Shot in Arm By Rifle Discharge

CONSOLIDATION OF COUNTIES IF NEED THOUGH UNLIKELY

A PLAN to rebuild and enlarge the court house at Ponca, reviving the talk of re-moving the county seat to a more central location, reminds what Logan and Wakefield townships in Dixon county should be joined to Wayne county. That rearrangement of boundaries would increase convenience to citizens of the two townships, and it would make Wayne county nearer the right size. As a matter of fact, all northeast Nebraska counties are too small. Economy would be served by having them bigger. Before the days of automobiles and good roads, a twenty-mile trip to a county seat took an entire day. Now it may be accomplished in a couple of hours. Distance to the seat of government is no longer important. We would like to see county consolidations, but the course to follow in accomplishing such desirable ends is too long and uphill ever to hope for realization.

E. J. Velder, the national president of the star route carriers, is in town working on new legislation to help these carriers. These people get their jobs by competitive bidding to carry mail on other than the usual rural routes and after buying a lot of equipment and running their star routes through the contract period they find they have to take their chances against bids which are unusually low and with which they cannot compete. They claim that because of the depression thousands of people bid for one job and because of the desperate conditions of people who want the jobs the bids are so low that it represents a discrimination against the faithful carrier who has held the job for some years and kept up his high priced equipment. Some of these star carriers think they should be blanketed into the postal service or given some assurance which can keep their jobs if their services have been satisfactory. Some legislation to help this situation is what brings Velder to Washington.

Warren Krebs of Humphrey, is a frequent caller in the Third congressional office. Warren is attending college here and is specializing in foreign service subjects.

Believe it or not when the secretary of the Nebraska society sent out cards for the Nebraska get-together party the other day he found a list of over 800 Nebraskans who live in Washington. Most of them work for the government. Some other states' representations have run into several thousand.

The annual grab has been started in Washington by the local boosters for more buildings in the nation's capital. Notwithstanding the hard fight on the part of the majority, the second deficiency bill carries 3 1/2 million for a new building for the census bureau to house 7500 employees who will work on the 16th Decennial Census. Middlewest members told the house that this town has so many buildings and such a centralization of government activity here, that they demand a decentralization of some of that activity to Nebraska or some other state where room is ample.

The government building exansion program in Washington is serious. The government rents 120 buildings in this town alone, and pays three and one-half million dollars rent for them every year. Notwithstanding the fact that a gigantic extension has been completed for the department of agriculture, that department rents twenty-nine different buildings in Washington, and pays $468,000 a year rent for them. The treasury department is in 16 different buildings, and the interior department is in 11 different buildings. The average rental in Washington is said to be about 95 cents a square foot, yet committee members in their search for information find that the government is being held up by local chiselers and pays from $1.50 to $2.50 per square foot. In some cases it costs the government from $300 to $600 per room for space clerks. The government rents 1830 feet of space in one building here and pays $22,000 a year rent. Only twenty people are said to be employed in this space. These are some of the things new members on the appropriation committee are going to ask a lot of questions about.

Those who have the job to fight grasshoppers and insects with the aid of taxpayers money got only two million dollars in the second deficiency bill. They wanted six million dollars, but they fell down when they admitted they had expended about 700 thousand dollars from last year's funds. So the committee which allowed them $2,770,000 last year just cut the amount so they would have what was appropriated last year. Proponents for increased funds say that is not a drop in the bucket but that a drop in the bucket comes earlier than last year when some of the help came too late. Experts feel that the fight against insects such as grasshoppers and Mormon crickets is a national problem and unless a sufficient fund is provided, the smaller sum won't do much good. Unless there is a nation-wide fight against these insects and enough money provided to do the job on a nationwide scale, they feel that little will be accomplished.

Last year Nebraska got $195,806 for grasshopper control. About the same amount can be expected this year. House members who did not succeed in their effort to obtain increased appropriation this year are looking for senate help to increase the resources for the battle against insect pests.

