Bring 'Liberty Liz' To Colson Hatchery

"Liberty Liz" is the name Myron Colson gives the calf being raised in his hatchery. This name is chosen because the calf demonstrates how farmers can save from 130 to 175 gallons of milk. The government is asking each dairyman to ship at least 37 1/2 extra gallons of milk per cow in 1942, and this experiment demonstrates how easy it is to do so.

The calf was taken from its mother when four days old and taught to drink milk from a bucket. Dry calf Startena, block salt, hay and water were placed where the calf could get at them. At the end of the first month, the calf was brought into the hatchery and the milk part of the ration discontinued entirely.

Myron Colson invites local folks to stop in and see how "Liberty Liz" is thriving on her milk-saving ration.

Life at Alaskan Base Interesting

(By Wilbur D. Hall)

Letters received from Wilbur Hall by his family state that he arrived in Kodiak, Alaska, after 30 days on the Alaskan steamship, Denali, which left Seattle, January 21. He arrived in Kodiak, January 31. Mrs. Hall received this letter March 9. It had been mailed January 31 from Kodiak, but had been held until released by authority of the postal censor. However, several letters had arrived before that date and had not been censored. Following are parts of letters written:

"January 31, well, here I am in Kodiak, and getting settled. We are quartered in a large boat, which has been banded. It so happens that it is the same boat mentioned in the November Colliers magazine article. This boat has five decks of bunks and several hundred men. It isn't bad, but rather crowded. About as many of the fellows from here left on the Denali as came in on it. There were 88 of us from Seaside. Drake who came up on the boat, besides several hundred soldiers.

"Does it ever rain up here? Sixty hours some times without a let-up. But this is funny soil, it never gets muddy. It is a volcanic ash and the rain seems to soak right in it. I asked one fellow who had been here nine months how many days it had rained since he came here, and he replied, 'How many days are there in nine months?' It had rained every day, but after the first of April the days began to lengthen, and there is a little let-up on the moisture, so they tell me.

"The days are very short here now. The sun comes up at 10 and sets about 3 or 3:30. I work 10 hours per day from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m., with one hour off at noon. We eat where ever we happen to be at meal times, as there are several mess halls. So far I have eaten at three different ones. The food is excellent and I never get to taste half of the good things put on the table. Every Thursday we have turkey dinner and all the trimmings. Milk is 25c a quart here and everything else is as high accordingly. They feed 1,000 men at a time in relays.

"After arriving here we were issued gas masks, and I had to buy my clothes, all rubber goods, pants, coats, and hats made of rubber and they were expensive. I thought I'd get by without heavy underclothing, but had to give in and buy some woolies. They cost me $6.50 a suit.

"We are completely blacked out on our boat where we room. The boat is covered with a heavy black canvas. All lights must be turned out before a door is opened and no one can smoke a cigaret out in the open.

"This certainly is a big project, covers miles, and the seeps, air compressors, pumps and dredges are going day and night. They work without lights except blue ones about as large as a quarter. They say when this naval air base is completed, it will be the largest in the world, and I don't doubt it.

"They took all of our cameras away after we left Seward, so we can't take any pictures. I can buy some of Kodiak, but none of the air base itself. One fellow failed to turn in his camera and the manning, March 29, at 8, sponsored by Wayne Ministerial association. The choir also sings the cantata at regular college convocation Tuesday, March 31, at 10 a. m.

Fines took it away and smashed it. The marines are sure on the job here, 3,000 of them on this island. We are under very strict martial law and there is not very much disturbance. We have a nice recreation room and a good cozy reading room, a store where we can buy tobacco, candy, cards, ice cream, etc. We don't go to the main base at all which is about a half mile from here. There is a movie here. I saw Joe E. Brown in person, the other night. The marines and sailors go together to a show at 6:30, then the contractors and their help go at 9. Most of the movies are three or four years old.

"I am working about three or four miles from the main base, hundreds of buildings going up on both sides of a narrow valley and hundreds more laid out ready to go up. Sometimes when we go to work there will be a vacant spot, but when we come home at night, a large building is there, complete with roof over it.

"The boats dock just about two blocks from here but I never see them because I am away during the daylight hours.

"This is pretty country and very scenic and interesting. This island is 100 miles long and 50 miles wide. Away from the ocean the mountains are covered with timber and green heavy moss. The tops of the mountains are white capped with snow. It has only frozen two nights since I've been here, and we always thought Alaska was cold, but the island here has the same temperature as most of Oregon and California because of the same Japanese current. Of course over the range of mountains into the interior of Alaska it is very much the opposite.

"I really like it here and hope I can stay for a year at least. Most of the fellows who leave go on account of the rain and dampness. We don't work hard, only steady and I have a fine boss. If it weren't for the unions, it would be fine, but they manage to get most of the fellows' wages. It's terrible and a cramp. A great many go back on that account. It doesn't seem fair in such times when there is so much to be done and everyone here seems to feel things aren't enough time to get things in readiness for what is to come. I don't think Alaska isn't getting ready. I never dreamed there was such a big project and this is one of many.

"They are offering a big bonus to anyone who will go on out to Dutch Harbor as they just can't get men to go out there. But some of the fellows here who have been out there say it is terrible. The wind blows all the time along with the rain. So I don't believe I want any of it.

