ASKS CLEMENCY OF STATE BOARD

To Consider Application of Arthur T. Cavanaugh Early in June.

Clemency from sentence for imprisonment will be sought by Arthur T. Cavanaugh, 45, of Wayne, June 7 when the Nebraska pardon board convenes in Lincoln.

"At the time of my crime I was operating a real estate agency, loan agency and insurance agency. I was too ignorant with credit to my clients and through paying for their policies and carrying them on the books I used up all of my resources in the business.

"This, combined with a great deal of money that I paid out on account of doctor bills, hospital bills and other incidental expenses caused by the illness of my wife, put me in a position which was worse than anything I had my family to keep and the children to educate and took a chance which I should have known would have been worse than failure.

"With the best of intentions of paying back the amounts appropriated, and I am sincere when I make that statement, I appropriated $1,856.25 June 30, 1934, and again $1,376.77 September 30, 1935 from school funds. I was city treasurer at the time. The years that followed were bad years and I found myself unable to replace the money.

"Finally, when the books were audited and I was informed by the auditors that the shortage had been discovered and that they would give me an opportunity to make it up before turning in their report I became frantic. I knew that my credit would not warrant my borrowing such a sum from the bank and the only place I could think of getting it was from my friends in California. I left Wayne and went there. Before I had an opportunity to contact them I was picked up as a fugitive from justice.

"I paid a great deal in anguish and mental suffering before my trial and had served sufficiently time in the penitentiary.

Twenty letters asking for Cavanaugh have been sent by the state board from Wayne county residents.

A change has just been announced in the farm program. Farmers who stay within their soil depleting allotments will receive the maximum payments for their farms. Farmers who do not exceed their allotments too much will also receive payments but in lesser amounts due to deductions for planting depleting crops in excess of their allotments.

A reduction in penalty was made because most farmers had already planted their general soil depleting crops before the corn and soil depleting allotments were sent to them. The original penalty was $10 per acre and it is now $6.25.

Main Issue MARK Sullivan, columnist, notes much interest in the primaries held in different states as indicative of the strength of the New Deal within the democratic party.

Sullivan sees an effort to take America into a collectivist form of society, and is convinced that political battle lines will be formed accordingly.

So, the main issue to be settled in the fall election will be whether the government is to drift farther to the left or is to stick to the middle course in harmony with American traditions.

For Fewer County Units ADVISABILITY of county consolidation as a means of economy comes up for discussion occasionally, but nothing is done to make headway in that direction.

The wage and hour bill which is again urged for consideration, is a nightmare to industry, quite on a par with the NRA which was outlawed by the supreme court a few years ago.

Rather savage criticism fired at Nebraska's penitentiary and reformatory at Lincoln by the Osborne Association of New York, is declared unjust by the state board.

The country reminds one of pre-drought years—air moist, ground soaked, vegetation luxuriant. Clouds appear, lightning flashes and rain descends—all without any fooling.

Early returns from Pennsylvania's primary indicated a sharp rebuff to CIO political aspirations. If that radical labor group is not strong enough to have its way in a large labor employing state like Pennsylvania, its power elsewhere in the country is little to be feared.

Supply and Demand. (Omaha Journal-Stockman.)

Much has been said recently about the sensitiveness of the live stock markets, and of their prompt reaction to both bullish and bearish influences.

The two factors, supply and demand, still reign supreme as the principal reasons for the fluctuation of market price levels.

Children of Today. (Sioux City Journal)

An aged teacher, Mrs. Fred Dick of Denver, looks back over her life at the age of 84 and makes the comment that the 10-year-old child of today is smarter than "we were at 20" more than half a century ago.

Whether it is true that the 10-year-old is smarter today than were boys and girls of the same age or older half a century ago is beside the point.

There is an explanation for the comparative so-called smartness of children of today. They have been more places and have done more things.

Two Chickens, Two Shirts. (Norfolk Daily News)

A postal card received by a Norfolk man from a friend in Lincoln carried a lesson in modern economics so clear and simple that it is repeated for the benefit of The News readers.

A MODERN FABLE (Author Unknown, but Honored)

Once upon a time there was a farmer who sold two chickens. With the proceeds he bought two shirts.