The appropriations committee has been organized. This committee which controls the purse strings of the nation is composed of 39 members — twenty-eight democrats and eleven republicans. Because the democratic party is in the majority, all chairmanships and control of this and other committees are in the hands of democrats. This important committee is also divided into eleven sub-committees. A new sub-committee has been added which will make appropriations for the department of labor and the social security board. The Third district member, the only Nebraska member on the full committee has been honored with places on sub-committees which watch over the expenditures for the state department and commerce department, the department of justice and the district of Columbia. All sub-committees hold hearings, then report to the full committee for final action before the bills go to the house.

Operations taking the new census will begin July 1. It will cost over 45 million dollars to do the job and it will take nearly 3 1/2 years to complete all details. The last census cost 39 1/2 million dollars but the increase was necessary because of the increase in our population during the past ten years. A new building will house 7500 people who will work in shifts tabulating the information sent in by the 140,000 people who will be used in the field. New employees will be taken on gradually and the peak of the employment will come in October. The census bureau here is marking time waiting for congress to decide on the new building. If it is approved, construction will start at once, and after 3 1/2 years, the building will be used as a sort of store house. The workers in the last census worked in one of the old temporary buildings used during the war. This one has been torn down and the space in town is so crowded that the bureau doesn't know what to do until congress decides on the new structure. There are so many workers here and so many workers and the congestion on the streets is so bad at certain hours that many bureaus work their employees in staggered shifts to lighten both the load in crowded spaces and on the streets.

Takes Issue WE are reproducing herewith a little editorial observation from last week's Herald to show what aroused the attached critical comment by an esteemed subscriber, Chris Jensen, jr., of Winside. We are pleased to know of some one who reads our editorials even if the result tends to raise blood pressure, as Mr. Jensen advises. Here is the paragraph under fire:

"Public sales of farm equipment and farm animals are said by those who know, to reflect old-time prosperity. Buyers are numerous and eager, and prices are uniformly good. Better crops than for some years and fair prices for the farmer has to sell have charged the atmosphere with a spirit of optimism and courage."

Mr. Jensen comments as follows:

Winside, Nebr., Jan. 30, 1939.
Wayne Herald, Wayne, Nebr.
Dear Editor:
I am writing you in regard to an editorial in the Wayne Herald of Jan. 26 which fairly burns me up. It is true that farm sales are going pretty good, but when you say the farmer is getting a fair price for his products you are all wet. The money that is in the average farmer's pocket is the result of soil conservation checks and the selling of corn. At the prevailing prices of 36 1/2 cents for corn, 12 cents for eggs, 23 cents for butterfat and 10 cents for springs is a fair price, then 25 cents is a pretty fair price for your paper. However, I will admit livestock is commanding a fair price, considering price of grain and hay. Owing to drought condition every farmer has had to dispose of most of the livestock and has scarcely enough left for breeding purposes. Having none to sell regardless of how high the market may be doesn't put money in the pockets. Go ahead and publish this as I am not afraid of the truth.

Yours truly,
Chris Jensen, Jr.,
Route No. 2,
Winside, Nebr.

Our ardent wish for better farm conditions led us to accept higher prices paid at farm sales as an indication of a hopeful trend—as promise of higher farm price standards. We did not say conditions were what they should be. If they are better in some respects, as Mr. Jensen concedes, they furnish substantial ground for encouragement. We may grow over-enthusiastic as we note light penetrating the clouds, but we would prefer to err, if at all, on the side of optimism.

Business and Government

BUSINESS and industry are anxious to expand and thus find need for many persons out of employment or on WPA rolls. To do so, however, demand for goods must be increased, and to accomplish such increase, the demands of the government must be modified to permit free exercise of individual plans and so to spread the spirit of optimism and courage. Touching the subject of unemployment and the promise of closer cooperation between government and business, the Omaha Journal-Stockman says:

"The White House learns from its explorers that ten million persons who would like to work in private employment are unemployed, except that three million of them are working for WPA. That's real news, because it has been demonstrated that some of the WPA-ers want to stay with the WPA.

