

Candidates to Be in Wayne Friday Night of This Week - Editors at Norfolk - Seasonal Epidemic - Nebraska Still Ranks High.

We are glad the republican state central committee has scheduled its caravan of candidates to spend Friday night in Wayne with a big meeting in the municipal auditorium. People from Wayne and neighboring counties are invited to come, fill the auditorium and get acquainted with the republican party's pre-primary candidates of whom there are about twenty-five. It is important to know how they look and act in forming one's voting judgment.

The distinction to Wayne in selecting this place as an overnight stop may be strengthened by the feeling of welcome expressed. Wayne's accustomed hospitality will be manifested by citizens regardless of party affiliations, as may be assured.

Policies Are Discussed. At the meeting of the Northeast Nebraska Press association in Norfolk Friday afternoon, members discussed delinquent subscription lists and the government's enforcement of a rule to soak publications carrying subscribers more than a year in arrears. In recent period of duping and new-deal mismanagement, it has been more difficult for newspapers to keep subscription lists paid in advance. Leniency is often shown persons who want to take a county newspaper and who intend to pay for it, but who, through unfavorable conditions, have been unable to do so.

But apparently the government regards a subscriber more than a year in arrears as not genuine and thus not entitled to be included in the list granted the lowest mailing privilege. As we understand, the government snickersnee falls on publishers who have allowed delinquents beyond the one-year limit. The publisher is charged a higher rate for each copy of the newspaper sent out through the years contrary to rule. This may become a tough experience for a mercifully inclined newspaper. The government gains nothing if the list is paid up. It benefits its exchequer if delinquents are carried, and therefore the newspaper suffers extra loss.

The cash-in-advance plan, made bona fide by restriction to those who have really subscribed, is the only sound one. Manifestly, publishers will have to come to it even thoughaverse to cutting off old-time subscribers whose failure to pay is due to an unavoidable streak of bad luck. This evidence of rare economy on the part of the government may with at least equal wisdom be extended to other branches of the public service.

The question of campaign advertising was discussed at the press meeting, and it was pointed out that state candidates could get more for their money in circulation by advertising in a metropolitan newspaper. The smaller the newspaper, the greater the rate per thousand. But no publication, no matter how large its general circulation, can compare with a county weekly in covering the field it serves. The Saturday Evening Post's advertising rate per inch per thousand would be cheaper than that of a country weekly, but the service of the latter in a small area would be far greater. If the Post even charged the rural newspaper's rate it would still be too expensive considering possible results in a limited field.

In Mild Arizona. It seems the flu, which we have lately been forced to experience, is also indigenous to the salubrious zephyrs at Phoenix, Arizona, where Editor F. D. Stone of the Hartington Herald is spending the winter months for his health. He devotes a column to explaining how the disease has been galloping through his helpless anatomy, attacking bones, muscles and organs with ruthless disregard of proprietary rights. The flu, does to the human system what ill-conceived public policies do to the economic system, though doubtless the flu is quicker and easier to overcome. Many hereabouts have been tackled by the disease and are closely familiar with its bold, bad habits. We hope Editor Stone has pulled himself back to normalcy long ere this.

Still an Agricultural State. It is refreshing to read that Nebraska is considered one of the leading agricultural states. In late years of drought we had begun to wonder if we were still in the agricultural business, but if not, what was really our chief occupation. But since our good reputation has stuck to us despite a series of late unhappy experiences, we hope it will be justified by old-time abundance this year.

Editor Cramb of the Fairbury Journal, democrat of the old school, advises that President Roosevelt can capture a third term by making it a WPA project.

Board of Health Plan Is Favored

Resolution of Necessity Is To Be Considered in Sewage Matter.

Resolution of necessity with a public hearing and an expression of voters at an election are the two methods by which a city may legally proceed with the problem of sewage disposal. Wayne city council, meeting Tuesday, chose to follow the former method. A damage action recently filed by the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, owner of land northeast of Wayne, has forced the matter to attention of the council.

The resolution method, devised by the state board of health some years ago, provides that the council may pass a resolution of necessity regarding sewage treatment. A public hearing is arranged, when objections may be presented. The council may then proceed with the bond issue.

The council Tuesday entered into a contract with Steinauer & Schweser, Lincoln bond company, for sale of sewage treatment plant bonds if this city decides to have such a plant. Steinauer & Schweser are drawing up the resolution of necessity which will probably be ready for action of the council in two weeks.

It is expected that a sewage treatment plant for Wayne would cost about $50,000. Deducing what the state would provide because of the tollage and the cost of labor and material furnished by WPA, the city would need to issue about $20,000 in bonds. WPA supplies labor and $6 per man per month for material. The Lincoln company (Continued on Page Two)

Stamp Plan Survey to Be Made Within Area

Resolutions Are Passed by Wayne Groups Favoring This Proposal.

The Federal Surplus Commodities corporation is, according to announcement made yesterday by State Senator Tom Lambert of Columbus, favorably considering the application of Platte, Nance, Madison, Wayne, Stanton, Knox and Pierce counties for a rural area food stamp plan. A survey within the area will be conducted within six weeks. The object is to increase the buying power of relief dollars.

A two-day meeting will be held in Norfolk in connection with the survey. Officials will confer with assistance directors, WPA and farm security administrators and a committee from the seven counties. Wayne Chamber of Commerce is cooperating in promoting the plan. Kiwanis club, Men's club and Women's club have adopted resolutions favoring the set-up. In part these resolutions state that where as the food stamp plan is the most efficient method yet devised for moving agricultural surpluses, whereas a large number would be benefited by it and whereas many have expressed favor of the method, these groups give their united approval.

FARM COMMUNITIES ARRIVE AT MOVING JUNCTURE OF YEAR

THIS is moving time among farmers. The weather is not always friendly at this season to the idea of loading up one's belongings and transporting them to new quarters. March often rings in sharp changes for the worse. But it is necessary to get relocated and comfortably settled ahead of spring work. Therefore, it is unavoidable to select for making changes a time when the elements are full of ugly possibilities. Farewell parties have been numerous the past few days, and welcoming parties will be equally as numerous. Neighbors regret to see accustomed faces leave, but are glad to greet new ones and make them feel they have chosen pleasing environments. Thus, farm communities are notably sympathetic and helpful. They give assistance to those going or coming, and they warm cordial neighborliness.

