

Punishment Belongs to the Crudities of a Dead Past—Advanced Ways of Handling State's Charges—Good and Bad—Former Wayne Man—December.

We suspect many will not agree with us that capital punishment does more harm in outraging human sensibilities than good in preventing crime. Probably few will agree that killing a known murderer in a crime act or in pursuit by officers is more humane and less distressing to innocent society than a paraded court trial and a carefully planned execution.

The death of a woman in the electric chair of the Ohio penitentiary last week on conviction for one of four murders was preceded and followed over the air and through the newspapers with horrifying details. No doubt news sources satisfied popular demand, though the demand would not have existed if the woman had been quietly sent to the gas chamber during the rest of her days.

Removing the cause of crime is the important and most difficult task. Rehabilitating released prisoners is a puzzling job, according to C. W. Eubank of the Nebraska board of control, who was in Wayne recently. He says for an individual to restore himself to the ordinary currents of the social order is harder than to serve time.

The bond issue will be used with a federal grant of $39,150 for the school improvement.

Healthy Mind Is Free of Conflict

Dean H. H. Hahn stresses factors assisting in best development.

Dear H. H. Hahn defined the healthy mind as one relatively free from serious conflicts due to clashing of inner impulses or to conflicting stimuli or to both of these factors when he spoke at a meeting of the Mothers' Study club last Thursday afternoon in the Mrs. Orville Tuskind home. Dean Hahn's subject was "Creating Healthy Minds in Children and Adolescents." The instructor continued by saying that the individual with a healthy mind has succeeded in harmonizing and organizing these conflicting elements into a workable whole, which enables him to think, feel and act appropriately under various situations. In other words, he is an integrated person.

These clashing inner impulses are most numerous in young children. In fact, the child in his early years is a bundle of contradictions which cause him to want to go in a hundred different directions at the same time. But as long as he is eliminating these inner conflicts, slowly perhaps, and is improving in his behavior, even in a small degree, parents have no cause for worry.

Among factors assisting the child in achieving mental health, orderly living is perhaps most helpful, stated Dean Hahn. If he forms regular habits of eating, sleeping, dressing, caring for his belongings, respecting the rights of others, doing his chores on time, meeting his obligations promptly, he is definitely on the way to mental health. Orderly living means an orderly mind.

Another helpful factor is proper parental discipline and management. Both lax and repressive disciplines are mental disease germs. Such management of children arouses inner conflicts instead of eliminating them. To improve mental health it is necessary for parents to manage their children without conflict.

A third factor emphasized was the urgent need of keeping "family fireworks" out of the home. Some one said that "the home is physically a place to live in, socially a place to have fun in, and intellectually and morally a place to improve in. Otherwise it might just as well move off the street."

Again, both social overstimulation and understimulation are bad for mental health. Parents should arrange matters so that each child is obliged to play alone a portion of each day. But for a child to entertain himself means that he must have several "hobbies." Every interest the child develops is a tonic for his mental health.

Finally, every child in a home should feel that he is wanted, understood and appreciated. His impulses should not be thwarted by "don'ts" but parents should find outlets for them on socially approved levels.

In fact, the child in his early years is a bundle of contradictions which cause him to want to go in a hundred different directions at the same time. But as long as he is eliminating these inner conflicts, slowly perhaps, and is improving in his behavior, even in a small degree, parents have no cause for worry.

Among factors assisting the child in achieving mental health, orderly living is perhaps most helpful, stated Dean Hahn. If he forms regular habits of eating, sleeping, dressing, caring for his belongings, respecting the rights of others, doing his chores on time, meeting his obligations promptly, he is definitely on the way to mental health. Orderly living means an orderly mind.

Another helpful factor is proper parental discipline and management. Both lax and repressive disciplines are mental disease germs. Such management of children arouses inner conflicts instead of eliminating them. To improve mental health it is necessary for parents to manage their children without conflict.

A third factor emphasized was the urgent need of keeping "family fireworks" out of the home. Some one said that "the home is physically a place to live in, socially a place to have fun in, and intellectually and morally a place to improve in. Otherwise it might just as well move off the street."