Then came along the New Deal, and told the farmer he should get more money for his chickens by making them scarcer—he must not raise so many, and then he would get more income.

Then the farmer brought one chicken to market. He got as much money for it as he had previously gotten for two chickens.

This, boys and girls, is called "the more abundant life."

Editor's Postscript—The farmer's dollar for March went down to 76 cents, the lowest since August, 1934, but this is no fable.

Is U. S. Buying Foreign Meat? (Omaha Journal Stockman.)

Both in congress and in the newspapers there has been a most vigorous protest against the practice of our government in purchasing imported canned meats from Argentina and elsewhere for consumption in the CCC camps of this country.

It is bad enough to permit the unrestricted importation of canned meats from South America but for government agencies to purchase this foreign meat for feeding its wards, simply because it is cheaper than the home-grown product, is carrying things entirely too far.

For the government to spend millions in building up meat production in this country on the one hand and then to neutralize this effort by expending other millions in buying foreign meats, on the other hand, is too silly and senseless a proceeding to meet with approval anywhere.

Beauty Is Found In Simple Things

Rev. W. O. Samuelson is Speaker at Kiwanis Program Here.

"Possess Your Possessions" was the subject of Rev. W. O. Samuelson's address before the Kiwanis club Monday following the luncheon.

If a person just looks for the beautiful things found at home, he would not constantly be seeking this other places. The speaker explained that Nebraska sunsets cannot be found on the east or west coasts.

Places of business are just as good as in a larger community and the friendship between the customer and the owner means more.

Delinquent homes are the cause for the filled state institutions for boys and girls. Home is the central bulwark of every community, and civilization could not last long without homes.

Another valuable possession is friendship. Everyone needs friends and should be loyal to them. All of the possessions would be improved without the United States.

Will Celebrate Historical Day

Wayne Methodist Church Unites in Observance Next Tuesday.

A movement that saved England and modified world history had its birth in the small Aldersgate town in London, May 24, 1738, at 8:45 p. m., when John Wesley found transforming power in a new, personal experience of God.

Next Sunday ten million members of Methodist churches in the United States, with other millions around the world add many civic bodies and churches other than Methodist, will celebrate the 200th anniversary of that event, and point out plans and program for advance into the third century of this spiritual movement.

Locally the event will be celebrated with a special service at 11 a. m. next Sunday. A large, 100-page "Aldersgate-Unionification Edition" of the Christian Advocate, profusely illustrated and rich in value, will be distributed at this service, through the gift of certain members of the official board. This book also announces and describes the consummation of the union of the three largest branches of American Methodist churches, the resulting large branch having over eight million members.

Local Methodists will also participate in a district Aldersgate celebration at the First Methodist church in Norfolk next Sunday afternoon (7:30 p. m.) and evening (7:30 p. m.). The main addresses at the Norfolk meetings will be given by Dean Robert Guy McCutchen of DePaul University School of Music, distinguished editor of the new Methodist hymnal recently published for the united Methodist church and author of "Our Hymnody," and by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam.

Nearly all churches will also cooperate in great meetings on Tuesday evening, May 24. The local church is prevented from holding such a meeting that evening because so many are involved in one or other of the two high school commencement programs that night. Many individuals, however, will be able to get the inspiration of the Aldersgate broadcast which can be heard through station WOW, Omaha, at 9:15 o'clock Tuesday night.

Farm Forecasts Complicated. (Omaha Journal Stockman.)

During the great depression, economists told us that the decreased buying power of the farmers was an important contributing cause and they are now afraid that, in the present recession, the distress may be further increased by the inability of farmers to pay the higher prices for manufactured products brought about by higher wages and curtailed production. Farm income, they say, has been decreasing in the face of higher operating costs.

These economists have been turning recently from the fruitless discussion of the business and industrial slump, with its accompanying increase in unemployment and relief measures, to the consideration of the present and prospective problem presented by farm conditions.

"There are fifteen million farm families in the United States," points out this commercial analyst. "They are a vital factor in the nation's retail trade. Today they are up against a tremendous problem. It boils down to this: The farmer must receive in proportion, for his wheat, potatoes, or apples what a manufacturer charges for his cloth, shoes or tools.

