For the third time in recent years aying county captured the grand nampion, award at the 'Ak-Saren 4-H club show in Omaha, Lend Herman, 17-year-old son of county 4-11 boys trailed closely. It is noted that Leland had been en-gaged in raising baby beeves for

The four-o-one vote among teachers and lepartment heads for the republican candidate is in conflict with the frequently expressed suspition that colleges are inculeating adical ideas. Certainly mid-west-rm schools of the type here are neouraged to think independently not rationally, free from the pre-edent-breaking and tradition-upetting policies of the new deal.

And this majority expression, rirtually in favor of individual-sin, is a convincing argument in upport of rural colleges. A man amiliar with thought in big universities expressed doubt as to whether similar results could be blataned in such institutions. The cason: Many go to universities captains, would have Americans give up the attempt to get jobs for all who want them. It would assume we have reached the end in the matter of solving unemployment problems outside of dependence on the government. This philosophy of surrender and despair is contradicted by Wender and despair is contradicted by Wen render and despair is contracted by wen-lell Willkie, republican presidential candi-late. Touching his attitude, the New York Herald-Tribune comments in part:

lerald-Tribune domments in part:

"It is because Mr. Wilkke not only scorns this philosophy of defeatism but is not afraid to denounce it and to srouse, new hope in Atherica that his sitump-speaking tour has been so effective. He has given the country what it had longed for—new faith in itself and its own future. He has revived the spirit of those who had become sodden with despair under the new deal's demoralizing influence and example. No wonder he has mate his mark wherever he has spoken—especially in the crowded industrial centers where unemployment has long been a fearful reality and where the new deal's effort to make up with a dole for its persistent failure to stimulate new business activities has not completely crushed the spirit activities has not completely crushed the spirit of stifled common sense. No form of relief would be more wideome than that provided by good steady jobs at decent wages. This is Mr. Willkie's objective. This is his 'solution' for the unemployment problem."

Senators

SENATOR Hiram Johnson of California, who went during his first term, but who later revolted over the supreme court "packing" bill, is going to give a nation-wide radio talk in opposition to the third term, according to a Washington report. Johnson is so popular in California, as attested by both parties in the late primary, that his voice in behalf of Willkie should carry that state for him. On the other hand, Senator Geo. W. Norris of Nebraska, is reported scheduled to speak for Roosevelt's reelection. Nearing the close of the Coolidge administration, the Nebraska senator raised a great fuss over the suspicion that the presidential incumbent might run for a third term. The senator orated and resolved against any such possibility, though the danger was removed when Coolidge said he did "not choose to run." Coolidge served one term and the unexpired term left by the death of President Harding. Now the senator carefully avoids being consistent by favoring Roosevelt for a third term. He saw danger in the mild-mannered Coolidge who reduced the national debt some billions, but he has no fear of Roosevelt who but he has no fear of Roosevelt who has attained an all-time high in reckless

Dwight Griswold, who is campaigning for the governorship, and who speaks in Wayne this evening, is not out, with a lot of fanfare over things he will do if elected. But he can be depended on to serve soundly and economically. He has an ambition to make a record as executive that will meet approval and suggest no apology. Mr. Griswold's service in the legislature gives him an understanding of the state's problems. His war record equips him with an insight that will facilitate cooperation with the federal government in handling the selective draft. No mistake can be made in voting for Griswold.

R. R. Smith, pioneer, reminds us that voting for Griswold:

R. R. Smith, pioneer, reminds us that sixty years ago, October 14, 1880, the midwest was visited by a fierce three-day blizzard which started the hardest and longest winter on record. The heavy snow which descended at that time did not disappear until the next May. It is recalled that disastrous floods on both sides of the Missouri river came with the spring thaw. Mild weather now contrasts sharply with the variety dished out in the early days. It would seem that winters have become less tough and perhaps summers less wet.

tough and perhaps summers less wet.