Again, both social overstimulation and understimulation are bad for mental health. Parents should arrange matters so that each child is obliged to play alone a portion of each day. But for a child to entertain himself means that he must have several "hobbies." Every interest the child develops is a tonic for his mental health.

Finally, every child in a home should feel that he is wanted, understood and appreciated. His impulses should not be thwarted by "don'ts" but parents should find outlets for them on socially approved levels.

As to Mr. Hoover, Sullivan says he is not seeking the nomination and that there is no movement in his behalf. It is recalled that when a serious injustice is done to a public man, the masses endeavor in time to right the wrong. People are growing more and more to appreciate Hoover qualities of statesmanship and to understand the misrepresentation he suffered in the 1932 campaign.

In steadily increasing numbers people regret the treatment accorded Hoover, and whether they ever have a chance to express respect for him or confidence in his judgment, they are certain to place him first among America's living statesmen.

Death of Arch Swindler B. Means, dead in prison, such a colossal fraud? He was no ordinary swindler. He ingratiated himself into the confidence of the upper social and political stratum. He was a sore spot in the Harding administration.

Means is said to have been the product of a well known and highly respected North Carolina family, and he started out all right as a young man. What happened to reverse his course in middle life no one seems able to explain.

Means could have gained sufficient wealth honestly. He could have won and held an honest name. But he preferred the ways of a crook, and he will be remembered as one. What physical or mental disorder made him into a criminal?

Family Albums THE family album has gone with the horse and buggy, the bustle and hoop skirt. The surviving album is a skeleton of the old days. Time was when, before the radio, before advent of the phonograph, before general spread of the daily press, before enlightened consideration of current events, the album was brought out to introduce the family and its antecedent roots and branches to guests who came to while away an afternoon or to get their feet under the dining table.

They Say "Just tell me when we are going to remove the restrictions which prevent close cooperation between management and employees; when we are going to stop putting shackles on production; when we are to be sure of a sound currency; when our government expenditures are going to be brought into line with government income, based on a fair tax burden, and I will tell you when this country of ours will enter the greatest period of prosperity it has ever known."—Franklin R. Hoadley, President, National Founders Association.

Farm Prices THE attempt to fix farm prices on a parity with other things has not been successful despite many years of different attempts in that direction. Secretary Wallace is against price-fixing, but for continuance of the present policy of acreage control. On the other hand, the Nebraska Farmer says farmers in this uncertain producing area are generally in favor of fixing prices rather than curtailing acreage.

That publication says in part: "In Nebraska and neighboring states that have suffered from several successive years of short crops, there is additional dissatisfaction with the drastic acreage allotments demanded on wheat and corn, because farmers in these sections want definite weather handicaps cannot plan their production with as much certainty as in the more favored climatic sections to the east. Thus they need the surplus crops of good years to tide them over the short crop years that are sure to come. In other words, a program aimed at the administration of the wheat and corn sections is not adapted to the peculiar conditions confronting the great plains territory. Farmers, however, seem unwilling to condemn all attempts by the government to help solve the farm program, and many of them are said to be looking with more favor upon outright price-fixing proposals with less emphasis on acreage control."

Without "ABANDONMENT" of rail transportation by the C. St. P. M. & O. line to Ponca, Newcastle and Wynot five years ago has not affected those towns adversely, according to a report made by the National Highway Users' conference, reproduced in part with comments by the World-Herald which closes with these paragraphs: "Little effect is found on community life. Population has been about stationary for 30 years. Trade has increased in Ponca, fallen off in Wynot and Jackson, and remained about the same in the other communities. It is pointed out that the decline in Wynot had begun 10 years earlier, and that Jackson still has a railroad.

Catholic sermons are being read and censored in advance by nazi authorities in Vienna. The affront led one member of the clergy to refuse to preach. Perhaps this precaution is taken to prevent favorable mention of God or the Nazarene ahead of Hitler. Hitler believes in religious liberty that does not take into account any visible force or unseen power not belonging to or projected from himself.

