to return because of trouble after about seven days at sea. The fifth and last voyage took the crew to Bombay, India, across the Atlantic, through the Mediterranean, Red and Arabian seas. Always the ship carried war supplies and food, everything from chewing gum to block-busters.

Miss Borah in North. Delbert's ship was in the Aleutian region when the Japs were boosted out of Kiska and Attu. Twice, October 3 and 4, 1942, Japs attempted to bomb the merchant ship but they failed both times. A hospital in Unalaska was hit.

Deliveries to Russia. Merchant ships deliver lend-lease supplies to Russia by two routes, Delbert explains. In summer months they go through northern waters to Archangel. But in winter, when northern routes are dangerous, ships sail through the Mediterranean and Red seas, around Arabia and up the Persian Gulf to Abadan, Banan, Sabaipur, Khorranshahr and other ports. American troops then take the supplies 200 miles overland to the Caspian sea where Russian boats pick them up.

Merchant ships travel slowly so they are furnished protector escort through dangerous waters like the Mediterranean. The Wayne youth explains that Greek, French, Italian and other ships provide cruisers and destroyers. New York to Bombay is about 12,000 miles and the trip requires five months.

In India one sees a great mingling of modern and native culture. That country has 400 million people who speak 346 languages. Religious sects are about as numerous, the four principal ones being the Hindu, Bonjap, Sind and Parsies. Delbert was in India long enough to learn some about their beliefs. The Hindus have a tower of silence in which bodies of their dead are placed. They believe that since life comes from heaven it should return there, so they have no burial. The Parsies burn their dead.

Deliveries Go Through. Karachi, India, is the main seaport that feeds supplies to the Burma-India-China theatre. The deliveries are made 100 per cent English armies used to protect India. India now has its own army, navy and air force, though they are not more than two years old. And the Wayne youth says the folks show the most courage and determination he saw anywhere. Since the Burma road was captured, all supplies for China have been flown over the high Himalayas from New Delhi and other places. Another Burma road is under construction through the mountains.

Operations in India are concentrated near Imphal and along the Irrawaddy river. Neither side has made any major gains, the youth relates.

Thinks Japs' Stronger. Delbert thinks the Japs are much stronger than the Nazis and that the war in the Pacific may take a year and a half longer than the one in Europe.

The youth talked to Nazi prisoners of war in Akaki, Egypt. He found the Italians most congenial and hopeful that they may come to the United States or at least have democratic government. The Germans, most of them youths 18 to 23 years, were quiet and not inclined to talk.

Delbert enjoyed a trip down the Nile river and rode a camel to the Sphinx and the pyramids. The only way Egypt participates in the war is in providing rooms for allied soldiers who guard the Suez canal, important in sea lanes.

The Wayne youth wanted to visit Tel Aviv in Palestine, said to be the most modern city in that region, but he was unable to do so.

parachutist, jumping him in very difficult terrain and under conditions which taxed the skill of our veteran jumpers. Wayne came through with flying colors. He never faltered for an instant even though I knew there were times when he was scared like I was when I first started.

"When we went into the line as ground infantry the first time I went with us, in combat as on the jump field, our own war was superior. He returned from our operation at V. with the respect of all who knew him. Because Wayne was formerly with the air corps, I assigned him to one job before another within the battalion so he could learn the ropes. Each job he accepted cheerfully and on each he turned in an energetic and skillful result.

Critical Test at Anzio. "The great test for all of us came when we were on the beachhead. Our battalion held for many, many days a very critical sector of the line, the loss of which would have been very serious for the units on our right and left. Wayne was assigned to my machine gun platoon, and spent most of his time in close contact with the enemy.

In Forward Position. "When the Nazis' one morning launched an attack in considerable force against one of our forward positions, Wayne's platoon was directly in the path of the enemy advance. There was no other thought in your son's mind, then, to stay where he was and to defend until the last. The Nazis rolled over our position in great numbers. Wayne was wounded and our aid men could not get to him until some time had passed. He was found after our counter-attack had driven the Nazis back again. Wayne was still alive when we got him to the hospital. He was suffering no pain and died without regaining consciousness.

