Social Contacts Are Important

Dr. L. F. Findlay Addresses Kiwanis Club Monday On Dean's Work.

Dr. J. F. Findlay, who is at the Wayne college from the University of Oklahoma for the summer, addressed the Kiwanis club Monday on his work as dean of men at the university. The office of dean does not deal with discipline problems of a school now. He helps with the problems of finance, religion, personal difficulties at home, choosing of a vocation and others. It is a man to man relationship.

On the Oklahoma school campus are 7,000 students with two men to every woman. Some of these men belong to fraternities but the others are in rooming houses around the campus. When the depression hit in 1929, men came to school there, according to Dr. Findlay, living from hand to mouth just to receive an education. Boys would leave the school better acquainted than when they came. The good things such as social life and mixing with the other students were neglected.

Dr. Findlay's assistant in his office suggested that something should be done for the non-fraternity boys. Suggestions of the assistant were: Provide a social program to get acquainted and give some taste of campus life; conduct intra-mural activities; do something for the man coming to the campus who gets discouraged.

The plan was finally worked out and adopted to divide the territory around the campus where the men were rooming, into districts, each with a head or organizer and a board of directors. In order to take part in intra-murals, money had to be raised to buy the equipment, so parties were given, and a small admission price charged. Later a newspaper, was published every two weeks, telling of the coming events.

The organization was called Independent Men's association. An affirmative name was wanted rather than an anti-organization. The idea has spread until 70 campuses were represented at the last national convention. The major number of hours in a student's week is spent in the class room, so the other should be used to develop character in making acquaintances, according to Dr. Findlay.

John Volk of Williston, N. D., was a guest of Wm. Beckenhauer and Harold Johnson, of Dr. J. C. Johnson's.

Couple Married In Wayne Sunday

Miss Elsie Hammer Is Bride Of Werner Sunderman at Parsonage Here.

Miss Elsie Hammer, daughter of Ed. Hammer of near Wayne, and Mr. Werner Sunderman, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Sunderman of Pender, were married at Our Redeemer's Lutheran parsonage in Wayne Sunday afternoon, August 6, at 2 o'clock with Rev. W. F. Most performing the double ring service.

The bride was attractively gowned in a floor-length dress of white satin made with high neck line, lace yolk and long, lace-trimmed sleeves. She wore a white tulle veil made with a lace-trimmed elbow-length cape and carried a bride's bouquet of pink roses. For something old she wore a brooch; for something new, a lace handkerchief; for something borrowed, a gold bracelet belonging to her aunt; and for something blue, ribbons of blue in her hair.

Miss Mary Alice Hammer, cousin of the bride, served as bridesmaid. She wore a floor-length dress of blue chiffon made with a shirred bodice and she had blue ribbons in her hair. Her shoulder corsage was of pink roses.

Alvin Sunderman was best man for his brother. The men wore dark suits with boutonnières of pink roses.

A wedding supper was served at 5 at Hotel Stratton for the bridal couple and their attendants, also for Mr. and Mrs. John Sunderman, Johnny and Delores of Pender, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hammer and Shirley. A wedding dance was held in Farmers hall near Pender, in the evening.

Parity Payment Available Soon

The purpose of the rye loan is to enable farmers to keep part of their crops on the farm for feeding purposes, for seed or for sale at higher prices later on, rather than being forced to sell at a low market.

The loan is being made on farm-stored rye, grading No. 2 or better. A storage allowance of 7c per bushel for the period ending July 1, 1940, will be paid to producers who deliver the rye to the Commodity Credit corporation upon settlement of the loan. The rye loan is a demand loan, and it will be possible to call the loans at any time to supply food or seed for grain or cover crops. Farmers will receive the full storage amount of 7c per bushel if the loans are called before July 1, 1940. The rye loans, like wheat and corn loans, are made at 4 percent interest and may be repaid in cash or by delivering rye. Those wishing rye loans apply to the county ACP committee.

Card of Thanks. To all who so thoughtfully remembered me during my stay in the hospital I wish to express my sincere appreciation. Mrs. Oberlin Morris.

Economy Needs

THE WORLD-HERALD calls attention to the fact that while the late session of congress appropriated thirteen billions of dollars, the president is holding members responsible for any ills that may follow failure to spend four additional billions.

Appraising past performances and pointing out disappointing results, the World-Herald says: "For six and a half years the spending policy has been pursued on a prodigiously lavish scale. It has not brought recovery. It has not cut out the unemployment cancer. It has not restored agriculture. It has discouraged and frightened commerce and industry. It has not solved the pitiful problem of the poor. It has not recognized the doors of opportunity. About all it has achieved is rescue of the workless and destitute from starvation. And this, under any administration, under any policy, would be the inescapable duty of government to the very last dollar of its means."

Speaking of official responsibility, the World-Herald points a warning in these concluding words:

"An indictment will lie, however, against the congress and the president alike, if in the next session appropriations are not actually cut down to the point where it is possible to fight our way back to financial solvency in government. For a continuance of mounting deficit spending means, in the end, calamity for both the government and the people."

Relief Figures

IN DISCUSSING the course of national relief costs and results, the Saturday Evening Post speaks of "unthinking and inexperienced humanitarianism." It mentions that in six years the government has spent around $20,000,000,000 for relief. The colossal scale of national philanthropy is told in these impressive figures: "We started with about 21,000,000 recipients in early 1933; it was the low point of the worst depression in history, yet we now have 22,000,000 recipients. We started spending about $1,000,000,000 a year in 1933; we are now spending $4,000,000,000 a year."

Bad as the record appears, the Post offers this hopeful paragraph:

"Yet the hardy optimist will find a gleam of hope even in this seemingly disheartening situation. The final feature of the picture—the apathy of the public—can and may swiftly change. It has happened before in American public opinion, and one cannot be pessimistic about democratic processes, to believe that prolonged recklessness, in such a vital matter as relief, will not bring its own nemesis."

Congress Adjourns

CONGRESS adjourned Saturday, and the president issued a note of appreciation and good wishes to members. In another breath he condemned the coalition between republicans and democrats that accomplished the defeat of measures which he had ordered passed. Now he may go before the people to explain the merits of his huge lending-spending bill and other proposed legislation in the belief that popular pressure will force enactments during the next session. On the other hand, administration critics think the country has been fed up on wild spending and restraints on private enterprise without increasing employment or developing prosperity, and will therefore, flank movement to effect a change to economy, sanity and sense in government.

The time is fast approaching when the die will be cast with reference to the corn crop. Many fields are hopelessly damaged, and others promise some returns. The condition grows worse as one goes south and better as one moves north. More rain would help. Silos will be in popular use again. The idea of giving up and moving out in the presence of defeated expectations is proved unwise by the fact that one locality may be fortunate now and unfortunate next year. The least favored last year may be the most favored this year. North river counties and South Dakota—in despair in past years—are now encouraged by the best of prospects. If one moved to keep up with the special favors of nature, he would be coming or going all the time.

Even in rural communities where agriculture makes the main contribution to trade volume, payrolls are important. The college payroll means much to Wayne. In less degree, every private or public enterprise that employs one or more persons, is a valuable help to business. Large centers are constantly angling for more and greater payrolls, and smaller communities may well do likewise.

If true, as the president claims in defense of defeated spending programs, that the livelihood of 20,000,000 persons is thus placed in jeopardy, it is evident that the country has slipped rather than progressed in attaining the objectives of recovery. He says he hopes congress' judgment is sound, and we believe it is sound.

An abundance of rain has fallen lately in southern and central sections of the state, but probably it has come too late to help the corn which is generally too far out of the picture to be revived, the miracle of raising the dead having largely gone out of fashion since the raising of Lazarus. Aquarius, rain god, has been sadly out of step with the seasons.