President Roosevelt has said there is nothing in the world to fear but fear. That being eminently true, the president should banish fear by not insisting on things that excite fear. No sooner do groups begin to coo around the executive throne in answer to what seems a genuine desire for cooperation than some new or revived wrinkle in the reform business is proposed.

Secretary Henry Wallace accepts the favorable cotton vote as general endorsement of his agricultural program. He should sound out corn states before proclaiming complete victory. It seems to be a part of the schooling of new deal bellwethers to see a silvery lining in every cloud, gold in every sunset and triumph in every vote whether it is for or against.

Anthony Eden, British statesman, sojourning in the United States, calms war alarms in expressing himself concerning the subject. That suits America as well as England, though both countries will feel wary of boastful autocrats and safeguard peace by being ready for whatever may happen.

Temperaments vary amazingly. Some are too radical and others are too conservative. Between the two is a great mass usually found resisting either extreme. It is this middle group, swinging neither to the right nor to the left, that insures safe, sane progress.

It takes courage to be a good loser, but that is the stuff that helps bring later success. It is the stuff that makes indifference turn into warm friendship. It also creates peace of mind and makes a fellow get along better with himself.

A young woman living in Philadelphia, but acquainted with the country, was asked which she liked better. She quickly answered: "The country." "Why?" "Because it is less artificial, more genuine."

Who Gets the Profits? Our attention is called to the fact that Mr. Tugwell, who is opposed to profits, is getting $15,000 a year as city planner for New York City, a big boost over his department of agriculture salary. "Mr. Editor," says the correspondent, "if it weren't for profits, where would 800,000 government employes get their monthly checks?" We give it up.

ENLARGED. In the old days public Christmas activities were restricted to the churches, and as the glad day approached, Sunday school attendance notably increased. It was a primitive church custom to take family gifts to the celebration to distribute. As common sense developed, this custom was abolished, and a treat for all youngsters was wisely substituted. The greatest of all birthdays is still closely linked with the church, though the celebration has been enlarged in secular fields. Parks and streets and buildings are generously decorated with evergreens and varicolored lights, and figures are often fashioned to symbolize the coming of the Nazarene. The radio contributes Christmas songs and Christmas stories to enliven the spirit of the occasion. In contrast with pagan mockery that would break down sacred things and destroy cherished hope, the Christian world flanks the churches in acclaiming the truth that came out of the Bethlehem manger two thousand years ago.

"I am optimistic because I believe business is solving and will continue to solve its problems and I believe in this country the punitive curtain is falling and the cooperative curtain is rising."—Carle C. Conway, Chairman of the Board, Continental Can Co.

COURAGE An address by Lloyd C. Douglas, author of "Magnificent Obsession" and other outstanding volumes; is reproduced in the current Kiwanis Magazine, and he emphasizes pains and trials as valuable to growth. He notes that with all the "bunk" in politics, patriotism—love of country, pride of country, devotion to country—is not "bunk." He suggests that too much is expected from men elected to responsible offices, and that men—accepted as great—have no more common sense than the rank and file. The author evidently believes no hardship should excite despair or battle hope. We quote these questions: "Let every man who wishes to bring things to life, and offer a constructive service to his generation, ask himself whether in his daily conversation with his family and friends and business associates, he leaves the impression that as a nation, as a race, we are on the way up or on the way down. Does he create the impression that we are facing a grave crisis in our civilization or passing through a painful phase of growth? Does he regard our perplexities with despair or does he see in them problems worth a man's best energies? Does he view his hard task as a cross to bear or a game to play?"

Capital (Continued from page one.) He is remembered as dignified, unassuming and scholarly.

The Christmas Month. Possessing Christmas, biggest event of the year December may feel specially favored and rather uppish in its relation to other months. But aside from holiday good will, it has nothing to stick out its chest over. Its landscape is either browned off or covered with snow. It is either cold or suggestive of wintry elements ahead. In comparison, we would call attention to the mild zephyrs and green vegetation of May and June, or the usually rich rewards of the autumn. December stands justly high with Christmas the chief asset, but it should not minimize the value and joy of other months, each of which has its strong points.