"I can't tell you how much we miss him. Wayne's death and the deaths of others like him have served to strengthen our desire to see this war through to an unconditional surrender on the part of the enemy.

Wayne's death was not in vain. He gave this outfit an example of a combat soldier to remember. His loss was and is keenly felt by all of us.

Field Director Writes. Red Cross Field Director Franklin F. Gales, headquarters Third Infantry division writes May 29 to Dr. and Mrs. McMaster as follows: "Your son, 1st Lt. Wayne A. McMaster, O-561609, 2nd Inf., 569th Parachute Infantry, APO 464, is reported to have been seriously wounded in action on March 3, 1944, and died in a field hospital. He received shell fragments around the head and had a compound fracture of the knee and right forearm. He was buried with full military honors with last rites of his church in an American military cemetery in Italy."

RUST FROM SHOVEL LODGES IN EYEBALL. Henry Schmitz was under a doctor's care when rust from a cultivator shovel lodged in one of his eyes. The member is healing and the sight was not impaired.

CUSTODIAN CHOSEN FOR COURT HOUSE. Clarence Conger has been chosen custodian at Wayne court house to succeed Oscar B. Nelson who resigned to take a position with the REA July 1. The Nelsons move to one of the Edw. Seymour apartments. The Congers will move to the court house.

Are Well Pleased With Conservation

J. A. Mueacy and Ira K. Landolt, technicians of the soil conservation service in Lincoln, were in Wayne Monday and Tuesday this week making a study of the effects of recent floods on conservation practices that have been applied in Nebraska. They were well satisfied with the way in which such practices as contour farming, terracing, and sub-surface drainage hold up under the destruction of the floods.

In many cases where contour farming alone had been applied to the land, the corn rows broke in several places. This indicated that terracing and sub-surface drainage should be used in connection with contour farming in northeast Nebraska to do a more effective job of reducing soil and water loss.

It was estimated that on many fields, where the corn rows were planted up and down hill, as much as two or three inches of top soil had been lost this spring.

In Line for Promotion. Lt. Burchfield spoke highly of Lt. Canning's flying skill. He related that Lt. Canning, when he was shot down last winter, was next in line to be commanding officer and would have been promoted to major, having 30 fliers and additional ground crew members under his supervision.

that he had arrived at his permanent camp and had met some of his old pals. The men talk, play bridge and plan menus for meals they are going to enjoy when they return home. The Red Cross provides clothing and some food. Lt. Canning says he received a package from this organization 12 days after he was taken prisoner. The Canning has been very fortunate in receiving mail from Lt. Canning. Besides the mail received this week-end, the young man's wife received a letter about two weeks ago and another Monday of last week. His parents have had two cards.

Four Planes to Credit. Mrs. Bev. Canning recently talked by phone to Lt. Burchfield, who served in the same group of the air corps as Lt. Canning, and who is spending a 90-day leave with his wife at Alexandria, Va., after completing his missions in the Mediterranean theatre. Lt. Burchfield told Mrs. Canning that her husband had lost four planes to his credit. He was shot down over Italy when he attacked a Nazi plane which was towing a glider. However, Lt. Canning was able to shoot down the plane which put his own fighter plane out of control, before he was forced down.

J. A. Mueacy and Ira K. Landolt, technicians of the soil conservation service in Lincoln, were in Wayne Monday and Tuesday this week making a study of the effects of recent floods on conservation practices that have been applied in Nebraska. They were well satisfied with the way in which such practices as contour farming, terracing, and sub-surface drainage hold up under the destruction of the floods.

In many cases where contour farming alone had been applied to the land, the corn rows broke in several places. This indicated that terracing and sub-surface drainage should be used in connection with contour farming in northeast Nebraska to do a more effective job of reducing soil and water loss.

It was estimated that on many fields, where the corn rows were planted up and down hill, as much as two or three inches of top soil had been lost this spring.

