Cushing Leader In Jap Conflict

been severe. I remembered telling him to stay in the station until I had finished dressing those to whom it was given aid at the moment. It was only a matter of minutes later that our ship was shelled again. Many of those shells exploded in our battle dressing station. With no lights and everything burning, only a very few of us escaped. How we got out I shall never exactly know. We removed all the injured that was possible. After the last mentioned incident, I never saw Jean again. Nevertheless I am certain that if he was not seriously injured by that last series of exploding shells or caught in the fire, he would be with us today. I was more than honored to have quarters with one of the most honest, true and sincere young naval officers I have ever met or known."

Dr. Cashman arrived in the States in February on 30-day leave. He came to his home at Rawlins, Wyo. The young man planned to visit the Huntersmen but was taken ill and spent his leave recuperating.

Ensign Gives Account.
"For several days Jean was the one officer for whom it seemed that none of us could account," writes Ensign Robert E. Wolfe, another on the Cushing. "We hoped that he had gone off the starboard side of the ship and made his way to Tulagi the next morning. Finally, after we arrived in New Zealand, we began to piece the story together from bits of information picked up among the crew. During the engagement the bridge had received some pretty heavy punishment. Jean's station was there, and it was he who directed the fire, made calculations that placed two of eight tin fish for direct hits on the Jap battlewagon off our port bow. After his work was done, he was seen to enter the wardroom. Jean told Dr. Henning that some shrapnel had caught him. Then accounts say he went over and sat down on a bunk at the port side of the room until Dr. Cushman could get to him. It was just after that that the captain came down from the bridge, four shells entered the wardroom and surrounding area from the starboard side and the order to abandon ship was given."

Ensign Wolfe tells that wounded survivors were taken from the wardroom, placed on rafts and cared for through the night by the doctor, who was also wounded.

Gives Account of Trip.
In relating about the trip to the Pacific, Ensign Wolfe relates that one carrier, two battlewagons, four or five cruisers and a dozen destroyers headed for "down there." It's no ordinary sight to see a carrier maneuvering along under destroyer screen from 500 to 2,000 yards away. Ensign Wolfe assures the Huntersmen that the crew of the Cushing was one of the most congenial afloat. "The way the fellows pitched in to help was more than an extension of friendship and genuine goodwill. And Jean was one of the major reasons I feel this way. He was good and kind and a gentleman with a strong character."

Continuing with the account of the Cushing's last trip, the officer says that contact was made with the Jap carrier force October 26. This was at the Santa Cruz islands where the Japs suffered heavily and the Americans lost the carrier, Hornet, and a destroyer, Porter. This was the first big engagement for the Cushing. The ship put in on New Caledonia and took off the next morning for Guadalcanal. The trip was uneventful except for a few plane and sub threats.

The Cushing returned to New Hebrides and left there November 8. Jap torpedo planes attacked the ship November 12. "We must have knocked down a dozen planes and their torpedoes all went astray, though one of the Jap planes did damage the San Francisco. We were steaming up the channel between Guadalcanal and Tulagi, the Cushing in the van, when Japs approached from around Savo Island, also in column and split up, half the force cutting across our bow to run down one side of us along the canal shore and the other half keeping off our starboard side.

Describes Encounter.
"Suddenly starfishes burst and lighted the skies. Searchlights went on. Two waterline hits knocked out our lubricating oil system and burst a boiler pipe; the turbines ground to a stop and we were motionless in the water. We gave and took it and after a half hour of continuous firing, our guns were knocked out, we were afire and our ship was useless. It was about 3 when we abandoned ship in life jackets, some on rafts, most in the water. Marine landing barges never looked better than they did at 8 the next morning. Six of our officers and 125 of our men were lost."

Visits in Hospitals.
Lt. J. G. Drake writes the Huntersmen details of the Cushing tragedy much as the others. He states further that after the tragedy he made frequent visits to the survivors' hospital. He never saw nor heard anyone who saw Jean after the night of the battle.

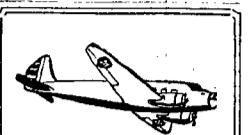

"The truth as near as I can give is that Jean was lost. The reason I say this is that if he was not turned in at Guadalcanal or Tulagi within the two weeks I was there, he had no chance of survival against the overwhelming odds of nature and enemy action. Jean, in my opinion, was lost in the forward battle dressing station when it was so hard hit by enemy shellfire."

"Jean was a true officer and gentleman and you may ever be proud of his every action."