Weather Warmer Than Last Year Weather this week has been much more favorable than a year ago, according to J. S. Horney's record. ENLARGED. In the old days public Christmas activities were restricted to the churches, and as the glad day approached, Sunday school attendance notably increased. It was a primitive church custom to take family gifts to the celebration to distribute. As common sense developed, this custom was abolished, and a treat for all youngsters was wisely substituted. The greatest of all birthdays is still closely linked with the church, though the celebration has been enlarged in secular fields. Parks and streets and buildings are generously decorated with evergreens and varicolored lights, and figures are often fashioned to symbolize the coming of the Nazarene. The radio contributes Christmas songs and Christmas stories to enliven the spirit of the occasion. In contrast with pagan mockery that would break down sacred things and destroy cherished hope, the Christian world flanks the churches in acclaiming the truth that came out of the Bethlehem manger two thousand years ago.

Third of Pupils React to Tests Thirtythree per cent of the children in the Wayne high school who took the Shick test, showed that they have a susceptibility to diphtheria. Dr. A. Zimmer of the state department of health, visited the school Monday to read the tests. In the lower age groups the percentage of positive reactions was high, kindergarten 87 per cent and first grade 76 per cent. The upper grades showed greater immunity. The high school was 27 per cent positive. Similar results have been obtained in other schools showing that relatively few children have normal protection against the disease in early life but sometimes acquire it later.

Birth Record. A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Palmer who live 7 miles east of Wayne, Monday, December 12. A son, Jerry Leland, weighing 7 pounds, 12 ounces, was born Friday, December 9, to Mr. and Mrs. Leland Jacobs of Sioux City. Mrs. Jacobs is the former Miss Evelyn James of Carroll.

Is Ill Several Days. Prof. K. N. Parke has been ill several days the past week. He was in a hospital the last of the week.

To Report Seat Sale. Reports on sale of Christmas seals conducted through the schools, will be made to Miss Pearl Sewell by December 18.

Home From Hospital. Mrs. Levin Johnson of Wayne, who had been a medical patient in a local hospital since Friday, went to her home Tuesday.

The Voice OF Religion Current Questions and Answers About Religion, Morals and Personal Problems by WELDON F. CROSSLAND Rochester, New York. 1. Is There a Strong Trend in America Toward One United Church? Yes. An unrecognized spirit of unity has always existed among the different Christian churches and sects of the United States. They worship the same Christ, sing many of the same hymns and hope for the same heaven.

Dr. Weldon F. Crossland. These six facts help one understand this steadily rising tide of cooperation and unity: 1. The causes that created most of the divisions have largely disappeared. 2. Most churches now emphasize the many fundamental matters on which they agree and minimize the few incidental points on which they differ.

3. Many denominations have been cooperating successfully for more than a quarter of a century in national, state and local federations. 4. Some denominations, such as the Congregational and the Christian, have already united. Union of two or more churches in hundreds of smaller communities has occurred.

5. The young people of today care little about the differences between the denominations. Before many years they will as officials vote for the unity they now desire. 6. Millions of Christians have come to believe that a divided church cannot face this modern world and that Christ would have all Christians unite.

One may reasonably expect that within the next twentyfive years a United Church of America will embrace many of the chief Christian denominations. 2. Will the Jews in America Ever Be Persecuted as in Germany? If the present form of government continues with the legislative, executive and judicial branches separate and with the courts free to interpret the constitution fairly, I answer "No."

If America ever shifts into one-man government, with the executive branch dominating congress and the courts then I can easily conceive of persecution not only against the Jews but against many other religious or racial groups. The most vicious cruelty to Jews has occurred where one-man government exists. By his control of government, the press and the radio, the dictator can inflame the people's hatred against any minority group.

The long American tradition of religious and civil liberty argues against any persecution. The public schools insure against intolerance by uniting all groups in study and play. Inter-faith gatherings of Roman Catholics, protestants and Jews dispel misunderstanding and create mutual respect.

