will pass through Nebraska along the Platte.

City In West Rebuilds Fast After Floods

Barstow, Calif., is being rebuilt rapidly since the recent flood, writes Mrs. L. E. Panabaker. A city hall and grammar school have been completed, and a clinic and high school are under construction.

When residents of Barstow were informed that a 20-foot wall of water was coming they didn't heed the warning. At midnight the water struck the city, taking houses, trees and almost everything in its path. People climbed to the house tops and towers. One man climbed a tree and after 36 hours fell dead into the water. Numerous automobiles were swept away in the flood, and lots of live stock was lost.

Mrs. Panabaker reports that the flood is progressing fast.

Barstow is a busy city. It is a railroad center and mining is done extensively in the region. The city market is a busy and interesting place.

The Panabakers like California. They visited last week in Hemet, Calif., with the J. S. Liveringhouse family. They also saw Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Jonson. All are well.

Hemet is an attractive city with beautiful homes, trees and flowers. Mrs. Panabaker writes. The Robinson pageant was presented there last week and people from many states viewed the picturesque outdoor play. Great fields of small grain near Hemet show a bountiful harvest, and large groves of fruit trees are in blossom.

Dennis is with the navy and likes his work very much.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Feiber and Barbara were in Sioux City Friday.

Norris Advises OUR SENATOR Geo. W. Norris appears in a Washington news story as advising the president to stump the country in behalf of candidates who have stood by his policies. Norris says the president should explain to the country that certain democrats had been elected on his platform and then turned against it to the defeat of some of his program.

What amazing effrontry! Didn't the president abandon his party platform on which he was elected? Because certain democrats did not also repudiate pre-election pledges and follow a set of strange textbook theories, should they be punished? Isn't the president the one who has turned against party promises? The record shows he reversed himself on questions involving multiplicity of bureaus, increased costs and centralization of authority. He is the one who has disregarded party platforms—not democrats who ran with him, but who could not follow him.

Senator Norris is quoted as saying: "But we ought not let men creep in under a party label and then thwart the president's program." How can the senator have the courage to emphasize party fealty? He bore the republican party label for many years and we do not recall that he ever manifested any loyalty to it.

To Help Business AN EDITORIAL in a late Collier's urges Washington bureaucrats to quit badgering business; instead, try to bring capital and labor together in a united pull for extended employment and greater prosperity. Here are its concluding paragraphs:

"If we do not like private business we have, of course, the alternative of public business. We don't seem to like that very much. Certainly we are reluctant to turn the operation of the railroads over to the federal government. Railroad employees are definitely not eager to exchange private operation for public ownership. They fear their pay might be less."

"If we don't want the public operation of business, that is to say, communism or fascism of one of the other varieties of socialism, we ought, in all reason and decency, to give private business a chance to operate successfully."

"Bureaucrats can badger business to death. Enterprise can be strangled in the red tape of pettifogging regulation and the mischievous interference of small and somewhat malicious minds. But nobody in this potentially rich land is truly benefited by such tactics."

"We need a new co-operation between government and business if we are to get back swiftly to productive enterprise. Let the bureaucrats stop badgering business and relieved business will, on their part, be only too willing to co-operate. Out of such a rational partnership prosperity will return with amazing rapidity."

Time To Act WE ARE informed that a recent canvass of the Wayne business district brought an almost unanimous expression in favor of the organization of a chamber of commerce. The need is apparent. It is pointed out that clubs now in existence are not intended as industry and business builders.

It is suggested by one who has had experience in community affairs that a chamber of commerce should invite into its membership neighborhood farmers who see values to be realized from closer cooperation between town and country.

If citizens are in favor of a purely business organization, as reported, leadership would appear the only need to bring it about and start it off on its helpful way.

A live chamber of commerce could work wonders in making Wayne a bigger and busier place. It would encourage building, stimulate investments and extend the trade area. It could do systematically and thoroughly what is now done hurriedly and without fixed responsibility.

The suppleness of youth's muscles and joints disappears with advancing age. Eyesight grows less clear. The hands are not so steady, nor the feel so certain. Time has roughened the skin. Years have etched wrinkles into the face. The hair has become streaked with gray. A quarter of a century changes dashing youth into fading maturity. But as years multiply, come-line is displaced by the emphasized radiance of an enriched soul—the product of experience and understanding. Sprightly and pleasing youth gives luster, but advancing age yields satisfying substance. One contributes action, the other stability. Both are necessary.