World Affairs Are Described For Kiwanians

Editor J. S. Woodson Gives Analysis of Problems Facing Nations.

"The United States must keep out of war, and when the strife abroad is over let us mind our own business and stay away from the peace table." This opinion was expressed by J. S. Woodson of Sioux City, Monday when he addressed Wayne Kiwanis club and guests following noonday luncheon at Hotel Stratton on the subject, "The World Today." Mr. Woodson is editorial writer for the Sioux City Journal and is a keen student of world affairs.

"Let us give all possible aid to the democracies but send no expeditionary forces," Mr. Woodson continued. "Meanwhile let us prepare. The trouble abroad is not our affair, neither is its settlement our fight. An unwise treaty that might lay the foundation for another conflict could be blamed upon us."

"I believed war was a thing of the past when I was a boy, that I never should be permitted to experience." (Continued on Page Seven)

Republican Caravan to Come to Wayne Friday

EDITORIAL WRITER REFRESHES LOCAL GROUP WITH TALK

J. S. WOODSON, editorial writer for the Sioux City Journal, refreshed Kiwanians and guests following their noonday luncheon Monday with a sort of close-up on world conditions. In the vernacular of the street, one would say Mr. Woodson knows his stuff. As a persistent student of affairs and with opportunities for many personal contacts, Mr. Woodson is able to draw on a rich fund of information. Evidently he has a wonderfully retentive memory, knows how to evaluate, knows the answers to a lot of questions puzzling the minds of people at this time. The close attention given and the ready response to an invitation to ask questions showed lively concern over world trends and possible consequences. The Kiwanis club adds to its public service by inviting in speakers who are specializing along different lines of popular interest. H. E. Siman is program chairman.

Complete Final Audit on School Building Work

Wayne District Is Entitled To Balance of Grant For Project

Final audit on the Wayne city school project was completed Wednesday noon and arrangements were being made by E. W. Seymour, board secretary, to follow it with an immediate request to the Public Works Administration for the remaining grant due the school district.

The audit revealed that there were slight overruns as to time for completing three contracts, one of which was a one-day overrun on the contract of the Kingery Construction company, principal contractor. The University Publishing company and Omaha School Supply company, on equipment contracts, also failed to finish on the dates set.

However, the building itself was completed and in use long before the project completion deadline and there were no penalties for failure to complete the individual contracts on dates set.

The audit also revealed that the approval of the PWA has not yet been received on the expenditure of $28 to a testing laboratory. However, this does not deduct from the PWA grant base because of a $48.35 overrun in the cost of the project. The district is still eligible for the full amount of the grant.

The audit showed that the district was entitled to a total grant of $42,395 of which $30,450 already has been paid by the government. A balance of $11,945 will be paid after approval and submission of a final grant requisition to be prepared by Secretary Seymour and Dan Farrell, jr., resident engineer, PWA.

Norfolk Doctor Is Speaker Here

Dr. G. L. Sandritter Speaks To Parent-Teacher Group Monday.

Education progresses in proportion to the interest parents take in their schools, according to Dr. G. L. Sandritter, Norfolk psychiatrist, who addressed Wayne city school and Wayne prep Parent-Teacher association and guests Monday evening in the first of four visits he will make here this spring for this purpose.

Dr. Sandritter, who was introduced by Mrs. L. F. Perry, president of the organization, chose the baby, the child to 2 years of age, as his subject Monday. One of the aims in dealing with children is to make them feel at home among people. They naturally are fearful of noises, falling, etc., because they feel an insecurity. This feeling often carries over into adult life.

It is said a child learns more in its first three years than during all the rest of its life. Therefore, these first years of training should be watched carefully. Dr. Sandritter classified people into two groups, those who draw away from others and those who want to mingle with others. The latter tendency is preferred and should be encouraged in babyhood.

Some babies learn much more easily than others, the speaker stated. Necessity usually prompts all learning. Habits formed early often carry over to adult life so it is important to guide the little one in desirable habits. A child may have more handicaps than others but proper guidance often enables him to excel the one who has greater advantages. Just use common sense and help the baby make the best possible of himself, the doctor advised.

Officers and chairmen of the city group served after the program. Mrs. Orville Tuskind and Mrs. Paul Mines were chairmen.

Sounding Preference A NEWS REPORT states that petitions have been filed placing the name of Thomas E. Dewey, New York prosecuting attorney, on the Nebraska republican primary ballot to secure an expression of preference for the presidential nomination, and this action was followed by filing petitions for Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan. To many, Mr. Dewey lacks the experience and seasoned judgment needed to lead a bewildered nation out of the new deal tangle. He is said to have great personal charm, but he must have more than that to step from a prosecuting attorney's office in New York to the responsible task of sorting over the economic wreckage and salvaging the good and discarding the unwise and harmful.

We have cuddled up to the radio and listened to soothing assurances from Washington for seven years only to reap sickening disappointment. With all due respect to Dewey's high intentions, we doubt his capacity at this time to give us the confidence and courage needed to surmount disappointments, revive our spirits and get our feet back into the soundly rational middle course. We feel strongly for Dewey for second place where he could gain experience valuable to later service. Apparently he has an abundance of undeveloped qualities of statesmanship. As vice-president, he would lend important aid to a president of the Vandenberg stature.

Senator Vandenberg has been in the midst of new deal evolutions from the beginning, and he has all the measurements and knows all the mistakes. As pointed out by Paul Mallon, columnist, Vandenberg has a constructive program that makes sense. He would make practical any new deal plans worth saving. He would remove the yoke from business, encourage employment by encouraging employers, revise farm policies by instituting a program of abundance rather than continuing a program of curtailment and scarcity, and absorb excesses in foreign markets. He would amend or repeal new deal laws that have proved obstructive. He says he would not only stay out of the foreign war, but he would stay out of final peace terms.

What we need is stalwart statesmanship to lead a perplexed nation in a sorely troubled world, and up to date, surveying both sides of the political fence, Vandenberg seems most completely to answer the demand.

Some minds lean strongly to reproducing others to originate, while those liberally endowed both to reproduce and originate would seem the luckiest. J. S. Woodson of the Sioux City Journal editorial staff, who spoke to Kiwanians here Monday, has both faculties well developed, and therefore he is able both to assemble facts and analyze and interpret them. He is an impressive example to young persons to store away as much information as possible while their minds are most receptive as a valuable aid to later thinking. What is learned in youth is easily recalled. What is gathered in the evening of life is quickly forgotten.

