every town man knows the farmer knows it. It is doubtful if the fariner worries as much over his crop prospects as does the fellow who is looking on from Main street. The farmer knows more about weather needs and crop resistance than the town man, and the latter, scantily informed, invariably pictures a condition worse than the facts warrant.

If the elements seem too dry or too wet, too cold for too hot, the town fellow immediately develops a high fever, and throws out enough caloric of fear and doubt to start a steam engine. He doesn't know all the facts, but grabs the worst and starts his imagination going. He suffers with the farmer—often more than the farmer, and he knows why. He knows the prosperity and happiness of agricultural communities depend on the prosperity and happiness of the farmers.

As we observe the political horiissue zon, there appears just one issue of major importance—the question that of an office holder who are of major importance—the question of swinging to the left in harmony with the new deal, or plilling into the center of the road and staying there. The issue is not between democrats and republicans, but between two clearly antagonistic philosophies of government. Whether socialistic tendencies—centralization of authority and ultimate regimentation—are bred in the minds of erstwhile democrats or former republicans, the line of demarcation is definitely drawn, and there can be no compromise. Those who believe in the fundamentals of democracy—inviolability of the constitution, free press and free pundamentals of democracy—involability of the constitution, free press and free speech, and the right of man to work and save unmolested by bureaus that would penalize initiative and industry—must stand together and vote together. The question of political spoils or personal favor is not involved. It is purely one of preserving what has required more than 150 years to gain.

Hostmaster General Jim Farley told ing men at Seattle last week to furnish administration with a new deal con-ss this fall to insure continuance of the dizzying along the last five years—garding pledges, increasing unerment, piling deficits upon deficits and ity, and siming at goals hard to attain. We are pleased to believe these two young men are of typical American stock.

The world is too proud of the courage and skill of Douglas G. Corrigan's solo flight to Ireland to permit him to be penal-ized for violating laws of flying. When he said he thought he was headed for Calling to retain to be penalized for violating laws of flying. When he said he thought he was headed for California and wound up in Ireland, he was not questioned closely, but daused many chuckles of incredulity. Corrigan's heroic endeavor is heightened by the fact that he rode an old monoplane with no modern appliances.

If Californians have normal sensibilities, they will resent the deliberate snubbing administered by Senator William Gibbs McAdoo to his political foe, Pierson M. Hall, at a recent innecting with the president in Los Anglees. Whatever may be the cause of bitterness between the two rival partisans, people usually do not relish an evidence of puerility of which the senior senator of California seems an easy victim.

Most mouths of notables and others whose pictures are published in the dailies these days are set ajar, encircled by smiles that often appear forced. The facial orifice should be ordered into a natural position when it and its neighborhood become the object of a camera's charge, and if it is not used to smiling or to pushing its upper and lower rims apart when not working, it should not try to do it.

An encouraging sign—Elliott, son of the president, openly disagrees with som of his father's left-wing moves.

Primary Law Discussions.

The Bollen-Bolan case has brought out The Bollen-Bollan case has brought out dicussion of Nebraska's primary law de-fects. That doesn't mean that a fight has been started on the primary law, looking to its repeal and a return to the convention system. The primary law is with us to stay. Consideration of its defects is the first step toward its improvement, not its repeal.

The fact that a man has a name similar to that of an office holder who seeks relection ought not to bar that man from running for office. He may be a legitimate candidate and it is conceivable that such a man might make a superior public servant. The right to seek personal advancement cannot be denied in this country. That is fundamental.

Nevertheless securing public favor by trading on a name is deceptive and not to be condoned. The cure for that would seem to be publicity. One trouble is, however, that many men careful in the conduct of their own affairs and having an intelligent grasp of many public affairs are not always careful when they vote. They are prone to remember a name without always dates and it is proper that the courts should take the record made by the man himself, when he was not a candidate, as indicating his party. Last minute changes of political affiliation should not be suffiof political affiliation should not be suffi-cient proof of a candidate's party. Public servants should be made up of more stable

1 am so glad we have a telephone. I can call my mother when I have important niews or when I want to visit with her," a telephone user told us.

Most every telephone user we talk to says a telephone is worth many times more than it costs, just to keep in touch with friends and relatives.

The telephone also helps many folks to helps many folks to make and save money in many ways. It saves time, trips and expenses.

It lessens loss in time of fire or other emergency by getting help quickly.

It helps in selling home products.

It brings calls for those who do part-time work and odd jobs. The telephone