The jury to pass on the fate of the little Colan baby—whether to remove one or both eyes or let nature take its course which meant death—decided on a way that any sensible parent would have adopted under the circumstances. No surgery to stop a cancerous growth was certain to result in death within a short time. Removing both eyes would have caused a life of utter blindness. Taking out one diseased eye in the hope of saving the other one is a fight for both life and sight.

Time magazine shows the president's idea of how to do things. Seeing an old, worn ship at Charleston, the president said it looked horrible, and asked the commander why he didn't get a WPA project and fix it up. Said the officer in charge: "Well, we haven't any money for that sort of thing down here." The magazine quotes the president as answering gaily: "You just send in a request for the appropriation and I'll put it through."

In a recent speech assailing former President Herbert Hoover, Harry L. Hopkins of the New Deal inner circle, took occasion to disclaim any intention to influence the votes of WPA workers. His indignation rose to a high pitch when he invited any information that would show failure to observe a policy of absolute neutrality. We wonder if Harry thinks the people think he means what he says.

The way Editor Howard of Columbus upbraids Editor Strunk of the McCook Daily Gazette for his failure to be grateful to President Roosevelt for a grant of federal money for the building of an auditorium in his town, makes one think the cash is a gift from the president's personal account and that it will not be charged to taxpayers.

A dictator assumes the role of popular savior—savior of a nation from its enemies, or from want, or from some other calamity. He captures people while they are off guard while they are thinking of dire trials, not of their future freedom and security. The dictator looks after things from there on.

According to old-timers, about the same kind of weather that happened last week was dished out in 1870, and they recall that crops were extra good that year.

Better Care of Stock Pays.

(Omaha Journal-Stockman)

Contained in that comment the other day that "Iowa farmers are having good luck with their pigs this year because they are taking better care of them than ever before," is a thought that deserves more than passing attention. For in that short but pithy sentence is not only the indication of a come-back in hog production but also that by following up-to-date methods of growing pigs economically, farmers are going far toward insuring that this increased production will be profitable to them.

Perhaps there was a day when the fact that economic pressure and the competition for consumer favor were not as keen as they are now made it possible for a farmer to go along in a slipshod way and still make some money. But if that day is past, it is at least on the way out. As every business man knows, corners have to be cut closer and closer, year by year, in order that higher wages and material costs, increased taxes, and greater overhead expenses of all kinds may be met without increasing prices of their goods to the point where the public will not buy. This problem faces the farmer, too.

However, from what the Iowa man says, meeting the situation will not require any great amount of new study for live stock producers. They already are acquainted with efficient production methods, and know how to grow and fatten stock economically. All that is needed is an incentive to do the work that good management requires, an incentive such as has been supplied by this year's favorable hog-corn ratio.

Of course it should not be necessary to go on and point out that the same good farming methods which will increase profits in the favorable years will also help to minimize losses in the poorer seasons. In hog production, for instance, the herd owner who succeeds in marketing six or seven pigs per sow will have a better financial showing than the man who markets only three or four, or even five pigs out of each litter, regardless of the kind of a year it is. Or, to put it another way, what is the sense of feeding 20 to 25 sows all season to produce one hundred pigs if, by better management, the same number of pigs can be produced from fifteen sows?

The obvious answer is that to practice anything less than the best and most efficient methods of growing and fattening stock, even if good management does require a little additional outlay of work, is mighty poor economy. In this day of improved machinery, farmers are finding that they can produce crops with fewer and fewer hours of work, and it would be hard to imagine a more profitable use to which the time thus saved might be put than into better care of live stock.

Need of Sound Sense.

Excerpts from a letter written by a member of the New York Stock Exchange: "During the past five years the people of this country have been lulled by false hopes. They have been deluded by government subsidies and by propaganda promising reduced competition, increased ease, and economic security." Earlier standards have been abandoned, short cuts have been attempted and the result has been increasing social, economic and fiscal confusion, a continuous expansion of federal credit, and serious undermining of the character of whole sections of the population as they have come to believe into power through violence and treachery. Referring to rule abroad, she says many crimes are committed against peaceful citizens, and precious art treasures are destroyed without reason. "Lying is organized on an enormous scale," she charges, with enormous resources of propaganda, and the lie has become, veritably, a major instrument of national policy. Every crime is 'legalized' by a decree issued by the criminal. And men seek no further justification for their deeds than that they are successful."