"It's 10 o'clock and time to turn in so guess I'll go to the kitchen and get something to eat. We can eat anytime we want and anything we want, so I'll have some coffee and pie with ice cream."

THE LINCOLN Journal resents the imputation that people of Nebraska are not awake to the demands of the war. That newspaper points out general alertness to duty—readiness to make any sacrifice in support of war issues. "Nebraskans have had no choice but to be deeply aware that a grim and terrible war is going on," says the Journal. "While they have felt the effects, they have not complained of the cause, beyond urging with all the insistence at their command that their contribution be larger and more direct. That insistence is beginning to bear fruit in bomber and ordinance plants."

Speaking of the crisis and the dangers involved, Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois concluded a recent broadcast with these words:

"The destiny of the American people is at the crossroads, and the future of your children and your children's children will be determined by the outcome. So in the closing moments of this interview with the American people I plead with you to give your unlimited and unstinted support to the Government, as I also plead with the Government not to let the people down. Other than naval and military secrets continue to give to us all the facts, good or bad. We can take it. This course will make the crisis more realistic. It will help us to forget selfishness, partisanship, and profits. It will bring home the all-important fact that America is in danger. Do your utmost and do it in the true American way, because, my friends, we are fighting for the last, best hope of earth. What Abraham Lincoln said of it yesterday applies even more forcefully today—we can nobly save or meekly lose."

Touching the importance of unity and even judgment, the World-Herald finished an editorial with this observation:

"It may be a long war. As we face it we should make up our minds to be sensible; to bear together in a spirit of good will; to save our wrath for those who are trying to destroy us. But we should also bear in mind that reasonable criticism is needed to shape policies and to spur political officials into action. Without it no democracy could hope to survive."

Semi-annual House-cleaning

HOUSE-CLEANING season is just around the corner, and the reason it does not hold the terror involved in the old-time experience is due to modern conveniences. Carpets instead of rugs required taking up innumerable tacks, and then accompanying carpets and dirt to outside bins to pound and clean. With rising clouds of dust were often mingled impolite epithets touching carpet obstinacy in particular and sundry house-cleaning evils in general. Houses were not so well built in the old days, and a lot of dirt found its way through cracks, and so added to the burden of the semi-annual cleaning siege. Stretching the carpet for proper anchorage was no play spell, but the relief felt in crawling into a bed upholstered with fresh straw was liberally compensatory.

Modern means and methods have largely removed house-cleaning hardships. Rugs are comparatively well behaved. Stovepipes are made with an idea of having them fill. Cold victuals of abridged variety no longer disappoint internal yearnings or destroy peace of soul. Contrast with the old is sharp and should be appreciated.

Republicans and democrats alike have been appalled by labor unions' insistence on the forty-hour work week in the face of international perils. We think the fault lies mostly with leaders whose interest in maintaining local advantages seems to transcend that of preserving national security and traditional rights. The rank and file among workers have apparently little to say about policies that delay production. Speaking at a meeting of Nebraska Young Democrats at Lincoln last week, Pat Heaton of Sidney, referred to the feeling of a soldier in the fighting front as he hears of an American at home refusing "to labor more than forty hours in seven days when that self-same man is receiving more in those forty hours than he, the soldier, receives in two months."

A service station operator at Kearney projected Terry Carpenter into the political arena for the democratic senatorial nomination by making the proper filing, and expressed the hope that he would accept. Instead of getting mad over the filing, as one might have suspected, Carpenter has conceivably edged in the direction of the senatorship by defining a candidate's needed qualifications, his possession of which he would doubtless slyly concede. His entrance into the campaign will lend more animation and relish to discussion than uncertainties to the final outcome.

Late occasional weather forecasts have perhaps failed to hit facts because of lack of practice. Daily radio predictions have been abandoned on account of the war, but if something ominous of evil is indicated, a broadcast is permitted. Monday night's warning of an impending freeze did not influence the mercury to go down one degree. Last Thursday night's broadcast to look out for a ripsnorter from the northwest resulted in a light snow and the usual March wind, soon followed by smiling sunshine.

Kiwanis stomachs that expected a usually full meal Monday noon soon settled down to acceptance of soup exclusively as a contribution to the war effort. It seems the luncheon was revised downward to leave a surplus with which to buy government bonds, and appetites were hushed by consciousness of helping destroy enemy gangsters and win American victory. Thus, the noise of trickling soup challenged any assumption that American groups are "too soft to be restrained in behalf of saving the country."

A committee of the National Editorial association sent out copies of a questionnaire to hundreds of small business men to ascertain reactions on different public policies, and returns on the one asking whether the administration should discontinue spending on non-defense projects, revealed 97.7 in favor of doing so and 2.3 against. The expressed judgment is that many hitherto emergency budgets are now unnecessary and should be junked at least for the duration.

The sharp attack by Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney-general, on late labor performances shocks many persons who see in his attitude open conflict with his superior, Attorney-General Biddle. Unless the Arnold onslaught has a hidden purpose agreeable to the administration, it would suggest a serious state of discord. But if Arnold was selected to tell labor leaders what is what, he was well chosen. He did not hesitate nor mince words.

