

Indispensability of Railroads and Grist Mills — Wayne County's Flour Manufacturing Experience — Back to a Rural School — Newspapers' Values.

Railroads and grist mills were indispensable to first settlements. Introduction of the iron horse was a welcome change from slow-moving ox carts and lumber wagons.

Main line trains have served wonderfully during the war. They have moved troops and equipment with amazing speed and care.

Recalling the old-fashioned grist mill which is now quite extinct, we are reminded of how closely it was tied to pioneer lives.

The History of Wayne County recounts the voting of bonds of $2,000 in 1878 to aid the construction of a grist mill on the Logan.

But in 1885 along came Walter and William Weber, experienced millers, who put up a mill and operated it for 40 years.

The grist mill was so named because it largely flourished by grinding farmers' wheat into flour and accepting grain for pay.

As distance lends enchantment, so far and distant fields of employment capture imagination and fire the spirit of wanderlust.

Of this we are reminded by the decision of a young woman who has decided to quit her job in a distant manufacturing plant to come back to her position as a teacher in a Wayne county rural school.

In these times of big world news and economic differences and uncertainties, every family should have as regular visitors his county newspaper, and his favorite daily.

Rites are conducted for Frery infant. Sandra Lee, daughter born Sunday to Lt. and Mrs. Robert J. Frery, lived but a short time.

Rains Heighten Crop Prospects

Bumper Yield Is Expected In Corn Crop As Area Is Given Good Soaking.

Rains that heighten prospects for a bumper crop of corn in Wayne county and adjoining territory have fallen the past week.

The gauge at the State National bank of Wayne showed .74 of an inch of rain Tuesday night. Added to 15 of an inch Friday and .81 Sunday night, the total here for the week is 17.7 inches.

Winside reported the best rain Tuesday in four months. About 1 inch fell there Tuesday night and the moisture is described as a "crop maker."

Heavy clouds that looked threatening Tuesday morning brought .25 of an inch of moisture to Wakefield. That night .8 of an inch was added there.

Concord and Dixon areas shared in the good rains this week. At Concord the Tuesday night rain registered 1.25 inches.

But in 1885 along came Walter and William Weber, experienced millers, who put up a mill and operated it for 40 years.

Respect For Flag Should Be Shown

(By Lt. J. T. Archer) It has been brought to the attention of this headquarters that many civilians attending the daily retreat and Saturday reviews are not rendering the proper respect towards the United States flag.

The flag is a symbol that represents every person in the United States and is thus due proper respect from both the military personnel and civilians. When the flag passes during review it is the duty of every civilian to stand, face the flag and remain at attention until the flag has passed. Male members should remove head dress during this procedure.

When the flag is being lowered, at evening retreat, and the Star Spangled Banner is being played, every civilian should face the flag and stand at attention and the men should again remove their hats until the flag has been lowered. If, while the flag is being lowered it cannot be seen, everyone should face the music and stand at attention until the last note has been played.

It is realized that this is not an intentional disrespect and that it is due to an over-sight on the part of the majority of civilians in not knowing the definite procedure.

Careful attention to quality and condition of eggs is advised by J. R. Redditt of the state extension service, so that producers may receive the highest possible prices. Ceiling prices for grade "A" eggs under OPA regulations are permitted to advance 1 cent per dozen until August 23. When they hold steady for two weeks, they will then advance 1 cent a week until October 11. Ceiling prices on grade "B" eggs advance less rapidly. From June 28 to November 1 they will be permitted to advance 9 cents per dozen. Prices on "C" grade will advance 7 cents during the period. Mr. Redditt advises gathering eggs twice a day, cooling them quickly and keeping them away from odors.

Gets Commission At Field In Texas

Silver bombardier wings and the commission of second lieutenant in the air corps were earned July 15 by Harold M. Johnson, son of Major and Mrs. John C. Johnson. The youth completed training at Midland, Texas, air field. His new assignment takes him to Selman field, Monroe, La., for navigational training.

