

Wholly Out of Accord with War Efforts—Proposed Survey—For Equal Broad-casting Privileges—Reduce Perils.

As last week drew to a close we heard reports of valiant young Americans fighting and often dying in Europe's and the southwest Pacific's battle areas, and American farmers working night and day to plant and plant to meet wartime food demands.

It is reasonable to presume that the war labor board makes wage scales consistent with a plant's earnings—possibilities—and with necessary living costs. It is inconceivable that under a government agency's manifest disposition to protect labor groups, frequently recurring wage demands should appear to interrupt essential production.

Speaking of the effort to meet production demands in America's rural and urban communities, it is undoubtedly true that some are straining themselves to the limit of endurance, whereas others yield to the opposite extreme, sidestepping opportunities for service and do little.

The fellow born with a silver spoon is unfortunate and often condemned to failure if he accepts it as a license to pursue a course of irresponsible idleness. Doubtless for some good reason nature fashioned its creatures to achieve health and content under the stress of work and responsibility.

The policy of little work, no responsibility and big pay is not only unwholesome, but it is short-lived and full of trouble. The fellow who starts with little or nothing is not handicapped if he does not early adopt an inflexible rule to make least possible use of mind or muscles.

The future is bright for the individual eager to apply himself—alert to turn opportunities to advantage, accepting labor and responsibility as strengthening and constructive. Being a drone or a parasite never pays. Just getting by with no thought of obligations to society must ultimately fail because it is not in accord with nature's plan.

The report by Dr. H. Roe Bartle of Kansas City, to a luncheon group of War Dads last Thursday noon that one community in his state had surveyed its area for possible postwar improvement and employment with many helpful revelations, is similar to basic information gathered at Albert Lea, Minn., and other Wakefield American communities. It is hoped Wayne county's War Dads will be able soon to make a practical survey along lines suggested. It would show possibilities on the farms and in the towns of this county. It would forecast postwar development.

The senate interstate commerce committee is overhauling the federal communications act with a view to proposing amendments. One proposed provision would prevent commercial sponsorship of news broadcasts, the imagination finding harm in that kind of service not being explained. Another proposed equal privileges to political candidates who wish to air their views and contradict their opponents. This seems fair.

We would suggest that air-planes sometimes soar perilously close to the tops of buildings. They might shear off chimneys and shingles and then crash. They should keep high enough in the air to minimize dangers. A slight miscalculation could bring tragedy to the fliers as well as to any who happened to be within a plane's path.

Memorial day retreat of the 307th army air corps detachment at the college drill field Tuesday afternoon was attended by a good number. Dr. L. J. Kilian of the Legion was guest of honor. Led by the unit band, aviation students drilled in mass and flight formations.

SIXTY SECOND YEAR

WAYNE, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1944

NUMBER THIRTY-THREE

Wayne Tax Levy Is Cut by City Council

Purchase of Airport Site Is Sought as Means to Air Expansion.

Wayne city tax levy, which was a total of 18 mills, was fixed by Wayne city council Monday evening and is 15 mills less than last year. The new levy includes a cut of 1 mill in paving bonds and 5 of a mill in auditorium bonds.

The 18 mills is divided among various funds as follows: General 4 mills, sewers, 2; parks, 4; fire department, 1; library, 1.5; paving bonds, 2; intersection paving bonds, 8.5; bond, 5; auditorium bonds, .5.

Mayor Herman Lundberg appointed L. B. McClure, Burr R. Davis and J. C. McArthur on a committee to interview J. T. Bressler, jr., owner of the city's present port, regarding possible purchase.

A permanent port owned by the city is regarded by CAP as definitely advantageous in view of post war aviation.

Vast Soil Waste Noted in Films

Three hundred million acres of land in the United States have been abandoned or are on the way to destruction as a result of erosion, according to facts presented in a national wild life federation film shown to Wayne Kiwanians Monday by Paul Evans, district soil conservationist, and Jason Webster, Wayne county conservationist.

Mr. Evans explained nature's plan of cooperation among its forces to make the earth habitable by man, to condition the atmosphere and to furnish food. Rain, soil and vegetation work together to this end. Soil is made suitable for crops by insects and vegetation. The vegetation draws moisture from the ground and gives it out through its foliage. The moisture in turn forms clouds which produce rain, and the whole circle continues to function.

Much of the rich top soil has been blown away by winds and washed by rains until 300,000,000 acres have been lost. The film showed that careless plowing of soil which should be covered with grasses and cutting of trees have been responsible for much of the loss.

Another film from the department of agriculture showed soil and water conservation practices. Among the methods recommended are terracing to stop erosion, planting of covering crops such as fast growing grasses after corn has been harvested, building earthen dams to conserve water, using fertilizers and lime.

The film closed with the means to produce food for freedom. Mr. Evans invited Kiwanians and others to visit the soil conservation office on Pearl street for any information regarding soil services.

As Dr. J. T. Anderson was chairman, H. E. Smitan, former president, officiated. Hermon Bucher, who was with the club for the last time before going to Omaha to be an accountant, led the group in singing "America the Beautiful." "Wade Johnny Comes Marching Home" and "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "Star Spangled Banner."

Rebuilds Property On Higher Ground

Grading is progressing in preparation for the house, greenhouse and office buildings which D. Hall is having built just south of Hans Sundahl's place on south Main street. The recent flood broke the dikes Mr. Hall had built along the Logan by his nursery and flooded the present house and greenhouse, causing Mr. Hall to decide to tear them down and build again on higher ground. He plans to use material from the old buildings. He also plans to strengthen the dikes. Merle Tietzert and family live in the house and care for the nursery.