At one time a few years ago when federal money flooded eastern economic arteries and caused a temporary upswing in business, the president proudly exclaimed: "We planned it this way." And we think he did, but the plan didn't last, and icy silence ensued. The pump did not stay primed, and there is no chance that pump-priming — buying prosperity — will ever act as more than a passing tonic. The trouble must be reached at the source, and we should not need any more experience to be convinced.

Republican state and district candidates are starting off their pre-primary campaign this week, moving in a caravan and visiting central points where they hope to meet an increased number of voters in decreased time. It is believed this plan will simplify a state-wide canvass, facilitate acquaintance both for candidates and voters. The caravan will be in Wayne Friday evening, and people from the neighboring territory are urged to come and get acquainted with those who want to serve them.

Believers in the new deal's farm plan rightly contend that the agricultural problem will not be solved until the farmer receives prices for his products on a parity with those he has to pay. The new deal has been going to establish this parity for seven years. Isn't it time to rearrange the plan? Isn't it time to stimulate demand and increase consumption and in that way raise and stabilize prices?

Hiler has apparently reversed himself in acknowledging the existence of God, whom he has announced as an ally. We suspect the nazi dictator would not hesitate to dissolve the partnership if he happened to have clear sailing.

A writer says nations that rely on force cannot long survive without war. Nations that do not have the liberty to think and talk and develop improvements and make progress are likely to blow up.

Increased thousands asking for naturalization in the United States show how foreigners feel about escaping dictatorships and getting within the protective folds of the American flag.

Columnists cannot always guess right. Dorothy Thompson declared there would be no European war a few days before it broke out.

The church's big battle is between good and evil forces rather than between disagreeing forms and ceremonies.

Many Workers Spoiled.

Local contractors say that the federal government has spoiled a good many workers by its relief program. One of them recently, in search of men to help tear down a brick building, met with refusal from a man on WPA who said he didn't like such dirty work.

Some Obvious 'Cannots.'

You cannot bring about prosperity by discouraging thrift.

You cannot strengthen the weak by weakening the strong.

You cannot help small men by tearing down big men.

You cannot help the poor by destroying the rich.

You cannot lift the wage earner up by pulling the wage payer down.

You cannot keep out of trouble by spending more than your income.

You cannot further the brotherhood of man by inciting class hatred.

You cannot establish sound social security on borrowed money.

You cannot build character and courage by taking away men's initiative and independence.

You cannot help men permanently by doing for them what they could and should do for themselves.

Another Henry Wallace.

Here are a couple of paragraphs from a statement by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, which make interesting reading:

"If it cannot be stopped in any other way, congress should enact a law imposing very severe penalties upon any government official who undertakes to influence either crop production or crop prices. There are too many people in public office who seem to think they ought to exercise some sort of guidance or guarantee over the farmer."

"As is always the case in such periods, many well-meaning men come forward with ill-considered measures. Visionary schemes of all kinds are presented. Some would have the government take charge of all the larger business enterprises. Others would have the government undertake to fix prices, either arbitrarily or indirectly, by buying up surplus crops. The experience of 5,000 years shows the impracticability of such efforts."

You probably have guessed that these two paragraphs were written, not by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, but by his father, former Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace. They were quoted by former Gov. Sam McKelvie in the Nebraska Farmer.

The elder Henry Wallace, were he alive today, would probably look over the results of the experimenting by his capable son and say, "I told you so."

More Breathing Spells Needed.

Discussing the commercial and industrial situation does not appear to be getting us anywhere but business men realize that they must keep informed of what is going on in order to act intelligently. In discussing the present trend of business, Colonel Ayers of the Cleveland Trust company, sounds a note of courage as well as of caution.

"Now a new business relapse is under way," declares this economic reviewer. "It is not as yet very serious, and its causes are not at all shrouded in mystery. It has come because the preparations that business men made last autumn were appropriate for the last war, and apparently not appropriate for this one. Our exports have increased, but unless far more numerous and larger war orders are placed than those that have so far been made, our economy is back in about the situation that it occupied before the war began. Our problems are still those of huge taxation, idle men, idle dollars, and multiple barriers impeding the expansion of business enterprise."

Business people complain that no sooner do they get adjusted to one government regulation than another comes along to confuse and delay them, not to mention the costs involved in legal and auditing services, as hearings and possibly court tests drag along to a new decision as to what may or may not be done. The plea of business is that it be let alone for a while, to make more business and thus give employment to more men. But these days we have so many government agencies of one kind and another, all looking for things to do to keep themselves employed, and mainly what they do is to pester business so it can't function as it should. "No sooner do you get one contention cleared up than another appears," said a business man the other day. "They wear you out, till you just come to feel that it's no use!" That sort of thing hurts the farmer as well as the business man.

Some of these days the responsible government authorities are going to learn that business is not hesitant and afraid of what has happened. They have adjusted their operations to new laws and new conditions but it is the fear of new conditions created by new restrictive laws that tends to hold business back. Apparently what the country needs is longer breathing spells.

IMPERATIVE.

Failure to stress spiritual values will undermine our civilization, so suggests an editorial reproduced from Fortune. The writer says national and international problems cannot be solved on material grounds. Rise of America's free democracy is offered as proof of the need of religion in which faith is strong and unyielding. There must be effective spiritual leadership to avoid maladjustments in our politico-economic system, to insure confidence, opportunities and proper distribution of wealth, to escape collectivism and wars. There is at stake, not just prosperity, but civilization. The writer concludes: "There is only one way out: the sound of a voice, coming from something not ourselves, in the existence of which we cannot disbelieve. It is the earthly task of the pastors to hear this voice, to relate it convincingly to the contemporary scene, and to tell us what it says. If they cannot hear it, as if they fail to tell us, we, as laymen, are utterly lost. Without it we are no more capable of saving the world than we were capable of creating it in the first place."

Soil Conservation Interest Increases

Interest in soil conservation has prompted a meeting at the school in district 15, five miles north and a half west of Wayne Friday evening at 7:30. Agent Chester Walters will be assisted by M. J. Hankins and Ed. Slipsky. That area may be included with the south part of the county in a soil district. A similar gathering will likely be called in Wayne.

A meeting was held last evening at Altona to plat the area signed up for this work. Petitions for the program are being circulated in all the south precincts of Wayne county.