Matter of Agreement
AN uncompromising new dealer wonders why congressmen and senators and many of their constituents do not agree with the president on everything during the present emergency. Should they agree with him on labor legislation and on subsidies when they are in fact convinced that he is mistaken and that his policies would hurt rather than help? Has he been right so often in handling domestic programs that his judgment, involving business and finance, should not be questioned?

Congress thought labor leaders who were engineering strikes in conflict with war production, were in need of a restraining law, and accordingly passed one. Congressmen were manifestly serving the war effort by adopting an anti-strike law, and they reflected popular judgment in later overriding the executive's veto.

People do not agree that subsidies are necessary to increase production. On the contrary, they think they may be a hindrance. A majority in congress voted to override the president's veto of a bill to prevent subsidies, though the veto won through failure of the opposition to muster the required two-thirds. The vote was 228 to override the veto and 154 to sustain it.

Congress is truly representative of the nation's dominant thought in moving to eliminate unnecessary bureaus, and weed out useless government employees. It is in accord with popular judgment to prevent group interference with work needed to prosecute the war. The questioner may just as reasonably wonder why the president does not agree with congress.

Schools Hampered
SCARCITY of teachers is causing uneasiness in school ranks. Many teachers have gone into more lucrative government work. It is estimated that 100,000 trained teachers will have to be replaced this year. Schools are so hard hit in inability to compete in salary schedules that the tendency to yield to government subsidies has become alarming.

Rugged, red-blooded Americans do not want to accept subsidies or have their school systems controlled from Washington. Urging people to reassert the spirit of self-reliance and independence, the Omaha Journal-Stockman comments in part:

The friends of sound and liberal popular education are alarmed and they have abundant reason to be. Of course it takes money to operate our public schools but money is really only a secondary consideration. It is the spirit of popular direction of our entire public school system that is at stake. Our public schools have been our national pride and this popular pride must never be lost. Our schools are now dependent on the spirit of a people, on the will to win a war and to maintain the standards for which it is being fought. Such a people can summon new strength within each state to meet this school crisis. A state can tax. It can economize. It can call back teachers who have married and retired. It can consolidate schools, concentrate teaching in shorter terms.

In Ugly Dispute
GREAT was the commotion in Washington by reason of the open break in relations between Vice President Wallace of the Board of Economic Warfare, and Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Henry issued a public statement in which he lodged accusations against Jesse. The latter replied in kind.

Both disregarded the president's advice of some months ago, for public officials to keep their disagreements under cover. Henry became so boiling mad that he had to tell the world, Jesse evidenced just as much wrath in his reply. Washing dirty linen under the public gaze would seem unfortunate, though it confirmed unfavorable appraisal of the Wallace attitude.

Regardless of the facts, the childish verbal conflict will doubtless make retirement happily certain for the vice president at the close of his term.

Allied invasion of Europe has begun with an attack on the island of Sicily which is an Italian possession two miles from Italy's mainland. Axis resistance has been tough, but it is being gradually overcome, and surrender is only a question of time. Then it is more than possible that Italy will throw up the sponge and quit. This would facilitate and hasten the march on Berlin. Axis forces will put up a stiff fight on the start, but as one enemy quarter after another yields, the central source of opposition will be weakened. Undoubtedly Axis leaders see the handwriting on the wall. How long they can fight is a question involving duration of the war. The island of Sicily, now being taken, contains 9,935 square miles, a trifle larger than the state of New Hampshire which has 9,341 square miles. In 1931 the island had a population of 3,529,799.

Evidence accumulates in mad Washington to support the president's observation some months ago that the best of the country's men are conscientious, more alert to war obligations and duties than the capital city. Without noise or bluster the hinterland is bending energies and making sacrifices to win the war and get back to normal. The middle west particularly is able to steel itself to any reasonable task and to carry its load in any marked goal without flagging or whining. Its drouths, dust bowls, grasshoppers, short crops and forced self-denial put it in trim to endure and keep on its feet.

Adjournment of congress for a two months' vacation will enable members to rub shoulders with constituents and get a close-up on what they are thinking. Congressmen will be questioned as to the varying degrees of mental gymnastics current in the capital city, and they will explain the numerous whys and wherefores. Exchanges of opinion will clear understanding, and send members back to their posts with a more certain idea of popular reactions.

When we see an old car of the 1914 vintage trying to hold up and together and serve until the emergency of scarcity ends; we wonder how many of us are in the same boat. But an older of the human variety has no spare parts. If his sparkplugs fail to work, he cannot renew them. He just has to do his best with original equipment, hoping he can fill a useful purpose at least until the world gets back to peace and plenty again.