During the 12 weeks' intensive training at the Texas field, special emphasis was placed on stimulation of combat conditions. Youths there learned to use bombsights with the minimum "run," which combat experience has proved necessary to avoid enemy flak; their training planes stimulated evasive action on the target practices. At combat camps, the cadet bombardiers lived under the most primitive conditions, learning to get along with short rations of food and water, learning to fuse and load their bombs, and learning to service their bombsights.

Lt. Johnson was graduated from Wayne high school in 1939, at-

Latest Break
LOU R. Maxon is the latest official in Washington to kick over the traces. He severed relations with the OPA and issued a sharply worded statement setting forth his reasons. He charges bungling inefficiency to too many inexperienced lawyers and theorists whose "book-bound, dream-ripped minds definitely have no doors or windows." He says "the best thing that could happen to OPA would be a forced cut in the legal staff of 50 per cent." He wants fewer lawyers employed and only those of experience and sound judgment, and would pay more attention to winning the war and less to promoting domestic reforms. Recognizing OPA as a vital bureau, Maxon followed his initial declaration with these basic rules for improvement:

1. Eliminate the theorists and replace them with business men who know the problem.
2. Eliminate a large share of the lawyers.
3. Eliminate lawyers from the enforcement division.
4. Better co-operation with other government agencies.
5. Give more authority to the local OPA offices and rationing boards.
6. More consultations with business.
7. A price policy covering only the basic cost of living items.

Mentioning that forty thousand grocers have gone out of business, Maxon declared: "They say in Washington these are war casualties. I don't think so. They are casualties of bad planning, and that's the stuff I don't like."

An Unhappy Experience
The Omaha World-Herald relates a recent experience which the editor of the Fremont Guide and Tribune had with the OPA. It appears that the bureau decided to hire a young lady employed by the newspaper, offering her $48 per month more than she had been receiving, and requiring her to quit and reestablish herself on two- and one-half hours' notice. The editor was mad. If wages were "frozen," he could not see how the OPA could justify itself by going out and hiring supposedly "frozen" help. If consistency were not dead, he would call the action inconsistent. The outcome is explained by the World-Herald in these words:

"Apparently the editor raised a certain amount of refined hell about the case, for eventually the girl was called to Omaha and advised that the OPA didn't want her, after all. But, as the editor said, 'the damage had already been done. The urge was there, the dissatisfaction created.'"

Politics
PUBLISHER McCormick of the Chicago Tribune has Warming aroused Wendell Willkie, 1940 Republican presidential nominee, to challenge the publisher to a contest for popular favor in Illinois. McCormick is reported to be an isolationist, whereas Willkie proposes an aggressive hand in regulating international affairs. It is assumed that Willkie will aspire to the next republican presidential nomination, and outcome of his Illinois bout is expected to exercise determining influence.
Many changes are likely in the presidential atmosphere before next year's convention. A late suggestion comes from Senator Nye of North Dakota who proposes for the republican nomination Hanford MacNider of Mason City, Iowa, who served in World war No. 1, and who is now at the front in the capacity of brigadier general. MacNider is a former commander of the American Legion.

Boys in the armed forces are performing nobly and effectually under brilliant generalship. They understand their tasks, and they are going directly and unwaveringly to designated goals. The home front cannot be satisfied with its support of these brave fellows without keeping assiduously at home jobs—making every contribution of effort and money needed to strengthen the cause and speed the victory. While buying bonds is no donation, but a sound investment, it is necessary at this time to forge new steel into the allied war machine, now on the march. Let Wayne county answer the threats of totalitarian enemies by buying more bonds and by doing everything in line with duty and effective service.

The Lincoln Journal reports that some Nebraska weeklies are worrying lest their circulations grow beyond limits allowable under print paper restrictions. As we understand, a newspaper must not consume more than twenty-five tons every three months. It is our guess that few weeklies in the state consume that many tons in a year. The uneasiness under prevailing restraints would therefore seem wholly unnecessary.