The jury to pass on the fate of the little Colan baby—whether to remove one or both eyes or let nature take its course which meant death—decided on a way that any sensible parent would have adopted under the circumstances. No surgery to stop a cancerous growth was certain to result in death within a short time. Removing both eyes would have caused a life of utter blindness. Taking out one diseased eye in the hope of saving the other one is a fight for both life and sight.

ENCOURAGING.

President Green of the American Federation of Labor offers encouragement for the future in his efforts in behalf of cooperation between industry and labor. He sees the need of smoothing out differences between employers and employees, appreciating the fact that production must go on at a profit in order to safeguard the earnings of all concerned. Mr. Green takes a practical position, and one that, if kept free from obstructive ridiculous, should bring about harmonious and mutually advantageous relations. His rival, John L. Lewis, does not seem so much inclined to restore a peaceful order, as to inflame workers and disrupt industry. His greatest success lies in trying to force unreasonable demands, damage sources of employment and let union members suffer in idleness. Left to President Green, labor would soon adjust differences, and unemployment would grow materially less.

The way Editor Howard of Columbus upbraids Editor Strunk of the McCook Daily Gazette for his failure to be grateful to President Roosevelt for a grant of federal money for the building of an auditorium in his town, makes one think the cash is a gift from the president's personal account and that it will not be charged to taxpayers.

According to old-timers, about the same kind of weather that happened last week was dished out in 1870, and they recall that crops were extra good that year.

Better Care of Stock Pays.

(Omaha Journal-Stockman)

Contained in that comment the other day that "Iowa farmers are having good luck with their pigs this year because they are taking better care of them than ever before," is a thought that deserves more than passing attention. For in that short but pithy sentence is not only the indication of a come-back in hog production but also that by following up-to-date methods of growing pigs economically, farmers are going far toward insuring that this increased production will be profitable to them.

Perhaps there was a day when the fact that economic pressure and the competition for consumer favor were not as keen as they are now made it possible for a farmer to go along in a slipshod way and still make some money. But if that day is past, it is at least on the way out. As every business man knows, corners have to be cut closer and closer, year by year, in order that higher wages and material costs, increased taxes, and greater overhead expenses of all kinds may be met without increasing prices of their goods to the point where the public will not buy. This problem faces the farmer, too.

However, from what the Iowa man says, meeting the situation will not require any great amount of new study for live stock producers. They already are acquainted with efficient production methods, and know how to grow and fatten stock economically. All that is needed is an incentive to do the work that good management requires, an incentive such as has been supplied by this year's favorable hog-corn ratio.

Of course it should not be necessary to go on and point out that the same good farming methods which will increase profits in the favorable years will also help to minimize losses in the poorer seasons. In hog production, for instance, the herd owner who succeeds in marketing six or seven pigs per sow will have a better financial showing than the man who markets only three or four, or even five pigs out of each litter, regardless of the kind of a year it is. Or, to put it another way, what is the sense of feeding 20 to 25 sows all season to produce one hundred pigs if, by better management, the same number of pigs can be produced from fifteen sows?

The obvious answer is that to practice anything less than the best and most efficient methods of growing and fattening stock, even if good management does require a little additional outlay of work, is mighty poor economy. In this day of improved machinery, farmers are finding that they can produce crops with fewer and fewer hours of work, and it would be hard to imagine a more profitable use to which the time thus saved might be put than into better care of live stock.

Speaks To Librarians.

BY GANGS.

In an editorial contributed to the Ladies' Home Journal, Miss Dorothy Thompson, columnist, slashes out vigorously at world conditions. She attacks conquests of Austria as extermination of civil and religious freedom. She quotes from Doctor Bruehning who said this on retiring as chancellor of democratic Germany in 1932: "The issue is whether it will be possible in the coming years to maintain any social order whatever, based on law. The question is whether gangs are to rule the world." Miss Thompson says the words were prophetic, because today a large part of the world is really ruled by gangs. She says men have come into power through violence and treachery. Referring to rule abroad, she says many crimes are committed against peaceful citizens, and precious art treasures are destroyed without reason. "Lying is organized on an enormous scale," she charges, with enormous resources of propaganda, and the lie has become, veritably, a major instrument of national policy. Every crime is "legalized" by a decree issued by the criminal. And men seek no further justification for their deeds than that they are successful."