"The price decline is still going on, although the momentum is easing up. Sharpest drops have come in the quotations on grains, fruits, vegetables, meats, butter and cotton. Milk, eggs, and poultry have made better showing. Farm wages have eased off slightly since last summer, but are as high as a year ago. Taxes, of course, are no lower. Hence, the profits of the American farmer have slumped badly in the last twelve months."

In the meantime, the agricultural situation has been further complicated by the operation of the new farm control law. In addition to the usual hazards of floods and freezes, droughts and hot winds, insects and plant diseases, the farmers are now, confronted with premiums and penalties for crops, allotments and curtailments of acreage, making all forecasts of production impossible or at best, entirely unreliable.

What will happen to the national farm income for the balance of the current year cannot be forecast. With a bumper wheat crop in sight and increased acreages of corn and cotton, the chances for improvement in prices of farm products are rather remote. Large quantity production may help business but farmers' financial returns are more than apt to be unsatisfactory.

Any forecasts, however, must be merely guesses and in this respect farmers appear to be neither better nor worse off than the rest of us.

(York Republican.)
"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years—not in the lifetime of most men who read this—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our poorest fellow-citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment, and without the prospect of it."

"In France the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs, as usual, like a cloud, dark and silent, upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influences of the British Empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly disturbed relations in China."

"It is a solemn moment, and no man can feel an indifference—which, happily, no man pretends to feel—in the issue of events."

"Of our own troubles (in the U. S. A.) no man can see the end. They are, fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom—the wisdom of honor of faith, of sympathy and of charity—no man need seriously despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this widespread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity."

The above article appeared in Harpers Weekly, issue of October 10, 1857—81 years ago. It was reproduced a few days ago in an advertisement of John Wanamaker in The Christian Science Monitor.

The advertisement commented: "The leaves turn green every spring. The small streams rush to the sea. History makes carbon copies of itself. There's nothing new about jitters. People have had them, will have them again. People have recovered from them, will recover from them again. Knowing that your fear is unoriginal is one of the best ways to get rid of it."

Perry "A Little White" by Wright, Alice Smolky; "The Swan," "Ditch Dance" and "Fairy Harp," by Thompson, Wanda Lee Francis; "Tiresome Woodpecker," by Thompson, and "Tombone Sammy," by Mallard, Jack Fitch; "The Big Bell" and "The Little Bell," Nancy Perry; "From A Wigwam," Nancy, and Mrs. Perry; "Away To The Woods" and "Spring Flowers," by Bilbro, Joan Ahern; "The Chimes," by Johnson, and "A Linnet in the Lilac Bush," Janet Jamieson; "Minuet in G," by Beethoven, Bonnie Jean Kabisen; "The Turkey Hunt" and "The First Thanksgiving," by Thompson, Mary Ruth Smothers; "Riding A Bicycle," "Playing Hopscotch," "Barantelle," by Thompson, Joan Ahern; "The Spinning Wheel," by Elmer Grech; and "The Elf's Story," by Armstrong, Dorothy Smolky. Professional Men Employed In Crews Of Texas Oil Field

"Like in all regions, there is an oversupply of professional people in the oil fields," writes J. Abel St. Onge, Wayne State Teachers college graduate in 1932, who is employed in the field crew of an oil company near Rockport, Texas. Mr. St. Onge was with the seismograph crew before being transferred to the field crew.

Their college days and we were surprised at the various professions represented in our group," states Mr. St. Onge. "The dynamite expert was a graduate dentist from Baylor. The surveyor had been a licensed optician in Oklahoma. The statistician was a mechanical engineer from Stout. The driller was an electrical engineer from the Chicago Institute of Electricity. The chain carrier was an unfrocked D. D. (from Southern Methodist). The other chain man was a Creole who could not speak over 10 English words. To top it all, the foreman had but three years in high school.