"By the same authority we learn that instructions have been issued to Harry Hopkins, formerly head of WPA, and now secretary of commerce, that he is to make peace with business in view of business and industrial activity that will cut down the ten millions. And we say amen to that. There isn't a business man in America but would welcome the need to add to his list of employees. Give him a chance and he'll do it."

Reverse Action

EVEN the lack of stability implied in the legislature's reverse movement to memorialize congress to pass a Townsend pension bill is more creditable than to have stuck to the original action. The resolution advised congress to provide up to $200 per month to oldsters above 60. Legislators must have been in a fanciful mood when they endorsed the original resolution. We are glad they had the courage to back up.

Members were inviting congress to do something which doubtless they would not do themselves. In a lapse of practical judgment they were proposing an increased national tax burden which would only further weaken the economic fabric. Members of state legislatures are usually sound enough to know that such wholesale shifting of personal responsibility to government shoulders—if it could be borne by such shoulders—is inimical to the best values in an independent democracy.

It is not encouraging to find the legislature proposing something in conflict with the tide that seems now to be changing against government paternalism.

State Fair

TOM LEADLEY, editor of the Nebraska Farmer, gave the state fair management something to think about in a speech before a meeting of the county fair managers and the state board of agriculture last week. He said the state fair is a sick institution that needs a change of treatment and new blood. Leadley had generated a lot of steam and he told the fair boys what he thought. Here are a few quotations:

"More and better cattle at the Chadron Hereford show than at the state fair... the board has become inbred... a case of dry rot, limited perspective, out-of-date policies, paucity of new ideas... an old man's honorary society... why taint the fair with gambling? Horse racing and gambling is the tail wagging the dog..."

Leadley is deeply interested in developing the state's agriculture and live stock, and he asks the legislature to help in that direction.

People in a democracy are not partial to communism above fascism and nazism, or to fascism and nazism above communism. One could not determine the worst form of dictator government without knowing the relative numbers killed wantonly and without reasonable cause by each. And the degree of torture preceding death would have to be considered. The manner of being snuffed out would also be important. If totalitarian rulers are uniformly brutal, as suspected, they must rank equally abhorrent in the minds of free Americans.

Putting the management of all state schools into the hands of one board, as proposed, could lead, as suggested, to employing one executive head to look after all the schools. Duties of the state superintendent could be absorbed by this executive. Such centralized control might or might not be efficient. Anyway, it would be centralization of the state's school authority, held aloof from the rank and file who pay the freight.

A few years ago the Wayne Business and Professional Women's club carried out a program of welcome to newcomers. Families locating here were visited and made the objects of friendly attentions. The policy made a stranger feel at home—feel he had found interested and helpful neighbors. The plan aroused much favor as desirable community service.

Fired by fascist victories in Spain we find other fascist dictators rattling their sabers as a warning to democracies. Hitler and Mussolini indicate that they want peace, but they do a great deal of blustering in expressing the idea. Their threats suggest more of a fear of peace than of war. They act like fellows uneasily anxious to fight.

We might brag a little about the mild elements prevailing in Nebraska at the time a blizzard swept Chicago and areas east of there if there were not a possibility our turn would come next.

Source of Hope.

Senator Norris has given the country a little encouragement in saying he doubted President Roosevelt would have the power to control the 1940 democratic convention. We may not have still another new deal administration.

How a Cow Kicks.

The industrial commission of California, in ruling on a claim for compensation, said a cow can't kick backwards. The commission is badly mistaken. A cow can kick in any direction except straight up. Her favorite kick, however, is a roundhouse swing that knocks the milker northeast and the bucket of milk southwest.

Inconsistency.

Some people are dumb that way. They do not have sense enough to comprehend the intricacies of our government and its bureaus. They are asking why one department should issue repeated warnings that we are growing too much wheat and corn and producing too many cattle and hogs while another department of the government is clamoring for millions of dollars to feed the third of our population that is underfed.