The likeness of Senator Pepper of Florida, appearing in the press following his fiery philippic over new deal defeats, removes any surprise that might otherwise be felt. The accompanying picture of Senator Burke, who offered dignified resentment, presents a sharp contrast in qualities of statesmanship.

European nations are investing millions in war armaments, and are eyeing one another suspiciously. But the waste will not be so great as it would be if they have to use the equipment.

In seeking renomination, Senator Burke will doubtless try to restore the democratic party to democracy.

Want in Land of Plenty

(Omaha Journal-Stockman) Strange as it may seem this country is the only nation on earth where food is so plentiful and hunger so general. Apparently the problem is too much for the economists and little progress is being made in solving the difficulty. The orange and blue card system of disposing of surplus food products was a noble experiment and now it is proposed to extend the system by giving "all families having less than $1,000 a year income." This will, of course, be effective in reducing our burdensome surplus of food products but its effect on producers and legitimate food dealers is problematical.

Merchant, Chief, Doctor, Lawyer.

(Nation's Business) Now comes Solicitor General Jackson with the claim that lawyers' fees are so high that the submerged third cannot enjoy their services, so the Bar had better do something about it, or else—

This completes the cycle. Doctoring costs too much, so we must have state medicine; potatoes and gingham dresses cost too much, so we must have government cooperatives and consumer councils; the lowly kilowatt, the flotation of a bond issue, the insurance policy, bank interest—all cost too much and so the Government, with a big G, must do the job. There is always to be found some demagog to indict the work and wages of every supplier of goods and services—except one! That one supplier may get his in the end—the supplier of Government. His costs have jumped from $19 per capita in 1900 to $137 per capita in 1939. And as for the quality of the article, even one of the high-priced lawyers Mr. Jackson complains of would have a difficult job to convince a jury of taxpayers that there has been that much improvement in government.

Mr. Roosevelt's Own Bill.

(New York Herald-Tribune) Everybody, it seems, was mistaken about the president and the Hatch bill. Everybody, that is, except the president. Not only has he signed it, but in signing it he gave the distinct impression that it was the child of his heart, and that he fought for the principles contained in it, to these last thirty years. Any one who implies that he ever had any doubts about it is nothing but an ignorant editor, radio commentator or republican. He himself has proclaimed it "a step in the right direction." So that, at last, is that.

We confess to being duly chastened. We were misled. We made the mistake of believing the democratic party's famous publicity agent, Charlie Michelson, who passed around word to "the boys" a number of weeks ago that the Hatch bill went too far and must be emasculated or killed. Knowing Mr. Michelson's record we admit we ought not to have made this mistake. But when the president at his press conference ten days ago made it perfectly clear that he was displeased with much of the bill we took this displeasure to imply that he had his doubts about it. For this mistake, also, we have no excuse. Past experience should have warned us that Mr. Roosevelt today is rarely if ever Mr. Roosevelt tomorrow. Our fault lies in failing to keep up with the chameleon.

As a matter of fact our stupidity is numbing. We were of the impression that the New Deal's exemption of an entire army of office holders from the civil service restrictions was not unconnected with politics. We had believed that the Roosevelt administration was glad to have hundreds of thousands of men and women on the federal pay roll beholden to it, who could be mobilized in preparation for campaigns. We had thought that the manner in which government hand-outs were speeded up before critical elections had some relation to these elections. We had thought that relief money had been used for partisan purposes in Kentucky, Pennsylvania and elsewhere. We had even secretly admired the unparalleled skill in turning every move and every appointment to political advantage which has so consistently displayed.

But in all this we were mistaken. These things either did not occur, or were the work of evil men (query: were they old and did they drink whisky and play poker?) and ran directly counter to the lifer's dreams, ambitions and activities of Franklin D. Roosevelt. For many years, he tells us, he has striven in public life and in private life "for decency in political campaigns, both on the part of government servants, of candidates, of newspapers, of corporations and of individuals." This is why he welcomes the Hatch bill.

It is impertinent to inquire why, under the circumstances, this bill was opposed by administration leaders, and why it was not signed by the president forthwith upon its receipt, without hiding the nation in suspense for a week and resorting to two columns of explanation in justification of his signature?

HAY FEVER.

At this time when hay fever victims talk with difficulty through their noses, we are reminded by a leaflet from the American Foundation of Animal Health that dumb animals suffer from similar allergies. Veterinarians urge human sufferers who are leaving for non-allergic regions, not to forget also to look-out for the health of their dogs, cats, pigs, cows, sheep and other creatures that lack the vocal equipment to explain how they feel. "Cows grazing on turnips, buckwheat and certain weeds get the 'hives,' due to an allergy," says the report. It would thus seem advisable in journeying to the mountains to escape the allergy evil to take the dairy herd along. Some pig varieties—notably those of light complexion—are said to develop erysipelas through attack from lurking allergy jimps while feeding on leaty forage. Separate traveling quarters may be provided for the pigs. Horses and dogs are also just as sensitive to allergies as the rest of us, and they should of course be included in any transportation arrangement.

Hobbies

(Continued from Page One.) Manager M. C. Bloss is devoting all his time to working out details, and he is meeting with an abundance of encouraging cooperation. The fair will be the place to see what Wayne county can produce under rather adverse conditions. It will be the place for lovers and judges of livestock to appraise specimens raised in this county. It will be the time and place to relax, renew acquaintances and exchange experiences. Despite another unpropitious crop year in many sections, the fair may be made a big success.

LABOR DEMANDS.

What labor unions want are laws and rules that work one way, and that that one way must be in the direction of the organization's every demand. The union must be allowed to increase its stranglehold on business and industry, and if there is any let-up on hamstringing the latter, threats of reprisals instantly appear. Failure of congress, just adjourned, to accede to the demands of union forces, has brought announcement that the record of every candidate for the 1940 election will be investigated, and support at the polls will be given accordingly. Doubtless labor organization has been needed to secure certain merited rights, but in recent years it has used its power beyond reason and imposed more on employing institutions than they could stand, defeating what should be labor's real purpose and retarding return of the country to a sound, prosperous condition. Congress finally got around to see the injustice to those who manage business and furnish employment, and so, in giving overdue consideration to this important source of productive activity, it has enraged labor unions. Thus, forces will likely line up on two sides to determine whether labor organizations with excessive demands, shall be allowed to dominate the country with cold disregard of other necessary interests, or not.

THE VOICE of RELIGION

Current Questions and Answers About Religion, Morals and Personal Problems

by Dr. Weldon F. Crossland Rochester, New York

Do irreligious people get along better than religious ones?

No. In the broad sense of truly successful living, the person with a practical religious faith can out-think, out-live and out-love the individual who has no faith.

If by "getting along better" one means making more money in a limited time or securing a contract or promotion with no regard for the methods used, then one would freely admit that an irreligious person could prosper for a period. The irreligious person can always out-distance a truly religious one in dishonesty, deceit and sharp dealing, because he has no inhibitions or principles which he feels under obligation to observe.

The religious person feels bound by a set of ideals such as integrity, honesty, service and goodwill. His conscience restrains him from using all methods in securing an immediate end. The Christian for example is duty-bound to act in a Christlike manner in all his dealings.

Religious people sometimes grow envious of irreligious ones as the latter seem to prosper. The Good Book offers this wise counsel: "Be not envious of the evildoer, for he shall soon be cut off; any person who has a vital religious faith can succeed far beyond what he could without it. If he will devote the same amount of energy, time, thought and devotion to any given situation he will win in the long run. And he will hold the respect of others as well as of himself.

Why don't we live up to our best intentions? Sometimes we do! And when we do life becomes a glorious achievement and a song of victory.