Speaking at Norfolk last week, Secretary Perkins, head of the labor department at Washington, said the defense plan would put five or six million persons to work. Is it a sound economic policy to depend on war preparations to secure reemployment? How much better to have our industrial order in such a peace-time state of health that sufficient labor demands exist. The defense program is necessary and war may be unavoidable, but we would not boast of either as a solution of the unemployment problem.

The first peace-time registration for conscription in the history of the United States took place yesterday when men between 21 and 35 were registered. Registration does not mean war, but it does mean due defense in the event of attack. It provides a year's training which will lay the foundation for military service in case such service becomes necessary.

In its current edition, Morningside Collegion Reporter publishes, as the result of a nation-wide poll, that college presidents favor Willkie over Roosevelt by a ten to one vote. Those for Roosevelt are mostly heads of southern colleges. Comments by the college presidents were usually very caustic. College leadership is thus re caustic. assuring.

False stories that came out of New York's Negro district, designed to discredit Willkie's Americanism, were promptly repudiated by the chairman of the new deal national committee. He commended Willkie as a one hundred per cent American. Misrepresenting a candidate invariably operates as a boomerang.

The war terror abroad grows from day to day, according to radio news reporters. Russia is now a conundrum — regarded with suspicion by both sides. An exhausted Europe, burned out by rival hatred, will be the result.

Multiplying the federal debt in order to abolish it, unbalancing the national budget in order to balance it offend every business sense not dulled by soothing words from the White House.

DISADVANTAGE.

Tons by printed matter prebeing circulated by both political parties in this unusual presidential contest, but large disadvantage lies with the Willkie organization. Liberal use of the franking privilege to save postage for new dealers in distributing speeches made by members of congress is manifestly intended to bolster the president's third-term candidacy. Thus, Willkie supporters not only linance their own campaign through voluntary contributions, but help, pay in taxes the propaganda of the opposition. Even an address by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt bepropaganda of the op-position. Even an address by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt be-fore the democratic Mrs. Franklin D. Rooseveit before the democratic national convention was read into the Congressional Record and sent out on franked eards. So, government machinery, operation of which is paid for by all, is freely used to retain the present regime. Radio is also employed to the advantage of the new deal. Often a comparatively obscure station—hard to contact deal. Often a comparatively ob-scure station—hard to contact and harder to hear—carries Willkie's speeches. When Roosevelt talks one cannot avoid hearing him if he turns on the radio. Willkie's broad-casts are paid for, while those of Roosevelt are free on the claim that they are non-politi-cal. What bunk!

Orville Chatt of Tekamah who upheld the Roosevelt administration in the political discussion at the college last week, is so well thought of in his community that he received its almost unanimous support when he ran for congress some years ago. We recall writing an appreciation of the warm neighborliness that greeted and upheld his candidacy. We could have had no other motive than to show other communities how high Mr. Chatt stood among home people. So, we were disappointed when he said, in the course of his discussion, that he was glad 80 per cent of the newspapers were arrayed against the new deal. Why did he say that? Does he think they position of the newspapers will help Roosevelt? Does he think they are not influenced by desire to help the popular welfare? Rather he should conclude that members of the press see through new deal cuts on her knee and forehead and also had her back and chest hurt Mrs. Delmont suffered a broken collar bone. The cars were badly damaged.

Not that there was anything objectionable about the boy, you understand. He was a clean, well-mannered chap and most likely to grow into a splendid young man. But father had had some words with Jerry's father over an automobile collision, and he wouldn't have his daughter going out with Jerry.

He was so emphatic about it that one evening as Jerry walked up on the porch with Laura he brandished a pistol and shouted, "If you ever come here again or go out with Laura, I'll shoot you."

Of course such drastic action broke up the funccent romance, and although Laura could have found solace among dozens of friends, she went to quite the

When the sordid circumstances were reported to the juvenile court, Laura and her friend were called before the judge. The man was told that if the evidence warranted such action he would be charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor child. Laura tossed her head and

She was placed on probation to a woman who had reared four children, all of whom were building successful carders elsewhere. Laura and her sponsor became staunch friends and inseparable companions.