Teachers' examinations will be given at the court house by Miss Marie Wright Saturday, June 3.

Hope to Be First In Fifth War Loan

WEEK OF SHOWERS SOFTENS CRUST ON SOIL FROM FLOOD

A FEW showers the past week softened the crust that followed previous rains of flood proportions. Farmers were not delayed long in getting into fields, and by working early and late they have accomplished wonders in making up for lost time. Seed once in the ground germinates rapidly. Some corn on high ground is up. Low areas remained longer too wet to plow. It is recalled that seed put into dry ground in some former years was discouragingly slow in getting started. This year the soil is soaked and mellow and quick to respond. There is reason to hope the late start will not militate against final abundance. Pastures are growing luxuriantly, meaning plenty of rich feed for live stock.

Wayne county hopes to surpass its goal in the Fifth war loan drive first in the state of Nebraska. Though the campaign does not officially open until June 12, Chairman R. L. Larson hopes that the quota may be subscribed before that date. The county did not reach its goal in the Fourth loan so special effort is being made to gain the objective this time.

Staging the drive next week too will enable solicitors to work between corn planting and cultivating. Precinct quotas are: Plum Creek, $24,000; Hunter, $53,640; Logan, $21,460; Leslie, $19,140; Strahan, $29,290; Wilbur, $93,060; Brennan, $30,450; Hoskins, $26,250; Sherman, $37,000; Garfield, $27,000; Deer Creek, $27,500; Hancock, $28,000; Chapin, $29,750.

Quota for Wayne is $139,000, for Winsde $20,000 and for Carroll $10,000.

Precinct captains are: Henry Nelson, Hunter; Lather Bard, Logan; Ed. McQuistin, Leslie; R. S. McGuire, Plum Creek; Willie Hansen, Wilbur; Matt Finn, Strahan; Ray Gamber, Brennan; Chapin and Hancock, E. T. Warnemunde and Roy Witte; Hoskins and Garfield, Ed. Winter and Hoskins bank; Sherman, Lee Sellon; Deer Creek, W. R. Scribner; City of Wayne, W. C. Coryell; City of Winsde, E. T. Warnemunde; City of Carroll, W. R. Scribner.

Government bonds are the best possible investment. They provide funds for use after the war and help prevent inflation. Letters explaining the advantages of such investments and quotas are being mailed this week to all residents of the county.

Governors A NATIONAL conference of governors at Hershey, Pa., brought together leading republican presidential possibilities, and caused them to express themselves on national and international questions. They were generally sound and hopeful. Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio, suggested that the states do more of their own rowing and depend less on the federal treasury for postwar development. Gov. Olin D. Johnson, democrat of South Carolina, advised that federal aid would be necessary, but eyed preservation of states' rights as a tough problem.

Governor Earl Warren of California, mentioned for the republican vice presidential nomination, said: "Peace may be as much a national crisis as the war itself unless we prepare for it with equal precision and seriousness," emphasizing that a state "should be a full, working partner with the federal government in reconversion of industry to peace-time economy."

Governor Tom Dewey of New York, who has captured without apparently trying a sizable block of delegates to the republican national convention for the presidential nomination, spoke before the conference and made plain that he is foreseeing and practical. While Dewey is not an avowed candidate for the presidential nomination, and while some from different parts of the country, with worthy aspirations, frown on him, he is steadily pushed in the direction of triumph and nothing appears likely to head him off.

Speaking at the conference, Dewey declared, with reference to future international relations, that people were "united upon the proposition that our foreign affairs must be so conducted that disasters like the present one will not recur." Touching local economics, he said among other things:

"We had a ten-year depression, ended only by the feverish and deadly stimulus of war. We had never before experienced a depression from which we did not rebound to greater progress. No material reason was adequate to explain what happened."

"With restoration of faith in ourselves and our system, with hard work and an end to quarreling, the American people again will go forward."

Comments THE Industrial Press Service mentions congress as the "most important assemblage of men and laws in the world," engaged, as it is, in a wholehearted task of safeguarding democracy. Congress has a gigantic responsibility, and its members are attempting to carry out the will of free people. But the members are only human, as the article suggests in these paragraphs:

"But momentous as it is, congress is no collection of super men or brains set upon an Olympian peak. Its members are no better or worse than those of us who elect them; they have their headaches and heart-aches, even stomach-aches, too. In short, they are humans."

"Realization of this forms the theme of a pamphlet just issued by the National Association of Manufacturers to its 12,000 members, who produce more than 80 per cent of our goods for war. 'Too few businessmen know enough about Congress,' the pamphlet says, 'and too many know too little about it.'"

"Pointing out that some 5,000 bills are being considered by 100 committees of congressmen who are as bedeviled by doubts and stresses as the rest of us, the NAM pamphlet gives an indication of the terrific strain under which our solons work. And it might add that Washington in summertime could give cards and spades to the hot and humid tropics themselves!"

Victory Gardens IN one of its bulletins, the state department of health extols the "victory garden" as a source of valuable exercise as well as valuable food. Contributing to the war through increased food production is important, but the bulletin emphasizes some other values in this paragraph:

"First, the diet can be much more varied, interesting and nourishing; second, many people work out of doors who have formerly spent leisure hours indoors. Sun and fresh air and exercise are three prerequisites to good health; third, one's mental health in these days of stress and strain is enriched through the rest and relaxation which come from change of work and interests. The real physical work entailed in planting and caring for a garden and re-joicing in the harvest is good for all of us."