Secretary Harold Ickes advises people to keep up travel and enjoy frequent periods of relaxation. At the same time he bosses gasoline restrictions. How can one engage in more joy-riding and save gasoline and tires? We wonder if Harold could be persuaded to keep still for the duration.

We understand the ground is well soaked to a satisfactory depth, and that it is in good shape for plowing and planting. What snow has fallen has soaked into the soil, and has done the most possible good. The prospect, at this time for normal crop production is encouraging.

Gerdes remained for a longer visit with her mother. Mrs. A. W. Dolph was a guest of Mrs. Kenneth Packer Thursday at a meeting of the K. D. club.

Mrs. Ed. McQuistan has had as guests her mother and her sister and three children of Niobrara. Mr. and Mrs. Erich Albers, Shirley and Charlotte Lounsbury were Sunday visitors at Will Koehn's. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hansen and family were with the Ervin Clinkenbeard in Thurston Sunday. Geo. Buskirk received top of $13.50 on the hog market Friday for light hogs and $13 for heavies.

Saturday she and Lois attended the play day at Wayne college. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Thomson and Merle were week-end visitors at Fred Jabde's and called at Herman Thomson's Sunday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Will Fresse of Emerson, their daughter and a niece and their families of Sioux City, were Sunday visitors at Fred Utecht's.

In honor of Mrs. Herbert Barelman's birthday Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barelman and Lois were among the visitors there Thursday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Milton Gustafson and family, Leona, Vera and Lois Anderson and Mary Helen Bressler of Wayne, were Sunday dinner visitors at L. J. Bressler's. Mr. and Mrs. Jack VanCleave

WORRY A woman whose boy had been drafted, and who, she thought, might be killed, received these words of encouragement from Channing Pollock, author. "He may be, and so may you and I. More people are killed in injured every year in automobiles, or on polished floors or in bathtubs than we lost in the World War. A relative of mine fought through that war, returned home unscathed, and died a few months ago of an infection set up when he scratched his finger in opening a shirt that came from the laundry. Do you lie awake nights every time your son changes his shirt?" Pollock advises that "in the present national and international situation, it is especially necessary to concentrate on the big job each of us has to do, and leave the wasteful fretting for a less critical time." Worry, he suggests, is anticipation of something not likely to happen. Having plenty to do is a fairly sure preventive or curative. "Forget yesterday. It's gone," he says. "Don't dread tomorrow. It isn't here yet." Pollock observes in conclusion: "There are things which must disturb us deeply, of course—dangerous illness, actual want, and the like—but even these may be faced with fortitude. It's the minor disturbances, which we make temporarily important, that spoil our days and try our companions. A western physician writes me of his experience with a patient in an asylum. 'He seemed so gloomy that I attempted to cheer him. After a moment, the man interrupted. 'I'm sorry, Doc, but I've got to get back to my worrying. I'm way behind, and I can't take time for anything else now.'" ing manner the happy thought of entering fellow-travelers. Belonging to the fourth estate. Many past presidents have passed on. Some could not attend on account of intimations. Of those present, besides Edgar Howard, Will Munnin ranks in the octogenarian class. He was president of some (than forty years ago) a fact which his spirited and logical thinking tends to contradict.

Writes for Magazine. Dr. Sanford Moss of Massachusetts, cousin of Mrs. Jessie Reynolds and visitor here last year, has an article in the September, 1941, Readers Digest. Dr. Moss invented the super-charger which is used on bombers to enable them to fly at high altitudes. Dr. Moss, who was retired by General Motors about three years ago, has been called back to help in the war emergency.

Takes Part in Play. Blanche Smith, former Wayne college student and daughter of Dean Martha Smith-Smith, is taking part this week in the production of a mystery play, "Fair Lady," at the University of Iowa. The play began Monday evening for a week's run.

CHURCH TRENDS.

In a recent report on social trends to the annual meeting of the Nebraska council of churches by a committee, F. M. Gregg, who was chairman and who is remembered by Wayne old-timers as a member of the old Nebraska college's teaching force, treats the churches and after pointing out that some churches cling too much to the past, and are therefore uninviting, he emphasizes the progress of others in these words: "But as against this situation there is an increasing number of forward moving sanctuaries to which people love to go because therein are life and hope and joyous enterprise. The insulating shell of self-righteousness has been broken and there is more concern for saving society than for saving individual souls. A tabulation of the pastor's list of sermons for any year reveals many challenges to 'present opportunity,' and the highly motivated men go forth to find real, thrilling, sacrificial achievement for the making of a better world here and now. The church school teaching here is inductive and experiential. When prayer and faith and Bible study bring tangible results that people can actually see, noting people will cease saying that 'religion is bunk.' This writer was brought up to believe that the human heart is a constant scene of conflict between the spirit of Adam and the spirit of Christ. It has cost him little pain to shift to the language of science in believing that the conflict is one between one's thalamic and his cortex, his racial urges and his intelligence. But more firmly than ever does he now believe that to study the psychology is to try to find out God's way of doing things in matters of mind and behavior. Psychology and sociology, some of us strongly believe, are more important in the work of a preacher than theology and scriptural exegesis. Every successful pastor in these days must be something of a psychological consultant, and the best of pastors are such already."