"That little discussion between the crew members is a general policy upheld by most major oil companies. College graduates are not preferred to other individuals. Two years of retail experience is absolutely necessary before an application can be written out. All employees serve a three months apprenticeship as 'roughnecks' in the field crew. Under the system of adult education now in force, the roughneck is eligible to step into any technical position in the industry if he has the knowledge. Prior to filling a vacancy, a competitive examination is held open to all employees that have served a two-year term in the retail end of the game and a minimum of three months in the field. This policy tends to keep the employees busy studying instead of engaging in communicative union activities. (This from a C. I. O. man too.) This plan has been in force now for a few months and judging from the attendance at the instructional meetings it is a success. So far all but one of the promotions have gone to college trained men because of their superior fundamental science training but in every case there have been untrained men near the top of the scorings.

Living Costs High.
"The oil field workers draw an excellent wage but very few are able to show a dollar prior to the next pay day. They must always pay the highest prices for food, clothing and shelter as they are living under "boom" conditions. Usually 10 to 15 major oil firms are working in one location, racing each other for the first oil show. These crews combined will add from 500 to 10,000 men to the population of the town nearest the scene of operations, the total depending on the stage of development. One can imagine what a state of affairs results when the number of men is added to a small town. On one occasion the post-mistress of a "boom" town near here locked the doors of the post office and tearfully gave up when the volume of mail brought in by the field crews filled every inch of space in the tiny post office. To get mail the workers contributed to a pool fund in order to hire two assistants until she received orders from Washington.

"As the field crews usually bring their families with them, the schools are likely to be crowded until the workers depart for another location," writes Mr. St. Onge. "The average crew remains in one location about 27 days. It is next to an impossibility for children of these crew members to make systematic progress in their educational work. Several plans have been tried but none has been 100 percent successful as the crews move so often. Some parents send their children to private or religious boarding schools. Others leave their children in the care of relatives during the school year. A few establish residence in a large city where living expenses are low, often San Antonio, and the mother remains with the children while the father follows the crews. The majority of families remain together as two homes are out of reach of their pocketbooks. In this case the children are sent to the closest school, changing schools nine or ten times a year.

"It's not an unusual sight to see two pupils in a desk built for one, chairs in aisles and classes in several parts of the assembly hall. Building a larger school would not be a wise policy as in four or five months the whole oil development will be completed and the registry will be back to normal. If one crew would remain on the job from start to end this educational problem would be solved. Using the specialized crews for each progressing step changed the membership of the school room as fast as the unfortunate teachers were able to connect names with faces.

"These conditions exist only in the 'booms' created by the sudden influx of oil crews. In general the schools in Texas are equal in buildings and faculty to any in the north.

Oil Fields Are Vast.
"The 'standard' oil field is a strip of flat, sandy land which extends from Beaumont to Brownsville, some 230 miles in length. Its width is not as yet fixed as it runs as far to the interior as San Antonio and as far out into the gulf as seismographs have been able to test. This one field alone could supply the needs of the United States if quota restrictions were lifted. The quality of the crude obtained from this division is second only to Pennsylvania Bradford crude. The depth of the oil bearing limestone strata wavers from 800-foot pools near Houston to the 13,000-foot level near Laredo. Shallow wells produce an inferior grade of crude and must be pumped. Deeper wells, such as those found in this location, average around 7,000 feet and require no pumping as the pressure would blow the crude over the highest Derrick. Of late, the larger oil firms have been developing the bays in between Matagora, St. Joseph's and Padre islands and the mainland. Water drilling is more difficult and costlier but if no royalties to be pay out. Drilling equipment is loaded on barges and towed by tugs to the scene of action. Here the barges are lashed together forming a floating dock of several acres. Working on the barges is a pleasant change from ordinary field routine but one is likely to be uncomfortable until the rolling motion of the dock. During the slack periods, we can always drop a hook over the side of the deck and rarely are disappointed with our luck.

"Like other great industries, the work is carried on by crews of highly specialized workmen who perform their task and then move on to the next assignment.

Crews Are Varied.
"Leasing crews are composed of lawyers, property evaluators, surveyors, draftsmen and numerous smaller fry. This group obtains a clear lease-royalty title to the supposed oil bearing property and maps it for the future.