The jungles of the southwest Pacific and other fighting areas often furnish tough going, but on the other hand they open fields of knowledge impossible in peacetime experience. The boys are seeing all aspects of the world and every stratum of the human order, and they will have an abundance of priceless value to unfold when they return to their civilian homes and pursuits.

The Nebraska highway department reports a decrease of twenty per cent in fatal automobile accidents during the first six months of 1943. June showed a fifty per cent reduction with eleven killed, contrasted with twenty-two in the same period last year. The department cautions that still closer observance of the rules of the road would still further cut down the fatality list.

The executive order clipping the official wings of Henry Wallace and Jesse Jones will help. If the president would sidetrack all dreamy new deal boys for the duration and turn important jobs over to practical thinkers, closer unity and greater efficiency would be realized.

Rain, accompanied by noisy celestial artillery, interrupted sleepers long enough Sunday night to spread nearly an inch hereabouts. A program contributing two rainfalls per week during July and August would settle the crop question in favor of abundance.

Toilers in the ranks have a chance in this country to rise to places of leadership. And in this country people usually have sense enough to know that leadership means not only efficiency, but increased responsibility.

A fellow gains little respect and yields no worthwhile service by just sitting and kicking. His criticism should be constructive, and he should be ready and willing to help carry the load.

Labor Is Being Mised.
(Omaha Journal/Stockman)

One of the latest plans to inaugurate another strike of working men and women in this country is the demand that packing house workers be paid on a "portal-to-portal" basis. All agreements are to be discarded for this new demand brought up by labor leaders to appeal to the rank and file.

The situation again calls attention to the fact that it is not the workers who are responsible for most of the strikes and labor disturbances that bedevil the nation and slow up our war efforts. It is the self-constituted and self-seeking labor leaders who place their own profits ahead of everything else.

Coal miners are gradually going back to work and production is once more getting under way. It is impossible to overemphasize the fact that strikes may cost many lives of our fighting forces as well as straining the physical and financial resources of the nation.

Many people have not realized the full threat to the war effort that attaches to labor trouble in the coal mines. In 1943 it is estimated that upward of 100,000,000 tons of coal will be chemically utilized. Coal derivatives are used in explosives, plastics, the priceless sulfa drugs, solvents, food preservatives, insecticides, fertilizers, lacquers, rubber, nylon and hundreds of other vital war materials.

Total demands for coal have grown to astronomical proportions. Prior to work stoppages in the mines, the industry was endeavoring to meet all demands placed upon it. It was succeeding. Now it remains to be seen whether there will be a coal shortage. No power on earth will be able to bring back the lives of the service men who may be lost because of any shortage. Men's lives are the price of strikes in wartime.

Not An Issue Now.
(Lincoln Journal)

Deneen Watson, national chairman of the recently organized and named "republican post-war policy association," apparently is trying to force action by the "policy committee" recently named by Chairman Spangler of the regularly constituted national committee. Watson was made chairman of the "policy association" at a meeting of midwestern republicans called by himself. He is a Chicago lawyer. It has been understood that the national committee's "policy committee" will hold a meeting in the east during August. Watson, in an address to the "northeast conference" of his organization attended by about 300 members, in New York, demanded "decisive defeat of the axis: agreement between allied nations before the war ends on terms of peace settlement and outlines of the post-war world; preparation for problems which will arise when 'overall' fighting ends." In effect his fight is against "isolationism."

Watson, it seems, has a plan to compel the national committee to action by a crusade of an internary faction against Chairman Spangler. This seems to be a revival of the fight staged in the national committee meeting at St. Louis last December when Spangler was made chairman, a compromise candidate between two determined factions.

Mr. Watson expresses belief that the national committee's policy committee offers hope for adoption of such a policy as he has outlined. That hope is based on the fact that "isolationism" has few, if any important, followers within the party. Because of that the movement headed by Deneen appears to many as unnecessary, and a cause of friction that otherwise might not exist. There is some admission of this in Watson's statement that "we are a pressure group within the party." He adds: "People are suspicious of delay, skeptical of election year resolutions, and they will be completely intolerant of catch-all platform planks."