It galls southern democrats to see the states' rights of Jefferson contemptuously kicked aside by the new deal, but they still remember the Civil war, and hesitate to break loose from long accustomed moorings. In Texas two delegations to the democratic national convention have been nomi-

ed—fourth termers and anti-fourth termers. The anti's will no doubt be flung over the transom by the majority in the saddle and they may go home mad enough to persuade themselves and their friends to bolt the ticket in November.

According to Pathfinder, a retired preacher in Wisconsin has discovered, after many years of careful research, that the Garden of Eden is in Wisconsin instead of where scholars think it is. He has the mountains and rivers figured out to correspond with the Bible story. With the war on, it is safer to have the Garden over here, anyway. If we could square Wayne county with the scriptural account we would cultivate the idea that it is here. The present rich vegetation and unusual promise would be convincing. But only when the Logan is on a rampage could we picture it as the Euphrates, and at no time could we imagine the county's highest hill as Mount Ararat of flood fame.

Up to May 18, total precipitation from January 1 amounted to 10.43 inches, according to a local record. Of the amount, 8.89 inches fell after April 1. Previous to then the prospect was not encouraging. While unusual moisture has fallen the last two months, it is not too much, and generous rainfall will be needed during the summer to insure maximum production. The 1943 rainfall added up to 15.42 inches, whereas the normal and required annual amount is between 25 and 30 inches. Crops may be grown with less, but they must have rain when it is needed.

This week a broadcaster kicked some props from under hopeful spirits by announcing that rationing would be tightened and more rigidly enforced, and in the next breath he sounded a cheerful note by saying available ice cream would be increased. In music it would be a tolerable medley. Outside of music it meshes like trying to put an arm joint in a hip socket. But it has the good effect of keeping one's spirits from rusting out by suffering sameness in one groove.

The Publishers' Auxiliary announces that between three and four hundred carefully selected newspaper reporters will be assembled to cover the "biggest story since the Deluge"—the invasion of Europe's enemy by war. There are signs that the invader is near, though the time is not revealable, if in fact any one knows exactly. We had hoped and still hope unconditional surrender will come ahead of invasion and thus save many precious lives.

Rear Admiral H. E. Kimmel who, with Maj. Gen. Walter O. Short, was in command at Pearl Harbor at the time of the world's greatest military disaster, has demanded a public court-martial without longer delay. Kimmel says he has waited two and one-half years for the navy to act, adding that the whole story has not been revealed. The public as well as Kimmel and Short, would seem entitled to all the facts.

Paying a subsidy puts into one pocket a share of what is taken from the other pocket. It amounts to returning rebates on taxes. Some might score advantage; others suffer disadvantage. A government policy to dish out cash to persuade people to do things or not to do them seems especially inadvisable when demands are strong, supplies insufficient and prices soar.

Persons in public jobs who cannot by reason of natural or acquired incongruities practice courtesy and do with a reasonable show of cheerfulness the many little things needed to accommodate dependent patrons, should be invited to resign and get where they can turtle up and avoid displacing service with offense.

Time was when Memorial day attracted special attention to baseball, horse racing and other sports, but in view of swiftly moving war events, with often tragic consequences, the occasion's purpose is emphasized and properly observed.

As demanded by the Japs, the American navy is speeding delivery of itself to Tokyo, but when it arrives the Nipponese capital will not take over, as it suggests, but will be taken over—what is left of it after a storm of shells.

New dealers—prominent among them the communist party—have taken over the democratic label, and they hope enough real democrats will stay hitched long enough to reinstate the Roosevelt regime for a fourth term.

Why It Failed. (Omaha Journal-Stockman)

A reader has come across, and says he wishes we would use this quotation from John Fiske, the great American historian, explaining why the French regime in North America failed:

"No room was left for individual initiative or enterprise. 'All undertakings were nationalized. Government looked after every man's interest in this world and the next, baptized and schooled him, married him and paid the bride's dowry, gave him a bounty with every child that was born to him, stocked his cupboard with garden seeds and compelled him to plant them, prescribed the size of his house, and the number of horses and cattle he might keep, and the exact percentages of profit he might be allowed to make, and how his chimneys should be swept, and how many servants he might employ, and what theological doctrines he might believe, and what sort of bread the bakers might bake, and where goods might be bought and how much might be paid for them; and if in a society so well cared for it was possible to find intelligent persons, such persons were duly relieved from a fund established by government for their thought in that, we agree."

WANT TO FARM. The Norfolk Daily News reports a survey of North Dakota boys in the armed forces to ascertain postwar ambition with the result that most of them want to engage in farming. "Of 6,000 soldiers contacted, 5,053 were on farms when they went into the service, but 5,523, or nearly 500 more, hope to take up farming when they come back." It is mentioned that a majority want to buy farms, and that the soldiers have so far saved an average of $1,050 for the purpose. The News comments: "These are boys from the preponderantly agricultural state of North Dakota. Is that the way the boys of other farm states feel? If so there is good cheer for the middlewest. Some pessimists have said that our young people would light out for California or the Pacific northwest as soon as they had the opportunity. If this survey is accurate, they are going to do nothing of the kind. They are going to come back here in larger numbers than ever and settle down to producing food for the hungry. And undoubtedly the great majority of them could do no better."

Francis Biddle's Mind. (Omaha World-Herald) A remarkable mind, Francis Biddle. Justifying before the house committee, he admitted that the "defiance" of the war labor board by Sewell Avery in the Montgomery Ward case was "comparable" to the "defiance" of the same board by John L. Lewis in the coal strike case.

But, said this attorney general of the United States, this spokesman for the administration, "there was one major difference; John L. Lewis never resisted the seizure of the mines. The power of the government to seize has never been resisted except by Mr. Avery."

John L. Lewis didn't resist seizure of the mines! Of course he didn't!