Educational association, National Educational association, National Association of the Teachers of Mathematics and the American Association of University Women. She attended and participated in the programs of many of these organizations.

For many years until the time of her retirement from Wayne Miss Conklyn was treasurer of the Douglas King Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Miss Conklyn's teaching experience covered a period of 36 years, 25 of them among the youth of Nebraska. Her first five years were given to the rural schools in Polk county, and the four following were spent in Ord, St. Paul and Hastings. For a short time she taught in Wyoming and Idaho; then she moved to Saginaw, Mich., where she taught the two years immediately preceding her coming to Wayne. Her work in Wayne began in December, 1923, and was continuous except for the one year spent in New York City.

Miss Conklyn loved people and friends. Until the last she was thinking of what she could do for others. Only the day before her passing she dictated a note to a friend asking that one to convey her great appreciation to those who made possible for her the gift of the wheel chair at Christmas time and for the shower of Valentines which she had received and could not acknowledge.

During the last months she was a great sufferer. The Master saw that her work was worthy and that it was finished; and He took her to Himself.

and the high 176 in May for 1941. The 1942 prospect calls for a low of 82 in December and a high of 162 in August.

Report on Housing. The report considers various-sized farms and housing accommodations. On the farms of 50 to 139 acres, 77.8 per cent house the operators in the operators' homes and 22.2 have no accommodations available. On farms of 140 to 259 acres, 62.7 per cent house laborers in the operators' housing and 13.3 have no accommodations. On farm of 260 to 499 acres, 82.5 per cent are housed in operators' homes, 10 per cent in separate homes and 7.5 have no accommodations. On farms of 500 or more acres, 50 per cent are accommodated in the operators' homes and 50 per cent have separate homes. The survey shows that all labor on the 50 to 139 acre farms is local. On the 140-259 it is 91.5 per cent local; 260-499 acres, 87.5 per cent local; 500 and over acres, 75 per cent local.

Shortage Is Expected.

Three points are stressed by a report from Secretary Wickard. Some serious labor supply situations may develop in 1942 but 1943 will be more critical. In order to meet competition in the labor supply market, farmers will have to recognize the necessity of paying good wages, and they should be able to afford it. The women's land army idea should be developed experimentally in 1942 to gain experience for 1943 and Wickard warned that working in the women's land army will not be a "lark."

Shift from WPA.

It was explained that WPA plans a "vigorous farm replacement program," 62,000 to come off the rolls in March and greater numbers in April. More than 216,000 farm jobs were filled with WPA workers the last six months of 1941 and the plan is to use more for farm labor.

Christian Science Services

"Reality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world, on Sunday, March 29. The Golden Text is: "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good" (Luke 6:45). Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works... Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations" (Psalms 145: 9, 13). The lesson-sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Science reveals incontrovertibly that Mind is All-Redeemer, that the only realities are the divine Mind and idea. This great fact is not, however, seen to be supported by sensible evidence, until its divine Principle is demonstrated by healing the sick and thus proved absolute and divine. This proof once seen, no other conclusion can be reached. Let us learn of the real and eternal, and prepare for the reign of Spirit, the kingdom of heaven, the reign and rule of universal harmony, which cannot be lost nor remain forever unseen" (pp. 109, 208). # Colonies in French West Africa Feel Vichy Government Control

Vichy control in French north Africa, with orders coming from Berlin, does not please the natives and Europeans there but they seem able to do nothing about it, according to Rev. Gerald A. Dahlquist, missionary, who arrived in Concord recently from that continent. Residents of that territory were not organized and had no equipment so that when Dakar was bombed and put under Vichy rule, the entire territory had to submit.

French require three years of military service and many from Africa were in France when Paris fell. They understood the submission which their people were to experience. The government general and other officials of the French colonies, located at the west coast city of Damakou, were obliged to substitute Vichy dictates for their free French government. Headquarters for free French were then centered in the British Isles.

Shantage Is Noted.
People of the French colonies notice the war most from the shortage of supplies, for the conflict in Libya is especially near the continent of Africa. Rev. Dahlquist explains that Europeans are accustomed to canned foods, sugar and flour that are shipped in from other countries. Last fall the supply of canned goods was used up and other foods were being rationed.

Native bushmen of French west Africa, lighter and finer-featured than most of these colored folks, live mainly on kaffir corn. They do not depend on exports or imports. They raise sufficient kaffir corn for their own food so that their demands on contributions to world supplies are not important. They pound the grain into meal which they use for mush and cakes. This forms their principal diet. In the north part of the colony some wheat is raised but this is not sufficient for the Europeans in that region. Rice is also a product of French Guinea. In some parts two crops of grain are harvested because of ample rains. Peanuts are also a product of the French colonies and many of these have been exported.

Karati butter is a hardlike substance made from the meat of a nut. This is used like lard by residents there and it is used in making soap. Ashes are buried to provide the lye for combining with this.

Rev. Dahlquist reports that some gold fields are being opened in the provinces. Natives dig shallow holes in which they find the precious metal.

Climate Is Trying.
West Africa has a hot, dry climate. The rainy season is from June to September, though the precipitation is not as heavy as in this region. November is very hot. Malaria is prevalent in west Africa. Most climates of that continent tax the health greatly. African Sudan is mostly flat and stony. That region is about 250 miles south of the great desert.