Why not dispense with the expression "pressure group"? This designation will not add to prestige. The question seems to be whether a row generated in Illinois political circles shall be made nationwide, when there is so little difference of opinion among party members as to "isolationism" now or in prospect for the future. Isolation, if it ever was, ceased long ago to be dignified as an issue.

SPIRITUAL VALUES.

A world engaged in bitter conflict and terrific slaughter makes life less certain—shortens the step between mortality and immortality. Thus, people naturally turn more and more to props for faith, for reasons to support hope. They turn more and more to spiritual leaders to strengthen belief. While they find different churches emphasizing different dogmas, they find all are headed in the same direction, all aimed at survival of all-important personal entities. All disorganizing doctrines could not be true, and all might be more or less out of line of yet to be revealed realities. Above all the non-essentials rises the age-old question of where and how, and the churches, apart from their comparatively trivial differences over forms and ceremonies, are rendering noble service in breathing confidence and welding courage into often faltering footsteps. Any instrumentality that fashions people better to understand transcendent spiritual values is an indispensable force in these disturbed times.

UNWISE SURVEY.

We question the wisdom at this time of George Gallup's survey of opinion in the United States and Great Britain on the question of the degrees to which the four allied nations have contributed to the war. "Which has done the most so far to win the war?" was the question. In this country expressions were one way, and in Great Britain exactly the opposite. Queried Americans awarded 55 per cent of the effort to the United States, 32 per cent to Russia, 9 per cent to Britain and 4 per cent to China. Britishers voting said: Russia 50 per cent, Britain 42 per cent, China 5 per cent and the United States 3 per cent. It is doubtful if one person questioned in either country knew all the facts, and thus could be guided by them. It was a reflection of superficial feeling. The question which was undoubtedly thrashed over during the reconstruction period, should, as we believe, be left in abeyance until the war has been won and safety among nations reestablished. It is apparent that each member of the allied group is contributing to the utmost of its ability and resources to the cause of victory and freedom, and none should be denied the large credit that will be due.

Christian Science Services

"Truth" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world, on Sunday, July 23.

The Golden Text is: "It is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth" (1 John 5:6).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her: Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity" (Luke 13:11,12).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Were it more fully understood that Truth heals and that error causes disease, the opponents of a demonstrable Science would perhaps mercifully withhold their misrepresentations, which harm the sick, and until the enemies of Christian Science test its efficacy according to the rules which disclose its merits or demerits, it would be just to observe the Scriptural precept, 'Judge not.' There are various methods of treating disease, which are not included in the commonly accepted systems; but there is only one which should be presented to the whole world, and that is the Christian Science which Jesus preached and practiced and left to us as his rich legacy" (p. 344).

"If a member of the civilian defense forces, you remain at or proceed to your post. Blackout your home, building and non-essential lights. Turn out street lights, except traffic lights. If operating a motor vehicle you proceed at reduced speed with caution and low beam lights. If a worker, you remain at your job."

Corn Is Ahead Of Area Report

Early Floods Cut Average For Northeast District Record This Year.

The Nebraska July crop report estimates corn in northeast Nebraska 84 per cent of the average normal, whereas at the same time last year the percentage was placed at 88. County Agent W. R. Harder figures Wayne county's average is higher than that for this district as the area is cut down by earlier floods along the river and by recent lack of rain in some parts of the district. He estimated Wayne county's percentage as 90. The acreage of corn is higher this year than last.

The state figures give the July estimate of crop conditions in the northeast area on other crops as follows: Winter wheat, 90 per cent in 1942 and 80 in 1943; spring wheat, 87 in 1942 and 88 in 1943; oats, 87 in 1942 and 86 in 1943; barley, 86 in 1942 and 86 in 1943; rye, 92 in 1942 and 84 in 1943; tame hay, 92 in 1942 and 80 in 1943; alfalfa hay, 93 in 1942 and 78 in 1943; pasture, 91 in 1942 and 82 in 1943.

The rainfall for the year up to July in 1942 was 4.8 inches in 1942 and 5.45 in 1943. This is an average from all parts of the northeast district.

