Progress Made On City School

Terrazzo and Weatherstrip Workers Are Expected On New Unit.

George Stanley, contractor's superintendent, was unable to estimate Wednesday when the Wayne school building would be completed and ready for final inspection. He is awaiting the arrival of terrazzo workers, who have corridors and the main stairway in the new unit to complete, and of weather-strippers. Stanley estimated that the terrazzo subcontractor had four to five weeks' work in the new unit, in addition to some finishing touches in the modernized old unit.

For Regional High Schools.

Superintendent Anderson of the Omaha schools is quoted as expressing approval of building up a strong regional high school in accordance with the recent state-wide survey if the state would help finance maintenance. It seems Omaha now has 800 outside students who are paying tuition. More would be added according to the proposed program of expansion. Then state aid would be required. Omaha and Wayne and other towns should bear in mind that they owe existence to the farm areas of Nebraska, and they should not be fearful of doing too much for them.

Football Takes Limelight.

Even if a fellow is not crazy about football, it was refreshing to note that Saturday's games were given large precedence over war news in Sunday morning's newspapers. As a matter of fact, the conflict in Europe was lagging at the time, and accordingly, speculations as to the course of coming events were minimized. But it was soothing to find nothing sufficiently tragic had happened to justify screaming headlines.

Due to Bad Years.

Annual delinquent tax lists which appear in different Nebraska newspapers this month, are somewhat longer than usual, due of course to a succession of bad years. Drouth and grasshoppers do not harmonize with ease in carrying tax loads. When the weather becomes rational and sensible again, and when times generally get back to normal—or what we used to realize as normal—we will tackle taxes and all other expenses with happy assurance. But the tough experience of recent years will teach us not to lead up with (Continued on Page Four)

ATTENTION CALLED TO FREE PROGRAM IN WAYNE OCT. 14

NEXT Saturday's free shows and other free attractions, details of which appear elsewhere on this page, are designed purely as evidence of good will, and the only request to the public is to come and share in the events without cost and without obligation. We hope visitors will like the program and be led to feel the day has been worth while. For the motion picture shows starting at 9 in the morning, free tickets may be secured from Herald advertisers or by calling at the Herald office. Rural teachers and pupils and parents who find getting ticket supplies inconvenient elsewhere, may be quickly accommodated by calling on the Herald. Both adults and children will be made welcome, and we hope persons of all ages will find merit in the entertainment. Two performances will be given in the forenoon, and we trust local grown-ups and children will as far as possible attend in the morning, thus affording more room for outsiders in the afternoon. The show will last one hour and thirty minutes. In the story of Saturday's doings, the public will note other attractions which will contribute signally to a lively day.

All the dividends in this world aren't counted in dollars. Take storm windows, for example. They pay for themselves in money saved. That's true. The greatest dividend from storm windows, however, is in the added comfort and freedom from drafts which you enjoy. Have your storm windows on every window in your house? If not, let us equip them for you.
Voice on Phone: "How do you feel this morning?"
Lady: "All right."

The third thing necessary to a perfect winter heating season is a Will-Burt stoker. Storm windows, insulation and a Will-Burt! The home with these three is in perfect shape for ideal heating, regardless of how bad a winter we may have. Have you seen the Will-Burt stoker this year?
Have you heard about the atlas publisher who pulled a boner in his map of Europe and then waited for it to come true?
There is as much variation in stoker coals as in other sizes. Proper sizing, proper dust treatment, and a coal high in heat are essentials of coals for stoker firing. For the best in stoker coals—call 147.

Former Resident Marries in Omaha
Miss Doris Judson Is Bride of D. Eugene Wind Sunday At Trinity Cathedral.
Miss Doris Judson of Omaha, formerly of Wayne, and Mr. D. Eugene Wind of Council Bluffs, were married Sunday afternoon, Oct. 2 at Trinity cathedral in Omaha, Dean McGinley performing the single ring service in the presence of immediate relatives. The organist played softly during and after the ceremony.
Miss Judson, who was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. R. B. Judson of Chicago, wore a suit of antique green with which she had brown accessories. Her corsage was of orchids in lavender-pink shade. Miss Ruth Judson of Chicago, sister of the bride, served as bridesmaid. She wore a suit of raspberry shade with black accessories and had a corsage of white gardenias. Mrs. Judson's corsage was of pink begonias. Mr. Wind and his attendant, Jack McManis of Council Bluffs, wore dark suits and had white carnation boutonnieres.
After the service Mr. and Mrs. Wind left by car for Kansas City and the Ozarks. They will return to Council Bluffs where their home is in readiness for them.

Power Line to Be Started Soon
filed proceedings in county court to acquire right of way across two pieces of land.
Edward and Ella Marotz, husband and wife, owners of the two Wayne county quarters, objected to the amount offered for going across the NW 1/4 of 36-25-1 and SW 1/4 of 25-25-1 because a barn building site was destroyed. The county court appointed appraisers, Wm. Misfeldt, Walter Gaebler, C. E. Benschoff, C. L. Imel and Frank Bronzynski, who with Mr. Marotz visited the property and set the value.
At a hearing Friday, Wayne county court awarded the owners $1,450, including $1,350 on the quarter through which the proposed line runs diagonally and crosses the barn site, and $100 on the quarter crossed only on one corner.
The Loup river corporation is appealing the matter to the district court through Attorneys August Wagner and C. N. Elfstrom. The Loup river district claims that the amount awarded is excessive. It asks that another appraisal board be named.
The litigation will not delay construction of the line, according to the Columbus men. The power district will leave with the court the sum awarded, and payment of the claim will be made after all appeals are settled.

Ask for Appraisal Of Land for Road
The Department of Roads and Irrigation, through its attorney, Burr R. Davis, filed in county court here October 7 a petition asking a ruling on extending its highway No. 15 improvement through land on the August-Roeber farm, the east part of the NE 1/4 of the NE 1/4 of 24-27-3. In the filing the department claims that a reasonable amount has been offered for the land to be appropriated for the road. It requests that the court appoint three disinterested free-holders to inspect and appraise the property. The matter will be heard October 21 at 2 p. m.