That was precisely the eventuality he had been playing for throughout the negotiations. He had been trying to force the government to take over the mines, so that he would be able to get what he wanted by government action, rather than by negotiation with the mine owners.

No adult in his right mind would have expected John L. Lewis to resist seizure of the mines. But Mr. Lewis DID resist the war labor board. He resisted it by allowing the strike to be called and the mines to be closed, thereby not only flaunting the WLB but endangering the nation's entire war program.

And for that he received not so much as a tap on the wrist! The "defiance" of the two men may be "comparable." But only a Francis Biddle could find anything "comparable" in the way they were treated by their government.

OFF TO THE ARMY.

In January, 1942, Howard Vincent O'Brien wrote for the Chicago Daily News how a father felt when a soldier son left for the war. He says he was sad, but proud. Then came the crushing news that his boy was "missing in action." Bewildered, but certain his son would not have him weaken or give up, O'Brien wrote: "It is not for us to know the plan and purpose of things. We cannot measure what we get in exchange for our blood and tears. We cannot balance the sweet against the bitter, but those who stretched hands of compassion are proof that there is a balance. If war reveals the best in man, it also reveals the angk in the depths of the valley one can best see the sun on the hilltop. Tangled with brutality and chaos, one comes upon kindness and affection. Telegrams are coming to German homes, too, and letters afterward. German boys are melting into mist and those who loved them search the fading skies for answer to the riddle. Is there an answer? Well, there are faith and hope and perhaps in the centuries unborn, more charity. And there is that flood of gentle sympathy, a sign and portent that man is climbing slowly toward the stars. More boys will grow in strength and beauty, only to walk out like sparks in the night. Their memorial is the deep-buried spring of goodness uncovered by their passing."

Room for thought in that, we agree.

Large Volume of Beef Is Produced By Former Singer, N. F. Schroeder

Carlyle Hodgekin writes the following feature about Norris F. Schroeder of Hoskins, in the May 28 Omaha World-Herald:

Retired in town, trained in vocal music, experienced as a radio singer, announcer, salesman and business man, Norris F. Schroeder, decided in 1940, partly for reasons of health, to become a farmer.

The farm was provided—the 240-acre "home place" adjoining Hoskins in Wayne county. It belonged then to his father, Gus Schroeder, who for years had been the livestock buyer at Hoskins. Part of it was the original land homesteaded by his grandfather, Frederick Schroeder.

Last year Norris Schroeder fed and marketed 686 head of cattle. This year to May 1 he had marketed 826 head and for the year expects the number to be at least six hundred head and possibly 750. Schroeder does not count himself among the masters of the arts of farming and feeding. He finds ample satisfaction in being one of the amateurs—just one farmer trying to discover better methods and do a better job as he goes along.

Inexperience, he asserts, has been and is a severe handicap in many ways. But in at least one way it has been an advantage: Starting from scratch, he could learn what are regarded now as the best methods. He didn't have to unlearn old methods.

Recently this youngster at the business (he's 36) was invited to speak before the cattle feeders' meeting at North Platte. His chief point was that he had tried NOT to "pitch against the wind," that he has found it worth while sometimes to sit on the fence and plan how the work can be done more easily and quickly.

Work-Saver. The greatest work saver Schroeder has found, and the subject about which he can talk with enthusiasm all afternoon, is brome grass.

Not only is this grass his prize work saver; it also is his best soil saver and best profit-maker. Brome grass saves work because he feeds cattle and raises hogs right out of it. The feed doesn't have to be hauled to them. They harvest it themselves. The manure doesn't have to be hauled from the feedlot to the land.

Brome saves soil because it can be grown successfully on hills that cannot be row cropped without erosion.

And an acre in brome grass, Schroeder believes, will pay just as large a net return as the same acre in corn. He bases this opinion on some careful studies of costs and returns.

So brome grass has become the key crop on this young man's farm, which now consists of the home 240 acres (which he has bought) plus 160 acres two miles east that he rents. Schroeder thinks eventually three hundred of the four hundred acres will be in brome and a part of the remaining one hundred in alfalfa. Corn will be grown only for silage.

The east quarter section is rough land that in years past has been corned to death and has eroded badly. Most of it is in brome now and Schroeder will seed the rest after a final corn crop this year. Then he expects to divide the whole into two pastures, both served by one watering system, and handle them as follows:

Graze one of the pastures early and let the other go to seed; shift the cattle as soon as the seed is harvested to let them eat the stubble while the first pasture has a summer rest; shift the cattle back to the first pasture after it has been revived in the fall; start the next year with the cattle in the other pasture so that each pasture will produce a crop of seed every second year.

Revals Alfalfa. Brome grass makes just as good gains as alfalfa pasture, this farmer has found.

In one instance he divided 147 head of heifers in three pastures. Thirty head were on brome and got shelled corn in a self-feeder. Fifty-four head were on alfalfa pasture and got a full feed of shelled corn in bunks. Sixty-three were in a pasture of mixed brome grass and alfalfa and got shelled corn at a self-feeder.

At the end of the feeding period the gains were practically identical. The variation was only 15 pounds on a whole carload. The feeding period ran from April 15 to September 1 and the average gain on all the heifers was 234 pounds per day.

And this is not all. Pasturing soon finishes off a stand of alfalfa, Schroeder has found, but brome grass can take all kinds of punishment.

An 11-acre field just north of his house has an interesting story. In the spring of 1942 it was in alfalfa and one day, against neighbors' warnings that they would all die, he turned 101 heifers in it to graze.