Imputing responsibility to the press for the Wallace-Jones imbroglio, the chief executive drew this among other rebutting observations from the Miami, Florida, Herald: "No newspaperman on earth asked Mr. Wallace for his opinion on Brother Jones. He poured it out of his own heart. Brother Jones flared back, charging his inner cabinet chum with malice and falsehood."

We can see how the farmer will have plenty of food, but we can also see how town people—especially those in metropolitan centers—may have to squeeze along on considerably shortened rations.

Parents' Responsibility

Arguing against the curfew as the solution of the delinquency problem, the Chicago Sun says all cities would do well to keep children out of bars and places of public entertainment not fit for them, but otherwise, save for school hours, the regulation of children is the responsibility of parents. Which brings us back to the old, old problem of what to do when parents don't accept the responsibility, but turn their youngsters loose to become public nuisances.

Live and Learn.

At this point we rise to congratulate the War Production Board upon the quiet dignity with which it announces an important finding in the case of women's hosiery, as stated in a recent press release: "When women's shoes were rationed, it was expected that this would mean the purchase of longer-wearing, sturdier shoes, and that this in turn would stimulate the buying of sturdier hosiery. "Opposed to this academic theory seems to be the actual fact that the American woman still likes her stockings sheer." Better luck next time, gentlemen!

Businessmen and Postwar Industry

Last Sunday, there appeared in the New York Times a letter to the editor, written by James G. MacDonald, now advisor on public relations to the Blue Network, who has also been chairman of the board of the Foreign Policy Association, high commissioner for refugees from Germany, member of the editorial staff of the N. Y. Times, president of the Brooklyn Institute, chairman of the President's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees, and member of the Board of Education of New York. The contents of this letter, which in part appears below should be known to all Americans:

"To an extent which will surprise many people, American business is farsightedly and courageously planning to meet its postwar problems. The changeover to peacetime economy will involve problems more vast and intricate and difficult than those solved so brilliantly during the transition to an all-out war economy.

"The task that American business is preparing to meet when the firing ceases will be colossal. As many as fifty-six million peace-time jobs may be needed by men and women who will be released from wartime industry and from the armed services. To convert our factories and services back to normal purposes and simultaneously to develop a level of production high enough to absorb this number is a challenge. If it is not met successfully we may see here economic and social disturbances so serious as to impair or perhaps destroy our country's ability to play a worthy role abroad.

"The National Association of Manufacturers' leadership in postwar planning can be roughly divided into two parts: its unwavering insistence on what it believes to be sound economic and political policies essential to success in readjustments of business to a peacetime footing, and the support it gives to the planning which is being done by individual establishments. In addition to fighting for those principles which it considers are basic to the maintenance of the free-enterprise system, the NAM is aiding individual business concerns to prepare for the postwar period.

"Through its Postwar Problems Committee the NAM is continuing its studies of demobilization and postwar employment. In March of this year the committee published a report entitled 'Jobs, Freedom, Opportunity in the Postwar Years.' This outline is the NAM's ideas on the 'nature of the postwar problem' and on 'domestic and external requirements for prosperity.' In general it is a reaffirmation of the principles for which the NAM has consistently

TO THE RESCUE.

A dream sharpened realization of the helpless misery suffered by subjugated peoples. Suspicion, spying, disloyalty, betrayals, disruption of families, false accusations to carry out an evil plan, cruellest tyranny to satisfy the blood lust of ruthless war lords, often near starvation and ever-nagging heartaches—a state of human wretchedness never intended by the Supreme Maker—lead one to wish with all the fervor in his soul for an early allied victory that will strike shackles from the feet of all enslaved creatures, restoring or establishing individual freedom everywhere. The certain inalienable rights, standing out in American fundamentals, should be blazed into every quarter of the earth, and it should accompany the voice of peace as it is raised above the last shriek of deadly shells. Liberty that is orderly, respectful and law-abiding should be guaranteed.

Washington, D. C. July 7, 1943

The administration is determined to pay food subsidies regardless of the opposition of congress. The plan now is to use funds of the commodity credit corporation and funds of reconstruction finance corporation to carry the subsidy program until next fall. By that time it is believed that the program may be so firmly fixed in our economy that there will be no way to remove it. Producers, processors and feeders have been unanimous in their testimony that food subsidies will reduce rather than increase our food production. One member of congress who once opposed subsidies but who now favors them, has this to say: "There are more consumers than farmers. Subsidies will bring in more votes."

Here are four reasons why a majority of members of congress objected to subsidies: 1. Because they constitute the best reason for the threat of inflation by increasing surplus spending power. 2. Because we merely postpone the day when we will have to pay our food bill. 3. Because the wage earner of this generation and the following generation will have to pay a disproportionate share of that part of the national debt which results from the payment of subsidies. 4. Because it is economically wrong to pass on to our sons and daughters any part of the war debt that we can possibly pay ourselves. And it is morally wrong to obligate our sons and daughters to pay for the food we are eating today.