Many times we fall far below our best. Why do we?

1. Because old habits assert their domination and we drop to lower levels of living. Habit of course is either one's chief asset or one's most serious liability. Bad habits of thought or life can best be corrected by the method of substitution, by the formation of good ones.

Only about three days are required to form either a good habit or a bad one.

2. Because one fails to control his imagination. The imagination is stronger in producing action in most people than is the will. Pictures which fancy paints on the wall of the mind compel. Vivid imaginings have about them a strange fascination, whether for good or for ill.

3. Because of the company one keeps. When one is merged with the mass, he usually pitches life on lower levels. The crowd one moves with strongly influences one's ideals and conduct. Best of all groups, the Christian church enhances individuality by supporting it with the influence of other Christ-minded personalities.

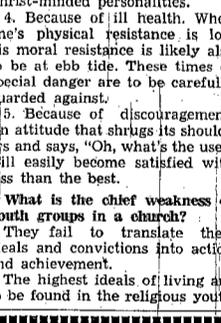

4. Because of ill health. When one's physical resistance is low his moral resistance is likely also to be at ebb tide. These times of special danger are to be carefully guarded against.

5. Because of discouragement. An attitude that shrugs its shoulders and says, "Oh, what's the use," will easily become satisfied with less than the best.

What is the chief weakness of youth groups in a church?

They fail to translate their ideals and convictions into action and achievement.

The highest ideals of living are to be found in the religious youth groups of America. Clean living and wholesome speech, unselfish service for humanity, peace among the nations and the growing, abundant personal life expressing itself in active goodwill toward all nations, creeds and colors are among these high aims of youth. If each church had the daring statesmanship and the vision to lead youth to apply these principles in practical ways to definite projects, a mighty impression could be made on American life in one decade.

Youth idealistically desires a great cause to which it can devote its talents. In Germany Italy and Russia the drive of youth has been channeled to delve a narrow nationalism. In America youth cannot be so regimented by force but can be guided by intelligent leadership into a promised land of highest achievement.

Some progress has already been made by individual churches in closest cooperation with young people.

Agricultural Notes

Chester Walters, Wayne County Greth Dunn, Dixon County

Some susceptible varieties of sorghums can be damaged by chinch bugs, according to experiments at the agricultural college. The date of seeding makes considerable difference. Even susceptible varieties have escaped damage when planted before June 1. Early seedings are recommended in counties where chinch bugs are a menace and late seedings in other counties.

Large yields of hay are being obtained from meadow strips used to control erosion on sloping fields of many Nebraska farms. The meadow strips across slopes are alternated with strips of cultivated crops, serving as barriers to wind and water erosion while producing feed.

They are usually uneven in width, eliminating the necessity of point rows in cultivated strips. Farmers who have had experience with meadow strips report it takes but little more time to harvest hay from them than from fields planted solidly to grass, and the extra feed per acre is in most cases sufficient to offset the additional cost of harvesting. Water that escapes from cultivated areas, spreads onto the meadow strips and penetrates the soil. The additional moisture is responsible for added grass growth.

Nebraska's three 4-H club poultry teams competing in the world poultry congress at Cleveland, rated excellent. Doris and Elsie Bamesberger of Hamilton county, were on the consumption team; Marvin Slaughter and Margery Rees of Holt county, on production; and George Fisher, Verona Weichman and Marion Farley of Cuming county, on the other.

Very good "fills" have been made where stubble fields were plowed with a small strip left in the middle and poison spread there. If the thistles and weeds aren't destroyed and the hoppers aren't poisoned, they will go into adjoining fields. Poison spread on stubble fields and idle land will be well worthwhile to cut down infestation. Wayne county has plenty of supplies to continue mixing bait.

test, outyielded other varieties at the state test plot in Lincoln. It has a stiff straw, is tolerant of Hessian fly attack and has good milling and baking qualities. It is susceptible to stem rust so that many eastern Nebraska growers prefer another variety.

Fall seedings of pastures are decidedly superior to spring plantings with commonly recommended pasture grasses such as brome, according to experiments. They have the advantage of being well established when the critical summer heat and drought strike. There are some seasons, however, when fall months are dry and when grasshoppers are so numerous that fall seeding is not practical. If fall seeding is attempted it should be established before cold weather. Planting should be done about August 20 to the middle of September. A well-prepared, pulverized, packed seedbed free from weeds is best. Of the cultivated grasses available, a mixture of brome grass and alfalfa is considered best.

Flock owners who plan to sell their lambs in April, May or early June will breed their ewes during August and September.

Baking vegetables, whole or sliced, in baking dishes usually proves an excellent method of preserving food value and appearance. Miss Mabel Doremus, extension specialist, points out that steaming is especially good for carrots, parsnips, squash and beets. Lifting the cover several times to let steam escape will preserve the color and improve the flavor. Green vegetables will keep their color best if boiled in salted water in an uncovered saucepan until tender. Use a little or no water when cooking greens and rutabagas will not taste watery if just enough is used to keep them from burning. Red vegetables often turn brown in hard water so a little vinegar is sometimes added. Strong-juiced vegetables like onions, cauliflower, cabbage and brussels sprouts, will have a mild, pleasing flavor if cooked in a large amount of boiling salted water just until tender in an uncovered pan.

CONGRESS

KARL STEFAN

Nebraska will be well represented at the Interparliamentary Union at Oslo. Senator Burke is the first vice-president of the American group and, in addition, Nebraska will have as delegates the Third district member and Harry Coffey of the Fifth district. The United States is entitled to 28 delegates and thus far 25 have been named—six senators and 19 representatives. Only members of the house and senate can be delegates from this nation. The delegation is fairly well divided between republicans and democrats although the members of the minority party in the house will have a slight majority of the delegation. The American delegates will formulate their views on matters of vital interest in connection with world peace and neutrality to be discussed at the conference, such as promotion of peace by arbitration, judicial settlement, and international law; outlawing bombing of defenseless cities and safeguarding food ships and reduction and limitation of armament. Because of the world situation the Oslo conference is expected to be one of the most important ever held by the Union in its 50 years of activity. The foreign refugee problem will be one of the major subjects discussed at the conference. The Interparliamentary Union was founded in 1889 for the purpose of bringing representatives of the parliaments of the world together to promote common understanding of problems of such nature as require cooperation and mutual confidence between nations. The Union's fundamental aim has always been to work for the establishment of lasting peace and, in so doing, to stand, also, for the preservation of the representative system as the best protection of human liberty. In later years, responsive to the increasing complexity of world conditions, it has broadened the scope of its activity to include all of those questions that bear upon the problem of peace between nations.

The Third district member has accepted two appointments—one, as a delegate to the Oslo conference and, the other, as representative of congress to investigate expenditures in our foreign missions. In that capacity he will travel to various countries on the continent and must report by September 15. This makes it necessary for him to arrive in Hamburg, Germany, on August 8, and for ten days he will visit numerous American missions in Germany in order to be on hand at Oslo, Norway, in time for the opening program of the conference on August 14. He will leave Oslo on August 18, for the continent and after several weeks' investigation, south of Berlin, he will return home.

The delegates who will represent the United States at the Oslo conference include: Senators Greene, Rhode Island; Holt, West Virginia; O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Pepper, Florida; Townsend, Delaware; Wiley, Wisconsin; Representatives Fish, New York (representative of the American group), Lanham, Texas; Caldwell, Florida; Knutson, Minnesota; McMullan, South Carolina; Short, Missouri; Church, Illinois; Coffey, Nebraska; Harrington, Iowa; Holmes, Massachusetts; Johnson, Indiana; Kennedy, New York; Rabaut, Michigan; Reed, New York; Stearns, New Hampshire; Treadwell, Massachusetts; Wigglesworth, Massachusetts; Woodruff, Michigan; and Stefan, Nebraska.