Holding the Soil

The importance of future agriculture of preserving the rich top soil—keeping it from washing away—is emphasized in an article relating Nebraska experience, told in the Miami, Florida Daily News by Walter Locke, former editorial writer for the Lincoln Journal. Wayne county farmers like those elsewhere, have found conservation of soil and water a source of present benefit as well as future insurance. Mr. Locke explains in part:

Forty years ago John E. Must bought a farm of 160 acres 50 miles back from the Missouri river in Nebraska, a farm of long slopes of drainage into a single central slough. The long slopes made for washing, and even as long as 40 years ago erosion was showing its ugly gullies here and there.

Farmer John saw his problem and his peril. He set out to save his soil. By the means his common sense devised he sought to block the ditches and hold the humus on the slopes.

That rich rain saving soil had been built through ages with the help of the prairie grass. The tough sod lay, in the beginning, between the rains and the soil beneath. With all haste the first settlers tore up this sod to make a seed bed for their crops. Their plows, designed especially for the purpose, sliced off the sod in ribbons and laid it on its face. Quickly the grass died and its roots decayed. There lay beneath the farmers' feet, then a loose black humus, as rich a soil as ever felt the plow.

It was a fine, fluffy soil, equally ready to swim away in the flood or fly off in the wind. Right there began the "losing of the west."

Much of this virgin soil had already gone when Farmer John acquired his farm. He proposed to lose no more. He must still grow grain; he would find ways to hold his soil the while.

When his own crude skill failed him, he called in expert help. The experiment station was glad to give advice. Farmer John, in his anxiety, to save his soil did not resent this "interference" by the government.

He learned where terracing would help. He surveyed his slopes for contour plowing. He dug delaying ditches to hold the soil and rain. He blocked the gullies with straw from his threshing machine. He planted grass crops where cultivation specially injured his soil. He did this, that and a "other thing."

For 40 years he has worked. Young Farmer John grew into old Farmer John, but a happy old Farmer John, his farm he calls his monument; for new after all these years he has still his soil. He will be leaving his farm more fertile than he found it 40 years ago.

From the hilltop where Farmer John's house stands other farms can be surveyed. They show deep gullies. Their slopes are the brown of the underlying clay, not the black of the virgin soil with which the farms began.

His neighbors, John E. Must answers to a questioning look, take no interest in the war he has waged to save his soil. His nearest neighbor refuses so much as to look at his dams, his level rows, his terraces.

Why should they? John E. Must inquires; the farms do not belong to them. They are tenant farmers. When this land grows too poor to make a living on, they can move to another farm.

Convention Next Week

PARTY leaders are gathering in Chicago preliminary to the republican national convention which opens next Monday. It is the most important convention since the Civil war. Therefore it should be accompanied by soundest thought and least selfish politics. Sober consideration of platform pronouncements, looking far into the future and treating every group with evident fairness, will be essential to confidence and victory.

Decisions cannot be flippantly snatched from bottles of hard liquor and be made to convince serious-minded voters. The god of Bacchus has no business mixing into affairs incident to shaping the destiny of a nation. If candidates are selected according to their ability to serve and policies are fashioned in accordance with coming demands, popular approval is a reasonable promise.

Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York, has the most pledged delegates, though he is not an avowed candidate. However, he has indicated his intention to accept the nomination if it is offered to him. Friends of the New York governor are said to be trying to head off the growing candidacy of Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio. Also Bricker forces are reported to have been engaged in efforts to deflate the Dewey boom. Headquarters for Dewey, Bricker, Governor Earl Warren of California and Lt. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota have been established in Chicago.

A late Gallup survey to ascertain popular wishes regarding the proposed republican platform favored, in addition to utmost prosecution of the war, elimination of non-war waste in government operations and cutting out unnecessary Washington bureaus. The expressed majority would restrict labor unions and stop wartime strikes, would provide postwar employment and cooperate with other nations in preserving future peace.

A deadlock over candidates is not threatened at this time, and the platform may be made properly comprehensive and fair if shortsighted politicians are not permitted to rule. The public—likely a majority—looks to the republican party to use its best and most farseeing brains in planning a course consistent with progress and security.