Congress has over-ridden the president's veto 58 times in the 150 years of our history. Andrew Johnson following the Civil war, was the first president to have a veto over-ridden. He suffered that experience 14 times during his term of office. Grover Cleveland had seven vetoes over-ridden in his two terms. President Roosevelt suffered his eighth defeat a few weeks ago when congress over-rode his veto of the anti-strike bill.

Paul Combs of Valley, Neb., has been in Washington for several days. He has been in the east for instruction in Boy Scout work. He expects to locate in Fremont or Norfolk to conduct headquarters for the Boy Scout organization.

EXCESS BAGGAGE.

The Industrial Press Service reports that the joint committee on reduction of non-essential federal expenditures has recommended the elimination of 300,000 government employees. It is pointed out that in World war No. 1 there was one government employee for every five soldiers, whereas in the present war there is one for every two and a half men in uniform. The report by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and his committee, appointed to look into the government's employment situation, mentions that 925,000 civilian employees in 1939 had been increased to 3,008,519 April 1, 1943. It was discovered that only 45 per cent of the total are actually engaged in war production. In hearing many of the government's departments for delay in submitting personnel reports or in making inaccurate returns, the committee said: "It is amazing to note that in the face of vast numbers of employees now on the pay roll of the federal government, the main reason given by the agencies for their inability to submit correct reports on time was 'lack of sufficient personnel.' The federal government finds itself in the peculiar position of advocating and sponsoring a full labor-utilization program within private industry but neglecting the same problem in so far as the federal service is concerned."

in Washington, he will be assigned to some military camp preliminary to being sent to active overseas duty.

The Bren gun, a light machine gun, is a Czechoslovak invention. The gun gets its name from the town of Brno where the original Bren gun was produced. It is the combination of the weapon made at Brno and the Enfield gun, a British weapon.

Wm. M. Jeffers, rubber director, continues to make the front pages of eastern papers. His recent statement advocating an America-first post-war rubber program that would make us independent of foreign sources of supply has captivated the imagination of many people, who believe we should continue building processing plants closer to the sources of raw materials. Mr. Jeffers says that when peace comes, we should see to it that Americans look after Americans. He believes in cooperation with our present allies, but he doesn't believe in scrapping hundreds of millions of dollars invested in synthetic rubber plants. He predicts that next year we will make 850 thousand tons of synthetic rubber. That is more than was ever imported. He believes that rubber can be manufactured in the United States as cheaply as it can be imported from anywhere and more cheaply than it can be imported from the Malay peninsula and the Dutch East Indies. Mr. Jeffers believes that we can make synthetic rubber of as good quality as natural rubber.

Pfc. F. J. Suoper, son of John Suoper of Lindsay, Neb., is one of many members of the coast artillery who are manning the anti-aircraft guns on Capitol hill. Many of these anti-aircraft guns are scattered all over this part of the country. Some of these guns were referred to in newspapers as "dummies." However, any enemy coming over this part of the country would see how "alive" these guns really are. Pfc. Suoper is in charge of the coast artillery first aid station which is only a few steps from the nation's capitol building.

The rows between officials in high places continue to enliven the national capital. While the month just passed was the hottest June on record, and three such bureau upheavals have occurred while the heat was the greatest, the fact that similar feuds and feuding have occurred in the cold months makes it impossible to charge such troubles to the heat alone. As far back as last August, the president made an unofficial request or suggestion to the high-crisis not to conduct their controversies in public, but his suggestions apparently were of only temporary effect. The question of "Who Is Biggest" keeps right on upsetting official composure.

Now comes Vice-President Henry Wallace with a bristling attack upon the person, actions and reputation for truth and veracity of Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones. Of all the feuds that have broken into print, this one has aroused the greatest storm. Vice-President Wallace accuses Secretary Jones of being a bureaucratic back-biter, obstructionist and prevaricator. Secretary Jones responds in kind and alleges that the vice president is a falsifier and a purveyor of misinformation. In long statements issued to the press, both proceed to provide the specifications to maintain their allegations. Both men attend the president's weekly cabinet meetings, and have been doing so for years, but there seems to have been nothing which presaged an open rupture accompanied by so much noise. What may happen at the next cabinet session will be behind closed doors.