He pastured it steadily with cattle on full grain feed, an average for the summer of 84 head, besides 120 pigs. Only one heifer died, incidentally, and she from an internal injury. In the fall he seeded the land to brome and last fall and winter, 1943-44, full-fed 60 head on the same 11 acres. The cattle were there until about April 10, tramping the grass into the mud. When they were shipped, the field was black. Schroeder, concluded his brome was a goner. But today there is a stand over the whole field and he looks forward to a good seed crop.

Interest in brome grass on this Schroeder farm goes away back. Part of the permanent pasture has been in brome continuously for 46 years, the seed planted by Norris' grandfather in 1898.

This grass has been identified as the Lincoln strain and Schroeder has the seed state certified. Mentioned as a brome seed producer in an article in Country Gentleman, he has had requests from farmers as distant as White Salmon, Wash.; Cleveland, Ga.; Tucumcari, N. M.; Pittsburgh, Cal. and Romulus, N. Y.

Feeders Save Steps.

The second major work saver on this farm is self-feeders. Schroeder uses them both for cattle and hogs. He has portable feeders for use on pasture and permanent ones for the dry lot. One of the latter is a converted one thousand bushel grain bin.

He wants feeders built large rather than small, and he asserts they work an amazing amount of work. Hog feeders, when used on pasture, are enclosed in a temporary fence that will let the hogs in but not cattle.

Automatic controls on all mills save work, prevent waste of water and still assure a continuous supply. The mill is regulated by a float in the tank: When the tank full the mill is shut off, and the water level drops five inches, it is turned on again.

Arrangement of yards (not yet completed) also is being planned to save steps. There are four main lots and Schroeder plans to have each one open into a separate pasture. No. 1 and 2 toward the south, No. 3 to the west and No. 4 to the north. Thus there will be brome pasture on three sides of the farmstead, which faces east on a north-south road.

Along the south side of these lots Schroeder plans a permanent alley, through which cattle or hogs can be shifted from one yard to another or shunted out to any of the pastures. Labor-saving thought has been given also to arrangement of the loading and sorting yard.

Hinged hog gates, cut into the larger hinged cattle gates, are a convenience. A concrete platform in front of the long hay rack and one of the self-feeders was a life-saver for cattle in the dry lot during the muddy weeks this spring.

A time-honored practice is to extend about all but one foot of a hog trough into the pen, leaving the end outside for convenience in filling. Schroeder reverses this. About a foot is extended into the pasture so the hogs can drink but can't get into the trough and foul the water. The long end, regarded as reservoir, is inside the fence that encloses the mill and a part of the cattle tank.

Cattle on Hand.

At present on this young farmer's place 244 head of cattle are on feed.

Ninety-eight head of steers are being self-fed corn in dry lot. They will go to market between July 15 and September 1.

Fifty-three yearling heifers are being given a light feed of corn (about five pounds) on brome grass pasture. About June 15 they will be increased to a full feed (13 or 14 pounds) and will go to market about October 15. They weighed 403 pounds in March and Schroeder expects them to weigh 850 at the market.

Forty head of steers are now on brome pasture without grain. About July 15 they'll be put on a full feed of corn either on pasture or in dry lot, depending on future cattle purchases, and they will go to market about December 1. Fifty-three head of yearling steers will stay on grass without grain all summer and then be full-fed grain this fall and winter and marketed about March 1.

In general, Schroeder follows the practice of buying replacement cattle each time he sells. Given the choice, he would rather feed in the summer than in the winter. Good grass makes cheap gains, and hot weather difficulties don't seem to bother his cattle on pasture.

Means to End.

Still a comparative newcomer at feeding cattle, Schroeder seems to be well into the swing of the business.

It has been no disadvantage to have as his father a seasoned livestock buyer and as his father-in-law, D. S. Anderson of Lexington, one of the state's best known feeders.

It has helped also to have the steady help of a fellow like Walter Pentico of Hoskins, a hired man who couldn't take the work more seriously and do it more thoroughly if it were his own.

It has helped still more to be married to a girl who understands farming and has the special knack of managing a farm home. For the help of all those, and for the information obtained from the college of agriculture, Schroeder has abundant praise.

"The main business of this farm is producing beef," I said as we were going into the house.

"No," he said, "Zelda has the real job in here." Inside, Mrs. Schroeder introduced me to Ann Marie, 2½, and Mary Lee, 7 months. I could understand that to Norris Schroeder his home and family are the first thing, and feeding cattle, important as it is, is wholly a means to an end.

November May Tell.

(Norfolk Daily News)

Promise by some republican congressmen of a 50 per cent cut in federal taxes after the war has started Washington to discussing post-war levies.

Not much headway can be made on tax policies after the war until we decide what are going to tax ourselves for. We know that if the gentlemen who believe it is the function of the federal government to levy taxes to raise money to distribute among the citizens, remain as policy makers, there can be little hope of tax reduction for a long time. There can be little relief until the tremendous payroll which has been built up in the last 12 years is drastically pruned. When the "repression" of 1937-38 was felt, New Deal economists said it was because we slowed down our tax-spend policy. As long as that type of mind is doing our economic thinking for us, we can have little hope of lessened taxing. Merely the interest on the federal debt will consume more than normal pre-Roosevelt government expense.

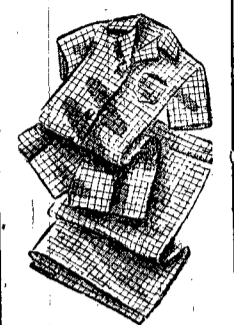

So it is fair to say the prospects of material tax reduction will depend on our clearing out of the administration appointees who think largely in terms of overloaded public payrolls and large government benefit checks. And we can't tell about that until after the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

partment. The youth is a tail gunner on a Liberator bomber operating from an Italian base. It is thought the youth was one of his first missions when the bomber failed to return. He had been in Italy only since the latter part of March or first of April. In service since September, 1942, he had trained at several bases before being sent overseas. He flew to Italy with his bomber crew.