Of course, war and Christianity are not reconcilable; but when Christianity is attacked it must fight or be extinguished. Christianity has had to resort to means forced by its enemies at intervals through the centuries to maintain itself, to perpetuate its principles of freedom and to spread its benign influence. That is what Christianity is doing now.

The Omaha World-Herald calls attention to the growing promise of Vice President Henry Wallace to succeed himself. Democrats of the original school had desired and no doubt still desire to cast him aside, but the rising power of the CIO in democratic ranks with definite demand for Wallace, has greatly strengthened the vice president's chances. Wallace is too left-wing—too much of a dizzy dreamer—to suit old-line democrats, but he is just right to tally with the thinking of the CIO and the communists who have openly endorsed the president for a fourth term. If Henry knows the powerful labor unions are behind him, he will not worry while in far-off China. He will be inspired to feel encouraged while encouraging the Chinese.

A recent contribution to the press by Wendell L. Willkie strongly upholds the right of Negroes to vote and enjoy other privileges guaranteed by the constitution. That basic instrument does not recognize color or religion as ground for discrimination. The north cannot understand why southern states are so bent on disfranchising the Negroes and keeping them subservient despite merit or the plain guarantee of the country's fundamental document. The race question is no doubt a perplexing one in the south, but its treatment fairly would seem the only way to insure future order.

The plan to improve the behavior of Logan creek, compelling it to stick closer to its intended course than it has been accustomed to do, and preventing it from eating into neighboring farm lands and destroying crops, is going forward under the swelling impetus of determined farmers. Ways to proceed are being figured out, and practical steps may be expected.

Threat of a third party made up of democrats, dissatisfied with the new deal and a fourth-term nomination, is looming. That would afford Jeffersonians a chance to vote convictions without voting the republican ticket.

Prime Minister Churchill suggested to the house of commons a few days ago that this summer "may bring full success to the cause of freedom." That is an encouraging prediction; and it should stimulate effort to make it come true.

Proof that one is guaranteed anything he wants in weather without waiting long was furnishing this week—hot, cold, wet and dry. If variety is desirable, as we have been led to believe, it is here in abundance.

A. F. There continues to be much talk about who was to blame for the Pearl Harbor disaster on December 7, 1941. Speaker Matusek of the Hawaiian legislature was in Washington when the house voted overwhelmingly in favor of court-martial proceedings on all charges against persons who may have contributed to that disaster through dereliction of duty. Matusek, an amateur flier, accompanied by his sixteen year old son, was in the air in his cub airplane when the 140 Jap planes came over the city of Honolulu and Pearl Harbor. Two other civilian planes were shot down in front of Matusek who also was the target of Jap machine guns. He says the entire affair from start to finish and landed safely at a civilian airport. He says the whole show was over in fifteen minutes. He was never called as a witness by the Roberts investigating committee.

There is much talk here as to the ability of the WASPS, who are the women fliers of the army. There are about five hundred of them. Many people wonder what they do. They fly planes across the continent, do transport work and even tow targets. Mary Lou Colbert, a twenty-five year old girl, who used to work in the offices of the coast and geodesic survey where she studied maps, has had about 1000 hours flying experience. One of her big jobs is to fly Mustangs from California to an eastern seaport for delivery to the allies. She has made many of these trips, flying at the rate of nearly 300 miles an hour. Frequently, she is used as a leader of these girl fliers because of her knowledge of maps and navigation and she has had frequent thrilling experiences, leading her girl companions through storms.

Part of the success of the invasion is due to hundreds of women who have left offices and their homes and taken the places of men in handling mechanized equipment at embarkation points. The Third district member has visited embarkation points several times and has seen women handling jeeps.

FATHERS' DAY.

Last Sunday fathers were reminded of a special occasion set apart for them. According to custom, children expressed affection by presenting gifts—needs often neglected by paternal heads. The average father tries to serve his family well. Perhaps he is not so fine a type as the mother—perhaps not so manifest in sympathetic considerations, but he is more thoughtful than the surface indicates, and he will usually practice any self-denial to give advantage and security to those dependent on him. The value of a material gift is trifling compared with the spirit back of it. What he most values is mutual good will—disposition to accept best efforts with gratitude. More compensation is found in family accord—in reciprocal good feeling—than in any material abundance. Dad has often developed a calloused exterior from toil and anxiety, but underneath he is as sensitive as a child.