The president is greatly disturbed over the outbreak of this latest rumpus, about which he had no warning. He lays some of the blame for such rows upon the newspapers and radio commentators for having so much to say about disagreements between officials. Elmer Davis, of the office of war information, started a little war of his own only a few weeks ago when he criticized newspapers for devoting too much space to bureau and congressional disturbances and not enough to his own news releases about the war, food prospects, and crop shortages. Mr. Davis was accused of seeking to dictate to a free press, etc., and for a couple of weeks editorial brickbats flew in his direction. The president seems to think that without so much publicity the bureau chiefs would be less inclined to squabble.

Mr. Wallace and Mr. Jones have been none too friendly for a long time. Both believed that the presidential chair was waiting for them before the Chicago convention in 1940. They may be entertaining similar opinions now. The row which led to the outbreak started months ago. The vice president was made chief of the bureau of economic warfare, set up for the purchase of strategic war materials in foreign lands, a responsibility which had been that of Secretary Jones as head of the reconstruction finance corporation. For weeks charges that he had failed to make purchases when and to the extent he should have, have been cropping out in the press. Mr. Jones responded by going before a senate committee and telling his side of the story. Then came the blast by Mr. Wallace and the counter-blast. Both demand a congressional investigation as to their allegations and the facts involved, and both are likely to be accommodated. The president may have more to say in the matter. He might fire the average chief-tain of a department, but Mr. Wallace is vice president and can't be fired. Mr. Jones has been so long in Washington in charge of the R. F. C., with its billions of loans, that his position would make it difficult to fire him. The Wallace-Jones scrap may last for weeks. With a great war on, and our fighting men and workers on farms and in industry making such remarkable records toward victory, it is to be regretted that there should be a lack of harmony in high places when responsibility is so great.

Secondary to the Wallace-Jones affair in public attention was the resignation of Chester Davis as war food administrator, after his brief experience of three months in that position. Much had been expected of him, and for a time he seemed likely to become secretary of agriculture in place of Secretary Wickard. But he differed with the OPA and its program for roll-backs and food subsidies. He advocated more and better machinery and other helps and facilities on the farms to increase production of food. He stated frankly that his power to act was circumscribed and that he could not perform the task allotted to him because of interference from others, without naming those who interfered. In brief words, Mr. Davis tangled with the OPA and he is on his way back to his old job in St. Louis. Congress still is debating the roll-back and subsidy plan and has displayed strong opposition to both.

A New York City congressman wants to solve the meat shortage forthwith. He demands that the government shall promptly seize seven million head of cattle from the farmers and convert them into beef. But he fails to say how much the farmers should receive for them, what the prices of the beef products should be. Also, he is among those who want the farmers to stop feeding corn to hogs and other stock and sell it to processors. The government has requisitioned 9,000,000 bushels of corn in elevators to turn it over to starch factories and chemical plants, and may take more. But making meat without corn is not possible, and seizing seven million steers is a bigger job than taking over nine million bushels of corn.

The war department bill of 71 billion dollars to carry on the war another year passed both houses of congress without a dissenting vote. It is the largest single appropriation bill ever passed. Among the items is one of 12 billion dollars for ammunition alone. Nobody knows how much of it will be necessary, but that much ammunition ought to accomplish a lot. The program for munitions has been so expanded that even more can be made than the billion dollars worth per month. In fact, so many big powder and shell plants have been built that some of them have been closed and others have reduced their forces. If need be, the plants can be re-opened in short order, but re-employing the labor might be more difficult.

Among other facts brought out by congressional investigation is that of the use of giant airplanes for some of the high officials for their own special purposes. Some of the commercial airlines complain that so many planes have been taken over that the transportation lines are unable to take care of their business. The committee brought out that some of these planes have been held for the accommodation of certain officials and not used on an average of more than three hours per day; when other forms of travel are available. Each plane so devoted to special purposes has its complete flying crew, also ground crew, so the investigation may be more revealing than originally anticipated.

Sgt. W. A. Lerner Gives Impression Of North Africa

1st Sgt. W. A. Lerner writes from somewhere in north Africa of a "few happenings of late." "Very hot during the daylight hours, nights are rather cool. Swimming every evening. Cigarettes are 45 cents a carton. Arabs will pay $15 for a mattress cover; they use these for robes. Food is very good, had turkey recently. This company has a chicken, dog and a goat for pets. Fishing for eels is a popular sport. Wild boars are to be found in this area. French is the common language spoken. Recently I conversed with some German prisoners... mere boys. Men are rapidly becoming tanned... resemble Ethiopians. Pfc. Geo. V. Forney of this company was born in Wayne. Capt. Thomas G. Keck, a West Pointer, is an able commander.