Library News

The movie for the children shown by Mr. Fuller of the state health department last Thursday was well attended. These films were comedies and animated cartoons with health subjects such as Mr. T. B., Care of the Teeth and the Value of a Smile, and Safety. Friday afternoon, July 23, the older group of children meet and will discuss books on Russia. Tuesday afternoon, July 27, they will see movies on Russia and a short feature to amuse the little folks.

The Zane Grey readers will be interested to know that eight new titles have been added to our collection. The titles are Arizona Ames, Desert of Wheat, Polorn River, Nevada, Sunset Pass, Thundering Herd, U. P. Trail and Wildfire.

An interesting new book for the children and one which won a prize for being the best written, as well as illustrated, is The Little House by Virginia Lee. The children had this story read to them last week at story hour.

Combined Operations is the title of a new book received in the adult department. This book was written by George Sanders who is librarian of the English parliament. The foreword is by Lord Louis Mountbatten and it tells the story of the commando raids. It is factual but very interesting and contains some photographs which add to its interest.

There is evidence at the library that people are not vacationing as usual for the circulation has not fallen off as much as is customary in the summer. Our books are not rationed so a good book and the front porch will probably be a good substitute for uncomfortable travel.

Crews Volunteer To Shock Fields For Farmers Who Are in Busy Season.

Wayne county townspeople have responded to the need for help in harvesting the small grain crop. Crews have organized to assist in emergencies, and others have made a practice of spending evenings and some whole days each week assisting in this vital work.

Agent W. R. Harder estimates that townspeople shocked about 1,000 acres of small grain last week. An estimated 80 people participated in the emergency harvest job, with about 12 from Winslow, eight from Hoskins, 10 from Carroll and 50 from Wayne taking part. A few Norfolk groups helped around Hoskins.

The 80 put in about 970 man hours in the harvest work, Agent Harder estimates.

Trains were organized by college men to help returning, with emergency work. Prof. M. C. Bloss, Coach Ralph Ginn and Prof. G. M. Dansken have gone where farmers needed their help. Another volunteer group included Dr. S. B. Shively, Dr. Geo. Seck, Prof. Raymond Schreiner, C. P. Lapham, Jack Campbell, Burr Standley, Stewart Myers and Jack Dale.

In another crew were Earl Fitch, Henry Westhof, Henry Franzen, Lester Hofeldt, Leslie Swinney, C. Reimers, H. Awiszus, Wm. Reimers, Wm. Chance, Merle Tietzort, Herman Franzen, John Schroeder and Chas. Murphy.

Roy Langemeier, Herman Stuve, Gregory Stuve, Alvin Barton, Lou

Surbor and Ivar Jensen have worked in a crew. Kenneth Lakes, Frank Heine, Gordon Beckner, Lester Beckner, Merle Beckner and Jess Glover made up another group.

M. C. Russell, C. J. Boyce, Jess Tietzort, Joe Haberer, Rev. Alvin Giese, Wilbur Giese, Roosevelt Peterson, Earl Peterson, Ed. Fiedler and Ed. Ossenkop made up another group helping in the emergency.

Another crew includes Ralph Morse, Ed. Skeahan, Herbert Bodendstedt and Harvey Spittiger.

Others here as well as crews out of each town have answered the call for help. A number of young folks, including 4-H boys and girls, have added their assistance in harvesting.