"The 'seismograph' crews are made up of geologists, explosive experts, surveyors, statisticians, shallow well-drillers and seismograph operators. This group sinks a shaft to the depth of either wet sand or bed rock and creates a miniature earthquake by exploding a charge of dynamite in the shaft. The trembles are registered on the seismograph and the computer is able to locate the depth of the supposed oil bearing strata by the intensity and frequency of the resulting ground vibrations. By 'tasting' the earth every 40 rods to the extent of the leased property, the draftsman is able to draw cross sections of the underground area.

"If these diagrams show the possibility of an oil pocket the 'ground' crew is sent into action. This group includes steel workers, carpenters, masons, steeple-jacks, riggers, machinists, as well as drag-line operators. They assemble the derrick (rig) and the other numerous incidental structures necessary for the project.

"This group is followed by the 'alpha' crew. It includes in its personnel, driller, welders, heaters, steam engineers, firemen, electricians and day laborers (roughnecks). This crew sets the casing during drilling and sets the casing down to the first technical difficulty (usually number one limestone at 1300 feet).

Pay Sand Or Dry Hole.
"The 'field' crew is composed of a larger alpha crew together with glazors, geologists, fencers, chemists and driller until the shaft either brings in 'pay sand' or is abandoned as a dry hole. No one is permitted to make a decision involving a technical procedure. If a difficulty should arise, the geologist is afforded the first chance to diagnose the ailment. His findings are given to the chemist who by analysis confirms or rejects the geologist's theory. The chemist is checked by the glazor (sub-chemist) who in turn is checked by the pointman who is checked by the fencer. Before the drilling is resumed, a general consultation must be held. All technicians must agree as to procedure before the plan is put into use. One dissenting opinion would make it necessary to telegraph the home office for a 'procedural order.'

"The necessity for these strict precautionary regulations is easily explained. It's quite a task to fish for a broken bit some 5,000 feet underground. Often it is necessary to use a 'drill acid' in order to increase the porosity of a limestone layer. If such a layer were improperly classified by the geologist and a too concentrated acid used, the pressure would escape around the casing and result in a blowout. Wild wells, craters, gushers, blowouts and gas explosions can always be traced to a faulty method of procedure and result in huge losses.

"The 'conduit' crew is next in line and sees service only if the field crew brings in a pay flow. Their duty is to install a separator and pipe the crude to the nearest refinery (sometimes 50 miles distant). This is only a partial story of the extracting of crude from the ground. The actual process involves many difficulties," concludes Mr. St. Onge.

Is Fatally Hurt.
Mrs. Myron Linn of Madison, was killed in a car collision west of Omaha Tuesday. Mr. Linn was cut and Mrs. Linn's mother, Mrs. Earl Fichter, who was being brought to Madison after six weeks in a hospital in Omaha, sustained a broken leg and head cuts. J. H. Echtenkamp, Arlington, driver of the other car, was cut and bruised.

Washington Would Rule.
President Roosevelt was once quoted as saying that he confined his activity in state politics to his own state. It was immediately recalled that the president had gone farther than that. He had interfered in the senatorial election in Nebraska to favor Senator Norris. Since then he has gone farther. His interest in the Barkley campaign in Kentucky has been made plain. Now it is understood at Washington that he is opposing Senator Smith of South Carolina and that he has encouraged Gov. Johnston always a new dealer, to enter the race for senator. Smith has opposed some of the new deal policies.

Administration Interference In The Pennsylvania Primaries has aroused criticism from both the Earle and the Guffey factions. Postmaster General Farley, who is also chairman of the democratic national committee, proposed on the eve of the Pennsylvania primary a harmony move. The suggestion of harmony starts a battle royal. Mr. Farley did this, it was explained, in the hope that a party split, now apparent, will not be carried on to the fall election. In brief, his proposal was that the Earle candidate for governor, Charles Alvin Jones, and the Guffey candidate for governor, Mayor Wilson of Philadelphia, be sacrificed. Carried out as proposed by Farley, the plan would select Lieut. Gov. Kennedy for the place. Gov. Earle charged Farley with interfering in a purely local primary at the eleventh hour. Mayor Wilson, supported by John L. Lewis and Senator Guffey, says that the carrying out of the Farley proposal would mean defeat of the party at the election. Mayor Wilson, who started out to eliminate Gov. Earle as a candidate for the presidency in 1940, says that the success of the Farley plan in the primary would mean certain defeat for the democrats at the fall election. Thus both sides are arrayed against Farley, who may be fairly regarded as the administration spokesman.