A Warning to Hog Growers.

Owing to the abundance of feed and the favorable corn-hog ratio the county agents, commercial clubs and local bankers have inaugurated a campaign to boost hog production in the Corn Belt. Hogs have been a profitable crop for some time and many farmers who had dropped completely out of hogs during the drouth years have been getting back into the business as rapidly as they can.

In fact, the department of agriculture experts now have a fear that hog production is in danger of being overdone. They have issued a declaration to the effect that live stock farmers were heading toward the same kind of trouble that brought on the government's pig slaughter program in 1933.

Encouraged by existence of abundant corn and other feed supplies hog farmers are sharply stepping up their production. The 1938 pig crop was 15 per cent greater than that of the previous year and indications point, the agriculture department says, to a 14 per cent increase this year.

Unless consumer purchasing power expands at a much greater rate than now expected, pork and lard supplies will be excessive and prices much lower, economists said.

The department predicts that if feed supplies continue ample, the 1939 pig crop may be in excess of 80,000,000 or about equal to the 1929-33 average.

"It seems probable," the department said, "that in view of prospects for increased hog production, the trend in hog prices will be downward in the next two years, with the average price in 1939 lower than in 1937 and with the average price in 1940 lower than in 1939."

Past experience has demonstrated that the experts in Washington do not know any more than the rest of us as to the future trend in market values. At the same time the country needs more hogs and if business and industrial conditions continue to improve, the danger of an over-supply of porkers this year is rather remote.

OVERPRIVILEGED.

The lady director of child adjustment and school service division of the psychological service center, New York, points out in a current magazine something that has been apparent to close observers ever since there have been rich parents and over-indulged children. She writes that overprivileged children are hand-dipped quite as much as underprivileged ones. She explains that fond, but unwise parents often bestow gifts that are not needed and not wanted. Boys and girls are not allowed to cultivate a yearning that would arouse efforts to acquire things desired. They are surfeited by enfolding luxuries. They are not spurred by need to plan and work to satisfy wants. As suggested, they are allowed to grow up without discipline or need for self-direction. The author advises parents to teach their children with which to gratify their desires. Their interest will grow accordingly, and their perspective will enlarge. She urges closer companionship rather than lavish gifts as the way to strengthen and burnish child character. The over-indulged youth is more to be pitied than the one who has to struggle along on few advantages and short rations.

Sioux City

might have recommended that teachers' colleges be abandoned entirely.

Anent the school business, we note that Emil Von Seggern, West Point member of the unicameral, has got acquainted with the chancellor of the university and approvingly quotes him with reference to restricting education in Nebraska in the interest of taxpayers. It seems the chancellor wants to use taxpayers' money for higher education of only those who at the time of exposure appear able to absorb it. Often a fellow who has large possessions and is heavily taxed, has children who could not rate sufficiently strong in brilliance to enroll in the university under extraordinary requirements, but who in time, under liberal advantages, might surpass the more precocious student. Thus, the boy or girl whose father had to dig deep into his pocket to support the university, would be denied the advantages which it had to offer. He would pay for the showy student to the neglect of his own children who might score high if given a chance. This proposed policy of abridging educational opportunities in Nebraska seems wholly undemocratic.

Article to Appear

In Harper's Soon
Mrs. Emma Schemel, former Wayne county resident and mother of Miss Margaret Schemel of Wayne, is co-author of a piece of Nebraska pioneer biography recently purchased by Harper's magazine. Her sketch was created from notes and reminiscences of Mrs. Bertha Von Bergen, Platte county pioneer and "connection" of Mrs. Schemel. It is to appear in a forthcoming issue of Harper's. This is the second recognition of her literary work within the year according to Mrs. Schemel by a first class magazine of nationwide circulation. Her first article was a translated narrative taken from the 17th century travel-log of a Swiss physician-ancestor of Mrs. Schemel, who made an early voyage to America. The article, checked for accuracy by the German department of Harvard university, was acknowledged by the New England Historical society as a valuable contribution to earliest history.