The Leslie precinct committee circulating petitions, named last week, includes L. J. Bressler, D. Kai, Eric Albers, Orval Puckett and Chester Hansen.

MARKETING HINTS GIVEN FOR GROUP

Sioux City Junior Chamber of Commerce held a conference for young farmers Wednesday last week in connection with the state extension service of Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota. Herbert Perry of Wayne, Gordon Nuernberger of Wakefield, Ruben Straat of Winside, and Agent Chester Walters attended from here. J. C. Muloney spoke on marketing grain, O. W. Olson on marketing poultry, butter and eggs, D. H. Cunningham on functions of the public market, Vern Wendel on problems of cattle feeders and C. R. Pritchard on marketing beef.

Alumni of Iowa Plan for Banquet

Alumni of the University of Iowa will hold their annual banquet at Hotel Stratton this Thursday evening at 7. St. Patrick church will be used in the table appointments and menu. Loreen Lindberg will play accompaniments for group singing, and after the dinner a motion picture of the Iowa-Notre Dame football game will be shown at the high school. This will be at 8:30 in the high school auditorium and everyone interested is invited to see the picture. Dr. and Mrs. Richard Stuart, Prof. and Mrs. W. A. Wollenhaupt and T. S. Hook are in charge of arrangements. Miss Coral Stoddard secretary and Miss Ruth Padden treasurer of the northeast association.

How to entertain small groups or as many as 500 was demonstrated Wednesday last week at the city hall for 23 club leaders, Ralph Copenhaver of Lincoln, was in charge. Copies of these recreational activities may be secured from Agent Chester Walters.

JOBS TO FILL.

A recent magazine article, says American business and industry will have about 2,000,000 jobs to fill this year, due to expanded activities. There are plenty of applicants for jobs, but not enough trained or adapted to requirements. Many find themselves compelled to start in niches below expectations. Those who do, however, and who do their best, usually make the grade and soon earn promotions. It is noted that often young persons create jobs by using their imaginations and showing how they can serve to the advantage of employers. The article concludes: "Pride in one's work, loyalty and ambition are qualities employers are always looking for in applicants for jobs. Stunts and trick approaches, while occasionally effective, are disliked by most personnel managers. Whether spectacular or orthodox, the approach must, in the words of one of them, 'reveal something about the applicant which is of value to us.' Our survey of 1940's 2,000,000 openings might be summed up in those words. As one advertising executive puts it: 'The market for men of quality, purpose and brains who are sensibly aggressive, is always good.'"

CONGRESS AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN

Washington, D. C. February 22, 1940. The boyhood home of George Washington, known as Ferry Farm, located near Fredericksburg, Virginia, was sold the other day for twenty-five thousand dollars. It consists of 470 acres and upon it much history was made. Sol Bloom, who was director of the George Washington bicentennial commission, is now trying to buy that farm home for preservation as a national shrine.

Many letters are being received by this office asking us just how many unemployed people there are in the United States at this time. The latest estimates place the number of 9,400,000, which is about four percent lower than the report of a year ago. It was reported that December and January have been busy months for manufacturing industries with the result that factory employment increased almost three-fourths of a million and the farm industry put almost another five hundred thousand to work, but since then five to six hundred thousand new young people have entered the labor market and farm employment has again dropped, which would indicate unemployment has been reduced only fractionally. The American Federation of Labor figures indicate there are 9,370,000 unemployed and the CIO figures indicate there are 10,000,000 unemployed, so the guess is that the total of unemployed people in our country at this time is in the neighborhood of 10,000,000.

Several hundred reserve officers, with senators and representatives as their guests, assembled Friday night and heard the secretary of war tell them that this country is not going to be caught napping in a war emergency develops, and for that reason the reserve officers were told to be ready to take up their places in the armed forces of our nation in case something should happen. The secretary of war told the reserve officers that the regular army would be called first, then the members of the national guard, and the reserve officers third. But, as the army ranks are being filled, individuals will be drawn from both the guards and the reserves. In all of this discussion, very little was said as to how the buck private would be secured, and the guess was that in case something does happen, the draft is ready to be put into operation. That is why that session should not be concluded without a pretty good understanding that if anything is going to be drafted in case war comes to us again, money and materials will be just as much subject to draft as human beings. Colonel Leo J. Crosby of Omaha, represented the Nebraska contingent of the reserve officers at the annual meeting here.

Colonel George A. Eberley of Stanton, national commander of the United Spanish-American war veterans, was highly honored at the annual ceremonies in Arlington national cemetery in commemoration of the anniversary of the battleship Maine's explosion.

The reason the house took three million dollars out of the billion dollar naval appropriation bill the other day was that the majority of the members present felt that this money which was to be used in the island of Guam was the first step toward pushing our far east line of defense closer to the Philippine Islands instead of maintaining it on a line from Alaska south to Hawaii. The navy wants to fortify Guam, but the house and the senate are opposed to it. In spite of the fact that the naval appropriation bill carried the largest amount of money in our peace-time history, there was little opposition, in view of the fact that the committee was able to show that it had cut over one hundred eleven million dollars from the budget estimates. Hearings are now being held on the army appropriation bill which will contain gigantic sums.

Indications here are that many Americans have abandoned the illusion that the war which is tearing Europe to pieces is no concern of Americans. The departure of Under-Secretary of State Welles to Europe has more importance than people generally realize. There are great hopes expressed that peace will come, but the saber-rattlers, who are in such large numbers in Washington today, have been telling out in public that they are positive no peace can come before next winter and many public statements are being printed indicating that something big is heard of in a war is being hatched for the coming spring. Whether this will be a general push by the allies or by Germany or by Japan or by Russia, or just what is going to happen is not detailed. But in the lobbies of the house, and the various hotels and gathering places, the story is going the rounds that a "horrible war is in the making for this spring. America better be ready." Whether the fact that the gigantic naval appropriation bill is now in the making, and the gigantic army appropriation bill is just around the corner, has anything to do with these frightful war stories is problematical. Most members know that just before the two houses are about to vote on huge appropriation bills, those directly interested usually spread some kind of propaganda to grease the track for the passage of these bills. Yet the conditions are so serious in the war that a majority of the members of congress is anxious to do everything possible to have this country prepared for real national defense in order to meet any present or future emergencies. At the same time, these appropriation bills are being watched carefully in order that nothing unnecessary is "put across."