A farm youth, Graham is a graduate of Randolph high school and farmed with his father and brother, Melvin, after leaving high school. His mother is dead and a sister, Mildred, and the father now operate the farm alone as Melvin is also in service. He is a corporal in the army, stationed at Salina, Kan.

COMPLETES COURSE AT GUNNERY BASE

First Lt. Burdette E. Nygren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nygren of Wayne, was a member of the class to be graduated from the AAF training command gunnery base recently at Matagorda Peninsula, Tex.

Lt. Nygren served overseas where he flew cover for three invasions - Pantelleria, Sicily and Italy. He escorted Flying Fortress and B-26 Marauders on bombing raids.

Lt. Nygren, who is a P-51 pilot, was awarded the air medal with 18 oak leaf clusters. He flew on nine bombing missions and served as squadron leader on his last 25 missions.

The course Lt. Nygren recently completed acquainted him with newest scientific methods of combat shooting. The five-week course, under the command of Lt. Col. Thomas H. Jarrell of San Antonio, not only teaches the veteran pilots how to teach others, but also provides other instructors of the training command with newly developed scientific methods of destroying enemy aircraft.

Members of the class will serve as instructors of less experienced pilots who will return to their original units as "missionaries" of the gospel of scientific fixed aerial gunnery.

Preaching and Practice. (Norfolk Daily News) Two brief articles have come to this desk in the last day or so, which seem to dovetail together. Both might be called propaganda, but they are factual and their truth cannot be questioned.

One is a quotation from President Roosevelt's a civic piety speech of July 2, 1933. He said: "For three long years I have been going up and down this country preaching that government costs too much. I shall not stop that preaching."

The other consists of official figures showing that from 1933, when Mr. Roosevelt came into power, until 1940, before the war cut much figure in our expenditures, federal taxes rose from $2,080,000,000 to $5,387,000,000 and that in the same period, the federal debt, not including guaranteed obligations, increased from $19,487,000,766 to $42,967,531,037. Comment is hardly necessary.

Squaring the Circle. (Norfolk Daily News) "The democratic party," says the national committee's city sheet, "has contributed to this nation four of its greatest documents - the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, The Bill of Rights and the Monroe Doctrine."

Why so modest? Didn't it also write the Bible and Magna Carta and hasn't it now succeeded where the great Euclid failed, in squaring the circle?

Commander F. W. Reichelderfer, chief of the United States weather bureau, informs the Third district office that the flash flood warning service sponsored by the Third district member, prevented considerable damage in Nebraska because of early information about the coming of the flood assembled and released by the service. According to the weather bureau, the service saved Norfolk $50,000, the Pilger area, $60,000, The chief of the weather bureau commends a large number of warning service representatives in Nebraska for their diligence in carrying out the functions of the service under extreme difficult conditions. Among those especially commended were Spencer Butterfield, Norfolk; Louis Nelson, Neligh; K. F. Jefferies, Ewing; Lloyd West, Osmond; Bruce E. Boyd, Pierce; Edward G. Walz, Madison; F. J. Dimmer, Winside; Charles Siecke, Pilger; D. S. McPherson, West Point; A. R. Daniels, Stanton; John Steil, Scribner; O. R. Marks, Winslow; J. E. Beaver, Beemer; C. W. War Food Administrator Jones seems to have furnished the tip-off which caused Mr. Nelson to start his hurried investigation, which has taken him to the mid-west for definite information. It is alleged that the farm machinery trust, which is headed by eight of the big corporations producing most of the farm machinery, has been obtaining large quotas of materials for farm equipment, but not producing the goods. In that way, smaller factories are to be kept from operating and setting up competition for post-war trade. Like the manufacturers of electric irons, the big firms are looking ahead to future profits regardless of the needs of the present. Nearly all the big farm equipment firms have their own officers and assistants in WPB, making their inside knowledge of what is going on very complete. Farmers are not getting even the small allotments of equipment which have been made. The allotments were ridiculously low in many good agricultural counties where the labor shortage makes more machinery essential. Mr. Nelson is on the trail, and here's hoping that when he gets the facts, he will put some of the big business men who are responsible for the manipulation of materials out of positions that made the manipulation possible.

The anti-poll tax bill has again failed to pass the senate. It has been a hot issue in congress for several years. It has several times passed the house by large majorities. The senators from the southern states, some of which still have poll-tax qualifications for voting, have stood solidly against it, and by filibustering and taking advantage of various senate rules, have prevented the bills coming to a vote in that body. So, this time, after hours of speeches and long delays, the bill has been prevented from coming to a vote.

The senate refused by a vote of 44 to 36 to invoke the cloture rule on the anti-poll tax bill, which was offered by administration leaders. Accordingly, the bill was laid aside for other senate business. The southern senators voted solidly against it, and were joined by 13 northern republican senators, some of whom objected to the bill on constitutional grounds, that the entire matter of suffrage belonged to the states. Thus, the legislation remains where it was and long has been, open to debate. It can be brought up again if the senate desires, but Majority Leader Barkley states that it will not be.

Several members of congress are large land owners. The holdings of Dick Kleberg of Texas are the largest of the lot. Kleberg is the owner of a principal interest in the vast King ranch in Texas. John Kunkel, member from Harrisburg, Pa., is said to be the next largest land owner. He owns about three thousand acres of land in Wayne, Pierce, Dixon and other counties in Nebraska. He also owns more than six thousand acres of land in Oklahoma. The land in Nebraska owned by Kunkel was homesteaded by his grandfather, the late William Rutherford. Kunkel says his grandfather paid about $2 an acre for this land when he came to Nebraska many years ago.