Heating System Is in Operation

Open House Will Be Held At Wayne School by Late November.

Wayne city school is comfortably heated this week, the stoker borrowed from the college now being in operation (and serving well). Extra piping was installed this summer so that the heating system is now vacuum controlled. This will make for greater efficiency and a saving in fuel costs as it is estimated that only two pounds of pressure will heat the building in coldest weather. Thermostats and automatic valves are being installed this week to control the system according to room temperatures.

"Open house" for the public is planned at the school as soon as the remodeled and new part of the structure are completed. This will probably be the last of November, and the time set will likely be a Sunday afternoon.

PWA approval has been secured on the school board's letting of contracts for equipment such as chairs, laboratory fume hood, lockers, etc. Providing the additional grant is approved, no delay will be experienced in getting these. PWA took no action on the stoker as the board had rescinded its letting before this was sent for approval. The college stoker will be used until definite decision is reached on this matter.

Will Be in Clinic.

Wayne high school will be represented in the clinic chorus October 26 and 27 at the Norfolk teachers' convention by Paul Petersen, Eugene Sals and Lyle Seymour. For the clinic hand Lyle Seymour will play the French horn and Catherine Cavanaugh the flute.

Two boys and two girls will be chosen this week to enter the county citizenship contest. Physical fitness, personality and intelligence will be considered.

Wayne football team goes to Wakefield this Friday afternoon. Following a bonfire at Athletic park Thursday evening, students had a snake dance. A pep rally Friday noon preceded the football game with Hartington.

The sale of activity tickets, sponsored by the Pep club, turned out successfully, 106 being sold and this being as many or more than in recent years. The Pep club has charge of selling "eats" at the games and thus secures funds with which to operate.

Seniors elected: Wm. Hawkins president, Lyle Seymour vice president, Mary Hicks treasurer, Helen Schroeder secretary and Miss Theodore Carlson sponsor.

American history classes have been studying the European situation and the possible effects of this situation on the United States. Particular emphasis has been placed on neutrality legislation now in force and the work of the present session of congress in seeking to amend this legislation.

Students in junior and senior English classes have been writing personal essays interesting to them. Some of these will appear in the Harbinger. For outside reading this year students will choose books of fiction or non-fiction in various fields. Each will plan his own reading program to correlate with his studies or outside interests. Credit will be given according to the amount of reading done.

These will be discussed once a week. Pupils hope to become more speech conscious and improve both oral and written English.

Bob Birdsall loaned a number of Geographic magazines for the 7th grade library. They are popular during leisure moments.

Sixth Grade News.

The 6th grade organized a Citizenship club Monday and elected officers as follows: Mary Kessler, president; Dick Sund, vice president; Mary Anna Newton, secretary; Jean Smolky, treasurer; Joan Jones, news reporter.

A library reading chart has been made for keeping a record of books children read.

Sides chosen for arithmetic score are Mercury and Lincoln Zephyr. The Mercury gained in mileage.

Richard Keilstrup and Lavonne Longe were absent Monday.

Second Grade News.

The 2nd grade took a field trip Friday afternoon, returning to the room to draw pictures of what was seen. Children brought back bright colored leaves and seeds. Mary Harder and Harold Corzine brought seeds and leaves from Ponca state park for the room's collection.

Lois Russell brought pictures of her vacation trip to California and told the class stories connected with them. Helen Pile told of her trip to Oklahoma, using pictures.

Paul Einung showed the class a small violin.

Each day a new pet is brought. Pupils write stories for a pet book which will be illustrated with the children's own drawings or pictures from magazines.

In First Grade.

Martys Johnson has been absent a few days because of illness.

First grade finished its fair unit with a dinner at school Friday noon, the main part being the soup made from the fair vegetables.

Pupils enjoyed Beauty, the little canary, brought to 2nd grade, and especially liked to watch the bird take its bath.

This week pupils are bringing autumn leaves and dipping them in paraffin for a border on the bulletin board.

Kindergarten News.

Faith Ann Most, Donald Schedel and Shirley Awizius are new pupils in the kindergarten, making the total enrollment 29 with 18 girls and 11 boys.

The fireplace mantel is decorated with red autumn leaves brought by children.

Pupils made their choice of places at the table for permanent seating.

Good use has been made of the steps to the balcony in dramatization of nursery rhymes. "Wee Willie Winkie" is a favorite.

Sorghum Varieties Tested at Watson's

About 125 met at the Albert Watson farm north of Wayne last Thursday to hear a discussion of sorghum crops and their characteristics. Mr. Sfb was present from the extension service in Lincoln. Yield tests were taken on each variety and on one plot of corn and results in both foliage and grain yields will be available at the farm bureau office. The Kalos and Sooner Milo were apparently the high yielders of grain sorghums. Atlas and Leoti Red will probably be higher in forage. Colby and Day Milos seemed more lodge resistant and more adapted to harvesting with a combine. Mr. Watson left a row of Milo to test how long this will stand.

Teed for Senate
A. V. TEED, retired educator and closely in rapport with rural problems, is being favorably mentioned for membership in the state senate next year. He has been actively identified with the development of Nebraska for forty years. He knows its needs. He realized his initial teaching experience in rural schools. After coming to Nebraska and serving as head of a number of town schools, he was elected superintendent of Dixon county schools. Later he had charge of the department of rural education connected with the state superintendent's office at Lincoln. For a series of years and until his retirement, he was a member of the faculty of the Wayne State Teachers college.

Mr. Teed started without advantages of capital or position. That made him sympathetic. He had the courage to resist spendthrift habits, and as a result, on retirement from a regular job, he is able to live from the earnings of accumulated property interests. He doesn't need a salary from any source, nor could he be persuaded to engage in politics for purely financial reasons. He now looks after his investments, and he has plenty of time to travel and study and reflect.