"We use a captured Italian car for company business. Total war is indeed total... several cities leveled to the ground. German bomber attack on a nearby city recently. I am acting as company first aid man since we do not have an assigned medical officer. To live in a pup tent is indeed close quarters. Moorish fishermen use a circular casting net, loaded on its edges... they do very well since they are quite proficient in using the net. Mosquitoes and ants are pests indeed. Productive farmland in some areas... grapes grown everywhere. Natives cut grain with hand sickles. Livestock used to thresh the grain. Witnessed an Arab wedding... Rainy season is over. The 'Stars and Stripes' an AEF publication, arrives once a week. Yesterday a cow stepped on an undiscovered land mine... no more cow. Recently acquired a photograph from the special service office."

And as a P. S., the sergeant added, "A stork has a nest in a ruined church steeple." In a letter to his brother, Walter Lerner of Wayne, he mentions, "The sun is plenty hot while at night we use blankets. My bed has chicken wire for springs. I expect to ride a camel soon."

Tells Of Surrender Of Troops In Africa

1st Sgt. Raymond Nelson, in a letter written May 27 from Tunisia, north Africa, tells his sister, Mrs. Lloyd Surber, and husband some of his interesting experiences.

1st Sgt. Nelson sailed August 6 and landed at Bristol, England, 14 days later. He trained two months at Shiselod, England, before leaving for Oran. At first the French people did not associate readily with U. S. troops but after several weeks they became more friendly. Many of the soldiers were invited into the French homes to celebrate Christmas and New Year's.

1st Sgt. Nelson left Oran January 12 for Tunisia where in February he saw his first real action. Fighting with one troop he came to Thismtown on the edge of the desert where he saw his first camel caravan and got the first feel of the high temperatures during the day and very cold ones at night. At times the thermometer dropped from 90 degrees to freezing.

On arriving at Gafsa, the soldiers found it in ruins. The Germans having destroyed everything worthwhile. Here allied troops were bombed every night and often in the daytime. Thus they got little sleep as they spent most of the time in fox-holes.

Sgt. Nelson then moved with his corps to surprise the Germans at Tabarka, the center of the cork raising industry. There he experienced his first bath in a month.

Soon the Germans were on the run, stated Sgt. Nelson, and then the Italian and German prisoners started coming in. "Some came in our 2 1/2-ton trucks and many drove their own vehicles in and surrendered," says Sgt. Nelson. "It was a glorious sight to see the nazis coming into prison camp by the thousands. Our clearing station gave first aid and medical care to all who needed it. We were right in the middle of the camp with prisoners on both sides of us."

Every german carries a camera. "Some of these cameras are worth several hundred dollars and our boys bought them for a carton or two of cigarettes." Sgt. Nelson acquired a fairly good one.

Sgt. Nelson visited the ruins of Carthage from where he could see many axis ships that were sunk, their funnels sticking just above the water. Between Carthage and Tunis lies the great Tunis air base where the Nebraskan saw hundreds of German planes all shot to pieces. Some were the big 6-motor troop carrying planes.

Sgt. Nelson said he was glad the African campaign was over and stated "My wish right now is to get back to the States and see all of you and also my friends and last but not least to eat a porterhouse steak smothered in onions."

Poultry Problems Discussed By Club

Willing Workers club held a tour and meeting last Thursday with the following 4-H members present: Twila Heier, Marjorie Dorman, Wilma Dorman, Lisa Jean Dorman and Dorothy Rossacker. Eleven mothers and neighbors also attended. J. H. Claybaugh, extension poultryman, attended the meeting and discussed poultry problems, including poultry diseases, culling, feeding and breeding of high production flocks. Mr. Claybaugh especially emphasized the need of continual culling out of the poor layers and sickly birds in order to provide enough room for the remainder of the flock and also to reduce the increasing amount of ailments in farm flocks. He also stressed the importance of using the improved types of feeds for baby chicks and laying flocks that will eliminate loss of considerable high-priced protein feeds.

The members visited the Fred Heier, August Dorman and Will Hansen farms.

Refreshments were served for the 4-H club members at the Will Hansen farm by the 4-H leaders, Mrs. Will Hansen and Mrs. Wm. Evans.

Fires Are Hazards. This is the season of the year that farm fires can be disastrous and Wayne county farmers should be on the watch out for them, warns Agent W. R. Harder. Ripe grain fields are "ripe" for fires. Last year, some fires in Nebraska were caused by truck and tractor exhausts during harvest.

Ploving of fire guards around grain fields can prevent fires from reaching shocked or stacked grain and stacked hay.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kingston write from Portland, Ore., that they like that city and both are in best of health. Rain fell almost every day last fall and winter but they took it as a matter of course. Now the country is beautiful and Portland justifies its name as the city of roses. Days are warm, often reaching 85, but nights are cold enough to require heavy quilts.