Holdrege Looks Ahead.

(Lincoln Journal)

Worthy of general attention is the list of 30 postwar projects drawn up by the local planning committee of Holdrege. First on the list is complete development of the present irrigated area of Phelps county, with full production as the aim. Reduction in the size of farmsteads, with a doubling in number, is proposed. High on the list is the need for a dozen different types of factories that make use of farm products. Among the other projects set down for future consideration are a new library building, new structures at the county fair grounds, a community hospital, a housing program and facilities for instructing rural pupils at the town schools. In deciding what it wants and where its best future interests lie, Holdrege has shown a foresight other communities might emulate.

People Have Remedy.

(Norfolk Daily News)

In the hope of putting the government's peace-time fiscal policies on a sound basis, regardless of who happens to be in the White house, Senator Tydings of Maryland has offered a resolution for a constitutional amendment limiting appropriations by congress in peace time, except by a three-fifth vote of both houses, to the estimated federal income.

With general anxiety about the size of our federal debt, the resolution may find considerable support, especially since there is talk in high places of a continuation of deficit spending as an accepted policy after the war ends.

One of the favorite practices of the New Deal has been to announce an objective with which there is widespread support, and then use it to lay restrictions and regulations upon the country. Senator Tydings' proposal does something like that.

It is sound practice, in the opinion of most persons, to keep government expenses within income, and this view is more generally held now that our public debt has risen to such heights that there is fear it may prove top-heavy.

But before we put shackles on the government we should study possible effects.

Not many large businesses could operate efficiently or long, if they were barred from borrowing money in an emergency. It is recognized as sound practice to use the lush earnings of fat years to pay off the debts of lean ones. In times of great depression, it might be sound policy for the government to exceed its budget for a year or so, provided the borrowings were paid off when times became better.

If we put into power persons whose minds run to extravagant policies or twisted economics which result in year-by-year deficits, we have a remedy in our hands. We can vote them out.

We have learned that the constitution is no great protection if we have in authority an administration bent on ignoring it with the help of a subservient attorney general and federal judges of a certain type of mind. The surest protection from unsound financial policies is to put in power and keep in power men whose financial thinking is straight.

The rubber director's office is asking congress to continue the guayule rubber program in California. The guayule project is directed by Paul Roberts, who also managed the shelterbelt in Nebraska. Rubber experts declare that the world will face a tight rubber situation for four years after the war unless we have a substantial supply of synthetic rubber and substitute sources of natural rubber such as the guayule shrub.

The navy must have rope. We have been without our principal source of rope supply since the Japanese took the Philippines. Hundreds of thousands of acres of land in Central America have been planted to hemp and they produce much of the hemp from which rope for war purposes is now being made. Some of this hemp industry may be liquidated when we drive the Japanese from the Philippines.

Another critical housing, shortage has developed in Washington. At the end of the school year with its graduates and vacation-

PRACTICAL.

A story told in the Minneapolis Star-Journal reflects the spirit of helpful neighborliness invariably practiced in all mid-western farm areas. When a farmer suffers sickness, an accident, or some other misfortune and is unable to head off inevitable loss, his neighbors get together and pull him out of the hole. It may be plowing, planting, cultivating, harvesting—whatever the season demands—the farmer's neighbors take his task in hand and see that failure is not added to his burden. That is practical Christianity. Here is the story related by the Star-Journal: "Farmer Fred Barney down near Fairmont, Minn., passed away recently and left his widow and three small children. This, as you know, is the peak of the farm season. The land has to be tilled, seed sown if the farm is to produce. Two neighbors of the Barneys, Frank Kessler and Art Kade, got their heads together and virtually solved Mrs. Barney's immediate problem. To date, these neighbors have signed up 57 farmers in their vicinity and this home front division will plow, disc and plant 147 acres of Mrs. Barney's farmland. And they hope to do it all in seven hours. Most of the 57 farmers have to leave their own work for the day and the majority of them will bring their own tractors and other necessary farm implements. Kade says he thinks it'll be the largest aggregation of tractor working together in the history of Minnesota farming."