Every American, every Christian and every Jew should oppose any movement that would persecute any racial or religious group. 3. What Is the Membership of America's Six Largest Churches? The Roman Catholic church leads the Christian communions of America with 21,322,688 members. This includes both baptized children and adults. The Baptist churches (9 chief branches) number 10,332,005. The Baptist denomination is increasing more rapidly in proportion to its size than is any other in America. The Methodists rank third with 9,109,359 distributed in 12 groups. When the three largest Methodist branches unite next April the Methodist church as the united church will be called, will exceed 7,300,000 members. The Lutherans (5 bodies) number 4,589,660 adherents. Next come the Presbyterians with 2,687,772 members in 9 branches. The Episcopalians total 1,942,322 in membership.

These figures are taken from The Epworth Herald's annual statement of membership of the Christian Churches of the United States. A comparison of the last federal census leads one to believe that they are substantially correct.

4. What Things in Life Are Most Worth While? Friends, Work, Books, Love and Religion. Friends open the prison doors of self, steal away life's loneliness, temper life's rudeness and make all our hours golden. Work gives the thrill of achievement, expresses each one's genius, creates a better world and brings satisfaction at eventide. Books push back horizons of the soul, bring the past's choice riches, offer travel's magic carpet and give delight that never palls. Love transfigures daily living, brings supreme contentment, evokes noblest sacrifice and crowns life with sweetest joy.

Religion puts meaning into life, trusts God for better times, gives power and endurance and reveals the Vision Splendid. All these supremely worth while things in life lie within the reach of every man. Any reader having a question on religion or morals may send it to "The Voice of Religion," Rochester, N. Y.

Friday, Sup. C. H. Madden went to Lincoln accompanying Supt. L. Crow to attend the delegate assembly of the Activities association. A few changes were suggested at the meeting, these being to alter the constitution to make ineligible any boy with guardianship papers until he has served one semester of residence where he is attending school. Insurance for athletes was discussed and $2,500 of activities money allowed for paying excess claims of the premiums collected. An attempt will be made to have such insurance set up and operating by next September. The premiums suggested $1 per boy for all sports entered during the year. This amount does not include full coverage not a death benefit.

Mr. Hodgkin, writer of the R. F. D. column in the Omaha World-Herald, will talk at the Farmers' Fun Feed Thursday evening.

At a recent meeting of the Dixon county schoolmen at Concord, the county declamatory contest at Emerson was set for February 20. The commercial contest will be at Wakefield March 18 and the music festival at Ponca April 11.

Increase Livestock To Help on Farms

Principal efforts of the Farm Security administration in Nebraska during the past few weeks have been to place additional livestock on borrowers' farms to utilize their feed crops, according to I. A. White, state FSA director in his November report just released. This is being accomplished mainly through supplemental loans, 405 of which were made during the month for a total of $129,933. The agency made 109 new loans for $106,490 and four cooperative loans totaled $1,218. Total number of all Nebraska FSA loans made in November was 518 for a total amount of $237,841.

Commenting on the report, Mr. White said, "Rehabilitation of Nebraska agriculture depends largely on increasing the state's livestock population. FSA extends credit largely on the basis of which usually call for added livestock units and diversified farming practices."

White pointed out that the extent to which the FSA can go in the rehabilitation program is limited by appropriations. Furthermore, only farmers who can obtain credit nowhere else are eligible. He declared, however, that the loans and farm plans have already pointed the way to a more dependable type of farming, and that it is "heartening to see commercial and other lending and credit agencies falling in line and taking up the slack."

Law vs. Bureau.
(Omaha Journal-Stockman.)
During the last quarter of a century there has been vast expansion of bureaucratic activity as these agencies are ever eager to take on greater powers and responsibilities in order to magnify their importance and influence. This has been the tendency of all bureaucrats at all times and in all ages. The public, however, is disposed to question the assumed authority of these agencies and to resent their efforts to supplant the courts, the congress and the constituted authorities. Bureaucratic regulations are not the law of the land but recent decisions have emphasized the fact that it has frequently been necessary to appeal to the courts to establish this fact.

Commenting on the late decision of the supreme court in reference to the broad assumption of authority by the National Labor Relations board, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan declares that "in whatever degree we surrender a government of laws to a government of men we jeopardize the American inheritance."