Donald Nelson, chairman of the war production board, is rapping the heads of some of his subordinates by over-huling their orders forbidding or limiting production for civilian uses. The complaint of unemployment stemming from cities whose war industries had been closed or put under restricted labor forces pressed the question. Many small firms not working on war orders sought permission to give labor new jobs on civilian projects. The big manufacturers loaded down with war contracts

Memorial Rites Conducted Here

Rev. Curtis Wiberg Gives Address at Services Held on Tuesday.

"We pause on this Memorial day, 1944, to pay tribute to our soldier dead. We recall that our brave men gave their last full measure of devotion that we might enjoy the fruits of peace and prosperity." Thus spoke Rev. C. W. Wiberg Tuesday afternoon at Memorial services in the high school auditorium. Legion and Auxiliary were in charge.

"What is the task for us today?" asked Rev. Wiberg. "As I see it, three things are necessary: To perpetuate freedom; to maintain true patriotism; to love humanity."

In speaking of freedom Rev. Wiberg went on to say, "We are willing to fight and if need be, die in order that the principles on which our country is founded might be perpetuated. Freedom of social intercourse, freedom of the ballot, freedom of worship, freedom of the press, freedom to live peacefully and happily. These my friends, are God-given rights. To maintain this freedom, we have fought in 1812, 1861, 1898, 1917 and now in 1944.

"But freedom does not mean license, that is, to do as we please. The greatest danger in our national life comes from within. We have within our borders sinister forces that have as their purpose to undermine those principles which we cherish. Certain communistic and socialistic tendencies which throw overboard all freedom that we have enjoyed for over 168 years. Let us beware of such tendencies that we lose not what our brave men have fought for. May we not sell our birthright for a mess of pottage."

The speaker defined patriotism as a response to a call to duty. It demands nothing else than 100 per cent American citizenship. Patriotism calls for 100 per cent cooperation with our government during war times. A war profiteer is not patriotic, he is selfish. He who patronizes the black market, is not patriotic for he is helping the enemy. He who is a slacker and lets down his job is un-patriotic, and is prolonging the war and causing more of our men to die on the field of battle. While our boys are giving their all in the line of battle today, may we give our all on the home front, that this terrible business of war might soon cease."

In speaking of the third task which Rev. Wiberg deems necessary today, to maintain true patriotism, he said, "We are compelled to think of others during these sobering days. We are knit together these days. The pity of it all is that it takes a war to teach us this lesson. And I pray, and many others pray too, that out of this war there may not arise hatred in the hearts of our people. When the peace treaty is signed may we bear in mind the words of the Master, 'Love ye one another as I have loved you.'"

In concluding Rev. Wiberg said, "And so, my friends, on this Memorial day, the day which truly has its spiritual implications, let us, each one of us, highly resolve, that these dead whom we honor today, shall not have died in vain. That it shall be our purpose to 'carry on' and then, and then alone, can we sing 'America.'"

Rev. Wiberg gave the invocation and Miss Elsie Danskin the benediction. J. E. Koontz sang a solo. Robert Clough gave the "Gettysburg Address." Legion was in charge of advancement and retirement of colors. The band played and there was group singing.

The group marched to the cemetery where the firing squad gave a salute to the dead and taps were sounded. Roll call was read by Irwin Stronberg. The band played and Miss Elsie Danskin and Rev. Wiberg each gave a prayer. The band played a few selections.

Memorial Day Inspires Living

Dedication to Fulfillment of Debt to Patriots Urged

By Dr. R. P. Cuff.

Memorial day stirs the emotions, fosters patriotism and inspires a call to duty. This is the message brought by Dr. R. P. Cuff of Wayne State Teachers College, Tuesday afternoon at services conducted in Carroll community hall. A large number attended the program sponsored by the Lions club and Legion Auxiliary.

"We meet today to pay tribute of gratitude, love and honor to heroes who have given their lives upon the altar of freedom," Dr. Cuff began.

"It is highly fitting that flowers be used in decorating graves of soldiers and sailors. Flowers, beautiful in pattern and color, are nature's exquisite embroidery. Flowers are one of the most perfect expressions of love that can be found. On Memorial day each year gentle and patriotic hands decorate graves with fresh, bright flowers.

"The men whom we honor today followed their country's flag, the flag that derived its colors from the skies and that, because of the sacrifices of American patriots, represents tremendous power and commands widespread and profound respect. We cannot fully discharge our debt to our heroes whose sacrificial valor has made them immortal.

"Memorial day reminds one of victories which have been bought at the price of human lives. It reminds one of the appalling cost of war in terms of blood. It is a day of tender memory, of loving remembrance for all who through heroism and sacrifice helped bring victory and freedom to our nation.

"Patriotic observance of Memorial day not only pays tribute to heroic deeds of men of the past but also fosters patriotism in those who live today. Every human heart should be on fire with love of country. This love should be cultivated and made broader. One's patriotism should be at least national in scope. Perhaps it is not too much to hope that internationalism will take increasing hold on an ever-growing proportion of the people of the world. Such patriotism holds in high esteem the liberties, the national unity and happiness which are our heritage. How much the American people have for which to be thankful. Their flag is still whole. It still retains every stripe and every star. Except in time of affliction, like the one through which we are now passing in the Second World war, our people are in general free and happy. Even now they are not lacking in courage. And they are likely to emerge from the present global conflict into a richer freedom and happiness than the nation has ever enjoyed.