ists many girls are coming to Washington for jobs with the government. The housing officials here announced that more than 6,500 new employees are coming to town within a few days. Most of them are girls who have been graduated from high school. About 1500 of them will go into the offices of the navy department, and the army will get about 3500. The others will be distributed among other federal agencies.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Wiley of Hartington celebrated their silver wedding anniversary by visiting in Washington with their daughter who is a member of the WAVES. It was Mr. and Mrs. Wiley's first trip to the nation's capital. They attended several interesting sessions of the house and the senate and visited Mt. Vernon and other points of historical interest.

Former Resident Takes Own Life

Rites Are Conducted with Burial in Wakefield for Rollin E. Cramer.

Funeral services were conducted at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Salem church at Dakota City for Rollin E. According to the story as pieced together by authorities, Cramer had worked Sunday in the field, retired early and later arose and went to the kitchen. CONGRESS

Wardner Scott, Nebraska state engineer, has been in Washington for priorities on materials needed to construct and repair Nebraska roads to the extent of $340,000. The federal contribution to this amount will be approximately $240,000. Mr. Scott was given much encouragement and it is believed the request will be granted. In that event, the federal share of the work would about exhaust the federal funds now allotted to Nebraska. The post-war road bill already reported by the house committee on roads, would give Nebraska additional large allotments of money for both primary and secondary highway improvement. The presently proposed work includes the Win-ston to Oakland and Laurel to Hartington highways.

The pending post-war highway measure is now before the rules committee and members responsible for its management do not expect action on it until some time this fall.

The flood control and rivers and harbors bills already passed by the house are still pending in the senate. Some disagreements between factions will have to be ironed out before these bills become law. The Pick plan for the control and improvement of the Missouri river is in the omnibus flood control bill.

Members from agricultural districts have been disturbed by the waste of huge quantities of eggs. For lack of cold storage facilities, surplus eggs have been sold cheap for fertilizer. Some eggs have been sold for animal food. Leonard Hutz, of the Fairmont Creamery company has been in town working on priority requirements for the dairy and poultry business. He believed that strait space for eggs has now been found so that forced sales for fertilizer have become unnecessary.

With national conventions of the major political parties coming on in the few weeks ahead, both houses of congress have turned to clearing their decks of the many important measures which are classified as "must" legislation. The leaders of both major parties anticipated a hot weather adjournment, but so much opposition to an extended adjournment has been manifested by members that there are likely to be only recess periods. During which congress will remain subject to call. Such recesses may be by three-day periods, and probably may extend from the republican convention opening on June 26 until the democratic convention on July 17. Never before in a similar length of time has any congress passed so much important legislation as has been acted upon since it re-assembled in January. But there still remains a great volume of only partially completed legislation, particularly covering war and post-war problems, to be acted upon. Hpt as Washington is and will continue to be, most members are of the opinion that they should be kept here. The invasion is on and congress may well be at its post, after being to every call upon it.

It is realized that there is a long hard fight on the western front, as well as in Italy, on the eastern front, in the Pacific and in Asia. It is a world battle, in which there can be only one ending, that of "unconditional surrender", a couple of words made famous by General Grant at Appomattox. During the weeks and possibly months to come, the press and the radio will bring the tense stories of the advance of the forces of the United Nations on all fronts. Other matters will require the daily attention of our people, but uppermost in the minds of all will be the winning of the war at the earliest moment possible, and the determination of all to back up our fighting forces to the limit in all that is necessary to victory.

Ten Days' Relief

(Omaha Journal-Stockman) An odd decision was rendered in a Pennsylvania court to which a farmer had appealed for relief from disturbances arising from planes flying over his land. He charged that low-flying planes frightened him, his wife, his horses and his cows, so that work could not be done and production was reduced. The court ruled that each year the complainant should have 10 days in which to harvest his crops without fear of airplanes, but he must give the airline five hours' notice when he chooses his 10 days in order for it to cancel or reroute its flights. Now airline officials are wondering if the decision will set a precedent for settlement of troublesome aviation easement problems. Many farmers have experienced losses through the frightening of livestock, but that has usually been due to irresponsible low flying.