Europeans Growing.
Damakou, capital of French Sudan and headquarters of the mission served by Rev. Dahlquist, is a city of about 120,000 natives and 1,000 Europeans located about 750 miles east of the port city of Dakar. Since outbreak of the war the European population has grown to about 2,500. Many who had the means to leave France, did so. Usually men moved first and then sent for their families. They went under military supervision.

A good railroad connects Dakar and Damakou, the end of the line. One branch extends 50 miles from Damakou. A few main highways have been built in Africa. Natives carry gravel on their heads to make a new road. A good many trucks and cars are in Africa, most of them American makes. With the supply of gasoline dwindling, cars are being converted to use kerosene. Charcoal is burned to make gas which is carried in a storage tank on the machine.

A good many people in Damakou have radios and get broadcasts from America and Europe. Dakar has a newspaper printed in French. Before the war the daily usually had four or five pages but last fall it dwindled to one or two.

Cities have some fine homes and stores made of tile, stone and cement. Many are two-story structures. Natives' homes are of sun-dried brick with thatched roofs which are braced with corrugated iron. On some homes mud is packed on roof tops. Rev. Dahlquist and his co-worker, Mr. McRostie, who had been granted a concession by the French government, supervised the building of their home about 50 rods from a bush village. The three-usual course because of the war dangers. It went to Trinidad, South America, and then over another new route north in the Atlantic to New York. Though the boat could have accommodated eight passengers, Rev. Dahlquist was the only one. Including the two days spent at Freetown and Trinidad, the ship was on the water 35 days, landing February 16. The crew about the evangelist heard much about submarine activity but they saw no signs of such during the entire trip. "I believe that God almighty whom I serve protected us and brought us through safely," concluded Rev. Dahlquist.

The evangelist is one of three from Concord who has served in Africa. Mrs. Helen Anderson, home now has been in Belgian Congo, and Miss Laura Thompson, now in the east, was in Tanganyika.

Rev. Dahlquist's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dahlquist, passed away while he was abroad. A brother, Harry, just moved this spring from Concord to Minnesota. The evangelist plans to rest at Concord for a time and then expects to serve in this country.

Hate Own Language

The bush natives speak their own language which is called Bambara. The missionaries teach the natives enough French or English so that they may read the scriptures. The government maintains free schools in larger villages. Mohammedan and other religions are also being brought to the natives besides the Christian which the bushmen accept well.

In his work to nearby villages, Rev. Dahlquist had a native to carry his supplies and to cook for him while he was at his work. The missionary engaged one from another tribe. As the native heard the Gospel he became interested and finally became a Christian. He and another native are now in Bible school and plan to carry the Christian work to the districts.

Rev. Dahlquist reports that some of the natives now have the New Testament in their own language. Though they have not made the spiritual growth one would like to see, they have done well.

Serves Ten Years

Rev. Dahlquist served in Africa from 1929 to 1934 and was then home on furlough until 1936, returning when war conditions made it necessary for missionaries to leave for the duration. Rev. Dahlquist had sailed February 15, 1936, for France. He spent about three months at Bible school in Nogent-Sur-Marne, a suburb of Paris. He studied French language which he needed in his new station. He sailed May 23 for French west Africa, arriving at Dakar, the port, June 4. Then he boarded the train for Bamako, headquarters of the Gospel Missionary Union and also capital of the French Sudan. All the missionaries gathered at Bamako for a conference before going to their stations.

Since outbreak of the war, five missionaries left that one station. Four remained to maintain the headquarters at Bamako. Rev. Dahlquist's health failed in September, 1936, and he feared he would have to leave the field then. But he was strengthened through prayer and was able to continue his term.

Leaves Missions Field.
August 13, 1941, Rev. Dahlquist left French west Africa to go to Freetown and wait for passage home on an American ship. The journey south of his station was through mountainous land that is now only open to trails. The missionary started by hammock, a swing of rope carried by four natives, two at the head and two at the feet. So much of the time the missionary was falling out of the hammock that he decided to proceed by walking. For three days he trekked through such country and then came to a railroad. He finished the 750 miles by train. He found other missionaries who had been there longer.

Rev. Dahlquist was informed that a special passenger ship was coming from New York to take Americans who had been there for months. According to plans, the ship was to stop at Takoradi, Gold Coast only, so all who wished to engage passage on it had to be there. As soon as Rev. Dahlquist received permission to land in the Gold Coast, he obtained passage on an English ship and went to Takoradi. The ship arrived there November 3 and sailed the next day for the U. S. A. Since the evangelist's mission was a faith one, funds had not yet been received for his passage and he was unable to take the ship.

Travels Cargo Ship.
After waiting there two more months, funds were provided for Rev. Dahlquist's trip and he obtained passage on a cargo and passenger ship of the Barber company. This ship carried manganese ore, very essential in war production, to America. Only four cabins were available. The ship set sail January 11 from the Gold Coast. After spending one day at Freetown, the ship departed from the

Plan Feeders' Day Program in Lincoln

Dorrance Hammitt Passes on Friday

Dorrance Hammitt, 27, of Logan, Ia., brother of Mrs. C. C. Stirtz and Miss Stella Hammitt of Wayne, passed away Friday morning at a Council Bluffs, Ia., hospital.