But Teed has many years of valuable service ahead of him. Men of his experience and judgment are needed in the councils of the state. He has not been consulted, and he is likely to shy at the idea, but those who think Wayne county is entitled to a candidate, and who accurately appraise Mr. Teed's fitness, will endeavor to persuade him.

Hoffman Brothers' public sale of purebred Hereford cattle Monday was a notable event. From this herd have gone in past years many prize-winning animals. At big livestock shows in the middle west, the Hoffman herd's bloodlines were invariably found among the top-notchers. Buyers at Monday's sale came from remote sections, and experienced breeders testified to the uniformly high quality of the offering. What the Hoffmans have in mind for the future is not disclosed. It would seem they are too successful and too strongly attached to the business to withdraw permanently from it.

Former President Herbert Hoover discriminates carefully in expressing opinions on neutrality, according to a recent interview. He would not allow the sale of bombing planes, poison gas or submarines to any nation at any time because of their use against defenseless women and children. He would, however, permit the sale of "pursuit planes, anti-aircraft guns and any other instruments of defense against attacks on civilians." He said at one point: "After war itself, the threat of destruction of open cities and the killing of women and children is the greatest step to barbarism of a thousand years."

Sense of humor is the happy possession of most people, and laughter is a refreshing privilege. The human face is the only one able to smile and manifest its feeling in that way. Nature evidently intended that people should be happy. But sense of humor is deadened by war, and there are no smiles on grim battle fields. Neither do those left behind feel like exercising their right to laugh or smile. When wars are over and other calamities subside, and abundance and content again prevail, greater use may be made of inherited facilities for expressing joy.

A little uncontrolled spark may start a terrible conflagration — destructive and sometimes fatal. Possible consequences in careless handling of fire is what prompts emphasis on prevention at this season when use of artificial heat begins. The innocent looking cigarette has been responsible for many costly fires. The burning stub, cast aside without certainty that the last spark has been extinguished, often starts a blazing inferno before discovery. Fire prevention week is intended to arouse precautions at a time of increased dangers.

Regular democrats opposed to President Roosevelt's left-wing program, have been restored to leadership in Washington in shaping the government's course in handling foreign affairs in connection with the war, according to Mark Sullivan, columnist. But he adds that these regulars are still opposed to the administration's domestic policies and will disapprove of any attempt to nominate the president for a third term. They are strong for the limitation fixed by the two-term tradition.

The Hitler speech was broadcast over the world quite in contrast with the Nazi rule of not permitting people to listen to outsiders. That is the difference between democracy and autocracy. Alien governments would destroy the American freedom which privileges them to spread propaganda.

be fewer threats, less boasting and more reasoning, and then amicable adjustments could be made. Thus, society would not be demoralized and civilization would not be set back one hundred years.

A "slow-down" strike is another way to use force on employers. The Chrysler corporation relieved 10,000 workers of their jobs the first of the week because they had inaugurated the slow-down policy. This followed the company's dismissal of a group of employees last week.

America was permitted to fight and sacrifice its men and treasure in the other war, but was not allowed to have deserved part in determining terms of peace. We had a hand in winning the war, but we were cut off in endeavors to make the world safe for democracy.

Hitler says he sees no reason why nazism and communism cannot cooperate. Neither do we. Their policies of intolerance and restraint are in effect the same under different names.

Turkeys Plentiful.
(Lincoln Journal)

A survey of the turkey situation reveals that there are 31 million in the country, an increase of 22 percent over 1938. There should be plenty of turkey for everyone on Thanksgiving day. The country not only has turkeys in abundance but they are bigger birds. The improvement in turkey strains has resulted in the development of a huge breasted fowl of great meat carrying capacity. As a result of turkey improvement by scientific methods, an increase in turkey meat would be possible even though the number of birds raised did not increase a bit. Really substantial benefits are gained by these methods.

Hog Growers Not Alarmed.
(Omaha Journal-Stockman)

The slump in hog prices, following the sensational rise due to war hysteria, was naturally to have been expected but the reaction of hog growers to the lower prices of hogs has been a bit surprising to the trade. Hog producers refused to become alarmed or panicky. They simply refused to sell. They had plenty of feed and they could wait.

When hogs went down this week farmers stopped selling. With lighter receipts the market has regained part of its price loss. Many guessed wrong. There wasn't a flood of selling on the price break. Which can only be interpreted to mean that farmers are very bullish on the hog outlook. And they may be right about that. Time will tell. It is certain that exports have shown an encouraging gain, if not yet large. It is certain that there has been business improvement in this country, meaning increased consumer buying power. It is certain that reserve supplies of pork are low. Then enters uncertainty. But if war continues foreign pork demand cannot fail to improve, and all the pork produced will be needed. And while the supply of hogs in the country at this time is liberal, with large numbers soon to be ready for marketing, we hear that breeding is on the increase. Not only that, but some say that it is the intention of many producers to make hogs heavy to market, using as much corn as possible in that way.

It is a time when guessing on future price levels appears to be rather futile. You will find among those who are well informed the widest extremes of opinions. So much depends on developments, in war and in business that cannot be foretold. The best that can be done, it seems to us, is to keep hogs in thrifty condition, and plan to sell them when they ought to be sold. It's a gamble when they are carried longer. We have heard it said that no man ever went broke taking a profit!

It Can Happen Here.
(Norfolk Daily News)

The decision of the national labor relations board in the Waumec Mills case, is one of those things that can't happen here, yet that has happened.

The facts are simple. Two men applied for work in the Waumec mills. They had jobs in another mill, but sought employment with the Waumec company. They admitted under questioning that they had been officers in a labor union but had resigned. There were several applicants for every job open, and the men were not hired.