The hogs and lard producers of the country are faced with the greatest carry-over of hog lard in our history. This food product which since earliest times has furnished the brain and brawn of our people, is now going into the soap kettles of the nation. Lard substitutes, with fancy names, made from imported fats, are flooding our American markets, while normal lard exports of over 900,000,000 pounds annually have shrunk to about 300,000,000 pounds. In the face of the tremendous stocks on hand, and in spite of the tremendous decline in our lard exports, there is at this moment coming into production now on the hoof in our corn belt states, one of the greatest crops of hogs and lard ever produced. What can be done about it? Congressmen from the corn belt area met last week in conference to discuss the situation. We learned that 5 million hogs are now on the hoof in the south, raised upon acres that formerly grew cotton. Also, that some 2 billion pounds of competitive oils and fats were imported last year. A committee was appointed to study the problem of the corn belt farmer, and to urge that lard be placed upon the surplus products list to be bought and dispersed as other staple surplus products are under our present surplus commodity purchase act.

Our own country is not lagging in expenditures for war purposes, although Great Britain, with about one-third our population, is spending twice as much. Its bill now runs to 10 million dollars a day for military and naval purposes, while our own gets by on a scant 8 millions every 24 hours.

For the same purposes. Our naval department states that it has 101 warships under construction and still more to come. War preparations cost a lot—and a war even more.

Included in the 101 new war vessels will be eight battleships. Their cost alone will be in excess of 600 millions or just about 100 millions more than the soil conservation payments to all the states in the union, which the eastern press so frequently mentions as one of the most upsetting things to the national budget. In fact, the cost of a single submarine made under the AAA program to all the farmers in Nebraska and Minnesota in the past five years. All the payments to farmers, the next fiscal year, will not exceed five percent of the total appropriations of this congress.

The Hatch bill will not deprive any government worker of his right to think as he pleases nor vote as he cares to. It stops the regimentation of such employees under the control and domination of party bosses and their agents. It serves to lessen the influence of political appointees in national conventions. It stops the handling by party committees and candidates for party funds from employees. It serves to make dangerous to manipulators the kind of election tactics which made some cities and a few states nationally notorious for wrongs committed in primaries and general elections. The purpose of those in government service will not be thwarted in their expressions by their ballots, but it frees them from the coercive tactics and methods which have been used by party organizations for a century or more since the slogan, "to the victors belong the spoils," became party dictum and bolstering victory by the "spoils" became party custom.

There are nearly a million federal officials on the payrolls. It is intended that they shall be protected from political spoilsmen and henchmen, and that they shall not be made a mere part of political machinery indirectly financed by taxpayers' money. The Hatch bill may not be a panacea for political wrongs and misdeeds, but certainly it should be a big step in the right direction.

Our federal export-import bank has agreed to advance credits to Paraguay to finance road construction in that country. This again raises a question that was asked when the Brazilian credit agreement was made public last March. That question is, how far does the administration intend to go in providing capital and credit for South American countries, that, to put it bluntly, are poor credit risks. At the present time approximately $357,000,000 worth of bonds issued by Brazil alone are in default. And, taking Latin America as a whole, about $1,350,000,000 of bonds are either in partial or in complete default.

Skilled mechanics are hard to find in this town which shows a record of at least 10 thousand people looking for a job each day. The head of the Central Labor Union here announced that today it is almost impossible to get a structural steel worker or a bricklayer. The reason for that, he says, is because the work is seasonal and present construction activities have absorbed almost every available bricklayer and steel worker.

Adjournment of this session of congress was practically set for August 5; by leaders on both sides of the capitol. The housing bill was ruled out for this session. That left the amendments to the wage and hour bill; the lending and spending bills and some deficiency appropriations for congress to fizzle.

Pender Physician Dies on Monday

Dr. John Buis, 63, Pender physician for 30 years, died Monday of Hodgkin's disease. Last June when Dr. Buis was honored at a meeting of the Cedar-Dixon-Dakota-Wayne-Thurston county medical meeting, he gallantly described for the physicians the symptoms and effects of the disease which he then knew would soon take his life.

Funeral rites were held at Pender Wednesday.

Deceased leaves his wife and six children. His son-in-law is now operating the Pender hospital which Dr. Buis established.

Plays Are Given By College Classes

Dramatic students of the Wayne college presented two one-act plays, "Farewell to Love" and "Two Against the Gods," Tuesday evening at the college. Miss Florence Drake was director.

The first play, "Farewell to Love," is a scene in the dressing room after the closing night of a long and successful show. Ruth Heffinger played the part of the actress and Werner Welchert, the actor. The two were first enthusiastic over their success and then each antagonized the other. The contrasts in the moods and the suspense of knowing the outcome added to the interest in the well-acted play. The end was still a double as to the result of each one's jealousy of his career. Neither wanted to sacrifice his success to the other.

"Two Against the Gods" was a scene in an Egyptian tomb which was being uncovered by a doctor, the part being taken by Flora Beigt. Vera Kalal played the part of the assistant. The former archaeologist, who had been exploring, was killed. As the doctor and assistant are working, a strange mummy-like figure, taken by Delores Bernard, tries to kill them every time they turn their backs. The assistant leaves to go to the hotel for a flash light and she disappears. Later she is found in one of the cases and has adopted the behavior of the strange mummy-like figure which is proved to be the former archaeologist's wife. The play was well acted and well timed.

Governments and Low Prices

(Omaha Journal-Stockman.)

There is a manifest lack of professional interests in the grain markets just at present and this is true of foreign markets as well as of our own. Although both wheat and corn are selling lower than they have sold for five or six years, dealers are not disposed to buy, sell or hold the grain.

The reason for this dullness is evident. The various governments, including our own, are in such complete control that it would be little short of commercial suicide for millers, exporters or speculators to attempt to operate.

Probably two billion dollars or more are being expended by governments annually to control grain prices. Guaranteed minimum prices, export subsidies, loans and other devices are among the plans used in an effort to give farmers a fair return on their grain crops.

Governments have practically destroyed all speculative interest in our national and international grain markets and have thus brought about a condition they have sought to remedy: Farmers are forced to accept the lowest prices on record for some grains.

It looks as if the whole world was getting an object lesson on governmental interference with business, including the business of farming.

What Will Corn Be Worth?

(Omaha Journal-Stockman.)

Nebraska will probably cut little figure in the new corn storage program of the department of agriculture for the simple reason that this state will be more interested in getting enough grain for feeding purposes than in providing additional crib space for the coming crop.

The new steel bins to be provided by the government will be round, with conical shaped tops, and will be ventilated to permit the circulation of air but exclude water. Most of the corn to be stored under the new federal plan will be in Illinois and Iowa. Facilities for storing grain in these states are very largely exhausted and new storage space will be needed to take care of the bumper crop about to be harvested.

Government officials at Chicago said they did not know how many of the bins will be built in this area and said it was too soon to accurately gauge the sentiment of farmers toward the government proposal to extend the corn loans for another year. They were scheduled to expire August 1, but the government offered to renew them and, as an inducement, offered farmers a storage payment of 7 cents a bushel to reseat the grain on the farms.

Farmers have 257 million bushels of 1937 and 1938 crop corn sealed on government loans, of which 27 million bushels are 1937 grain that has been resealed. According to the announcement of the loan renewal, the 1937 corn can be repledged for loans only when shelled, but the 1938 crop can be resealed either as ear or shelled corn.

The cost of shelling corn is usually placed at 1 cent a bushel. Heretofore, most of the shelled corn placed in storage has been stored in elevators. Corn stored on the farms is usually ear corn.