Mrs. Schemel is now gathering material for a biography which will center around her father, one of Platte county and Nebraska's earliest physicians.

Colson Hatchery Plans for Season

A new two-room brooding system has been installed in the Colson hatchery recently with one of the large incubators being moved to make room for it. The room to house the chicks for the first week will carry a temperature of 90 degrees while the room for chicks over one week old will be 80 or 85 degrees. The chicks will harden off, ready for the brooder house. Recessing has also been done. All chicks are hatched in Smith type incubators. Over 50 flocks have been culled and blood-tested. The incubator capacity has been increased to 154,000 eggs, and an extra 16,000-egg incubator can be set up.

Min Ishihara of California, Japanese sexer, will be with the Colson hatchery. Mr. Ishihara carries a certificate of 97 per cent accuracy from the International Baby Chick association, so all orders will have a guarantee of 90 per cent true to sex.

A turkey brooder house 18 by 60 feet was installed at the turkey farm.

DICTATORS.

Dictator-ruled countries have revived war between church and state. For years prior to the enthronement of totalitarian governments, religious tolerance increased. People generally were not questioned as to their beliefs or instrumentalities of worship. We were apparently moving steadily toward one brotherhood and one spiritual hope. In the last few years ruling tyrants, worse than the czars of the middle ages, have forced an ideology that places demands of the state above those of God. First the Jews, a minority, are outraged by a ruthless plan to exterminate them. Now comes the attack on Catholics with threats to Protestants. The young in dictator nations are separated from the church if possible, and they are led in the direction of paganism. Reason for a clash between church and state is inconceivable on the ground of present and future society. Religious freedom will survive as it has survived in the past, though often after a severe struggle. Religious zeal is the strongest zeal in the world, and it cannot be crushed under the heels of earth-bound despots. Like Napoleon, dictators, turning deaf ears to sense or reason, will meet their Waterloo.

THE VOICE OF RELIGION

Current Questions and Answers about Religion, Morals and Personal Problems by WELDON F. CROSSLAND Rochester, New York

1. What do Protestant Christians mean when they repeat the words "The Holy Catholic Church" in the Apostles' Creed?

They mean "The Holy, Christian or Universal Church," which includes all Christians of all communions.

The word "catholic" comes from the Greek "katholikos" through the Latin "catholicus" which means "universal, general and world-wide. St. Augustine wrote in about 415 A. D., "In Greek that is called 'catholic,' which is spread through all the world," though the word has been used to describe the universal Christian church for many generations.

Before the separation of the eastern and western parts of the Christian church, the word "catholic" was universally used. At the time of the division, the western church officially took the title "Catholic" while the eastern church adopted the epithet "Orthodox."

The three Christian communions or churches that make up "The Holy Catholic Church," in the Protestant understanding of the Creed, are the Roman Catholic church with 331,500,000 communicants, the Protestant church with 206,900,000 members and the Greek Orthodox Catholics with 144,000,000 communicants.

While some Christians prefer to substitute the word "Christian" for the word "Catholic," most prefer the word made acceptable by centuries of use.

2. Is there more hypocrisy in politics today than in religion?

In my judgment there is a vast amount more in politics today than in religion.

Hypocrisy is "An act or practice of feigning to be what one is not," (Webster). It is play-acting for the purpose of deception.

Would you consider any of the following politicians to be tainted or tarred with the brush of hypocrisy?

1. The candidate, who runs for office on a given platform and then repudiates it after election.

2. The candidate, who makes promises he knows can never be redeemed, that he may win the votes of some minority pressure group.

3. The candidate, who promises to cut expenditures or balance a state budget, but who after election makes no sincere effort to do so.