The employing official of the Waumec mills said that he had learned the men were "trouble makers." The men appealed to the labor board which held that the company should have employed them and ordered it to put them on the rolls and pay them back wages for two years, during a part of which, at least, they had been employed in another mill. The board justified its findings on the grounds that the men were rejected because they belonged to a union. The only evidences of this, it appears, was a statement by the employing official that he had investigated the men and found they were "trouble makers." He also stated, however, that one of the reasons for failure to employ them was that they were not skilled in the jobs they sought, and another that they were too old. This happened in America. An employer is told he has no right to select his own employees; that he has no right to protect his plant from those whose purpose in gaining employment is to make trouble. As the Chicago Tribune summarizes it:

"If this decision stands up, any union man who is an unsuccessful applicant for a vacant job will claim that he was discriminated against because of his affiliation and will be able to claim pay from the date he was turned down. The cautious employer will now refuse to interview job-seekers because the NLRB may find that wages are due equally to those who are hired and to those who are not. Congress should deal with the NLRB without waiting any longer."
Both the law under which this thing was done and the board which did it, should be taken in hand.

But It's True

Mr. Moore keeps the bike right by his front door, makes a point of never walking in the open. He says he does it just for fun. Shot as it was flying some 100 yards above the ground, the bird, already dead, was picked up by a gust of wind, carried 11 miles before it hit the earth.

THE ANIMAL.

Milton S. Mayer, assistant to the president of the University of Chicago, writing for the Saturday Evening Post, virtually says war settles nothing, does everything bad and nothing good. It cultivates the animal in men, and a preponderance of animal is a hard blow to social refinements. Making a man able to kill upsets, all he had been taught. The writer says: "War destroys democracy in nations, but what seems to me infinitely worse, it destroys the democracy in men." He insists that war does not build a better world, that one war calls for another one, and the result lowers the quality of civilization. War does not necessarily serve justice. He says: "Justice alone knows liberty, equality and fraternity, and justice is a human virtue arising from man's human capacity to reason. We cannot make sense out of justice by looking at the moon or taking dope or building battlements. We can make sense out of justice by using our reason to discover why justice, like wisdom, is better than rubies."

things we cannot afford—not to invest in an adjoining quarter that cannot be safely handed.

Crop Conditions.

Dr. Wm. Hawkins of the rural rehabilitation service, has observed in his travels that counties adjoining the Missouri river have fared comparatively well in crop production. Farther south and southwest the drought put in its deadly licks. The reverse was true last year — the north suffered most. It is profoundly hoped next year all sections will be liberally rewarded. Dr. Hawkins is strongly advising discouraged farmers to stick to their farms, and in time they will be all right. Townspeople will average no better off than the farmers, the former depending on the latter.

EDUCATION WEEK.

Annual "education week" which comes November 5-11, is the inspiration for an article in the October Quivans Magazine. The author quotes these objectives from an expert source: "The objectives of self-realization. The objectives of human relationship. The objectives of economic efficiency. The objectives of civic responsibility." Education does not necessarily mean one will make a better living or grow richer materially. There are reasons apart from scholastic degrees that enable one to amass a worldly fortune. There are reasons outside of schooling that make one fall down in scoring financial independence. Persevering energy is often the secret of material success attributed to extraordinary intelligence. Educating people to be big and whole-souled and to be more useful members of society will doubtless be stressed during "education week." The author quotes this from a leaflet issued by the National Education association: "And what is education for the American way? It is universal, opening its doors to all the people. It is individual, helping each person to make the most of his talents. It is tolerant, seeking truth through free and open discussion. It is continuous, knowing that learning is a lifelong necessity. It is prophetic, looking always toward a better civilization."

Special Training Course Is Taken

Chris Tietgen, owner and manager of Tietgen hatchery, has returned from Grand Island where he attended a special course in poultry diseases given by Dr. Salsbury's laboratories of Charles City, Ia. The training course is especially designed to enable managers and poultry service representatives of hatchery and feed stores to render a more useful service to poultry raisers in this community in handling poultry problems and improving the flocks. The school consisted of five full days of intensive study and training in poultry management, sanitation and disease prevention. First aid methods of disease control, post-mortem work and vaccination by use of government licensed bacterins and vaccines were demonstrated and explained. Mr. Tietgen learned much about the working parts of a chicken. Five days were spent on this subject without repetition. The training is offered by Dr. Salsbury's laboratories through a trained traveling staff carrying full equipment for demonstration purposes. Mr. Tietgen is now in a position to render a better service to poultry raisers in this community. This intensive training has given him an excellent working knowledge of scientific practices in poultry care and management.

Guarding Against Illness in Livestock

With thousands of head of stock and feeder cattle now on the way from range areas to feed lots, Nebraska stockmen are on guard against losses from so-called "shipping fever" or influenza. Dr. S. W. Alford, extension livestock sanitation specialist at the University of Nebraska college of agriculture, informed Agricultural Agent Walters this week that bad weather while cattle are being shipped increases sickness and death losses from this disease. He suggests particular care in feeding and watering cattle in transit or just after they arrive on the farm or feed lot, together with protection against extreme variations in weather.

A study of cattle "shipping fever" by Farley of the Kansas experiment station showed the disease is lightest on farms where these precautions have been taken. It also indicated the disease strikes hardest where cattle are shipped the greatest distance during wet, cold weather.

The chief cause of shipping fever in cattle is still unknown. It may be caused by one, or a combination of several organisms—perhaps mainly from a virus too small to be seen through a microscope. Dr. Alford points out that in other diseases, both animal and human, it has been impossible to develop satisfactory immunizers until the primary cause of the disease had been discovered; and he sees no likelihood that shipping fever will be an exception.

Clothing Storage Care Is Important

For those people putting away summer clothes for the winter, Miss Helen Roche, extension clothing specialist at the college of agriculture, had a few suggestions this week.

Starch, she points out, serves as a food for some insects and may cause them to eat holes in garments which have been stored away before the starch has been washed from them.

Garments made of materials which are soft and crepe-life in texture or knitted are best folded with layers of tissue paper between them and placed in drawers or boxes. If left on hangers, the weight of the garment pulls the upper part out of shape and the style and good appearance of the garment is lost.

Oldest College In Country Has October Birthday

The oldest institution of higher learning in the United States celebrates its 303rd birthday October 28, writes Dr. H. D. Griffin who instructed at Harvard this summer. Harvard college was founded by a vote of the General Court (legislature) of Massachusetts Bay colony October 28, 1636. It was located at Newtown which was renamed Cambridge in recognition of the English university at which most of the overseers (trustees) had been educated.