Services were held Sunday afternoon at the Ames funeral home in Logan with Rev. Mueller of Council Bluffs officiating. Deceased is survived by his wife, his mother, three brothers and four sisters.

Value of Smother Crops Is Explained

Will "smother crops," such as cane, sudan grass, fall grains, soybeans and alfalfa, kill bindweed? This question comes up whenever farmers talk about control of the weed.

There is no hard and fast answer to that question, because the conditions under which bindweed thrives vary considerably, states Gilbert Webster, assistant extension agronomist at the University of Nebraska college of agriculture. Bindweed has an extensive and deeply penetrating root system, which enables it to give strong competition for soil nutrients and moisture. Bindweed can survive prolonged droughts because the roots, which may be 20 to 25 feet long, will reach subsoil moisture.

Competition between plants is a natural condition, points out Webster. A crop that smother bindweed effectively must produce a rank growth that will shade the bindweed and be able to take moisture from the ground effectively. When rainfall is limited, bindweed is able to beat a crop to the surface moisture and thrive on the subsoil moisture reserve. Under those conditions the crop is stunted and shades the bindweed very little. During seasons when rainfall is adequate for both the crop and the bindweed, smother crops can be expected to be more effective in keeping the bindweed under control.

Fall crops of wheat are more effective smother crops than rice or sudan grass, as a rule, because they get a head start in the spring. These fall-seeded crops may be harvested at an early date and the bindweed cultivated for the rest of the season.

Only in rare cases can a smother crop be expected to eradicate bindweed completely. The bindweed can be kept in a weakened condition by a smother crop growing under favorable conditions. If the bindweed has been weakened by a previous period of cultivation, Nebraska farmers who live within driving distance of the U. S. D. A. bindweed eradication experimental farm near York, York county, can see for themselves the results that have been obtained with smother crops and other control methods.

Aircraft Assembly Courses Are Offered

Two additional courses in aircraft assembly inspection will be held at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, April 13 and May 25 in the engineering, science and management defense training program. The 15-week courses are to train sub-inspectors for aircraft assembly. Men and women interested should write to the university extension division for application forms. Selections will be made April 4 and May 16. Each applicant must be a high school graduate, at least 18 years old and in sound physical health. No fees will be charged or credit given, the cost being borne by the federal government. The work includes shop mathematics, drafting and blueprint analysis, materials and measurements, organization, nomenclature and standard parts.

Speaks at College.
Dr. John C. Bennett, from the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal., spoke Wednesday evening to a joint session of the YMCA and the YMCA at the college. Dr. Bennett will address the college convocation this Thursday, using the theme, "Toward a New World Order."

Pay Court Fines.
Oscar Snyder paid fine of $10 and costs of $2.55 and Wm. Palmer paid $10 and $2.45 Tuesday after pleading guilty in county court to charge of overloading trucks. Patrolman John Meistrall filed complaints.

Cablegram Received.
A cablegram from Lieut. Douglas Canling, received this week by the W. P. Cannings, states that the Wayne youth is "well and is flying." Douglas is in the Pacific war zone.

EXCHANGES
Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Daws of Randolph, have four sons in the service.
Paul Peterson resigned as head of Beemer school, effective at close of the term.
Fred Kind, 86, of Beemer, died last week of injuries suffered when a wood pile fell on him.

CONGRESS

AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN

Washington, D. C., March 18, 1942.
Many CCC camps are closing. Active camps have shrunk from 1,200 to 500 and there will be other discontinuances. Veterans' CCC camps have not yet been disturbed. Reports that good clothing has been burned at some of the camps that are closing, are denied by the director of the civilian conservation corps. All usable clothing and materials are transferred to the army and other agencies, he tells the Third district office.

Thousands of letters and telegrams have come to congress from the states demanding legislation to suspend the 40-hour work-week, to set up at least a 48-hour work-week and rigidly to limit overtime profits. Proposed legislation to carry out these demands has been before one house committee and may be on the floor within a short time. Indications are that it will pass. The bill outlawing strikes, which passed the house by a large majority some time ago, lies dormant in the senate.

The labor department tells the Third district office that there are now three minor strikes in what is termed national defense industry. The department reports there are now 12 strikes in progress throughout the country.

Representative Edith Rogers of Massachusetts, author of a bill to establish a women's army auxiliary corps for service with the army of the United States, tells her colleagues that she sees no reason why women should not be given the same opportunity as is given men to win the war. She believes the voluntary women's auxiliary will attract competent women to the service to serve as clerks, stenographers, telephone operators, cooks, etc. in order to release men for actual combat duty. Mrs. Rogers feels her friends should be assured that most of the women of America favored it. High ranking army officials and several women, some of them said to be candidates for commissions, sit in the house gallery while the legislation was being passed.