Both farmers and grain men regard farm storage of shelled corn as hazardous and declare the best means of storage is in elevators. Unless properly handled, the corn will absorb moisture and ferment, it is said. Elevator storage costs an average of 7 cents a bushel for a year.

In the meantime the price of the grain this fall is still problematical and prospective live stock feeders in this territory are very much at sea. A good share of the corn used in Nebraska this fall and winter will have to be shipped in and the lack of storage facilities in Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota may result in a lot of cheap grain being thrown on the market.

The government crop report will be out next week but Nebraska stock farmers will be much more interested in the price of the grain than in the quantity produced. There are many smart stock farmers who have always insisted that corn could be bought more cheaply than it could be grown. That theory will be given a test this fall.

Remembering Indian Chief

Chadron, Neb., Aug. 9.—A page from Indian history will come to life in picturesque Pine Ridge area near here next Tuesday.

Prof. E. P. Wilson of Chadron normal college and a group of eager Indian braves will visit the last camp of the great Indian chief Crazy Horse and his band located near the south side of Little Cottonwood creek about three miles southwest of Whitney, between Crawford and Chadron.

It was in the early summer of 1877 that Crazy Horse and his band of 1100 made their last camp there before starvation compelled them to surrender to military authorities at Fort Robinson.

Exact location of the camp will be pointed out by the Indians, some of whom were at the camp more than 62 years ago.

Prof. Wilson is the organizer of the Pine Ridge historical association, sponsors of a project to erect monuments to the Sioux Indian throughout the Pine Ridge area.

Gutzon Borglum, sculptor who hewed the gigantic Mount Rushmore memorial in the Black Hills, is interested in the project, and he and Prof. Wilson have had numerous conferences regarding its development.

The entire Pine Ridge country was the stage on which were enacted the last scenes in the long struggle between the Sioux and white men.

One of the monuments will be erected at the Crazy Horse camp site, and Prof. Wilson believes the old Indian men from the Pine Ridge reservation will be able to point to the exact spot.

State Department Complies

Lincoln, Aug. 8.—The state assistance department forwarded to Washington today a revised "merit system" plan for state-county employees in compliance with federal social security board requirements.

If accepted by the federal board, the setup will be made a part of the "Nebraska plan" and will be binding upon the state and counties.

The plan is, in effect, the one used since the beginning of the merit system with the exception of qualifications for county assistance directors and provisions for promotion of employees in county administration.

The final draft marks the end of long, tedious work on the part of the state assistance administration and the legislature. The merit system was one of the controversial issues in the last unicameral, the lawmakers being reluctant to accede to Washington demands until definite threat was made of withholding federal matching funds.

The upshot was a statewide mass meeting of county officials with legislators and assistance executives. It was then that the plan as now proposed was devised, after it was explained Nebraska must have an acceptable personnel setup to administer the relief program.

Salient features of the plan as submitted to the federal social security board:

1. Minimum qualifications for county assistance directors was changed from two years of college education to that of accredited high school graduation; and five years' training and experience was revised to three years' training and experience in accepted field.

2. County assistance workers may be promoted with the consent and approval of county boards after having satisfactorily performed the first work assigned to them for six months, provided the higher classification meets the approval of the state board of control.

Absurd Housing Plans

(Omaha Journal-Stockman.)

Hundreds of "housing projects" or "slum clearance" programs have been put in by the government during the last few years with a view to providing dwellings for the "submerged third" of our population. All of these projects were supposed to be "self liquidating" but if a single one of them has paid its way it has escaped notice. Omaha is having trouble with its federal housing projects that pay no taxes while they greatly increase the taxpayers' load. These ambitious federal housing projects are highly experimental. They displace slums but make no provision for slum dwellers while they greatly increase tax burdens. It is little wonder, then, that many communities are protesting the extension of these projects.

For Old Age Pensions

(Norfolk Daily News.)

Projection of the old age pension issue into Nebraska's premature political campaign brought these reverberations today on the capitol speculative fronts:

"That Charles W. Bryan, former three term democratic governor, may be a 'pension' gubernatorial candidate again.

"That a breach might develop between the Townsend old age pensions and the newly formed 'National Security at Age 55 Plan, Inc.'

"That the state Townsend league's advocacy of John H. Miller, Lincoln, former republican railway commissioner, for a U. S. senatorial candidate and his announcement that he would file an independent party in an otherwise anticipated 'quiet' G. O. P. primary.

Bryan Won't Talk

"Bryan said he had 'nothing to say at this time.' He was tagged a 'pension' candidate last year, when he ran for governor as an independent, and was known to have Townsendite support.

The Townsend group, which is advocating a transactions tax to finance monthly pensions up to $200, decided at its statewide meeting in Lincoln yesterday to circulate petitions to put a Townsend bill on the 1940 Nebraska election ballot.

Counter to speculation over Bryan, word was going the rounds of the statehouse that Rep. Harry E. Coffey (D-Neb.), Chadron, is being urged to file for governor on the democratic ticket. Coffey voted against the Townsend plan in congress this year.

Should Coffey enter the gubernatorial race, the railbirds foresaw a spirited fight between him and Terry Carpenter, Scottsbluff, who already has filed for the democratic nomination for governor. The contest would be enlivened, the seers pointed out, by the fact both Coffey and Carpenter are "western Nebraska" men.

The National Security at Age 55 Plan, Inc., meanwhile, began circulating of petitions today for a state constitutional amendment to guarantee $30 a month to each person 55 years or over and all blind persons over 16.

In announcing distribution of the first 10,000 petitions for signatures, Edward Keelen, Lincoln, state manager for the age 55 planners, said "we are not tied up with the Townsend organization or any other pension group. However, there are lots of Townsendites coming over to us, but without our asking."

The organization's only objective now, Keelen pointed out, is to obtain the necessary 25,000 signatures in 55 counties to place the proposed constitutional amendment on the November, 1940, ballot.

In Politics Later

"Later on," he added, "we expect to take a hand politically." Approximately 200 persons are expected to aid in the petition campaign, the manager asserted, "about 100 of whom will be volunteers." The remainder," he said, "probably will be paid the usual rate of 5 cents a petition."

There are about fifty-three "full membership" age 55 plan clubs in Nebraska and about 103 "minor clubs." Keelen declared, and all will be enlisted in the drive. Headquarters will be established in Lincoln.

"We plan to put petitions in the state, for people to sign when they come in to confer with the lawyers," the official said.

Statehouse observers wondered what would result from the fact that one of the spearheads of the age 55 plan formerly was a champion of the Townsend movement. He is Thomas E. Bradstreet, Grand Island.

Class Reunion
Is Held Here
Early Friday

Down to the heart of the graduate who finished high school in 1916 were such gifts as fans, hat pins, penants, yokes, souvenir spoons, beauty pins, crocheted bags and silk hose, which were saved for special occasions. It was the graduates of that year, also those of the class of 1914, their husbands and wives, who were guests of Mrs. F. W. Nyberg, at breakfast at Hotel Stratton Friday morning.

Present from the class of 1916 were Captain and Mrs. D. H. Simons of Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga., the latter formerly Ruth Ingham, Ralph Ingham of Alhambra, Calif., Mrs. H. Lynn Tuttle of Clarkston, Wash., formerly Frances Oman, Mrs. Art Herschold of Winside, formerly Helena Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Lylo Gamble, the latter formerly Anna Graquist, Mrs. Herbert Auker, formerly Grace Nettleton, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Milder and the hostess, formerly Dorothy Huse. Representing the class of 1914 were Mrs. Jason L. Gorst of Bridgeport, Neb., formerly Fern Oman, and William R. McCabean, Ralph Ingham took motion pictures of the group.