Writes At Random Of North Africa. "Perhaps you would be interested in a few random impressions and observations of Africa," writes Lt. (j. g.) B. B. Bornhoff in a V-mail letter July 4. "Military men with whom I have talked are almost unanimous in the feeling that the British 8th army is the greatest fighting force in the world. All the petty bickering between army and navy men at home disappears when 'the chips are down.' Their cooperation and spirit over here are wonderful. Don't underestimate the coast guard. It has the best landing force in Africa. After seeing an African city that has been bombed only once, it is amazing how the people of London withstood its series of air raids. African natives have a wonderful sense of humor, especially the peddlers. They will bargain for hours and enjoy every minute of it regardless of whether or not they make a sale. And they are shrewd bargainers. They appear indifferent to fear of American sailors and soldiers about to enter into active combat. And yet they can't hide that under current of tension. The anti-aircraft batteries can really put up a screen. The tracer fire at night would put any Fourth of July celebration to shame. The French army is doing a magnificent job considering the handicaps under which it operates. Not nearly as much can be said for the French civilians who appear to be indifferent to the whole situation. Any man would rather face a few enemy bullets than get tangled up in the avalanche of government reports that are due at the end of the fiscal year. I wonder how the natives can stand wearing the yards and yards of cloth that makes up the native costume. It is hot enough with just a pair of shorts. "I appreciate very much receiving the Herald once a week here in Africa. Although it gets here from three to six weeks after it is published, it is indeed welcome. It is like a nice long letter from home."

Men Doing Best To Conclude War. "Today is very hot and the wind is blowing sand," writes 1st Sgt. W. A. Lerner June 11 from north Africa to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Lerner. "We are trying to keep as clean as possible in the tents. There is a large body of water near so that after sundown we all go for a bath. Can you imagine me doing my own laundry? Well, that is just what all have to do now. "We have millions of little red ants in our tent area. There are some small lizards just like the one I sent you from Texas. Last night some of the men were chasing a small kangaroo rat about the area.

"At the end of the month we get our African service ribbons. Since we were over here for the closing days of the campaign and in the theatre of operations, we are entitled to wear the ribbon. "The other night we saw a German air raid on a little town nearby. The guns drove these planes off. We live near our foxholes and every plane that goes over is given careful observation. I have seen the horrors of war and hope that all this bloodshed will soon end. I am well and busy as ever. To keep a company as this on the go is indeed a job, but I am happy and I will do my best as long as Uncle Sam needs me. "Some of the men are getting a bit homesick, especially the young fellows about 18 and 19. We older men have to keep up their spirits. I am the third eldest man in the company and the second eldest in years of service. Do you realize that I have been in the army a year and a half already? "We have a company PX, a place where we can buy cigars, soap, shaving cream and gum but very little candy. The cigars cost us 45 cents a carton of 10 which is very cheap. The English soldiers surely like our cigars. The poor French soldiers are so poorly dressed and eat very poor food. "Here is our last night's dinner: Breadless chicken, sweet potatoes, broiled jam, cocoa, sliced pineapple. One thing I have always done is to see that the men get good food. There were times when we had to eat canned rations. "My company clerk is a Catholic from Cleveland and is a very fine fellow. I have a good bunch of non-commissioned officers. I am the guy up at 6 o'clock daily. Someday, when we all get back to civilian life and have a reunion, we will all get a kick out of the present life retold."

they were glorifying the name by putting up the sign naming one of the roads for Nebraska.

"I turn to the page of the Wayne Herald which has the news of the service men. I really like to know what the other boys are doing and where they are. What stories they will be able to tell when they come home! There is very little chance that I will see good old United States for some time in the future. The work that I am doing is very interesting and as I can't be a flier in the air corps, since they say that I am physically unfit, I can at least be around the air planes that are carrying havoc to the enemy. I am a secretary in one of the offices here. The main thing that is done here is 'sweating out time.' Trying to keep one's mind busy is of chief importance. "It was interesting to read about Cpl. McLean and Lt. McMaster who are in north Africa. They must be having an exciting time of it. "I enjoy items about the air unit at the college and of the good things that the Wayne people are doing for them. That is the typical spirit of you folks back there. "Every time you send one of your editions of the paper to the fighting men you are bringing a lot of happiness to those boys. May I say thank you and hope that we may be home soon."