"May we keep our memories of the heroes of the past always tender, enriching our own hearts! May we keep our torch of responsibility and patriotism ever aglow, bright with altruism, gratitude, love, honor and hope, ennobling our own characters! And may we pay to the honored dead the highest possible tribute by holding aloft the torch of heroic devotion to duty that we have received from them by showing the same loyal spirit that they possessed! We dedicate ourselves to work toward the fulfillment of these worthy sentiments," Dr. Cuff concluded.

Order of Service.
Rev. C. E. Stevens presided and Rev. C. E. Friedrichsen gave the invocation and benediction. Miss Elva Fisher and Miss Ruth Johnson sang solos, and Charles Brockman read "In Flanders Field."

Occasion Gives New Inspiration

Dr. Ray Bryan Urges That Occasion Lead All to Making Better World.

In speaking at Winside Memorial day services Tuesday morning in the community hall, Dr. Ray Bryan of Wayne college faculty, began by giving a brief history of the observance. Decoration day, he explained, originated in the south after the Civil war from the custom followed by bereaved women who each year placed wild flowers on the graves of their soldier dead. Soon the plan of decorating graves annually came to be a general custom, though various dates were and still are used in the south. In 1868 the G. A. R. commander designated May 30 for such observance.

Dr. Bryan described a typical cemetery in a small midwest community, mentioning that one finds there three types of graves. Some are the graves of those who lived their lives and found rest in death at an advanced age. These, the speaker mentioned, are mainly the pioneers who had faith, strength and courage to develop their ideals. Another group includes infants and those who have been taken early by accidents or disease. In the third group are the soldiers and sailors who have given their lives or who died due to effects of war.

Nebraska now has only 11 Civil war veterans out of a former force of 30,000. Dr. Bryan stated, Spanish American war members and Legionnaires still make up large groups. The speaker complimented the Legion on its activity in providing fitting observance for Memorial day.

Recurrence of Memorial day should, Dr. Bryan stated, lead us to renew our pledge not to lose sight of faith, courage, strength, ideals and determination of the pioneers who founded the community; to resolve that death due to carelessness, accidents and ignorance shall be cut to a minimum; to remember the sacrifice, courage and devotion of our war dead and to pledge our efforts for building a better world.

Order of Service.
The program, in charge of the Legion and Auxiliary, included: Advancement of the colors by the color guard, singing of "America" by the assembly, invocation by Mrs. C. T. Dillon, reading of "Gold Star Mother" by Miss Arlene Cary, singing of "White Cliffs of Dover" by Miss Ruby Reed with Miss Alma Lautenbaugh accompanist, reading of soldier dead by Jean Boyd, introduction of speaker by Dr. R. E. Gormley, address by Dr. Bryan, singing of "Star Spangled Banner" by all, benediction by Mrs. Dillon and retirement of colors.

Roy Reed post color guard, firing squad and bugler conducted ritualistic rites at Pleasant View cemetery. They also went to Hoskins and Carroll for rites at cemeteries.

Variation Is Noted When Mother and Son Join Service Forces.

An airmail letter that was flown across two oceans and twice across the United States finally reached its destination at Fort Benning, Ga., 109 days after it was mailed in Lewistown, Pa. Addressed to Lt. John J. Lyons, recently assigned to this post, the letter was sent first to Australia. Returned by postal authorities there, it was then delivered to a soldier of the same name in Ireland, before reaching its correct address.

The tire and gasoline shortage doesn't bother cupid in the least. Miss Mary Botelho, wearing a white bridal gown and carrying a big bouquet, stepped gaily onto a trolley car near her home at Cambridge, Mass. She and tuxedoed Lawrence Pacheco rode to St. Anthony's church where they were married. Later, they boarded another car for Boston where they had dinner, and then returned to Cambridge on the same line, signing their autographs for beaming fellow passengers as the trolley car wheels ground out a rhythm that Mendelssohn never heard.

With only three legs to stand on, Chico, a small white goat owned by James Furlano, Chicago, is getting along okay. Chico, born two weeks ago with a right foreleg and two hind legs, has learned to move around with considerable ease. However, Chico's mode of travel differs from that of other goats in one way—he moves backward.

Library News

Children and youth cannot be kept in storage. They will not stop growing older merely because adults are preoccupied with immediate aspects of national defense. For any view that looks to the post-war period, children and youth are the most significant among human beings. They are so significant because they are in process of becoming adults and because within limits that process can be guided. A library program with directed reading for children through the summer months can help in this process of guiding and promoting the growth of young minds. Our first story hour of the summer season begins Tuesday, June 6. This afternoon is for the little tots of pre-kindergarten age through the 2nd grade. Children in the 3rd, 4th and 5th grades are having an afternoon of their own Thursday, June 8. Those children in the 6th grade and on up will have their meeting Saturday, June 10. The programs all start at 3:30 in the afternoon, as they did through the winter. Something special and different is planned for each group and we look for a nice turnout. Many new books have been purchased as well as some new equipment and we are looking forward to an enjoyable and profitable summer.

New books catalogued this week for adults are: Mr. Roosevelt, by Compton Mackenzie. The Labyrinth, by Cecil Roberts. The Night Is Ending, by James Ronald. No Mortal Fire, by Elsa Valentine. The Laughter of My Father, by Carlos Bulosan. The Girl with a Golden Bar, by Conrad Brenda. Bedford Village, by Hervey Allen. and three mysteries, The Case of the Crooked Gandic, by Gardner. The Case of the Dowager's Etchings, by Rufus King. The House of Cobwebs, by Mary Reiser.