John Harvard, a Puritan minister and master of arts of Emmanuel college, Cambridge, died at Charlestown, September 14, 1638, in his 31st year. Half of his estate, amounting to nearly 780 English pounds and a library of over 400 volumes, was left to the college. In gratitude the General Court, March 13, 1639, voted that the school be called Harvard college.

The overseers August 27, 1640, appointed Henry Dunster the first president, replacing Nathaniel Eaton, who had been known as master. Dunster was 30 years old, a graduate of Magdalen college, Cambridge, a noted Hebrew scholar, and a man of vision and energy. Under Dunster a course of study was established in the liberal arts, the learned tongues, and the three philosophies, similar in content to the course for the baccalaureate in the English universities. A new building was erected, and the first class graduated in 1642. The degree of bachelor of arts was conferred after four years' successful study; and the master's degree after three years' post graduate study, either in Harvard college or elsewhere.

Although Dunster instituted these degrees without permission of the king, they were promptly recognized by both Cambridge and Oxford. Not the least of his contributions, President Dunster designed the arms which the college still uses, with the motto "Veritas," on three books on a crimson shield.

President Dunster took office just before an economic crisis, and found it very difficult to attain the high standards he had set for the college. The only way it kept going was by an annual voluntary contribution of a peck of wheat, or a shilling, from each New England family. Nevertheless, the college yard was gradually enlarged by gift and purchase, and the first scholarship fund, donated by Lady Mowison of London, was established in 1643. Dunster served the institution until 1654, a notable administration of 14 years. Although his record graduating class, that of 1651, numbered only 10, the Harvard college of his time enjoyed such a reputation that a number of English youths were sent over for their education, and students came from other English colonies—Virginia, Maryland and Bermuda—as well as from New England. In 1652 the son of a Dutch minister of New Amsterdam in the New Netherlands came to Harvard for his college training.

Quite a number of these early graduates returned to England, and one of them became the distinguished diplomat and statesman, Sir George Downing, for whom one of the most important little streets in the British empire is named—Downing street, London.

During the colonial period, the college was supported in part by the government of Massachusetts Bay, but mostly by donations and bequests from men and women on both sides of the Atlantic. Seven signers of the Declaration of Independence were Harvard graduates, and a number of graduates and students performed public service during the Revolution.

With the establishment of so many colleges and universities after this became a nation, Harvard might easily have become merely a local or regional college. That it has, instead, become an institution of national, even of world-wide scope, is due largely to the work of two great administrators, John T. Kirkland, president from 1810 to 1828, and Charles W. Eliot, president from 1869 to 1909. The first found it a New England college and left it an American university; the second found it one of the better American universities and left it one of the best universities in the world.

The Harvard of 1939 is not one of the world's largest universities, but it is one of the best staffed, is the best endowed, and has the world's largest university library. Its productive endowment is nearly $150,000,000; and its libraries contain over 4,000,000 volumes, with an annual increase of 120,000. In 1938-39, excluding Radcliffe college and the summer session faculty and students, there were 1960 staff members and 8590 students, of whom 4900 were graduate students. The holding power of Harvard college, the undergraduate division, is very good. Last year there were 1044 freshmen, 948 sophomores, 872 juniors and 826 seniors. The undergraduate work of Harvard college is exclusively for men, and most of the graduate divisions are closed to women, except in the graduate school of education.

Gives Suggestions On Garden Plants

E. H. Hoppert, extension horticulturist at the Nebraska college of agriculture, this week passed on some interesting suggestions to Wayne county people about moving garden plants from the outdoors into the house. Many of the garden annuals can be transformed into house plants and he suggests early October as the best time.

Geraniums, coleus, dusty miller, ice plant, salvia dwarf marigold, verbena, lantana, hardy chrysanthemum, double petunias, vinca, heliotrope and several others were listed for moving into the house. First, however, Hoppert says it is best to prepare a potting soil into which the plants can be transplanted.

The usual mixture is one-third garden loam, one-third sand and one-third well-rotted manure or compost. This mixture makes a light friable soil that will not bake as does the ordinary garden soil.

Further, he suggests shaking off most of the soil from the plant after it is dug. And, here are other suggestions: Prune off all but about 6 inches of the top and if there are lice on the leaves, immerse the top in a strong soap solution and then in clear water; then place a handful of coarse gravel in the bottom of the pot or tin pail and pot the plant. These are the directions to follow for coleus, lantana, verbena, petunia, sultana, vinca, marigold and salvia.

Hardy chrysanthemums, ice plant and tender cacti are not pruned at transplanting time.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Larson, Miss LaVerne and Junior were in Norfolk Sunday.

Champion Topper Picked at Contest

By hand topping 4.88 bushels of grain with a discarded butcher-shop knife, Herman Ayes of Nance county last week won the first official Nebraska sorghum topping contest with a crowd estimated from 4,000 to 5,000 people looking on. In second place was Richard Bangert of Webster county.

Twelve county champions competed in the 45-minute contest on the G. H. Finney farm near York. They worked in an Early Kalo field which, it was estimated, made 35 bushels to the acre.

The educational exhibits and demonstrations, however, arranged by the Extension Service as a part of the Pasture-Forage-Livestock program attracted as much attention as did the contest itself. All day long, farm men and women crowded the exhibits and asked numerous questions about the production, harvesting and utilization of both grain and forage sorghums.

Team Works Hard For Midland Game

After listening to Coach Jim

Morrison telling about numerous mistakes made in the Wildcats' victory over Nebraska Wesleyan, 12-0, last week, the Wayne college gridlers were sent through a hard session on the blocking and tackling dummies. Morrison told his men that he "was far from pleased with the tackling and blocking displayed at Wesleyan and that this phase of the game would have to improve greatly or Midland would defeat the Black and Gold team."