The "Old Graduate" memory book of 1916 brought recollections of happy sleighing parties, assembly programs, class plays, picnics, etc. This class of 22 has through the years been certain, as have all other classes finishing, that school days for them were the happiest and most memorable of those experienced by any group.

Clippings from The Watchword, their high school paper, were read, including the prophecy, history, will, devotional expressions, future plans. Each member of the class contributed something to the edition. The story of the banquet, written by Olive Huse, only member of the class who has "gone ahead" after thirty, concludes with the toast by Mrs. M. A. Phillips then pronounced, which ended with this:

"May fate serve you well
"Until struggle shall cease—
"Till you sign with Truths pen
"Life a treaty of peace."

To Pick Queen
At Wayne Fair

Coronation Ceremonies Are To Be Featured Last Night of Festival.

Crowning of Wayne county fair queen the closing night of the fall festival, September 9, will be a feature in which officials expect considerable interest. A committee of women will arrange coronation ceremonies.

Identity of the queen will be kept secret until she is presented for the coronation.

Seven young women have been chosen by fair officials to conduct the season ticket sale. They will wear uniforms advertising the festival. For each season ticket sold the girls will receive 1,000 votes toward being queen. Each paid admission at the gate will cast 100 votes for the favorite for queen.

Besides awarding the honor of fair queen to the one with the most votes, the fair will give cash prizes for ticket sales. The girl selling the most and the one placing second will receive these.

The contest closes Friday evening, September 8, at 9 o'clock. Manager M. C. Bloss wishes to have an amateur hour if any interest is shown in this. Those wishing such a program with cash prizes in either vocal or instrumental music are asked to see either Prof. F. C. Reed or Prof. Russel Anderson.

Those wishing to enter the Model T Ford race are urged to get in touch with Mr. Bloss. There must be five or six entries to make this a success. Pony and bicycle races will be staged for boys and girls if there is a demand. These young folks are asked to see Mr. Bloss also if they care to enter.

Draft horse polo teams practiced for their part in the fair this week. Each team will include three draft horses, each with a rider. Brooms will be used to push the ball in the polo game.

Summer Snow Storm Is New
To Two Youths

To be in a snow storm the first day of summer was a new experience to Frank Gamble, Wayne, and Sherm Perry, Los Angeles, who left Wayne June 8 to see western states as cheaply and extensively as possible—by hitchhiking. First the two college graduates stopped at Estes park to attend the Y.M.C.A. conference. Then they stopped at Boulder and Denver before leaving for Salt Lake. The boys had to be crossed and there the youths ran into winter. This surprised the two and their lack of heavier clothing made it necessary for them to shorten their trip through the pass.

Leadville, Colo., with its deserted mines was the next stop. These mines were formerly operated and successfully mined, but they now stand as shells—very few reminders that verify their one-time activity.

Through western Colorado to Salt Lake City—Salt Lake City to Ogden and Boise, Idaho, by way of Pocatello. There the boys separated and decided to continue their journey, alone to make it easier to get rides.

Mr. Gamble followed the old Oregon trail and remarked that even today the old rocks and monuments of interest stand and carry tales of the old stage coach days. It is still possible to locate bullets in the woods from the old massacre days. The largest swinging bridge in the world—some-times called "suicide bridge"—over Snake river was the next outstanding feature, according to Frank.

North from Boise to Portland, by way of the famous Columbia river highway. "The irrigation projects in Oregon are something to consider. There conditions are very good, and of course a great deal of this is due to the fact that irrigation is carried on so extensively," continued Mr. Gamble.

Portland—south to Grant's Pass, one of the most fertile valleys in a country of beautiful mountain scenery. The old "stage towns" are picturesque and interested the boys a great deal.

In Stockton, Calif., Frank talked to G. A. Renard, who recently moved there from Wayne. San Francisco and the fair came next. "It is built on a smaller scale than the Chicago fair of '33, but the lighting and exhibits are very beautiful."

Los Angeles and points of interest—Hollywood Bowl, University of California and Mr. Gamble remarked that at the Hollywood Bowl he saw Miss Anna Geisler, Wayne high school teacher.

In Long Beach, the boys encountered several other Wayne friends, among them B. H. McEachen, Willis Penhollow and Allan Hull, who graduated from Wayne State in '38.

According to the narrator, heavy rains, snow and hail were prevalent in Wyoming. But the crops were very fine. He also reports that crops around Wayne are much better than in any place in western Nebraska, excluding Kearney where irrigation has kept crops in a better condition.

Both Sherm and Frank will teach at Creighton next year.

Winside Camp One of Many
For Conservation in This Vicinity.

(By M. L. Hazelrigg.)
Thirtyone farmers have agreed to date to go ahead with a complete soil conservation program provided through Winside C. C. camp and a total of 86 applications have been filled by farmers. National interest in the problems of soil and moisture conservation have led individual farmers to see the need for assistance in formulating and carrying out conservation measures. This aid is provided through the soil conservation service and the C. C. camps attached to this service.

The C. C. camp located at Winside, established for the purpose of demonstrating the value and need of soil and moisture conservation measures in this community, is one of 11 such camps in Nebraska and one of approximately 400 in the United States on such work. Other Nebraska camps doing soil conservation work are located at Madison, Weeping Water, Pawnee City, Broken Bow, Blair, Beaver City, Franklin, Columbus, Bridgeport and Hebron.

The camps doing soil conservation work are operated by agriculture technicians trained in the work of soil conservation.

The aim of the work of a camp doing soil conservation work is to establish a complete demonstration of effective erosion-control practices within the area in which it is working. The Winside C. C. camp will effect the demonstration of conservation measures through active cooperation with individual farm owners and operators within its 15-mile area.

C. C. labor crews also used by soil conservation service to carry out the more difficult and laborious work involved in effecting a complete conservation program on the farms signed for demonstrating such work. The number of men in camp will average approximately 200.

The soil conservation personnel and duties are: E. E. Sipsky, superintendent in charge of the work program; M. J. Hankins, camp soil conservationist in charge of cooperative agreements with farmers; G. L. Ellithorpe, camp engineer; M. L. Hazelrigg, camp soil surveyor; W. R. Harder, camp agronomist, in charge of cropping practices.

Foremen, in charge of crews on farms, include: M. P. Kessler, C. C. Butler, J. W. Whitney, L. K. Swartz and J. H. Lowe, camp mechanic.

The camp will carry out a complete soil conservation program on every signed farm. This will include part or all of the following practices as needed by individual farms: Contour farming, crop rotations, strip cropping, terracing, gully control, tree planting, construction of farm ponds, pasture management, retirement of land from cultivation, prevention of burning of the grass lands and crop remains.

Trucks, hand tools, plows, fensos, a caterpillar tractor and two graders include the main equipment to be used on the farms.

Besides the soil conservation personnel, the Winside camp army personnel consists of Captain M. B. Hoffman, company commander; Dr. Herbert J. Witte, camp physician; J. S. Clawson, educational advisor.

The army personnel is responsible for the clothing, feeding, educational program and general welfare of the men.

Highway Work Is Contracted

Grading, bridges and culverts, contracted at Lincoln last Thursday by the state board for the improvement of highway No. 15 north of Wayne and a spur east call for $119,378 worth of work. Later the road will be given a hard surface similar to the highway south of Wayne. The completed improvement will provide a permanent road to Wayne both from the north and south, the one south having been completed previously. It will also connect two major east and west highways, No. 8 east of Pilger and No. 20 east of Laurel.

Contracts for one project north of Wayne follow: Highway No. 15, 13.9 miles of grading, Theisen Bros., Osmond, $61,630; culverts, Booth & Olson, $2,019; bridges, Booth & Olson, $19,043.