Legend of Hill Is Retold Each Year

Retold Each Year
Though for more than 100 years Indians and whites go to Blackbird hill north of Decatur each year on the evening of Oetober 17 to hear a mysterious scream, none are actually sure they ever heard the noise. \[\] \[\] \The Indians relate in the legend that a starving white man was cared for in their wigwam. After regaining his health this white man told that he was in love with a beautiful girl in the east and was planning to marry her after a trip to Europe. While returning the ship on which he sailed was wrecked and was washed ashore in Africa. After working as a slave for some time, the white man bought his freedom and returned to this country.

The fiancee, believing the young man dead, married his college roommate and the couple came west to search for gold.

After reaching home and finding his sweetheart gone, the former youth started west in search of the couple. He camped at Blackbird hill. Exploring be found a cabin and inside was search of the ed at Blackbird hill. Expended to the found a cubin and inside was his former sweetheart, alone. They made plans to escape together.

The husband became enraged at the proposed separation and killed his wife. He carried her to the hill and leaped with her into the swiring waters of the Missouri. The screams which the white lover heard are said to be repeated each October.

Is Interesting.

Logs are dumped into a log-pond where slip men and boom men walk around on the floating logs with the greatest of case. Two men with calked shoes will get on a log and start it spinning. They change pace and jump around turning backwards to throw the other fellow off balance. When one man gets his partner at a disadvantage he spins furiously till the unfortspinst fellow falls off into the water. Miss Hazel Reeve of Wayne, this summer took a trip through the largest lumber mill in the world. This particular mill is located at Longview, Wash, and is operated by the Weyerhauser Timber Co. Miss Reeve goes on to tell of the interesting things noticed while there.

The people in that vicinity consider log spinning a great sport and each year a Longview "Rolleo" is held. Eddie Herron, who works at the Long-Bell mill pond, is the world's champlon log roller, a title which he successfully defended at the "Rolleo" of 1939. Every year the Weyerhausers build about 10 miles of new railroad into their vast timber, holdings, which at Longview are made up of Douglass fir, recale and hem-lock. Fir is a soft wood and is used in house construction, paneling and for cheaper flooring. It is very white in color and is straight grained and remarkably free from knots. Method of Sawing.

Three men ride the log car. The enter man is at the controls thich consist of various levers to gulate the thickness of the cut. he car moves fast and the saw pins so rapidly that a stream of vater is run on the blade to keep it from getting too hot. The saw ias teeth on both sides so it makes i. cut in either direction of the ar. A slab is cut and the head sawyer notices the grain of the wood and the quality and whether it has pitch pockets or any other elefects. The slab falls onto gravity conveyers and goes off to be made into lath. The sawyer then holds up four ingers. The control man moves his levers in a split second as the saw bites into the log on the return trip. The board cut is of four-inch dimensions. The sawyer notes the grain find holds up two fingers. The next cut is two-inch. The big board, now cut on two sides and with an edge of bark of both, starts down the conveyer. The sawyer rolls his hand with a quick movement. The big lugs, holding the log, flip the enormous log as fast as a school boy could fifip a sitck of stove wood and the car hardly pauses on its back and forth movement.

The Weyerhauser company has a patent on presto-logs and they alone can make them. A prestolog is made of fine sawdust packed by a hydraulic press into a small log, about four inches by 12 inches. It is packed so tight that it is heavier than a stick of green wood of like dimensions and it makes a fine fuel. It is burned in stoves, hot water heaters or fireplaces. One of the many reasons congress passed appropriation bills for adequate medical attention and adequate housing for the new men is coming into our army for training was the statistics given to members regarding deaths in the World war. Briefly, these statistics show that men killed in action in our army numbered 37,668; marines, 1,450; navy, 871; or a total of 39,989. Those dying of wounds: The army 12,942; marines, 1,007; or a total of 13,949. The total deaths from wounds or killed in action amounted to 53,938. Thoses dying from disease, neglect, in adequate facilities, etc., totaled 62,974, or 9,036 more than from combat. One statement on the floor put it this way: "It will be plainly seen that, due to thoughtlessness and impulsiveness, incompetence and inefficiency; the United States lost nearly 10,000 more men from disease than were killed in actual conflict on land and on sea."