Government Control

(Norfolk Daily News) The government is trying to get its controlling hand on the medical profession, which gives point to this story, told in the current issue of Pathfinder magazine. George Brinkler, a scholarly Englishman, came to this country to cure himself of tuberculosis and settled in Arizona. He made a special study of diet for his own health, and became convinced of the importance of vitamins. Cured, he went to Washington and began giving a course of advice on diet through the mails. The postoffice department let him for a while. At his hearing the chemists of the department of agriculture testified, according to his attorney, that there was no such thing as vitamins. The postoffice issued a fraud notice and George Brinkler lost his business and disappeared from how he found. No such thing as vitamins, according to government experts. Now the doctors prescribe vitamins and one of the busiest counters in any drug store is the one containing vitamins in easy-to-take form. The essential nature of this newly discovered element of foods is universally recognized.

Air Corps Weather Service Important

Men in Alaska Think Two Years Will Be Needed To Conclude War.

Pvt. John Berry, arrived last Thursday from Fairbanks, Alaska, where he had been serving with the cold-weather testing detachment since last October, to spend a 20-day furlough in his parental C. A. Berry home. The young man came to Sioux City by plane, leaving Alaska last week. Saturday several stops were made enroute. After his furlough, Pvt. Berry will go to Watertown, S. D., for further training before returning to Fairbanks some time in the fall. The cold-weather testing detachment is connected with the ground forces of the air corps.

Fairbanks is located in the southeastern section of Alaska. The Wayne man tells that the past winter was mild for that season, with temperatures seldom falling below 35 degrees below. It got as low as 50 below at one time. As there is little wind and the air is dry, the cold does not penetrate. Not much snow fell at Fairbanks last winter.

Light at Midnight.
June 21 is the longest day of the year at Fairbanks. It remains light all day and night on this day, as it does for about two and one-half months at this time of the season. Length of Flooding Important to Corn Agronomist D. L. Gross Asks Farmers to Plant Early Maturing Hybrids.

The length of time that water stands on much of the flooded corn land in northeast Nebraska will be the determining factor in estimating total damages on thousands of acres, according to D. L. Gross, extension agronomist at the college of agriculture, Lincoln, who visited as many areas as possible Monday last week. Gross said that corn that was up and not covered over with mud would survive if the water is not too slow in draining off. Just how long the corn plant can live under water, Mr. Gross is not sure. Much corn land in the flooded areas had not been planted and a great deal that had been planted was not up above the ground when the flood struck.

Much of Nebraska's hybrid seed production is in the flooded area, the agronomist states. In regard to the seed corn situation for farmers who will have to replant their corn, Mr. Gross said that many farmers will be planting up to July 1. We are recommending that as many as can plant a reasonably early maturing hybrid. Even a second generation of this type will be better for the farmer than many of the late maturing types. We suggest that county agents locate as much as possible second generation early maturing hybrid seed for planting where first generation seed is not available. A good crop of soft corn is better than no corn at all.

Mr. Gross' office is making a canvass of hybrid seed corn growers of the state to locate available seed. Early maturing corn planted by June 20 has a pretty fair chance to mature. The corn acreage that was damaged is so large that Mr. Gross says there isn't a chance to substitute sudan, millet or some other crop for any sizeable portion of it. Mr. Gross believes that every farmer affected by the flood will do everything possible to get his acreage back into corn of some kind. Where this is not possible, he thinks it may be advisable to keep the land free of weeds and plant it to wheat next fall.

Paratroop Training Strict and Intensive

Cpl. Rod Peck Explains That Parachutist Is Skilled Soldier First Always.

Cpl. and Mrs. Rod Peck and son, Rick, arrived Friday from Camp Mackall, N. C., to spend a 10-day furlough with Cpl. Peck's mother, Mrs. Luella Peck, and grandmother, Mrs. Henry Bush.