The other contract for work on the spur from No. 15 east to Concord, 1.2 miles, includes: Grading, Platte Valley, $6,374; culverts, Weidner & King, $1,023; and bridges, Weidner & King, $10,312.

The grading on No. 15 will begin south at Laurel and follow the railroad track southeast and then come directly south to Wayne. The 13.9 miles include all but the four-mile stretch directly north of Wayne. Since this already has a prepared surface, the plan is to grade all the other grading first, thus having the part near Wayne kept as it is until next spring when work will be done in as short a time as possible. The spur will connect Dixon and Concord with the new highway and with No. 20.

Other northeast Nebraska road jobs contracted by the board follow:

Pierce—Norfolk—north, 7 miles grading, Gerhold-Matzen, Columbus, $25,011; culverts, Capital Bridge company, Lincoln, $12,404; Madison—Pierce—Norfolk north, 4.5 miles, soil-cement, prime and armor coat, Roberts & Frank, Lincoln $27,990.

Pierce—Trielk-Wauna, highway No. 81, 11 miles grading, Shipman Bros., Omaha, $40,087; culverts, Norfolk Bridge & Construction company, Norfolk, $19,967; Bridges, Norfolk Bridge & Construction company, $12,561; Antelope—Norfolk—Ewing, highway No. 75, guard rail, Lincoln, $1,007.

Thurston—Burt, 10 miles grading, Lyons, highway No. 35, and 77-18.6 miles gravel, Platte Valley Construction company, Grand Island, $7,849.

From Ponca Journal for July 14, 1881: All recollect the big storm and tornado which passed along Wednesday last week. From the west came up rain, wind, thunder and lightning, and each separately gave evidence that the storm king had unlimbered his heaviest batteries. At about 8 o'clock there was a lull in the rain, then the lightning commenced to shoot down in very reckless manner. One bolt hit Mr. Hobb's house, doing considerable damage.

About five minutes after that demonstration the storm presented an interesting and fearful experience. Directly about this two immense clouds, impelled by separate and opposing currents of winds, swiftly approached each other. The deep toned thunder and vivid flashes of lightning darting from one cloud to the other was like cannonading between two hostile ships. As the two antagonists crashed together, they pressed downward an immense billow, black and lowering, from which descended towards the earth a terrible arm which threatened devastation to those below it. Fortunately for Ponca, the clouds, though rapidly sinking, were still too high to do injury.

Then the great mass, balloon shaped, revolved, slowly at first, but soon with great rapidity, and this revolving, drifted eastward. About a mile below Ponca, the long arm which had hitherto reached for the earth unavailing now touched the ground and swept everything before it. By great good fortune no dwelling houses were in its path, but trees, sheds and farm machinery were lifted like feathers and scattered broadcast in a thousand fragments. The path of the storm to the river was about eight rods wide, and in that space everything movable was swept away. Large trees were torn up by the roots and hurled a thousand feet up into the clouds above. Logs, in some instances partially bedded in the ground, were dragged from their resting places and forced to mingle in the revolving and aerial dance. Four miles east the tornado grappled with the river, and in the distance one saw a great column of water rise into the clouds.

Fearful and devastating as the tornado was between Ponca and the river, it became many times more destructive after it passed over into Dakota territory. Between the Missouri and the Big Sioux the land is flat and marshy, and the tornado had a path unbroken and undisturbed by hills or timber. It therefore swept over it like a destroying angel, and with a width here increased to 25 or 30 rods, devastated everything before it. Its course continued nearly east, passing over the open country south of Jefferson and struck the Big Sioux about 20 miles from where it left the Missouri.

In its journey through Dakota the tornado found few dwellings to wreck, and the damage was slight compared with what it would have been in a densely settled country.

Wayne County Is Represented At State Picnic

Only 15 from Wayne county registered July 29 at the annual Nebraska summer picnic in Bixby park, Long Beach, Calif., according to Miss Laura Lyons. Three times as many attended from Cedar county. Bert Brown of Wilmington and Dick Newton of Corona, drove up from Newport Beach where they usually stay. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Edwards, the former a brother of Mrs. Dan Davis who used to live at Carroll, came from Los Angeles. C. W. Goodsell of Glenhale, inserted N. C. 1896 when he registered. Ben McEachen of Huntington Park, was present part of the time. Mrs. McEachen remained in the car with her mother who recently suffered a broken hip. The three children of the late George McEachen are well and happy, helping their uncle, Ben McEachen, in his pickle business. The Ben McEachens' daughter, Bessie, and husband and baby have returned from the east coast and are now living near them. Mrs. E. M. Michael, also Luella Margaret and Mildred French and Mrs. John Eliason were present for the Nebraska picnic.

Miss Lyons writes that Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Ingraham, nee Rose Swartz, and son, Dean, of South Gate, and she were enjoying the quietude after the departure of picnickers when they decided to go to the navy landing to see the launches from different battleships. Sometimes as many as 38 sailors were in a boat and how quickly they could scramble over the side and be on their way to meet friends! Then in a few minutes the guard, in a stentorian voice, would announce that the ship was returning. Two large water taxis leave the wharf every hour.

Ella Piepenstock Miller and husband are leaving for a two-month trip, expecting to divide their time between Chicago and New York. Mrs. Miller and two friends put on a humorous skit to entertain the sewing club of the Women's Relief Corps recently. Mrs. Miller has written several plays and does well in impersonations.

Mrs. Alice Hurlbert has been in Los Angeles caring for Mrs. Frank Ulrich who recently underwent a major operation.

Mrs. John Larson was in Long Beach recently, writes Miss Lyons, to spend a day with her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Jensen. Mrs. Larson is getting settled in the home of her son, Ervin, at Pasadena. Ervin plans to have a class of music pupils.

The marriage of Russell Cullen, formerly of Winside, and Miss Anna Jacobson has been announced for August 12.

Magnus Jensen was elected commander of the disabled American veterans' post in Long Beach for the year.

Miss Lyons writes that she prizes a recent gift, a copy of a Methodist hymnal published in 1857 and containing 1,148 songs.

The two gambling ships off Long Beach shore and two off Santa Monica will soon cease operation, according to late ruling from Washington, D. C. The largest one has been known to make $200,000 in a week. It costs 25c to go out to the three-mile limit in a water taxi and very often every cent is spent so gamblers are given free return trips.

Thousands are backing the "moral rearming" movement, according to Miss Lyons. The standards of the movement—honesty, unselfishness, purity and love—were symbolized in a pageant, "Call to the Nations," staged recently in Hollywood bowl. The world assembly in the movement was held the last of July in Del Monte with 25 countries represented. By December the leaders expect 100,000,000 to listen to the voice of a living God and to live courageously for their nation.

Children at the Crossroads

By Judge Ernest L. Reeker
Copyright 1939

For Her Own Good. Irene's parents, quiet, unassuming people, not much given to fun and laughter, could not understand their 13-year-old's popularity. Neither could they perceive any reason for her being invited to more parties than it was possible for her to attend.

To an outsider the reason was obvious. A brilliant mind, an exceptionally pretty face, and a sympathetic nature won her friends not only among her boy and girl classmates but also among the faculty members of the high school.

Difficulties occurred in the home because of her being away too much after school hours and returning too late at night. Like little Cinderella she did not obey the mandate of being home and in bed by 11 o'clock.

Thinking they might thus persuade her to come home earlier, the parents began locking the door against her at night. When they heard her turning the knob, they would rise and admit her. Irene changed her hours not at all.

One night the parents failed to awaken when Irene tried the door. She went to a basement window, opened it, and as she was letting herself through, slipped and struck her face, cutting an ugly gash.