Congress in Recess Stefan Enroute Home

Congress has taken a recess after a long and strenuous stretch of this session. It is hot in Washington at this season and most of the members are in need of a rest.

Your Third district member has been assigned some special work as a member of the appropriations committee, so it will be two or three weeks before his arrival at home. He and Mrs. Stefan will also visit briefly in Chicago.

Congressman Stefan plans to visit all of the 24 counties in the district while at home. He wants to talk to as many people as possible in order to find out how things are going on the farms and in the business places and to learn first-hand what the people have to say regarding the legislation that has been passed during the past six months. He feels that after a month of listening to the people and getting their views and opinions he will be better able to go back to Washington and reflect their actions and wishes.

Teachers Asked To Register Soon

Co. Supt. F. B. Decker asks certified teachers in this county who wish teaching positions to notify his office immediately. Mr. Decker points out that under the law he must certify to the state superintendent of public instruction that no regular certified teachers are available before the local boards of education can make application for temporary teaching certificates.

The county superintendent pointed out that unless those legally certified teachers, who wish positions, make their intentions known to him immediately he must begin to accept the applications of boards of education for temporary certified persons in order to provide educational opportunities for the boys and girls of Nebraska.

Co. Supt. Decker said that by August 1 the state superintendent of public instruction will on the basis of information obtained from the various county superintendents in the state, make an estimate of the needed temporary teachers and he will then assume that all certified teachers who wish to teach have either signed contracts or made known to the county superintendent that they are available.

Station Is Largest Of Kind in World

Lt. Lyle Mabbott Speaks and Mrs. Clarence McGinn Has Music for Club.

Great Lakes naval training station is the largest in the world and cost 50 million dollars, according to Lt. Lyle Mabbott who arrived from that place Saturday for a short visit with his mother, Mrs. Alice Mabbott. In speaking to Kiwanians Monday, Lt. Mabbott, who is a civil engineer for the navy, told how naval construction has expanded since Pearl Harbor. Buildings with which he has assisted will house 60,000 navy boys. These structures are complete with gymnasiums, reading and writing rooms and other recreation facilities the young men need.

Building contracts for the navy are let on the fixed fee contract. Prices are based on past performance. This avoids fluctuation of charges, the officer explained. Mrs. Clarence McGinn furnished southern songs for the program Monday. She was accompanied by Mrs. H. A. Welch. The numbers were "Sleep Kentucky Babe," by Richard Henry Buck, "Banjo Song," by Weeden, and "A Little Coon's Prayer," by d'Arcy. She closed with Irving Berlin's "God Bless America," all joining in the chorus.

Miss Laura E. Lyons Writes About Former Wayne County Folks

Miss Laura E. Lyons of Long Beach, Cal., formerly of Wayne, writes of attending the funeral of Henry Miller in Long Beach at the Dillard chapel. Miss Lyons says the place was overflowing with friends, and when she called on Mrs. Miller, nee Ella Piepenstock of Wayne, she was trying to answer the letters and telegrams of sympathy.

Sunday, June 13, Miss Lyons spoke of meeting the Paul Reithwisch family and having dinner at their home at Bellflower. The Reithwisch family was entertaining Alfred Schutt of Sholes, who was having his first freedom from camp at Desert, near Indio, in the Imperial valley.

"On Saturday, the 26th, I left on the late afternoon bus and my cousins met me in El Monte. After dinner in their home, they took me to Pasadena wedding chapel to attend the marriage of Warren Wingett's nephew, Robert DeLancey, to Elizabeth Cox of Eagle Rock. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeLancey. Mrs. DeLancey is the former Orpha Wingett. He is doing essential war work in the only musical instrument factory of its kind on the west coast. He is also studying to be a Methodist minister. The bride looked lovely in white, her attendants in pastel shades. Both mothers were in blue. The reception followed in the lounge and the couple left for two days at Lake Arrowhead. I accompanied the bridegroom's parents to Eagle Rock, their home, returning Sunday afternoon."

Library News

The biggest news of the week at the library is the hanging of Venetian blinds. They had been ordered for some time but arrived at last and now that they are in place they fully meet expectations of those who ordered them. They help to give a better reading light during the day and do wonders for the appearance of the room. Come in and see how nice they look!

Another fine new addition to the equipment of the library is a globe of the world which has been placed on the table with the Atlas.