Wayne suffered one more injury to the steady increasing list of "training room" players. Mitchell, regular tackle, will be lost for this coming game, having sprained his ankle last week. With Mullins, the other regular tackle out with an infected finger, the tackle situation will have to be manned by reserve material. Chuck Wehrer, although playing all but three minutes in the Wesleyan game, still cannot run at his best because of a troublesome knee that won't come around to shape. Quil Fox, another backfield letterman will be out with a sprained ankle, while Fred Murray, also a backfield letterman has his bad knee in shape to help relieve the backfield tension.

The entire Wildcat team, from the coach down to the waterboy, want to win this Midland game. Last year the Wildcats outdowned and outyarded the Fremont eleven yet lost the game by two extra points, 14-12.

Running signals as his first team last night Morrison had Murray, Wehrer, Hungerford, Garvin and Childs in the backfield, with Nitz, Lindahl, Killian, Splitchal, Farmer, Juzek and Riley in the line.

Is Burned in Barn. Leo Renner suffered burns Monday night while leading some mules from the barn on his place near Wisner, the structure being destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. Renner found the barn afire after he returned to the yard following supper.

Mrs. E. S. Blair, Wayne city librarian, goes to Hastings next Wednesday, October 18, to attend the Nebraska State Library association which is in session there from October 19 to 21. Speakers will include three prominent out-of-state people new to Nebraska audiences.

Miss Nora E. Buest, specialist in school libraries in the Library Service Division of the U. S. Office of Education, is well known for her work as a book reviewer and compiler of lists of children's books. Miss Buest will conduct an institute each day on children's reading.

M. M. Harris, editor of the San Antonio, Texas, Express, will fly to Hastings to speak at the Thursday afternoon meeting. Mr. Harris is president of the League of Texas Trustees and active in the People's Library movement in Texas.

In the past year a state-wide W.P.A. library project which is sponsored by the Nebraska Public Library commission, has begun operation. Two demonstrations of library service on a large unit basis are being carried on as a part of the project. They are a regional library in Douglas and Sarpy counties and a county library in Adams county. Librarians who wish to visit some of the branch libraries established in Adams county may do so Wednesday afternoon preceding the meeting.

Sixty Years Ago

A California writer explained that horses in that region were mostly of the mustang breed.

The mustang is a creature that has the shape of a horse and the soul of a foolish imp.

The mustang has the viciousness of a vicious horse in addition to vicious characteristics of its own.

It has a bad memory which permits him to shy at a harmless shrub 20 times a day if he sees it as often.

Ingratitude, which permits him to kick the head of his best friend; absence of mind, which permits him to run furiously after it has been made clear to him that he is expected to walk; power to develop great energy with great rapidity, which enables him to change in a flash from a simple, trustworthy looking nag into a snorting, whistling, bucking, biting, backbones and ten thousand heels.

He is soulless and unprincipled, but enduring as so much brass. He is of little value in the market, bringing $2.50 in Santa Barbara and less farther south.

English millers were reported considering going out of business and shipping in American flour which is ground under a new improved process.

The mania for leather trimmings produced great suffering in England for it stopped ribbon factories.

Limiting the time women may work in factories started at least 60 years ago for a dispatch in the 1879 paper stated that English factories were forbidden to work women more than 4 1/2 hours continuously without rest.

Plan Announced In New Program

Conservation Practices to Be Stressed in the 1940 Farm Outline.

The 1940 AAA program just approved recognizes special conditions in certain areas and emphasizes soil conservation on all farms the country over, according to announcement by Herman J. Podoll. To encourage further soil conservation on small farms, the plan assures as earning of as much as $20 for participating farms. Planting of trees is another soil conservation practice to be encouraged, a farmer being able to earn as much as $30 for tree planting in addition to the regular soil-building allowance.

Emphasis will be given to conservation of wildlife.

In areas where food for the farm family is generally inadequate, a home-garden provision will be available. The commercial vegetable program is also extended to more counties than in 1938.

The wheat allotment of 62 million acres, seven million larger than the 1939 allotment, has been announced. Tentative wheat conservation and price adjustment payments will total from 18c to 22c per bushel next year. Acreage goals for other major crops and rates of payment will be established later in view of developing conditions.

Thorough consideration was given to the present European situation and its possible effect on American agriculture when the 1940 program was drafted, according to Secretary Henry Wallace. "The aim of this program is to maintain a production of farm commodities in this country which will balance with the demand, whatever that demand may prove to be, and to maintain and improve the fertility of our farm land. Farmers' interests are carefully guarded in this program, which also serves the public interest."

To National Convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beckenhauer arrived home Saturday from Oklahoma City where they attended the national convention of morticians. Mr. Beckenhauer is Nebraska president and a group of 28 from this state had a banquet together Wednesday evening. Next year's meeting will be in San Francisco. The Wayne folks found good roads to Oklahoma City which is about 635 miles from Wayne. Weather was hot here, however, reaching 95 degrees, and the country was dry.

John Y. Cole, sr., one of the members of the Gideon Cole family, born in New York state in 1864, was a small lad when his folks came west. He grew to be a stalwart young man and helped farmers in the vicinity with their machinery. The young man also rode the pony express from Smithland to St. Helena and across to South Dakota. Later the Smithland office was discontinued and the mail was carried from Paragan to Dakota. When John Y. gave up this work, his brother, Ezra, followed him.

In the Gideon Cole family were 10 children, five boys and five girls. Mr. Cole died in May, 1882, and Mrs. Cole in November, 1891. Ada and Maty, daughters, remained at the home place until in the 90's when it was sold to a Miller family. Ada was married to Mr. Salvesen and located in Lawrence, Kan. Lillian was married to a Mr. Hooper and went to Beatrice, Neb., to live. Others of the family have scattered to California, Oregon and points in Kansas and Nebraska.

John Y. Cole, sr., answered the call of the west when a youth and went to Washington. This was in about 1888. He worked on the railroad in the west and within a short time was made freight superintendent. Soon he saw the possibilities in Canadian gold fields and went there, "a pioneer blazing the trail for others to follow." By 1890 he had opened the O. K. gold mine in British Columbia and was operating a mill.