"The peculiar situation in the democratic fight in Pennsylvania is that the leaders of both factions in the past have been strong administration supporters. Reports indicate that the administration will win the senatorial fight in Kentucky. Polls that have been taken are said to give Barkley a 2 to 1 vote over Gov. Chandler. Senator Norris of Nebraska, almost invariably an administration follower, has interested himself in the fight in Oregon. He is opposing Gov. Martin on the ground that the governor is not an administration follower. One day after the Norris announcement that he would take part in the Oregon campaign, word comes from Washington that administration forces are strongly opposed to Martin. Pennsylvania democrats have been quick to point out that Farley has broken precedent by taking the national committee into a purely local primary. The split in Pennsylvania is looked upon hopefully by republicans. The fight in South Carolina will test the popularity of that veteran senator, 'Cotton Ed' Smith. The fight in Oregon is expected to test administration strength.

Is Badly Burned.
Elmer Rowland, 24, of near Norfolk, was severely burned about the face and hands Saturday night when his car caught fire after hitting a steel bridge railing. The youth jumped into a creek near the road and extinguished the fire in his clothing.

Stress FSA Collections.
Collections of dud payments on Farm Security Administration loans will have an important part in the FSA program in Nebraska this year, and farm income ever and above family needs are to be applied on repayments as they become due, announced Mr. Ray L. Verzal, county rehabilitations supervisor, for Wayne and Pierce counties, after he returned from a conference held Monday and Tuesday at Columbus, for approximately 75 districts and county supervisors representing the eastern half of the state. Mr. Ellsworth H. Benson, assistant supervisor, also attended from Wayne and Pierce counties.

Miss Laura Lyons Writes From West
Foggy mornings and chilly, windy afternoons are reported in southern California by Miss Laura Lyons who writes May 11 from Long Beach.

"Chaplain Edell of the U. S. S. Maryland bought his shot of 30 to conduct the entire church service Sunday," continues Miss Lyons. "Bandmaster J. R. Darwin accompanied. The entire group sang several selections and the double quartet sang 'Dear to the Heart of God.' In his discourse the chaplain told of the duties of a navy man and said that there are between 50,000 and 75,000 navy men and their dependents in this vicinity so all forms of business are greatly affected by the exodus and return from cruises.

"It was my privilege," states Miss Lyons, "to attend only one program of Music week and that was at the First Congregational church; 14 vested choirs participating. They occupied the entire balcony and choir loft. It was inspiring to hear the choirs present hymns of the church as sung since 1091 at intervals through the different centuries. Even 'Ave Maria' was sung in Latin by the solo soprano from St. Luke's Episcopal choir.

"Public school week was observed here the last of April. Exhibits from all schools were displayed on three floors of the former Sun newspaper building and each afternoon and evening different musical and dramatic groups put on programs in the assembly room. A miniature library for tiny tots was one of the exhibits. The school-made chairs from nail kegs were interesting. The children attended to filing and lending the books. School radio classes demonstrated the entire mechanism with such proficiency that it made ordinary listeners marvel. Movies taken and arranged by students as well as commercial pictures used in classes proved educational. One instructor told about butterflies and another about termites. Many classes of adult education had exhibits in art and other lines as several hundred classes are conducted yearly here."

Prof. and Mrs. J. R. Keith, Vivian Mound, Adele Eddy, Louis Harris, James Sears, Leland Flora and Milo Henkels were in Omaha Saturday to attend the regional music contest.

Haile Selassie made his last plea before the League of Nations at Geneva for the independence of Ethiopia. A plane with nine passengers, which left Los Angeles Monday, crashed and burned in a heavy fog. A rancher found the charred plane and bodies in the mountains.

Mr. Hickman announced his plans for a leave of absence Saturday evening at the annual "W" club banquet at Hotel Stratton.

Mr. Hickman has been coach at Wayne college for 11 years. His athletes have won seven state conference track championships, four basketball championships and won one and tied one football championship. Did You Know Waters of the Sea Once Inundated This Part of Nebraska?