Lyle Jackson, republican national committeeman from Nebraska, has been here in Washington several days and was one of the outstanding figures among the committeemen attending the meeting of the republican national committee during the exciting hours when the committee selected Philadelphia as the national convention city and June 24 as the convention opening date. Jackson told Nebraska friends that most of the votes for Chicago came from committeemen from the west and midwest.

Paul Roberts of Lincoln, director of the prairie states forestry project for the area including Nebraska, addressed a meeting attended by a number of congressmen from the plains states the other day. He explained the conditions of the shelterbelt at the present time, and the meeting developed information that unless additional funds are secured for this meritorious work, this phase of the program will go out, in view of the fact that it has been operating entirely on relief funds since 1935. A committee was selected to make an investigation of means to make the program permanent and also to urge continuation of funds for tree planting in the plains states, preferably under the direction of the forest service. If and when the forest service unites its work with the soil conservation service, they may eventually accomplish much of this work, if funds can be increased through the authorization of the Norris-Doxey act, on account of which three hundred thousand dollars is provided in the pending agricultural appropriation bill.

Committee debate on the 966 million dollar appropriation bill developed the fact that the navy aviation divisions are running ahead in airplanes and behind in pilots. So the committee has recommended more pilots and what they believe will be sufficient planes for these fliers. The general idea is that they should have about four pilots for every three planes. General opinion among the committee is that airplanes are worth more than some battleships which cost more than 110 millions dollars each.

Seniority in congress is important. How important it is indicated by a southern member who lectured some of the southern congressmen because they were not fighting hard enough to defeat the anti-lynching bill. "Remember the southerners now have the balance of power in both houses of congress. By your conduct you make it impossible for us to support you for many important committee assignments and other positions to which you may aspire. Without the south, there would be no democratic party and without the help of the southern democrats, not much can be accomplished. We are here now, and we will be here when many of you are gone." Practically all of the chairmanships of important committees are held by southern democrats because of their long service. The chairman of a committee is very powerful. Many times important legislation can be held up and even meetings can be stopped by such chairmen, and lucky is the member who is on good terms with these powerful committee chairmen.

Washington, D. C. February 15, 1940. The relative death rate in congress averages more than four times higher than the relative death rate in the nation. There have already been 23 deaths among the members of the 76th congress—18 of them during the last year. Most of the deaths have resulted from heart attack. Many other members are ailing and many are under the care of doctors. Flu is general in this town. Drug stores say they have heard time keeping prescriptions filled. Right now there is a shortage of doctors.

Farmers who are interested in the parity item which was omitted from the house agricultural appropriation bill, will be interested to know that the reason the administration then discouraged that item was because it is watching the prices of farm products. If the prices rise close to parity, the item will be abandoned by the administration. If prices are not high enough, the administration will put its full force behind the parity item. The senate will take up the bill next week. Word comes that parity, the stamp plan money and farm tenancy will be in the bill when it goes to conference.

important speech on farm questions soon in Des Moines. He is expected to tell farmers that the war is not helping them and will not help them. Members who worked against the repeal of the arms embargo on the ground that Great Britain would quit buying our farm products and concentrate here on the purchase of armaments, believe that their charges are now being confirmed. Reports of big farm products purchases by Great Britain outside of this country are current here. The British are preserving their credit and exchange for the buying of armaments.

The house passed a bill giving civil service status to thousands of government employees. There was considerable objection by many members because they charged that the bill did not effectuate the merit system due to its failure to provide for competitive examination. It was also charged that the bill would blanket into the civil service many political appointees. Anyway many government employees who have been feeling that they were obligated to certain politicians will become independent of that influence and subject to civil service rules. Civil service workers feel that the legislation will improve the service. The senate may put some amendments into the bill. Washington people are opposed to one house amendment in the bill which would withhold civil service status from District of Columbia people until the states now under their apportioned quotas fill their apportionment. Nebraska is an over-quota state.

When the census taker comes around, don't refuse to answer the questions he asks. The law is pretty strict and all of the questions must be answered. Many members of congress have received letters from people at home stating that it was understood that the answers were not compulsory. An erroneous newspaper story in New York, to that effect, caused a lot of members much trouble. So special information was received from the census director and congressmen are now told to inform their constituents that the answers to the census questions are compulsory under the law.

The annual expose of inhuman conditions existing in the various Washington institutions is now appearing in the local press. These charges of lack of funds for the institutions always come a few weeks before the appropriation committee starts considering how much money shall be spent on the local district government. The taxpayers of every state in the union participate in giving the local people over six million dollars outright grant each year. The local people feel the amount should be doubled. Members who fail to boost big appropriations for this town get bad local publicity.

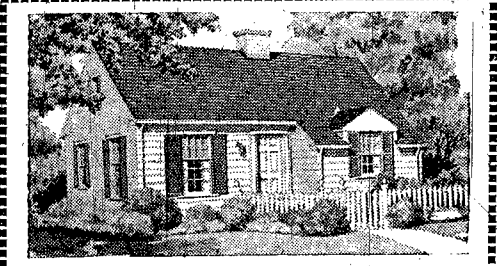

The local liquor business is being investigated. Some charges are made that the liquor business is in the hands of crime and that it is a racket. It charged that children under age and school children are buying liquor. Mass meetings have been held during which it is charged that there is more racket than ever before.

Twelve hours of general debate in the house on the proposal to extend the reciprocal trade agreements has been agreed upon. The ways and means committee hearings are concluded and in unrevised print. They are so voluminous that very few copies are yet available and the printers are behind time. The house will get the bill about February 20. It is admitted that industry made such a poor showing against the bill that it will be passed by both houses without any material changes. Even those hoping for amendments to insure senate ratification of reciprocal trade agreements indicate defeat. Secretly, representatives of New England admit that for the first time in years those industries are showing profits. Farm district members feel the agreements are lopsided because they may help some industry to the detriment of agriculture.

Monsignor O'Grady who was in Nebraska last summer surveying the affects of the drought, is calling on members urging help for N. Y. A. appropriations. He believes this agency which helps youth, should be organized on a permanent basis. Nebraska officials of this administration say, so far as they are concerned, it has no communistic connections and should not be connected with the National Youth Congress.

Ed. Fricke and Raymond Arndt of the Loup River Power district have been in town making reports to the Federal Power Commission. The power district officials made the trip from Omaha to Washington by plane in eight hours.