The war department told congress that this legislation is needed to win the war. The house passed the bill largely because of those representations. Many questions are being asked by women. The plan is to start slowly and eventually have about 150,000 women in uniform. All will be volunteers and serve one year. The uniform, rules and regulations are yet to be worked out by the secretary of war. The corps will be the only women's organization authorized to serve with the army, excepting the army nurse corps. Eventually, local recruiting stations will have full information, but those wanting to get into being told to send their applications to the war department in Washington. The women are to do only non-combatant work and will take the place of men in non-combatant jobs. Eligible ages for enrollment are between 21 and 45 years and married women are not excluded.

The original copies of the constitution and the declaration of independence have been moved away from Washington. These two famous documents have been the big attractions for tourists who visited the library of congress. Other valuable documents are being moved elsewhere from time to time.

The new war department building is nearing completion. It will cost about 30 million dollars and will house about 30,000 employees.

The agricultural appropriation bill, held by deep economy cuts, is now in the senate. Sharp cuts were made in the travel expenses of the department. The senate has already sensed the public demand for economy and while that body will restore some of the items cut or cut out in the house the completed bill will show the effects of the big economy campaign. Other appropriation bills are getting the same treatment. "If it is not for war, it can be cut," seems to be the new slogan here.

Situated only 100 miles from the coast, there may be some possibility of visits from planes from some ocean plane carriers. Almost daily this kind of air forces in all parts of the world. Recently, this city had its first all-night black-out, lasting from 8 p. m. until 6 a. m. It was not complete, being largely confined to the residences and apartments. The street lights were on, traffic was not stopped, and the government departments, with lights shining from their thousands of windows, were not included. It was an experiment to ascertain what the people in their homes would do should occasion come for completely darkening the city.

The folks responded well. Some covered home windows with black cloth or paper, while others used blankets and robes to obtain the desired effect. Not many had been able to purchase the special black curtains to cover windows and screens. Back of such light screens, the lights were turned on and life proceeded normally. The air-raid wardens, numbering thousands, patrolled the city to warn the negligent and the few ejectors, but there were not many violations of the order. There was one phase which had not been fully anticipated. That was that in many homes the lights were turned out without window covering, and the folks went to bed and saved the bother. Other and more complete black-outs from 8 p. m. to midnight will follow and it is hoped that citizens will comply more fully by covering lights rather than turning them off and going to bed.

There is much continuing interest in the possibility of alcohol plants in Nebraska. There are a number of government attitudes that may be helpful to the procurement of these plants. Of primary importance at this time, is the question of priorities because alcohol plants cannot be constructed without the use of large quantities of steel and copper and, so far, priority ratings which will release steel and copper for this purpose are being withheld by the war production board. The other principally important factor is the means of plant construction and operation. None should expect the government to build and operate alcohol plants because there is no present prospect of that. Plant financing will have to be by combinations of private capital or through special corporations organized to borrow funds from an appropriate government credit agency.

About Nebraska And Nebraskans

(By Will M. Maupin)

Perhaps never again will politics reach the high temperature point that it reached in the memorable "free silver campaign" of 1896. After a lapse of nearly a half-century one may write of it dispassionately and without partisan bias. It was a campaign that alienated friendships of years, disrupted families and set neighbor against neighbor. Campaigns before and after have been almost frigid by comparison. Just why the citizenry should have been so stirred up over a simple little dispute about whether silver or gold should be the money standard is not thoroughly known to this date. Neither the gold advocates of the 16-to-1 advocates had any of either. Five silver dollars continued to buy just as much as a five-dollar gold piece, and five paper dollars equalled them in purchasing power.

diana bought votes in "blocks of five."

Supporters of Bryan were called "cheap money advocates," "reactionaries" and worse. The industrial east stood by the gold standard, while the agricultural and mining states of the west stood by the "sacred ratio." Bryan was dubbed "the boy orator of the Platte," and charged with remodeling the Platte river, "a mile wide and an inch deep." The chief arguments of the rank and file of the opposing parties was chiefly invective, and Wall Street was held up as the nest of robber barons and financial thieves. Believe you, dear readers, it was the hottest campaign this republic has ever seen. Its like is not at all likely to appear again.

The result is history. McKinley was elected, and whether or not it was the result of his election, within two years after his inauguration the country had emerged from the depths of depression and was again on the high road to prosperity.

President McKinley died at the hands of an assassin. Mr. Bryan, always an abnormal eater, died in his sleep on a Sunday afternoon in a little Tennessee town where he took part in a trial involving fundamentalism.

This writer cannot forbear mentioning one incident of that now almost forgotten trial. Clarence Darrow, the famous Chicago criminal lawyer was the opposing counsel. He asked Mr. Bryan:

"Do you believe that the serpent in the Garden of Eden was condemned to crawl on its belly because it tempted Eve?"

"I do," exclaimed Mr. Bryan.

"Then please tell me how the serpent traveled before that," said Mr. Darrow.

If Mr. Bryan answered, the answer was lost in the shout of laughter that rocked the little court room.

Start Field Work In This Vicinity

Decision of Supreme Court Favors Dixon County in Early Bond Issue.

Early Days from the Wayne Herald for March 25, 1926: Encouraged by mild elements, many farmers have started work in their fields, and activities incident to putting the ground in shape to plant are everywhere in evidence. Indications thus far point to an early spring and everyone looks forward anxiously to favorable growing seasons. Last year's prolonged, dry weather somewhat shortened the corn crop. All have confidence that the normal amount of moisture will fall this year and that abundant crops will reward the industry of farmers.