"Today I received my first copy of the Wayne Herald since I embarked from continental United States," writes Sgt. Erwin E. Hatfield from somewhere in the north Pacific June 29. "You can't imagine how wonderful it is to get that paper. I shall keep it around for some time so that I can look at it and be sure that I don't miss anything. "This theatre of war is somewhat different from the others. The slowness and the lack of action seem to get in one's blood. Really it is hard to express it and if I tried the censor would distort it. The food is rather hard to get used to as it is mostly dehydrated and compressed and a great change for one used to the fresh foods of Nebraska. "Ensign Whitmore wrote me a card, since I had been out to see him before I left the United States. He was on duty at the time and I was unable to contact him. He seems to be enjoying himself in the navy air force. It was rather good to see the name of Nebraska on a sign. It seems that one of the national guard units is here and

Walrus Hunt in Far North Filled with Many Thrills

Whale and walrus hunting furnishes an unusual diversion for men from the States who are in Alaska. C. David Evanson of Gambell, Alaska, cousin of Mrs. Clara Heylman of Wayne, tells of a couple hunts on which he accompanied Eskimos.

Writing May 5, Mr. Evanson says "it's spring time back home but it's still very much like winter here. Several times when the weather has been good enough for boating, I have joined a crew of Eskimo hunters to watch and help them earn their livelihood. We push a big heavy whaleboat down to the water, get in and get on our way. An outboard motor pushes us over the open water almost half ways to Siberia to a point where the ice comes drifting by. We cruise amongst it looking for seal and walrus. We shoot sleeping seals on the ice and swimming seals in the water. When they surface, we shoot not to kill but just to wound them until we can get close enough to them to throw a harpoon into them so that they will not sink to the bottom and be lost when they die. Each time they come to the surface we shoot to make them submerge quickly so that they can not get enough breath to swim very far under water. When the animals get too close to the boat we shoot to kill whether they will sink and be lost or not. A swimming walrus has been known to attack a boat.

It is exciting sport to chase these big animals through the water. It is not so much sport to cut them up and put the meat into the boat to be hauled home though. This is plain hard work for the animals are immense and if they are shot in the water they must be cut up in the water. It is really a tough job to lean over the side of a boat or off the side of an ice floe cutting meat in icy water.

Herd Is Sighted.
"Once while on a hunting trip we sighted a herd of about 30 of the beasts plus many babies. We were about a mile away and to get to them we had to paddle and push our boat between big ice floes. It took 45 minutes to reach them. They were sleeping and resting in all kinds of awkward positions. Some were on their backs with their tusks up in the air and others were lying on their sides. Some were playing in the water and others were looking around, seemingly on guard. They have a keen scent so we came to them on the windward side. When we were 50 yards from them we got out of the boat and onto the ice floe they were on. Four of us had rifles. The animals saw us but didn't seem concerned. They just grunted, turned around and went back to sleep. All of us crouched behind an ice chunk and waited about 10 minutes to size the situation up. We were to kill the animals with the largest tusks. When we were ready, Apogonok made a queer noise and all the beasts rose up and looked around. We picked out the ones with the longest tusks and began shooting. We were to kill only four, the capacity of our boat. We got just four besides a couple of babies. After the shooting and the dead were still bleeding and shivering, Apogonok took his harpoon and ran up right next to the milling herd and said "Shoo, shoo, shoo. He wasn't a bit afraid of the monsters. The surviving animals were not afraid of us either. They just stood and looked at us, reminding me of a herd of misshapen cows.

Are Hard to Kill.
"Those mammals are very hard to kill. I had to place four shots right in the neck of one to kill him. Body shots are not good for the tough skin and the blubber underneath just absorb the bullets. There was so much blood pressure in them that blood squirted out of the bullet holes in the hides of both adults and babies to a height of two feet. The sea for a long way around was colored red from the gallons of blood.

"After the shooting, the work had just begun, and I mean just begun. After Apogonok shooed all the surplus animals away from the ones we had shot we went back and dragged the boat up to our kill. The men brought out very sharp knives and quickly cut great slabs of skin, blubber and flesh off the still quivering animals. The skin is very tough and a half inch thick. Between the skin and the flesh are six inches or so of blubber, depending on the condition of the animal. They cut through the blubber to take a little meat beneath. Each slab cut off weighed about 100 pounds for easy handling and storing. Slits are cut into the skin of every slab to handle it and to fasten a hook in so that it may be dragged into the boat.