And That Fossil Remains Found in Wayne Area Establish Proof of This Theory? That Northeast Nebraska Was Once Tropical in Mesozoic Era Which Followed the End of The Inland Sea?

Exclusive: The Wayne Herald by Ray E. Colton, science writer. Millions of years before the advent of man on earth, the waters of a vast central sea in whose depths there lurked innumerable species of marine life, covered what is today the land areas of northeastern Nebraska and the local geographical portion of the area which is defined as Wayne.

Dixon, Cedar and adjoining counties. Evidence in support of this advanced theory has been gathered here around Wayne, and in this exclusive scientific article the writer will reveal the findings of local paleontologists and geologists in this respect.

Water Covered Area

The earth is old and what is today northeastern Nebraska is today old, but in spite of the estimated antiquity of the land masses of present day Wayne, Dixon, Cedar and adjoining counties, of about 150 million years, geologists believe that after a study of the evidence which has been unearthed here in the past few years, that several more million years can be added, taking into consideration the fact that previous to the formation of the now solid land masses a large area which is today land was covered by an inland sea.

Geologists figure in terms of hundreds of millions of years so the estimate of about 200 million years lapsing since the sea was here, is well in order when one takes into consideration the vast expanse of time which it took for various geologic formations to knit themselves from previous geologic periods. If the sea once covered what is today northeastern Nebraska, which on the basis of such evidence as has been unearthed here it is beyond doubt, then the period of geologic prehistory must have been the Paleozoic era, which was composed of six sub-geologic periods, namely: Cambrian, Ordovician, Silurian, Devonian, Carboniferous and Permian periods.

This major geologic era closed here approximately 200 million years ago, and its duration is estimated at anywhere from 300 to 400 million years. It was followed in geologic sequence by the Mesozoic era which will be discussed later in this article. The Paleozoic era, like the sub-period of the Mesozoic era which was termed the Cretaceous period of this latter era, was one which witnessed the creation of many forms of marine life, whose fossil remains in the form of Crinoids, Ammonites, Trilobites, shells, etc., today are found in various parts of Wayne, Dixon, Cedar and adjoining counties. By a study of this life, and knowing it to represent the predominating fauna of past geologic periods which supported vast seas, science in the form of field paleontologists and geologists, has been able to classify each specimen and to place it in its proper geologic category.

Types of Marine Life Found. In the marine fossil remains which have been found during searches around Wayne, Winside, Hoskins, Wakefield and between Laurel and Dixon, and again in the area around Ponca and Martinsburg, it is noted that the Cephalopods furnish one of the most interesting studies. This life, now in fossil state, was the predominating fauna of the remote Paleozoic era, and appears in strata which shows the transition from the Cambrian period into the Ordovician, both of which were sub-geologic divisions of the major Paleozoic era.

The Cephalopods were the undoubtedly the largest, the most powerful and perhaps the most prodigious of the known forms of marine life which inhabited the shorelines of this ancient sea, and unless the fish of this period, of which little is actually known, contested their supremacy, the Cephalopods were masters of the vast body of water which once covered what is today northeastern Nebraska and the area which is tributary to Wayne.

In the fossil remains of the Brachiopods, several of which in a fairly good state of preservation have been found around Martinsburg in subsurface strata, we see the lower, inarticulate forms of marine life which predominated during the Cambrian period, continued on through the Ordovician period, and are today represented in clams, etc. Following these forms of prehistoric marine life which have been found in this part of the state, come micro-organic remains in the form of foraminifera or tiny sea shells. A study of all of these fossils remains, together with the teeth found near Ponca in Dixon county of an extinct Plesiosaur, "sea lizard," establishes beyond any reasonable doubt that the long extinct geologic period known as the Paleozoic era, was the period when the vast central sea inundated this part of the present North American continent and northeastern Nebraska.

"This country constantly and consistently advocates peace." This from the Department of state in Washington, D. C., begins a reply to an inquiry made by Marvin Grunke, Wayne college high student, regarding the government's foreign policy.