4. The politician, who practices corruption and favoritism.

5. The law enforcement officer, who winks

FORTUNES FOR EVERYBODY
When we use the word "Fortune" it is generally understood to mean "Great Wealth." How erroneous this connotation is!
Fortunes are found in so many other places: glowing health for instance. The person who has vibrant, tingling, sparkling vitality, whose body responds to the urge of life—that person has a fortune.
Another variety of fortune is the ability of a minister to sway his congregation to exultation. That man has a fortune which he shares with his parishioners; he gives them mental food, faith, and seasons their life with an essence of the word of God.
Here is the Father who has a fortune in the smiles of his baby. His days are occupied with mundane things but at certain times he comes home to the love of his child. What greater fortune can there be than this?
Then there is the doctor: a man like you and me but he sits as upon a throne of judgment, fighting away that pestiferous death during those few small hours of night, arising from a chair beside a bed in the morning to calmly announce, "The crisis is passed. He'll be all right now!" He has given back a fortune a life.
Fortunes should not be measured by any standard of materialism, they belong in the realm of the mind.

travel, etc., and each of the larger group has a stage carpenter. The rodeo theme was featured in costuming and numbers used by the group here.
Major Checks All.
All the performers on the Bowes units must appear before the major. Most of them are amateurs who need jobs and they are on Major Bowes' regular radio hour program. Often one or two numbers will be needed to fill out a unit and the major picks these from talent appearing before him so as to balance the unit's features and make a full offering.
About seven groups are now on the road. Units usually stay together from one to two years. Occasionally the group will be changed as an amateur may be obliged to leave because of illness. Sometimes, too, an individual or team will be selected for parts in movies. An harmonica team that was with the Rodeo unit was taken by the movies when the group visited southern California. The opposite is often also true, commented Mr. Leigh. Someone who has had movie experience but has been unfortunate of late may be picked up by one of the units and carried on until other work is found.
Booking offices are maintained in Chicago, Minneapolis, New York and other central points through the country and theatres book the units by contacting these offices. Through these offices Mr. March secured the program for Wayne.
All performers and others with the units are required in cities to join the unions of their professions, though this is not true in smaller places. Each performer receives a fixed salary and pays for all his expenses except transportation. Travel is usually by train, but the unit in Wayne is taking a bus for its spring tour to the north because it is difficult to make train connections on the route planned.
Mr. Leigh, whose home is in Denver, formerly lived at Vermilion, S. D.

Breaks Gavel in Restoring Order

That the Townsend plan caused riotous debate last Thursday in the legislature at Lincoln is proved by the fact that Lieutenant Governor Wm. E. Johnson broke his gavel in pounding for order. And when the head flew off the gavel it struck Clerk Hugo Srb on the back of the neck. Both Johnson and Srb are former Wayne college students.

Two Men Winners In Corn Contest

R. T. Utech, Wakefield, achieved the distinction of winning first place in Wayne county in the DeKalb corn growing contest during this season. Mr. Utech's yield, figured on No. 2 corn basis, was 110.96 bushels per acre.

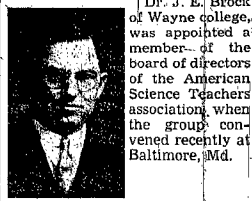

John Lorenzen of Wayne, won second place in the county. His yield, also on No. 2 basis, was 87.99 bushels per acre.

To arrive at these yields, representative sections of the fields were husked, the corn shelled, a moisture test taken and the yield figured on a basis of 15.5 percent moisture, which is equivalent to No. 2 corn. Two people not directly connected with the contest checked the yield and results were signed by a notary public.

Winner of the contest in the entire corn belt was John Byson of Algona, Iowa, with a yield of 178.26 bushels per acre. Nebraska state winner was Louis Stevens of Hartington, with 132.46 bushels.

Southern Region Rich in Oil and Products Growth

Oil fields, raising vegetables in winter and cotton in summer make the vicinity around Corpus Christi, Texas, very productive, according to Dot Surber who was here visiting last week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Surber. Mr. Surber is employed in the oil industry which operates many rich fields there. Abundant rains in winter make this a favorable season for growing vegetables which are shipped all over the country, and rains come late enough in spring to start the cotton which grows through the summer with very little moisture.