The Latin American problem is a very serious one and Argentina's action may be more of the pressure work for which that country is noted. Our secretary of state sponsored a bill recently passed to permit the export-import; bank to loan an additional 500 million dollars to those countries. This bill was fought by the farm district members but it became law. These farm district members feel that it opens the way for possible huge loans to Argentina and other countries which may be used to subsidize farm crop holdings. Argentina has a surplus of 350 million bushels of corn, among its other surpluses. Recently, the government took over that surplus and endeavored to ship a half million bushels of corn to our Pacific coast states, which would supplement that much of our own surplus corn crop. This situation was met by selling to the west coast markets some of the supply held by our surplus commodity corporation and the Argentina shipments were stopped. It is felt by some farm district members that Argentina may now be endeavoring to force us to open our markets by its latest move. People close to the department of state, especially those having to do with our commercial activities, feel that the 500 million dollars that we will now loan to South American countries is essential to our good neighbor policy which they feel will go a long way toward solidifying all of the countries south of us and will do much for our determination to work as a unit to protect the western hemisphere.

2022 business unless another emergency is presented within the next few weeks. Department heads are submitting to the bureau of the budget their estimates of money they will need to run their departments for the next fiscal year. Appropriations committee members are told to get back on the job soon as possible because they will becalled to meet early to hear the justifications of these department and bureau chiefs. What the total will be for the first session of the preparations to implement the protection of the entire western hemisphere continue and if the protection of the entire western hemisphere continue and if the arrly figures of bureau chiefs to support the rapid growth of their departments carry through, the guardent will be stupendous. How figures will be stupendous. How figures will be stupendous. How the ways and means committee will provide the revenue to meet those demands is a puzzle. The tax bill which was just passed, although very complex, may be very tame, compared to what this alter committee may be forced to ask from taxpayers. Ed. Taylor of Colorado, 82 year old chairman of the appropriations committee, told the house the other day that the committee has been busier and has handled more money than any similar committee since 1918. None of these leaders will even attempt a guess on what these two committees have to face in the next few months. That is one reason why Cliff Woodrum, a leader in the appropriations group, recently observed that this comgress. 2023 son wny CHII Woodrum, a leader in the appropriations group, re-cently observed that this congress had provided every penny asked by the administration for national defense and many other items, and then solemnly told the house:

Bluestem Grass Is Combined in Area

Combined in Area
Big bluestem grass on the meadows of the farms of S. L. Nelson, Norfolk, Floyd Asplin, Stanton, Arthur E. Behmer, Hoskins, and Herm Westerhaus, Winside, was combined during the past week.
The combining of the big bluestem was under the supervision of Elwerne C. Conrad, Lincoln, who is nursery manager for the soil conservation, service. Approximately stem was under the supervision or Elverne C. Conrad, Lincoln, who is nursery manager for the soil conservation, service. Approximately 25 acres of grass was combined, the CCC camp at Winside furnishing assistance. The seed will be cured and will later be taken to the nursery at Lincoln. The seed will then be cleaned and processed prior to seeding. This seed is, probably the first big bluestem that has been harvested on a commercial scale in northeast Nebraska. The seed was combined from the second crop in all fields except the Nelson meadow which was from the first crop. The hay crop was harvested after the seed was combined.

Dakota county corn husking contest will be October 18 on the Wm. O'Gara farm near Jackson:

Emerson Legion voted to sup-port Dr. L. J. Kilian of Wakefield as candidate for district commander.