Among the books received this week is a biography of George Washington Carver, by Rackham Holt. Biography readers will welcome this story of the life of a negro scientist. "The Squad Goes Out" is a new novel by Robert Greenwood, telling a tale of London and the blitz. "South from Corregidor" by Lt. Comdr. John Morrill, U. S. N., and Pete Marlin, is a story of the last flaming days of Corregidor, and of the epic escape of 18 navy men in a 36-foot boat through thousands of miles of Jap-infested seas. If you think you have read exciting things before about the South Pacific you will agree that this tops them all. "Thirty Swans Over Tokyo," by Captain Ted Lawson, edited by Robert Considine, is also very thrilling. This ran in serial form in "Colliers" magazine in June but if you missed it there come to the library and get our copy of the book, which contains some pictures not shown in the magazine. "Colour Scheme" is a new mystery by Ngaio Marsh and makes good summer reading. The young girls who have been asking for another story like "Seventeenth Summer" will be glad to read "To Meet Miss Long," by Joan Kahn.

A capacity crowd Tuesday attended the movie on London, followed by a shorter reel about visiting the Indians. The next story hour for the little folks will be held Tuesday, July 20. The time is 3:30 as usual.

Bins Are Available For Grain Stocks

Some 6,000 empty AAA grain bins in all counties of the state excepting Cherry are being made available to farmers for storage of 1943 crops, according to State AAA Chairman Abner Chestern, who estimates they will store 12 million bushels. It is figured their use will wipe out some difficulties from temporary wartime transportation bottlenecks.

These wood-bin were purchased by AAA last year and vary in size from a capacity of 900 to 3,000 bushels. The price is the original cost plus expense of erection and painting. Buyers can pay cash or give the AAA committee a note due December 31, 1944. Farmers can move bins to their farms or leave them on the AAA town sites until August, 1945. The AAA steel bins are not for sale. But government-owned grain stocks will be transferred from wood to steel bins to make more storage available to farmers if such is necessary.

School Age Total in County Is Dropping

Effects of War On English Life Noted in Letter

Famous Blackpool resort in England will be visited this summer by Audrey B. Jackson and her parents of Huddersfield, according to the young woman who writes June 10 to Jacqueline Wightman. This will be the first time the English family has had any trip since the war started.

"Blackpool is quite a nice place. There is the famous tower, a lovely open-air swimming pool with chutes and fountains, and lots of other things. At the south shore there is a huge pleasure beach with speedboats, Noah's ark, fun house, lots of things to ride on and numerous side shows and stalls. Also there is a new, large casino where you could buy before the ban was put on ice cream and chocolates. I have been to save my chocolate ration already and we are not going until July. Another attraction is an ice rink. Shows are given twice per day but before and after the shows anyone may skate."

Audrey describes herself as "13 years old and will not be 16 until next January 15. Until February this year I attended Greenhead high school for girls; then I decided I should like to work in an office where I am at present. I have fair hair, blue-gray eyes, freckles and am rather tall. I can't really say I have any hobbies but I am very keen on music. I have a bicycle and love to go on long rides and picnics. Until two years ago we had a car but when petrol became so scarce we decided to sell it. Soon afterwards petrol could not be used at all for private use. However, we hope to have a larger car after the war.

"Tennis and swimming are two more of my favorites and when I was at school I used to love netball. Do you play netball in America? At school we played netball and hockey in the winter, and tennis in summer; in junior forms we also played rounders."

"I like to sew and knit occasionally. At the minute I have just finished making a summer frock and am knitting a pullover which is a renovation. It began life as a jumper which I had knitted but after I had worn it and had it washed once or twice it stretched so I pulled it out and am knitting it up again.

Soil from Home Delights Youth

Correct Diagnosis Is Made By Doctor Even to His Own Span of Life.

Cpl. Geo. Rossion, stationed in California, wrote letter after letter to his friend, Charles Abbot Fort Lee, N. J., pleading: "Oh, to feel the good old New Jersey soil under my feet after these blistering sands." The letters got the best of Abbot who scooped up some Jersey soil, put it in a box and sent it to Rossion. The next letter from Rossion read: "I threw the dirt on the barracks floor and scraped and scraped my bare feet in it. Boy, did the other fellows from the past help me out! Thanks a million."

"I have diagnosed a thousand cases," said Dr. U. S. Cordell, Tecumseh, Okla., "and have been able to tell within an hour or two when a person will die." The 72-year-old doctor had a heart ailment. Carefully he examined him. Dispassionately he named the day he would die. The day arrived. He didn't die. But he took a nap the next afternoon—and never awakened.

In proving the importance of diet, an eastern college experimented on chickens. It was found that diet affects the color of feathers. Some birds that had dark feathers developed white plumage after being fed a certain diet.