Scout headquarters in each community are attempting to broaden the opportunities for community service. They are working now on a plan of closer cooperation with at least one local agency concerned with service or citizenship. "This is not a new idea," says Mrs. Paul Rittenhouse, national director of the girl scouts. "Since girl scouting was first organized 25 years ago, a sense of responsibility towards home and country has been a fundamental precept. "But today, when democratic principles need more than ever to be clearly understood by all, we feel that we must make a greater effort to train our girls to be ready to assume their responsibilities as citizens when they become of voting age." Mrs. Rittenhouse said that no attempt has ever been made to take the girls out of their own level of experience. Girl scout leaders work from the simplest unit of democracy, the home. They try to inculcate in girls from 7 to 18, the age group reached by this recreational and character-building organization, a sense of responsibility for the smooth functioning of their homes. The success of the movement in accomplishing this purpose is indicated by the popularity of homemaking as a field of interest. "In our work with girls, we try to help them understand that as a member of the home they have a duty towards that home. We try to broaden their understanding so that they will be able to translate that sense of responsibility to community and country. We try to show them that the first contribution any one has to make to home or country is what she is herself. "Then we ask her to think out what she means when she says, 'my dog,' 'my home,' 'my country.' We try to show her that the use of 'my' implies responsibility. If we have a dog, we watch over it and take care of it. So if we say 'my country,' 'my community,' we must be interested in its welfare or it isn't really 'mine' at all." Responsibility towards the second step in the girl's understanding of her duty towards her country.

Girl scouting's objectives of helping develop the finest types of American girls were explained by Miss Dorothy Taylor, field executive, who finished a few-day visit here last Thursday. Ralph Pinkham performing the ceremony at the Congregational parsonage. The former's mother, Mrs. A. M. C. Dewitz, accompanied them.

Mrs. Carlson received her bachelor of science degree at Columbia university, New York, in 1922 and her master of arts degree there in 1929. She came to Wayne in 1925 and has been here since. She will continue her work.

Mr. Carlson, a former Wayne college student, farms a mile north and three-fourths west of Wayne.

Construction of Stanton county rural power lines has started.

Laura E. Lyons Writes from West

Twin sons born to Mr. and Mrs. K. D. Wallace of Long Beach, Cal., a few days ago are the first grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Lute W. Carter of that place and formerly of Carroll and Winside. The infants weighed 5½ and 4½ pounds. Mrs. Carter was formerly Blanche Miller of Winside. The Carters are regular attendants at the Wayne county picnic, Miss Laura Lyons writes February 19.

Mrs. Alice Ley, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Ley, Lulu Marie and Alice called on Miss Lyons February 17 when they were returning to their home in Encinitas after a short trip. All are well.

Nels Utter, former resident of Wayne and Laurel vicinities, died February 3 in Long Beach. He suffered a stroke New Year's day and was in a hospital two weeks. The rosary was sung for him February 5. The remains will be accompanied to Laurel in April by Mrs. Utter for burial beside the two children of the family. A granddaughter, Jeanne, resides with Mrs. Utter.

The Utters came to Wayne county in 1886 soon after their marriage. They knew the Russells, W. O. Gambles, Klevens, Flohrs and Hogelins in whose neighborhood they lived about two miles north-east of Wayne. Later the Utters bought an 80 in Cedar county south of Laurel. They sold that place in 1893 and bought another two miles southeast of Laurel. Their son, Carl, and daughter, Esther, were graduated from Laurel high school and the latter also finished at Wayne normal soon after the school was bought by the state.

The Utter family moved to Long Beach in 1920 and invested in apartments. They have a lovely home in east Long Beach.

Club Hears Talk About Etiquette

Record of Nebraska Song Is Played for Broadcast On Saturday.

"History of Etiquette" was the subject of the address given for Wayne Women's club Friday by Dean Martha Smith of the college faculty. The speaker told that as a rule foreigners are more polite than Americans. Etiquette applies to all classes of people, and is defined as the ability to enjoy guests and help them enjoy you. Another definition classes etiquette as ability to rub elbows with fellowmen without friction.

Prof. H. H. Hanscom played piano solos, "To the Sea," "Ocean Thy Mighty Monster," "A. D. 1620" and "A Song." These are pieces by Edward MacDowell which established a studio to help musicians at Peterboro, N. H. Prof. Hanscom visited this.

Wayne Women's club furnished a recording of Mrs. S. A. Lütgen's song, "Nebraska, My Native Land," sung by Mrs. W. H. Hasebrook of Scribner, which was given for radio broadcast Saturday.

The women voted to give $10 to the Kiwanis fund to help underprivileged children. They also gave a vote of approval to the proposed food stamp plan.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Lillian Miller, Mrs. A. McEachen, Mrs. Walter Miller, Mrs. Paul Mines, Mrs. F. I. Moses and Mrs. Austin Crane.

Accession Books At City Library

A varied type of reading can be found in the list of new books received at the Wayne library. One book is "The Other Germany," by Erik and Klaus Mann. One of the good services Hitler unwittingly performed for America was the transfer of Germany's greatest living family of writers to these shores. Thomas Mann, his wife, Greta, and daughters, came to the United States because they disliked Hitler and Nazism—but not because they dislike Germany.

"Let Me Think" is by H. A. Overstreet. It is seldom that a philosopher writes about everyday living and rarer still that one translates high thinking into everyday language. The author does both.

Alfred Huxley's "After Monday a Summer Dies the Swan" is crowded with amusing characters and situations. This new novel of a rich man obsessed by the desire to live indefinitely is the author in his most entertaining and satirical vein.

"I Love My English Accent" is by C. V. R. Thompson. Interesting and varied as Mr. Thompson's adventures have been, the real charm of the book lies in his ability to "make us see ourselves as others see."

"Three Trumpets Sound," by Allan A. Hunter, is a story of the three strong men, Kagawa, Gandhi and Schweitzer.

"Polonaise" is by Martin Hara. Much of her life, was spent in Poland, which is her husband's native land. So there could be no better person than she to write of English people on a visit to Warsaw.

"The City of Gold," by Francis Brett Young, is a story of the city, Johannesburg, reared by men's greed in the pleasant land of the Boers. To the bottomless gold pits of the Rand come a motley herd of adventures.

"No Arms, No Arrout," by Robert Henriques, will rank among the first ten novels of 1940, according to the New York Sun.