Serious hostilities anywhere in the world affect interests and rights or obligations of this country. The department's statement continues: "We advocate national and international self-restraint. We advocate abstention by all nations from use of force in pursuit of policy and from interference in the internal affairs of other nations. We advocate adjustment of problems in international relations by processes of peaceful negotiation and agreement. We advocate faithful observance of international agreements. We believe in respect by all nations for the rights of others and performance by all nations of established obligations. We stand for revitalizing and strengthening of international law. CONGRESS AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN

Wage-Hour Provisions. Briefly explained, the much talked of wage and hour bill which was tumbled down by the house last December has been entirely rewritten. In its present form it would establish by law a minimum wage applicable to all parts of the United States and to all industries of 25 cents per hour for the first year, 30 cents per hour the second year, 35 cents per hour the third year and 40 cents thereafter. It also would establish by law a maximum work week of 44 hours for the first year, 42 hours per week for the second year, 40 hours per week thereafter. The provisions of the bill, if passed, will be mandatory, will be enforced by the department of labor and penalties for violation will be inflicted after conviction in courts of law.

America Wants to Help Refugees. Tremendous pressure continues on members to hurry the action to bring the political refugees from Europe and give them sanctuary in the United States. Some members of the house committee on immigration favor the program of our state department to set up an international committee to handle the present emergency affecting these foreigners. Many of these committee members do not favor any change in our present immigration laws which seems to be the objective of the New York lobbyists. They are now demanding temporary emergency increases in our present immigration quotas.

Amendment Protected Nebraska Social Security. There were quite a few minor amendments adopted to the new authorization bill, and one of them eliminated section 12, which would have prohibited the various states from using some of their gasoline tax money for other purposes than highway construction, as in the case of Nebraska where a small amount of the gasoline money is used for the social security funds. There was no serious opposition to the bill and it was passed without a record vote. Under this bill the estimated appropriations for federal aid highway and grade crossing funds which would be received by the state of Nebraska would be a total of $3,851,000, divided as follows:

For federal highway	$2,567,000
For secondary or feeder	518,000
For grade crossing	871,000

The amendment to protect the farm-to-market road fund from being diverted, was withdrawn on the promise on the floor of the house that none of this farm-to-market road money would be diverted from secondary or feeder roads. It is admitted this amount is very small, but it is hoped when the new relief bill comes to the house next week, it will be earmarked for a considerable amount for secondary road purposes.

PWA Gets Ready To Function Again. The PWA which was all but folded up and put out of business by order of the president last August, is pulling out of its files the applications of states, counties and municipalities which were left over when the funds gave out. There are some 3,000 of them which had been favorably acted upon, without the grants and loans being made. A survey is being made as to how many such projects will be available for immediate action. New school houses have been particularly favored in the PWA program and will continue to be. Over 1,575 school houses have been erected from relief expenditures. There are applications on file for many more, and more are rapidly forthcoming since the president's message was sent in. Among other buildings so constructed with federal aid have been thousands of community halls, fire houses, armories and other structures. It is likely that PWA funds will largely go for continuing such building programs.

Spread of the Sales Tax. The hap-hazard way in which our American tax system has grown up is shown in a study of the sales tax which appears in a current copy of "The Index." This study shows that the sales tax on the important scale was brought into use as an emergency method of raising funds during the depression, but that since then it has spread rapidly from state to state, and today constitutes the most important of all state tax sources. For the fiscal year 1936 total sales tax collection aggregated $336,465,000 as compared with $273,700,000 from gasoline taxes, the next prolific source. Another, and perhaps more striking, comparison is to be found in the fact that the total income in 1936 from sales taxes from the twenty-four states where they are employed greatly exceeded income of these states from all sources before the war. A sales tax is an upside-down income tax.

Highway Bill Allows States To Plan. The house has passed H.R. 10140, a bill which provides for the continuation of the well established federal aid highway policy through the fiscal years 1940 and 1941. This bill is merely an authorization bill and has nothing to do with the appropriation bill for the road work for 1939, which was passed by the house recently. Many questions have come to the congressional office asking why it is necessary to make these new authorizations for roads at this session. The answer to that is, that 44 states legislatures meet in regular session in 1939. Forty of these