In a recent speech assailing former President Herbert Hoover, Harry L. Hopkins of the New Deal inner circle, took occasion to disclaim any intention to influence the votes of WPA workers. His indignation rose to a high pitch when he invited any information that would show failure to observe a policy of absolute neutrality. We wonder if Harry thinks the people think he means what he says.

because two of the number had been discharged, finally returning to their job with their purpose defeated. Taxpayers at Beatrice must have been annoyed to see recipients of public favor behave so ungratefully. WPA workers at Grand Island did not strike or threaten strike, but all were summarily dismissed because they were so slow in repairing a block of paving. After the workers put in a month repairing one block, the city council became indignant and cancelled the WPA project, declaring the work would be done when necessary under private contract. Late John L. Lewis is reported to have been lifting his eyebrows and casting his optics in the direction of the WPA with a view to organizing its members—perhaps to supplement his CIO.

Oscar Harmon Loses Life In Spring Storm

This year's snow storm of Saturday, May 7, reminds pioneers of the severity of winter blasts in late spring of years past. The worst within the recollection of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hunter was the storm of May 5, 1870, which took the life of Oscar Harmon.

The spring of 1870 was marked by heavy rains. The little caravan of 13 families coming from Illinois that spring to settle on homesteads in this new territory had experienced flood waters which forced them to change their course. The river crossing was a tedious task but finally the group reached Horner and stayed in a rooming house there for a few days. The men came to Wayne county and staked out their homesteads and prepared temporary shelter for their families, then returning to Horner to bring their families to the new land.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Halmon and Oscar, about 18, had established their home in a dugout on Logan creek in LaPorte vicinity. They had left some of their household furnishings at Horner temporarily.

Early May 4, 1870, Oscar Harmon started out alone with his team and wagon to go to Horner for the furnishings and also to bring some wood, which was not available in the new region. He stayed over night at Horner in the home where the Hunters and others had lodgings for a few days.

The following day was pleasant and the young man started homeward with his wagon load. About 11 in the morning of May 5 a severe spring storm developed, a hard wind driving hail, snow and rain. Sloughs were treacherous spots on the cross country trip. Pioneers believe that Harmon's horses refused to face the severe storm longer when they reached Detalle slough about five miles south of the present site of Emerson. The young man unhitched the team and left the wagon near the slough. He started out driving the team and walking behind the horses. About a mile or half a mile from the wagon Mr. Harmon was overcome. The horses went a short distance farther and then turned their backs to the storm and stood there suffering in the cold.

The following day when settlers were journeying over the road to bring supplies to their homes they found Mr. Harmon's body frozen stiff. Bruises on his head and temple indicated that he had bumped against the horses in traveling through the blinding blizzard. The shoulder cape of his blue soldier coat was around his head as though he had tried to shelter himself with this.

Though the spring was one of storms and much rain, Mrs. Hunter recalls that no others suffered at all from exposure. And several of the party were persons past 60. This was true in spite of the fact that the dugouts and shanties used for housing were very poor shelter and were often filled with water.

Providence was also good to the new settlement in returning bountiful crops the first year, providing supplies that helped establish the colony in the new land.

ONLY YOUR MILEAGE MERCHANT OIL-PLATES YOUR ENGINE

Do you need any reminder of what oil you bought? Not if it delivers smooth long mileage that you can't forget! Then here's the real big value of the little drain tag you get from Your Mileage Merchant: he marks it with your mileage today as you change to his patented Conoco Germ Processed oil, and then you can keep tabs on how far you go before you ever need another quart in your OIL-PLATED engine.

OIL-PLATING is exclusive with Conoco Germ Processed oil. The patent-guaranteed Germ Process forces this oil to "magnetize" on to the working parts in the form of implanted slippery OIL-PLATING. The parts that used to wear worst and make your oil "rub out" fastest, now possess this all-over, deep-seated OIL-PLATING. It can let loose in all the whirl of 4,000 revolutions a minute. Therefore OIL-PLATING, done only by Your Mileage Merchant, distinctly tells you why your Germ Processed oil and your car money won't do a "disappearing act."

The Herald has a canvasser in the few being disposed to repudiate obli-