Then fearful of having her parents discover her, she went quietly to her room, wiped away the blood, but not realizing the depth of the wound, took no precautions to prevent infection.

By 9:30 that morning she was dying. She called to her mother and explained the accident.

Knowing the girl's fever was dangerous, the mother immediately telephoned a physician.

It was necessary for the doctor to perform some surgery before he could sew the wound because infection had made headway. Irene's face was scarred beyond repair, her beauty gone.

The wound healed, but Irene's personality changed to the opposite of its former charm. She developed an inferiority complex and continually held her hand over the scar so that the few people she met did not see it.

Her place in the world today is in the front of a dish-pan in a restaurant, where all day long, day in and day out, she washes dishes. Those who adore her have a sorrowful memory of how Irene fell from the pinnacle of popularity and progress to menial labor because of her failure to obey a parental injunction made for her own benefit.

Returning home late at night should not be condoned by any parent; neither should the house be locked against a child, even though he may be entirely at fault. Such severe discipline creates delinquency and undesirable habits of behavior.

It is natural for children to seek the companionship of other children interested in the same things. The surest way to avoid tragic results in childhood attachments is to let a child know that he and his friends are welcome at home.

The Philippines—Land of Beauty and Pleasure

A beautiful country—one in which flowers grow wild and superfluous! A country where anyone can buy an orchid corsage of about five blooms for 35c, for there are over 300 varieties of orchids on the islands and they grow as wild as violets! These are the first comments made about the Philippines by Mrs. C. F. Maynard, formerly Leila Mitchell, who with Captain Maynard arrived Thursday night to spend a couple of weeks with Mrs. Maynard's parents, the C. O. Mitchells. Captain and Mrs. Maynard left the islands June 22 and have spent some time on the west coast visiting relatives and friends. The captain is employed in the office of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey at Manila.

Climate in the Philippines is quite pleasant—being divided into three seasons. There is the cool, dry season, including the months from November to March. The hot season is the most noticeable between the months of April and July. From the latter part of July until November, the season is very wet. There is sufficient moisture, and when the weather becomes unbearable, it is just a matter of going up into the mountains where a cool air always be worn comfortably.

Life in the Philippines is pleasant, and exercise and relaxation work hand in hand to make for a perfect balance. "It is necessary," continued Mrs. Maynard, who has resided in the islands seven years, "for people to exercise and keep themselves fit. The weather demands this. Therefore, there is a great deal of swimming, golfing, horseback riding, tennis, and other sports that make for physical fitness."

The religious customs of the people of the island are very interesting. The majority of the islanders are Catholic, and very devout. They love their churches and massions and attend mass regularly. One particular feature occurs on what is called "All Souls Day." This corresponds to Halloween here. On this night, the separate families spend the entire time in the cemetery in which their loved ones are buried. They take along a picture of the deceased, and also food, drink, tobacco and their guitars. The whole night is spent sitting in a circle around the graves with the portrait in the center and the occasion is very joyful. Easter and Good Friday are other occasions of great religious meaning. On Good Friday, the entire populace turns out in somber black attire and head gear. Their whole attitude is one of seriousness. But Easter is a different story! White is the color to symbolize an awakening. The people are happy in that their Christ arose.

The clothing of the natives consists of long, tight-fitting skirts with starched, embroidered blouses for the girls, and trousers (usually cut off above the knee) and over-shirts for the boys. They wear their native clothing very well, and Mrs. Maynard remarked that a native in native clothing is much more appealing than a native "gone American."

The Filipinos appeal to one as talented, easy-going, contented, music-loving class of people. They seem never to worry about money, but worry rather about their pleasant gatherings and are happy with their rice, fruit, vegetables and other limited foods.

Educational facilities are fine on the islands, and the race is cooperative—eager to prove that they will soon be able to take care of themselves.

Captain and Mrs. Maynard plan to go to central offices in Washington, D. C., and return to the islands next spring.

Sickness and Poverty Worry Hawaiian Child

Illness and no money—how often such a plight strikes! Such are the circumstances of the Hawaiian family, one of whom, Isabel Gueso, writes of her troubles to Jacqueline Wightman, with whom she corresponds regularly. Isabel has just returned home after spending some time in the country recuperating from several weeks' illness. "That was my first trip to the country in 14 years," writes the little girl who is about 15. "A friend took me with his car. Otherwise I could not go because of the train it costs."

The girl tells that her father is still troubled greatly with asthma. Her two eldest brothers have died, one at 21 and the other 18 years. One had the flu and the other fell from a horse and was killed instantly. And the child explains that the brothers could have been such a help in earning some money. The child has two younger brothers working, also a sister who goes to work.

Isabel likes to sew and must do some excellent hand work from the description she gives of her needlework. She likes to sun herself at the beach though she cannot swim.

The uncomfortable Hawaii has been according to the child who explains that it rains lots and then gets hotter.

THE VOICE OF RELIGION

Current Questions and Answers About Religion, Morals and Personal Problems . . .

Dr. Weldon F. Crossland Rochester, New York

Is Atheism a menace to religion in America?

Atheism is always a deadly menace to all good things, but I cannot conceive of it menacing religion in America in our lifetime. Atheists deny the existence of God and express that denial in a virulent hostility to all religion. They scoff at immortality, heaven, the soul and ethics, all of which are grounded in God. Atheism is essentially negative and destructive.

Communism, cruel and cynical, has given a prominence to atheism because religion is its only serious competitor. Faith in God must be destroyed if the communistic state is to hold men under its absolute control.

A perverted pseudo-science, which ignores men's intellect, ideals, sense of beauty, sacrifice and godliness, today lends color to atheism by claiming that the mortal or perishable part of man is all there is of him.

Atheism is of two kinds, philosophical and practical—that of the thought and that of the act. In both cases it is an emotional attitude, based on an unwarranted assumption.

The armchair atheist can never prove that beyond the horizons of the light years in the vast illimitable spaces where man's most powerful telescopes can never penetrate, there is God. How does the atheist know? He doesn't—he just assumes it.

The practical atheist in his attitudes and conduct acts as if there were no God. He ignores everything associated with religion and the divine. His daily life dramatically denies all the claims and laws of God.

Against these attitudes of atheism must be placed the growing membership of the Christian churches of America and the increasingly open-mindedness of all classes to religion.

How can one overcome timidity? Most people feel timid and shy because they feel inferior. They retreat into their shells and insulate themselves against social relationships in order that they may spare themselves the possibility of humiliation. How can this self-conscious introversion be overcome?

First, believe that you can overcome it. Others have, and you can. Consider your assets. You may not be a Venus or an Apollo, but you do have intelligence and individuality; you need only to express them. About some things you know more than anyone else in your group. You should feel superior about these, instead of inferior.

Select three people every day, whom you know only slightly and start a conversation about a subject with which you are familiar. At least one of these persons should be of the opposite sex. Any subject will do—the government, taxes, styles, the latest motion picture, Hitler or what have you.

Soon you'll forget your fear of conversing with others and you'll sense the adventure and thrill of companionship with the mind of another.

At the end of one week review your progress—and you'll be amazed. In one month you may find yourself entirely at ease in any company.

Is heaven a place? Where is it? I believe that heaven is a place but I do not know where it is.

On the evening before Christ's crucifixion He said, "I go to prepare a place for you that where I am there ye may be also." He called heaven "My Father's house" of many mansions.

One must be careful about using temporal terms as a sufficient description of eternal realities. The word "place" is a special term that can never fully apply to the spiritual home of redeemed personalities. Yet because we are still mortal, we must use the most adequate language and phrases possible to symbolize the infinite glory and unspeakable richness of the life of the soul's eternal home.

Heaven's location, where the souls of the saved are, is known only to God. We shall know sometime.