It is well for the nation to be brought back to the fundamental principle of government. The recent history of Europe tends to emphasize the importance of government by laws instead of government by the will of man. And in this country the usurpation of government by bureaus is plainly a step toward a dictatorship.

And yet it must be remembered, as the Nebraska State Journal points out, that "laws are man made and by man interpreted. If everyone construed every item in the constitution in exactly the same way at all times, rule by law would not be difficult. But people being what they are, government of laws alone is impossible. Man must have a part, if only through the medium of the supreme court. A surrender of government of laws to government of men to the extent that we make our surrender of the court is surely not much of a menace to the American inheritance. Certainly it is a necessary surrender to make the government workable."

There have been many times in the course of our national history when it has been necessary for the courts of the land to bring us to our senses, to put us back in our places, and it is therefore of the highest necessity that these courts be kept free from temporary influences and thus retain the respect and confidence of the country. It is for this reason that such decisions as in that reference to the National Labor Relations board constitute a healthy influence on the entire nation.

Lower Prices and Pork Demand.
(Omaha Journal-Stockman.)
"Why should hog prices be breaking like they have in recent weeks, to the lowest levels in four years or more? We are still far short of a normal supply of hogs in this country and pork, pound for pound, is cheaper in the markets today than either beef or mutton." Questions and comments like these are coming more and more frequently from farmers.

No doubt a good many reasons could be given for this seemingly puzzling situation. Here are a few that producers will admit bear the stamp of logic.

We may not have as many hogs in the United States today as we used to count a normal supply, but at the same time the swine population probably is larger than in any other recent year. Recent supply increases have indicated this. Furthermore, this is the opening of the winter packing season and with supplies of both feeders and meat animals on the increase, it is not surprising if packers figure that the pork they are putting away this winter they find prices still lower by the time it comes out of storage.

But there's more to the story than that. Everyone on the farm should realize that although hogs weren't profitable during some of the drouth years, pork was selling at prices which consumers considered high, so high in fact, that heavy importations were made from abroad. This had a tendency to restrict consumption and turn buyers to meats of other kinds. Just the psychology of the often reiterated statement that there was a shortage of hogs prejudiced the average meat buyer against pork before he even asked prices. On top of that was the fact that the quality of the finished hogs produced suffered during the period of grain scarcity. No doubt many of the grain substitutes used would have made hogs fat if they had been fed in sufficient quantities, but since hogs were a losing proposition anyway much of the time, many farmers either didn't buy the proper feeds to make their hogs good, or, if they did buy them, they fed them too sparingly to get good results. This matter of poor quality, undoubtedly had a lot to do with reducing pork consumption.

Now, of course, it's a different story. Not only do we have more hogs but, with grains and other concentrates more plentiful and much cheaper in price, hogs are being finished better this year than for several seasons. However, a lot of consumers haven't found that out yet, and until they do, they'll continue to shy away from pork.

But the present situation is not without its encouraging side. For even though they may look low in contrast to the prices that good cattle are bringing, hogs are still bringing profitable figures. Besides that, the chances are that this period of relatively low pork costs, plus the improved quality of the pork available today and the admitted improvement in consumer buying power will hasten the restoration of a normal pork outlet. At least, everyone hopes that it is the way it will work.

Swedish People Appreciate Holidays In the True Meaning of Christmas

That the Swedish people, religious and peace-loving, really enjoy the full meaning of the holiday season impressed the 94 who attended the A.A.U.W. International Relations Christmas dinner and program Thursday evening at the Presbyterian church parlors. A large Christmas tree, gay with lights and fancy cookies, stood in one corner of the room. Small decorated trees, miniature images of the Swedish Christmas elves that look much like Santa Claus and programs in Swedish colors of light blue and yellow were attractive on the tables. Swedish articles for a display were loaned by Mrs. Carl Zernian, Miss Ruth Pearson, Mrs. Herman Lundberg, Mrs. August Nyberg, Mrs. N. P. Nyberg and Miss Theodora Carlson.

But It's True

IT HAS BEEN ESTIMATED THAT MORE THAN ONE THIRD OF THE PEOPLE IN RUSSIA STILL DO NOT KNOW THAT CZARISM HAS ENDED... THE TIGER WHICH IS KNOWN TO HAVE KILLED 122 PERSONS... THE TIGER WHO WAS SHOT THROUGH THE HEAD WHILE MAKING A SPEECH...