The snow of last week delighted 4-year-old Sonia Surber who doesn't have the pleasure of playing in snow in Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Surber and Sonia left Monday for their home.

Impressions of Hawaiian School Gained Through Honolulu Paper

"Ka Keelikolani," a four-page printed paper published twice a month by students in Central Intermediate school in Honolulu, Hawaii, presents a word picture of activities in the school attended by 1,811 young folks between the ages of 11 and 19. When it is realized that the largest percentage of the students are of Japanese ancestry, the paper printed in English appears more remarkable. Though the Hawaiian language is most picturesque, the paper comments that "inasmuch as we are operating under the American school system, it seems to us to be advisable to write the language as well as possible."

The paper, the issue of January 13, came to Jacqueline Wightman from Isabella Gueso, an Hawaiian girl with whom she corresponds regularly. Some of the names appearing on the staff are Grace Wong, Lily Lui, Jane Okamoto, Chiyu Chi, Frances Au, Peggy Yonita, Shuzuko Ouchi.

The paper tells that according to a survey made, the age of 14 predominates with 588 in school. Twenty are foreign born, and the racial descent with the least number enrolled in Spanish.

Have New Building.
A new soundproof and fireproof concrete building, costing $46,000, is nearing completion for the intermediate grades. The structure will be complete in 150 days after it was started.

A news story in the edition reports on the students who finished the ninth grade in the school in 1938. Of the 630 graduates, 575 are attending high schools, business schools, sewing schools or private schools. Ten are working in manufacturing or mechanical industries, six are in commercial employment, seven are engaged in personal service, 18 are unemployed, one is a fisherman, one is married, one has died and several have left the territory.

Link With Past Is Gone.
"Last Friday saw the end of a link with past Hawaiian history on Central's campus," the paper states. "It was a hot summer day during the reign of Queen Emma when a servant boy ran out into the courtyard of Ka Keelikolani palace and quickly filled the calabash with pure, cool water. This done, he sped back into the palace into the presence of her royal highness, Queen Emma, who drank it thirstily. Day after day and year after year this well supplied the palace with water for cleaning and various purposes. This well was torn down when the grounds were transferred to the department of public instruction. Where the majestic palace once stood the Central grammar school came into existence. As the years rolled by the well was forgotten." The story strobed by fire which is thought to have started from the kitchen range. The loss is estimated at $5,000. The Kerns were away when the fire broke out.

When cold storms are blowing I will not complain, because in the spring the warm sun and rain will wake up the flowers and shake out the trees and bring back the birds and the fat buzzing bees. Each morning I'll try, when I start off to school, to learn all my lessons, obey every rule, to love everybody so they will love me, and always remember quite unselfishly to share all my joys; and each bedtime I'll say, 'I thank you, dear Father, for this happy day.'"

FRAMED SKETCH TO BE AWARDED

Drawing Depicting Wayne County to Be Given to Essay Winner.

Wayne county's drawing in the feature bears several sketches and inscriptions. One sketch is of J. R. Russell, pioneer who homesteaded in the county before it was organized. Another is of a woman and child who succumbed to prairie fires. The inscription reads, "Prairie fires took their toll in the destruction of property and stock but human lives as well. In one fire a mother trying to save her child was caught by the flame and both perished." This refers to the death of October 13, 1878, of Mrs. W. C. Durin and daughter, Anna, farm center of the drawing is a sketch of Anthony Wayne with this inscription, "Wayne county was named for 'Mad' Anthony Wayne, American Revolutionary general." Beside another sketch, a map of Nebraska with Wayne county marked, is the statement, "Wayne county was organized by proclamation of Governor Butler in the fall of 1870." The fifth sketch is that of a woman delivering a sermon to a group of eager listeners, and the drawing bears these words, "The first sermon in Wayne county was preached by a woman."

Mr. Decker urges teachers and pupils to plan now for the contest as the award will be of great value to the school receiving it.