So started the gold rush and the boom at Rossland, B. C. The first issue of the Rossland newspaper, in 1895, tells of the pioneering done by Mr. Cole who opened rich mining fields. Mr. Cole had within two and a half years left the Nebraska homestead and acquired gold property in Canada. He built a home in Rossland in 1899 and later left. He continued active in the gold business until his death in 1934.

John Y. Cole's only heir, John Y. Cole, jr., who with his wife and son, John, were in Wayne, assisted his father in the mining business and is now carrying on the work.

The remarkable record of John Y. Cole, sr., is recounted in the Encyclopedia of American Biography, published in 1935 by the American Historical society. John Y. Cole, jr., has been spending considerable time this fall tracing the family history and visiting the places his father lived. He found great satisfaction in being able to locate the Nebraska homestead.

Mrs. Don Simpson, Mrs. Maurice Simpson and Dannie of Sioux City, were here Friday to bring the first named's son, Jackie, here to stay with his grandmother, Mrs. F. S. Morgan, for two weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Don Simpson and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Nixon of Sioux City, have driven to New York to attend the John Manville insulation convention. They will visit Washington and other places while in the east and will return through Canada.

New Yorker's Successful in Finding Record

The problem of locating the Nebraska homestead taken by his grandfather was solved the last of the week by John Y. Cole of New York, who spent several days in Wayne after traveling 8,000 miles through the north and west. The Cole farm was east of Hartington, at the intersection of highways 15 and 84, and was regarded one of the richest pieces of land in the valley. Graves of the grandparents, Gideon Cole and Ann M. Pierce-Cole, are in the Hartington cemetery that are among the very earliest there. Mr. Cole also learned the names and addresses of most members of the Cole family.

Gideon Cole and his wife and older children left their home in Rome, N. Y., in about 1865 and arrived at Cobington, Neb., now South Sioux City, in 1868, according to information given by Mrs. Lammers of Hartington, whose father, Mr. Van Buskirk came at the same time and also located at Covington. The two men worked together on a rented farm near St. James, Neb., in 1869. Then in 1870 both men went to Cedar county to take homesteads. Mr. Cole's was on the east side of the road at the intersection east of Hartington, and Mr. Van Buskirk's place was on the west side of the same intersection. The Cole place was the NW 1/4 of 6-2-30.

The Cole residence, a two-story frame, was built in 1870 and added to in 1890. This still stands as part of the residence now on the site.

The Cole home, according to Mrs. Florence Elliott of Hartington, in early days, Mr. Cole played the violin and Mrs. Cole taught the young folks popular dances. Groups gathered there often for good times.

Smithland was the earliest post-office in the vicinity. This was on the Smith homestead near the Cole place. Mrs. Elliott taught the first school in the neighborhood, this being about a half mile distant.

Wildcats Win Over Wesleyan

Coach Jim Morrison's Men Overwhelm Team Friday Night at Lincoln.

Striking with a swiftness that left Wesleyan dazzled, Wayne Wildcats displayed a brilliant aerial attack in the opening period of the football game at Lincoln Friday evening and then settled down to enjoy a two-touchdown lead, winning the game by 12 to 0.

Twice the Wesleyan squad advanced inside Wayne's 10-yard line, but both times the Wildcats kept them from scoring.

It took Coach Jim Morrison's well trained invaders just six plays to ring up their initial touchdown. Dan Hungerford returned the opening kickoff to Wayne's 43. Charley Wehrer picked up a first down in three plays, then Hungerford hurled a long aerial to Joe Landahl who got to the two before being dropped by Frank Harrington.

Wehrer then took two plunges into the line to go over. Jim Owen blocked Farmer's attempted placement.

Bud Best started the second touchdown parade with a 19-yard run. Two plays failed, and with the ball on Wesleyan's 37, Hungerford again faded back, this time tossing to Dick Peterson who caught the pigskin on the 15 and evaded two tacklers to cross the final chalk line un molested.

Maynard intercepted a Wayne pass in the second canto to stop a rally that had advanced to the 24, and a few plays later an off-side penalty nullified a flip that would have put the ball on Wesleyan's four. The half ended with the visitors only eight yards from a third touchdown.

Staten was about all Coach Dwight Thomas had to offer against the heavier Wayne State eleven. The Plainsmen's secondary was no match for Wayne's tricky passes, tossed by either Hungerford or Best, while Wehrer gained at will through the line. Jim Souders and Jim Owen, a pair of freshmen from Jackson high, performed creditably for the losers.

Freshmen Come Through.

"Duggie" Thiel, Albion newcomer, came in and, the ball on the 6-inch line, kicked out to the middle of the field and Wildcat followers breathed easier. Duggie, in this his first chance as a Wildcat player, gave evidence that he has got the "stuff" when he calmly sent the pigskin out of the danger zone. His long high, punts forced Wesleyan back several times during the last quarter. Bud Best produced sparkling running and passing in his first starting assignment, making several runs of 15, 20 and 25 yards, and playing a fine defensive game. Dick Childs and Harold "Ike" Morgan, two

THE VOICE of RELIGION

Current Questions and Answers About Religion, Morals and Personal Problems... Dr. Weldon F. Crossland Rochester, New York

Would freedom in the United States be endangered by America's entry into war? Yes, most seriously endangered. A law, something like the May bill as introduced in congress, would curtail, suspend or abolish American liberty for the duration of the conflict, and probably for some time after its close.

Freedom of speech and assembly would be curtailed. Newspapers would be impelled to print only what would maintain the morale of the people and strengthen the government in winning the war.

Radio stations already fearful for their licenses, would become agencies of propaganda for the military. Congress would again become a rubber stamp since in war nearly all power is vested in the executive branch of government.

Business would be regimented, subject to licensing and regulation. All trade would be channeled through the sluice gates of war. All machinery would be geared to the grueling pace of the war machine. Business and finance would be dislocated.

A super-patriotism would flourish, which would arrogantly express itself in intolerance, persecution and mob violence. Religious liberty and activities would be restricted, if it became necessary to conserve coal and electricity.