First warm days of spring find the body unprepared for the change and as a consequence a tired feeling overwhelms brains and muscles. The spirit seems to be willing but the flesh is faint and weak. Eyes are heavy and feet are heavier, and one yearns for the green meadow and shady brookside. The vernal languor passes as the life fluid automatically changes in the human crankcase, and one becomes adjusted to the warm elements. Then the summer season with its gathering foliage and sweet-scented buds bursting into bloom gives intoxicating and causes joyous thrills.

Groups from Winside, Hoskins and Carroll met with Wayne county board to discuss the building of a state road from Winside west through Hoskins to the county line.

A special train will come to Wayne soon to promote increased cow and hen production. Sylvanus Taylor, 82, Civil war veteran, died March 20, 1926. C. E. During the past few weeks a few automobiles have been forced out of service because of lack of tires. In other cases, owners have stored their cars, thinking that they are contributing to the war effort. Such is not the case. A stored automobile is economic loss. After months of storage, valves will stick, pistons freeze, and due to condensation, even the expensive gears will become pitted and growl when and if your car ever is started again. Patriotism does not demand that you lay up your car... just the opposite. Conservation requires you to keep your car in service... and help relieve congestion on bus and rail traffic.

To be of greatest service in this National Emergency, pledge to yourself that you will cut in half your weekly driving. If we do this, we shall double the essential transportation service now available in America's cars. If you have definitely decided to store your car, then the most patriotic gesture you could make is to remove the tires and make them available to some friend or neighbor who uses his or her car to go to and from work, or to someone who is neighborly enough to haul others to work. America needs to win a battle on the home front, and the 29,000,000 passenger cars in the nation have a job to do.

A Stored Car Is an Economic Catastrophe

"KEEP 'EM ROLLING"

Drive... But Drive Sensibly

Practically every car owner in this county, through care and sensible driving, can keep rolling for two years or more. All we need to do is consult a responsible automobile or tire dealer. See that your car is in good mechanical condition. Arrive at an estimate of the miles left in your tires. Then budget these miles to last just as long as possible... for necessary driving.

This is no time for fads. America has a job to do. Of course, there is a place for bicycles... and horses, too. But a serviceable automobile, up on bricks, hidden in a garage, does not represent a contribution to the war effort.

Assistant City Engineer Ray Blessing has been trying since last December to obtain permission from the office of production management to sell the street viaduct salvage. Meanwhile, thieves have stolen one ton of the metal.

After paying some bills, William Greer of Newport (News, Va.) wound up $4 short. He asked two stores to check their cash receipts for the day to find out whether they were $4 ahead. The error was caught in time! Los Angeles city council wanted to legalize carousels, which are merry-go-rounds. But what it almost got was legalized carousis, drunken revels. The word was misspelled in the ordinance but the spelling was revised before it was too late.

Tire rationing worked an advantage for W. M. Robertson, owner of one of Missouri's largest tire concerns in Joplin. Robertson also operates the Joplin public service company supplying the city with bus service. His automobile showrooms have been converted into a bus depot and business has flourished.

Tarzan, a 6-month-old collic, led his dear-mum mistress from her flaming third-floor flat after other residents had fled from the six-family house in New Jersey. Police said Tarzan tugged at the housewife's dress, pulling her to the street and safety. The mistress had been unable to hear the alarm which warned others.

A. E. Beaudett of Albuquerque must be counting on a short war. "It got me through one world war and I expect it'll get me through this one," he commented yesterday, purchasing the 20th set of license plates for his 1914 model Ford. He still drives it to and from work.

Magistrate Haddock in New York doesn't forget a face. When a prisoner appeared before him on a voluntary charge of vagrancy, Haddock studied and then said, "I sentenced you to 30 days' jail, and you're lucky I don't give you an additional sentence for stealing my shoes 24 years ago." "Jigger" blushed at the mention of his old nickname but denied that he was the one who had taken the judge's shoes when he was swimming in the river.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD... IS WOOL

According to newspaper advices, men's clothing will be in for some drastic changes. No cuffs or pleats on trousers... all to save precious wool. Some changes are in effect now. It's harder for us to buy wool suits now. A lot harder. Time may come when an all wool suit will be a "museum piece" with manufacturers because government rightly is going to see that our fighting men get the best wool to be had. And that's all right with us one hundred per cent. But such curtailments will not affect our stocks for some time to come. We still can sell you wool suits, trousers with cuffs and pleats, suits with vests. And for less money than you'd pay later for suits of similar quality.

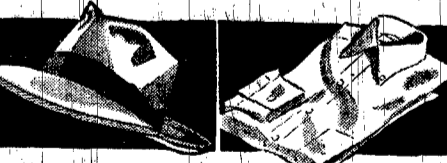

Our No. 1 Hit For Spring and Easter Is A SUIT at $25.00

That Should Last For "The Duration"

Men who understand the economy of daily living, recognize that quality pays. They are more certain of it now than ever. When they buy a suit they buy a better suit... because they have an eye to the future. Quality is wearability. Our No. 1 hit suit is all wool and tailored to rigid specifications, designed with seasons ahead in mind.

Other Suits $19.50 to $32.50