The tiger was in the habit of raiding small villages, killing and carrying off women and children. Curiously, it killed only one man. Lewis called his hair with dirt, planted seed, raised roses within four months by forcing. He still has three of the roses pressed in a book.

Year's Stay in United States Changes Instructor's Outlook

Wayne—the perfect community—This is the city described by Miss Doris Palmer, who was an exchange teacher at Wayne college from Huddersfield, England, in an article in the Yorkshire Evening Post. Miss Palmer explained that her conceptions of the United States changed after coming here and "after an enjoyable holiday on the east coast and a sight-seeing tour via Niagara and Mississippi." She was installed a year ago as exchange teacher in what "one might term the perfect community."

"Wayne is a Nebraska town of about 2400 inhabitants, 50 miles west of the Missouri river. It is justifiably proud of its beautiful college and campus, complete training school, library, lecture rooms, dormitories and cafeteria. There are over 700 students, of whom 25 percent work on the campus or in the town in order to support themselves during the training course."

"Many of them come from distant parts of the state and are sons and daughters of pioneers from all parts of Europe, whose parents wish their children to have a higher education. The students are ever ready to lend a hand in work of any kind, and nothing is outside of their province, from clerical work to house painting. The townspeople cooperate with the faculty in employing the students under the 'National Youth Administration,' and also in welcoming them into the town's social life. The churches, too, have flung open their doors to the student body, regardless of creed, and there is a warmth and friendliness everywhere."

"Within the college there are innumerable societies, such as the football and baseball club, the Latin Sodales, study group for international relations, the college orchestra, the brass band and the pep club—a very important institution which organizes the cheering and side-shows during a match, and afterwards welcomes home the sturdy players who return with heads frequently 'bloody' but unbowed."

"The relations between students and faculty, as also between men and women students, are friendly and unaffected; indeed, coeducation appears to be eminently successful."

"It is interesting to hear that the ceremony of 'initiation' of freshmen, which takes place at the beginning of the academic year, is much milder than formerly. There has been a tendency to substitute some form of work, a kind of 'fagging' system for the earlier 'hazing' or 'padding,' and freshmen are required to purchase and wear a green cap until the upper classmen permit them to discard it."

"The girls have their own system; members of one dormitory had to wear a large green 'F' on the back of dresses, and the penalty incurred by the infringement of this rule resulted in some very quaint apparitions on the campus, such as girls with odd shoes, hair dressed in strange outlandish fashion or face shining with cold cream."

"From the main part, however, the students are serious workers, and are naturally anxious to make the most of this opportunity which so many are earning for themselves."

"They take a keen interest in European and international affairs and approach in a tolerant and friendly spirit the problems with which other nations have to deal. When one is on the spot it is remarkable how many of the prejudices and misunderstandings which persistently arise disappear and would seem indeed to be entirely fictitious."

Dorothy of Wakefield. In the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Ekerdt, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Holmberg and Joan were guests.

Honored at Lincoln

Early Days In Wayne County

Early Days from the Wayne Herald for December 14, 1922. Dr. H. E. Eells, 50, dentist in Wayne 18 years ago, was killed in a fall from a bicycle December 11, 1922, at Fremont. Wayne American Legion post chose as officers E. G. Galley, John Reider, James Steele, August Witter, Dr. W. M. Hawkins.

From the Ponca Journal for December 19, 1878: The sun shone Tuesday for the first time in 10 days. Wheat still hangs at 50c a bushel with only little coming in. Wild turkeys and other small game are reported plentiful in the timber. Fishing through the ice is coming into fashion and skating on the ice is being enjoyed. Snow is 10 to 20 inches deep in Iowa but only an inch here. The ferry between Sioux City and Cavington made its last trip across the river. The ice was so heavy that the journey required all day. If the light-fingered person who visited a clothes line will return the mis-matched stockings he will be given a mated pair. It must be embarrassing to wear one white and one blue stocking.