Ivory Is Saved.
"The Eskimos cut off the heads containing teeth and tusks for ivory and they hoist them into the boat. They cut through the ribs and pull out yards of intestines which they clean and neatly crotchet up for easy handling. In the stomach was found a natural clam chowder made up of stomach juices and small clams and shellfish which the walrus lives on. Some times weary hunters take time for a meal of this chowder but Apogonok sensed north wind coming up, so he urged all to hurry with the work so we could be on our way. The heart and liver were saved. When we were finally ready to leave, the boat was heavy with meat and it floated lower in the water. As we left the spot we could see the sea gulls gorging themselves on the remnants. All that was left were ribs sticking up to the sky and floating in the water. That was the last we saw. We were too busy paddling home.

Hurry from Scene.
"In the boat we were urged to hurry more than ever for we were a mile into the ice from open water and 15 miles from home. Now the sea was our enemy and we had to fight hard. The ice seemed to be closing in around us and we worked very hard for an hour and a half poling and pushing our heavy boat through. When we came to two ice pans which were touching but which we had to go between some of us would jump out of the boat onto the ice carrying a long oar. We would place the oar against the ice on the other side and put as much weight behind it as we could. Men in the front end of the boat would also help push. After lots of pressure and some time the big ice chunks probably the volume of a house would slowly begin to give way. When the chunks were about six feet apart we would pole against the ice and paddle in the water and men on the ice would push the boat until finally we got through. My thumb was bleeding from a cut with one of the knives, my back was sore and I was tired all over but I still pushed with the rest. Apogonok, captain at the steering, was shouting orders in Eskimo all the time. We were not having jolly good sport but nevertheless we put everything into our job for our necks depended on it. Here we had a big load of precious food for man and dog and it was worth working for. Once away from the main mass of ice the outboard engine was lowered into its well and started. Whoopie, we were on our way.

"As we were threading our way, twisting and turning through the bands of ice, the sound of the motor humming again really sounded beautiful. I did not rest long, however, for a big wave coming over the boat struck me squarely in the face. We were still in the shelter of the ice when Apogonok stopped the boat to put up a big tight-fitting canvas hood over it to keep out the big waves that would break over it. Much water splashed on us before we were ready to go again. A boy was kept busy pumping it out.

"Bounding along again, the waves really got big after we had left the shelter of ice. The old boat tossed and heaved and water came in despite the canvas. One of the boys was hungry and ate a piece of the raw flesh from the side of the walrus. I should say he ate a pound. He ate a good bit of blubber with it and for dessert he cut off a chunk of the gigantic heart which only a couple of hours earlier was beating away very much at peace with the world. After two hours of steady motoring through the heavy seas, we finally landed.

Boat Is Beached.
"We put the meat in the water where we fastened ropes and hooks onto it and towed it onto the snow on the beach. When the boat was completely empty of meat and thoroughly washed, all grabbed a hand on the boat and on the rope to the bow and to the captain's chant we heaved and we hoed until we raised it up on the snow. Wood blocks were put under the boat as we skidded it over snow and finally gravel. Not until the boat was over the beach and 30 feet above the water did we stop. Here it was staked up straight, loaded with snail and paddles for the next trip, covered with canvas and made fast. Those boats cost $800 apiece and the natives take very good care of them. They wash them after every trip.

"After each trip everyone shares the meat alike. The boys like the tongue, the liver and the heart and we vary the diet with this. I don't care so much for raw flesh though it does save a lot in cooking and dish washing. Raw, it still has all the beneficial juices in it. Cooking reduces it to a bunch of pulp. The Eskimo cuts a strip of skin about a half inch thick from the meat. He leaves this attached at one end and he rolls up the whole slab with the skin outside. He cuts several slits into one edge of the skin and with the strip which he had cut previously he laces it into a compact bundle. The meat is put into underground cellars and it keeps well. It does sometimes get sour but it is eaten anyway and it is said to be good food. The blubber is left in a warm room and is self-rendering. They use this oil for lighting and heating their homes.