If war comes to America, many years of struggle probably would be necessary before a weakened American representative government could be restored.

What do you think of the recent Vatican suggestion for a united church front against Atheism? It is a statesmanlike idea, which I hope the Pope will propose.

At present the formation of such a united front is being seriously considered by Pope XII, according to newspaper reports from Vatican City, though no official call has at this time been issued.

If and when the invitation is issued, every Christian group in the world should accept. Roman Catholics, Greek Catholics and Protestants are all part of the worldwide Christian church.

They worship the same God, trust the same Christ for salvation and hope for the same heaven. What they all have in common far outweighs the less important matters of doctrine and policy on which they differ.

In the face of atheistic forces such as communism all Christian forces should unite to lead the religions of the whole world in a movement to protect the soul of mankind against the corrosive acids of unbelief. Unless they do join forces, they risk being overwhelmed.

Christ Himself expected the change that comes with growth as the promised spirit of truth should guide men into all truth. (Copyright 1939 by Weldon F. Crossland, Rochester, N. Y.)

"You are very lucky to be living in a country which is not at war," writes little Gwenda Liversidge of Huddersfield, England, to Jacqueline Wightman. Something Should Be Done In 1939

Four years from now, in 1943, the prison doors will swing open and close, open and close, each time admitting a youthful criminal, shackled and chained, he will be led into the warden's office, beyond the first steel-barred gate. He will be assigned a number, clothed in prison garb, taken to the prison barber for the regulation haircut, and so be given a place in the routine of a great prison for a span of time.

As we hear the fading echoes of his faltering footsteps beyond the second steel-barred gate, as he goes down the gray corridor of the city of the living dead, we will look back over his history and murmur: "Too bad. Given half a chance and a little intelligent care, this imprisonment could have been avoided."

Four years ago, back in 1939, something should have been done. But that something wasn't done, and Alvin, now designated merely as a number, who knew only poverty and filth, who found his fun in the streets, and who withal had such a pitiful chance to grow up into a good man, will spend a lifetime behind prison bars.

Alvin's drunken father had deserted the family. For three years Alvin made an excellent school record. All that time deep down in his heart he was terribly ashamed of his father's conduct and of his mother's having to work at cleaning chickens in a cold storage plant. He dreamed of the day he would be graduated from high school, become self-supporting, and provide a home for the mother he idolized.

But day after day a tragic thing occurred. Thoughtless schoolmates harassed him by saying he was "a chip off the old block." When he could no longer endure their taunting, he became a truant, attempting to find work.

He and a companion took a car, and while soliciting work in a city away from their home, they were arrested for auto theft. Alvin pleaded guilty to the offense received the maximum sentence from an unsocial judge

Beer Outlaws Going OUT!

Our self-regulatory campaign is rapidly correcting or eliminating the occasional, scattered cases of law-violating dealers found among Nebraska's 2,000 beer outlets. The great majority of more than 1,000 establishments visited to date by our field men unquestionably are operating in the public interest.

In most instances where suggestions for improved operating methods were necessary, proprietors have quickly re-established satisfactory conditions. In other cases, strict disciplinary action has been taken in cooperation with the State Liquor Commission. You can help us by: (1) reporting disorderly taverns; (2) patronizing only law-abiding dealers.

Saving Vegetable Seed.
Saving vegetable seeds from the home garden is almost a lost art in this "modern service" age, and yet there are some very good reasons why this art should be revived on larger scale than ever. E. H. Hoppert, extension horticulturist at the University of Nebraska college of agriculture, points out. By this it is possible to save a little money and strains can be developed that are of superior quality and are also most likely to succeed under local environment.
Some of the vegetables are biennial in nature; they must be stored during the winter and set out next year to make them produce seed. Carrots, beets, rutabagas, kohlrabi, parsnips, celery, onions, cabbage, and a few others belong in this class. It probably isn't worth the trouble to try to grow seeds of these vegetables.
However, it isn't much of a chore to save the seeds from beans, peas, cucumbers, squash, melons, tomatoes, egg plant and peppers.
In planting of vegetables some individual plants may be outstanding in vigor, production, quality, earliness or freedom from disease. A good plan to follow is to mark these outstanding plants with a bit of cloth and allow the fruits to become thoroughly ripe while on the plant.
Bean plants with their ripened pods are pulled and hung up to dry until the seeds are hard. Then the beans are shelled and spread out in a shallow layer to dry out. When thoroughly dry the seed is placed in a cloth sack and hung up in a cool dry place.
Tomatoes from outstanding plants are allowed to ripen until past their edible condition (do not allow them to decay, however). Then crush the fruits with a fork or potato masher. Place the pulp and seeds in a bowl and allow to ferment for two or three days. The seeds will drop to the bottom. Pour off the pulp and liquid and wash the seeds with water until they are clean, then spread them out thinly on an old window screen. When they are thoroughly dry, put them in an envelope or paper sack and store in a dry place.
Seeds of the vine crops, egg plant and peppers are scraped out of the well ripened fruits with a pen knife, spread out thinly to dry and then stored.

Relishes as Appetizers.
That sweet-sour combination of flavors provided by relishes might be just the thing that is needed to dress up an otherwise commonplace meal. Relishes contain little food value and should not be served to small children, but eaten in small amounts they have a definite place in the diet as appetizers.
Relishes are not difficult to prepare. They can often be made from small amounts of vegetables or fruits not easily made use of in other ways. The English Chutney recipe given below calls for only a few ingredients and will be a real addition to the winter food supply:
12 green tomatoes
6 medium sized onions
6 large apples (peeled and cut up)
5 red chillies or 1 large red pepper (out lip)
1 quart vinegar
2 cups water
2 tablespoons salt
Put the first three ingredients through a coarse food chopper and to them add the vinegar, sugar, chillies or the pepper and salt. Place in large saucepan and simmer slowly until the mixture thickens (about one-half hour). Place in sterile jars and seal. This is more delicious if left sealed for several weeks before using it.