"Land Below the Wind," by Agnes Newton Keith, is the $5,000 Atlantic non-fiction prize book. It is a story of Borneo.

Others on the list are "Murder Began," by Delia Van Deusen, "Happy Days," 1880-1892 by H. L. Wiggen and 1940 World Almanac and Book of Facts.

Sixty Years Ago

A visit to the Winnebago Indian agency 60 years ago proved an interesting and enlightening experience, according to a report in the Northern Nebraska Journal published at Ponca by Wm. Huse. The drive from Ponca to Homer and then to the agency took the party through fine farming country.

Winnebago was then a town of 20 or 30 neat dwellings most of which were occupied by employees of the agency. A grist mill, trading post or store, jail and large brick school were noticed. The school was a boarding house in which the young Indians lived while receiving their education.

The three-story brick school of Gothic style stood on a hill from which the view over the valley was beautiful. Grounds were artistically arranged with flower plots and walks and were enclosed with white picket fences.

John T. Spencer, formerly of Dakota, was superintendent and his wife assisted as teacher. They had a suite of rooms on the second floor of the building.

One side of the building, from ground to garret, was used for boys and the other part exclusively for girls. Sleeping quarters were on the third floor with a solid wall and no passage between the two parts of the building.

Indians received bodily comforts as well as intellectual training. Each took care of his own bed and performed other duties to learn responsibility. The school room, in the center of the second floor, was well furnished with folding chairs, maps, charts, organ, etc. Supt. Spencer invited a dusky little maiden to play and sing for the visitors and she performed in a most creditable manner. Indians showed a liking for music. Most of the young Indians were bright and learned easily. Mr. Spencer noted. Some were easily governed and others presented some problems.

On the lower floor of the school were the dining room and kitchen. Girls were taught culinary arts in the kitchen. Bean soup was the favorite dish. The large oven held 50 loaves of bread. The girls also learned laundry work and the boys kept gardens.

No caste existed among the Indians. The visitors were favored with a medicine dance by the "braves." The Indians lived in houses near the reservation, these furnished by the government. The homes were neat with white curtains and well-kept lawns.

On many hills the visitors noted wooden coops. These they learned were coverings for graves. Around some were upright posts cut with notches. Each notch indicated some good deed the deceased Indian had done during his life.

Early China and Mexico Similarity Is Noted by Mrs. D. C. Main of Wayne

The marked similarity between the old in China and Mexico impressed Mrs. D. C. Main, who arrived home last week after spending 16 days with a party of 11 touring Mexico. The low thick-walled homes, usually of adobe with thatched roof, and doors as the only openings are similar in the two countries. Another likeness is the wall or fence that always surrounds a home. Often thick walls of adobe will have broken glass cemented along the top as a barrier. This is true both in China and Mexico. Other enclosures may be of poles or cacti plants. Cemeteries have such enclosures in both countries. These similarities lead one to believe the often stated supposition that these two races are related.

Mexico presents sharp contrasts, especially in Mexico City, Mrs. Main noted. As soon as the train crossed the Rio Grande and started through northern Mexico, Mrs. Main could guess that she was in a new country. Barren mountains, cacti, stone and clay land that did not look habitable stretched out for miles. Occasionally the monotony would be broken by a tortoise-looking little adobe home, always with its wall. Usually a few goats, sheep or a donkey added a touch of life to the scene. About 200 miles from Mexico City and on to that point the countryside presented a better appearance. Water could be seen running in little irrigation ditches; farmers were in their fields cultivating and the land seemed to be producing a living.

Self-Governing Unit.
Mexico City is a self-governing unit like Washington, D. C., and there it is written Mexico, D. F., meaning district federal. In that city the old and new stand in sharp contrast. The city of 8,000 acres is located on low ground that is a former lake bed. Earth tremors are felt practically every day and water seeps in both from the gulf and from the Pacific. These conditions are taken into consideration when buildings are put up and very little damage ever results.

The old section of Mexico, D. F., contains the thick-walled adobe homes like those in the rural sections. These too have only doors for openings and smoke from the fires built on the floors of the homes pours out through this opening or through cracks in the walls. Mrs. Main was told that these homes are scantily furnished, perhaps only having one or two pieces. The wall seems always a necessity. Many of these poorly built homes lean to one side or have settled.

The new section of Mexico, D. F., is beautiful and very modern. Usually homes of Spanish type, lovely brick finished with tinted stucco and much iron grill work and fancy carvings, have spacious grounds, bridge paths, fountains, stately palms and other trees, brilliant red and purple flowers. Sleepy Lady and other entrancing mountain peaks are visible in the distance.

On a hill overlooking the city is still maintained the elaborate home of Maximilian, who was emperor from 1864 to 1867. This gorgeous former capitol is kept as it was in the days of the monarchy. In the park around the castle are beautiful landscaped grounds with trees about a thousand years old and colorful flower beds. The castle and grounds draw many visitors each Sunday when the Mexicans gather there in gala attire for horseback riding, walking and picnics.

Cathedrals Are Outstanding.
Cathedrals in Mexico are outstanding and one easily sees that the wealth of that nation is placed in these. Mrs. Main was informed that one cathedral in Mexico City is equally as elaborate as any in Europe. The cities have large cathedrals, but each little village also has its cathedral and even these are most ornate. The interiors are finished in gold leaf, elaborate carvings, valuable paintings and statues. One of the cathedrals in Mexico City has three sections. The visitors were taken to only one part where they heard organ music and singing by the choir and saw many people at worship. The churches always seem to be filled with worshippers, many of whom are poorly clad. The cathedrals are spotlessly clean. One part of a Mexico City cathedral was closed to the public because it was regarded unsafe, the building having settled because of the spongy earth and tremors.

The party visited Taxco, the silver city, where the first silver mine in the country was discovered. Silversmiths there make the precious metal up into dishes, rings, etc. Borda owned the first silver mine and gave the city its name which is one of the most ornate with gold leaf and paintings and has a large organ.

Of all the cities Mrs. Main prefers Cuernavaca, where is located the former home of the late Dwight Morrow. Palms are not torn by wind and the streets are lined with trees and flowers. The better class of people live there. Beautiful murals, painted by Diego Rivera, noted Mexican, depicting the history of Mexico and refused by the Rockefeller institute, were placed by Dwight Morrow on the government building in Cuernavaca.

Sees Mexican Venice.
Another interesting place is Xochimilco, called the Mexican Venice. It is told that in early days Mexicans built rafts, covered them with earth planted to flowers and then rowed the rafts on the lake. Now the flowers are grown on islands which cut the lake into canals. Each Sunday people by the hundreds ride about the canals in small boats, each steered from the back by a Mexican who uses one paddle and each bedecked with flowers at the front. Other boats loaded with flowers—carnations, lilies, pansies, violets and many others—ply up and down the waters. Other boats carry Mexicans playing guitars and zithers. The ride in the placid water amidst the flowers and music is most fascinating.

At Xochimilco Mrs. Main met friends from Vinton, Ia. Puebla and Cholula are other interesting points visited, the former having one of the finest cathedrals in the country. Onyx market and tile factory are located there, and the tile is made as roofing for cathedrals and other buildings.

Trips to Orizaba and Fortin took the group to the tropics where they saw coffee plantations, gardenia gardens, orange, banana and lemon groves.

The maquey is a plant used for several purposes. The plant grows three to eight feet tall and has leaves measuring two or three feet long. The heart of the plant is removed and a liquid seeps into the hollow. This is cyponhed out and fermented for a drink. The leaves are skinned and the skin used for parchment. The fiber of the plant

Preks Furnished Some Diversion in State's Early Days

Travel by buggy was the rule in pioneer days, and Nebraska's folklore, prepared by the Writers' project under supervision of the state superintendent, tells of an interesting experience some 60 years ago.

We had heard a good deal about the rough unvarnished life of the pioneer settlers in Nebraska; so I came out to Otoe county in 1871 expecting to find a stern, strict class of people who had no desire or time to get to be entirely different from what I had expected. They liked their fun and entertainment to a degree I had not even known myself. Jokes and monkeyshines were played on everyone who was handy and simple enough to go for them.

For instance, a young fellow named Gus White was new to the neighborhood. As I remember, he had yellow hair, gray-green eyes and tall lanky figure. But it wasn't his appearance that irritated us; we were all seedy in those days.

What got our nerves was his attitude. Gus thought he knew everything there was to know, that he alone could give the final answers.

Well, Gus received an inheritance from the east. I believe his grandfather had died in New York state, and the first thing he did was what every young buck was banking on to do—he got hold of a buggy and horse.

He was pretty proud of it too because the buggy was new and shiny and the horse was a smart black with a star on his forehead. He used it a bit, because he got to going with a freckle-faced Irish girl who lived a ways up my road. The combination of a girl and buggy was bad because Gus traveled over the country a lot.

The girl's father, fortunately, had not his Irish wit. He had always been full of mischief, and after Gus had started visiting his daughter, he could hardly wait for an opportunity to play a joke on Gus. The chance finally came one evening when Gus came to take his girl to a dance. It was one of those gloomy nights when the Nebraska moon makes a bare showing through a layer of clouds. That was important, because the old man needed nature's cooperation for his schemes.

While Gus was in the house waiting for his girl the old man slipped out and changed the buggy wheels around, putting one rear wheel on the front and a front wheel on the back. As you know, the back wheels of a buggy are larger than the front ones, so one big wheel in front on the left side and one little wheel in the back on the right side would cause the bed of the buggy to set sort of lopsided and twisted. It tended to wobble, too, and the wheels wouldn't reel in a straight line.

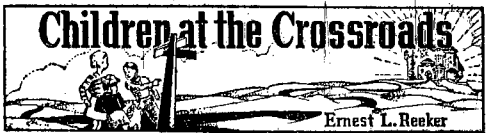

The girl finally got fixed up. She came out, dressed in a freshly starched gingham dress, with Gus following her. After he had gotten her comfortably settled on the seat of the carriage, Gus jumped in from the opposite side and started the horse. The moon was well under a cloud now, so neither could see what had been done to the buggy wheels. The girl noticed the funny way the vehicle behaved but, it being a new rig, didn't say anything for fear of appearing ignorant. She probably thought, since Gus had the latest thing in buggies, that the new styles called for an "up-and-down" effect when riding. Still, she didn't like the buggy's behavior and felt a little awkward rolling back and forth, feeling half of the time as if she were on the high seas. But Gus, who was complacently holding the reins, didn't say anything, so she didn't either.

There were a lot of rigs in the yard when they arrived at the dance, so Gus, if he did suspect anything, did not examine his buggy to see what was wrong. Gus just hitched his horse and helped his girl down.

When going home after the dance, the vehicle acted worse than ever because the horse traveled faster. The girl, after they had arrived home, didn't know whether she was inside of a cyclone or a churn barrel. She was thrown from one side of the buggy to the other at every turn of the wheels.

The next day Gus found what was wrong and everyone else in the neighborhood did too—the father had seen to that. Gus said that he never noticed any difference in the buggy. Perhaps that is because he had "popped" the question and the girl had said "yes."

Mrs. S., bringing her boy, Lawrence, aged 12, into juvenile court, seemed only too eager to shift the responsibility for his future conduct to someone else. That she thus proclaimed her failure as a parent gave her no concern. Rather, she freely admitted that she had no influence over the boy.

His father, when we called him in and asked him if he could control Lawrence, replied "I can't do anything with him. I think you ought to send him to reform school. His mother wouldn't care, either if you did."

Lawrence was a habitual truant from school. On warm evenings he would stay away from his home all night, returning the next day for his meals and again running off to his own mysterious projects.

Since the parents showed no interest in helping him to become a normal boy, we found a "sponsor" from a civic club who was willing to assume the burden. For a time the "sponsor" kept Lawrence in school by marching him to the building

Two Tests Allowed To Seventh Graders

Geography and physiology are the only subjects which 7th graders will be permitted to take this year. Since the legislature cut the number of tests to be passed for 8th grade graduation, it is thought that after this year 7th graders will likely not be allowed to take any of the examinations.

The tests are first to be given April 11 and 12 and this may be cut to one day. The second date is May 10.

Pupils earning grades of 75 or above the first time they take the tests will not be allowed to take them over unless they need a higher grade to raise their average to passing. This will save expense in correcting papers.

A microphone was made by each group for use in the activity. This has proved interesting for the group giving the entertainment as well as the ones listening.

So that each pupil will check on his neatness, a picture of each is on the bulletin board. Those who have perfect scores are permitted to turn their pictures so they are seen by others. Those who do not have complete scores turn theirs to the wall. Each likes to have his picture facing the class.