Cpl. Peck has been a member of the paratroops since last October and has made nine jumps. The first five jumps, qualifying jumps, were made from 1,200 feet. The last one was at night. He made two leaps from 800 feet and the last jump the young man made was from 450 feet. On a jump from 450 feet the individual is on the ground and ready for action in eight seconds.

Training the paratroops receive is rigid. At Camp Mackall men get up at 5:15 each morning and run five miles double-time before breakfast. Their physical condition is such that they can cover 100 miles in three days' forced march, carrying full field equipment. The men operate in small units in contrast to the large groups of infantry and other ground forces. They are given extensive training in the use of fire arms and spend one week each month on the firing range. No man is sent into combat until he is an expert marksman.

In Four Stages.

A paratrooper goes through four one-week stages of training before receiving special wings designating one as a qualified paratrooper. The first week is devoted to physical conditioning. During the second week the men learn to pack chutes, jump from a 30-foot tower so that they will experience the feeling of passing out the door of a plane, and continue their physical training. The third stage consists of packing chutes, going to the top of a 350-foot control tower and jumping as one would from a plane, the difference being that one is guided to the ground by guy wires and lands in a pile of sawdust. Trainees then go up another "free" tower, and the only difference from a "live" jump there being that the opening shock is missed.

The fourth stage is called "jump" work and it is during this period that men make their five qualifying jumps. After this training is completed the men are assigned to units and receive further training or are sent to an embarkation port for replacement.

Ground Work First.
Cpl. Peck tells that paratroops are soldiers first and paratroops second. Only about two per cent of their work is jumping, the other part being ground work. These men are called first line shock troops. They land before glider troops and knock out what installations they can and hold till the gliders with heavy artillery arrive. The young man says the first jump is the hardest. After one has made the initial leap, each succeeding jump is a little easier. The paratroops usually jump from C-47 planes. Sixteen men compose one "stick" or group in a plane and it takes this "stick" 14 seconds to get out the door.

On Exhibition Jump.

Cpl. Peck was one of a group who made an exhibition jump at LaGuardia Field, New York, in connection with a bond drive. Men in three planes, about 58 in number, demonstrated jumps at this time.

Cpl. Peck is a member of the volunteer military and dance band which plays at concerts and dances at the post and at USO dances.

The young man expressed his appreciation for receiving the Herald. He says he looks forward to receiving it each Monday. He asks his friends to write him at the address of his family which is 303 Marlboro street, Hamlet, N. C.

Wonders of Short Line. The Short Line continues to remain where it was planted. One train per day breaks the depths of its solitude and frightens jack-rabbits and sand hill cranes in their lairs.

It may reasonably be expected that when the Short Line is completed, astronomers on other planets, viewing it through their telescopes, will regard it a curiosity as wonderful as the canals of Mars now appear to us. It will excite discussion as to whether it is a natural formation, and such discussion may lead them to the conclusion that the earth is inhabited. Hence, it cannot be said that the Short Line is entirely in vain, even though its use is not now clearly discernible.

A Switch in Time saved More...

I'll predict no-miles-an-hour.

I'll hand it to folks. They've had the patriotism to hold down their speed. But imagine war restrictions ended. Man, you'll see old cars overdoing till they can't chug another mile. You'll see every repair shop crowded for months, but I'm figuring to duck that! Of course, I couldn't see every thing coming when I originally had this engine OIL-PLATED. I'd simply overheard that any engine forms dangerous corrosive acids. It made sense to try protecting the engine by OIL-PLATING it with Conoco Nth motor oil. I switched to Nth. You can suit yourself about thinking it's the only oil or not, but first read the whole label. You'll see where Conoco Nth oil's special synthetic fastens OIL-PLATING to your engine's fine inside finish. Then OIL-PLATING is really sort of a special surface to block steady acid corrosion. When repairs might be just a promise, and you can only pray for a new car, you're way ahead with your engine safely OIL-PLATED by Conoco Nth.

Garden Leafhoppers Can Be Destroyed. To get rid of leafhoppers in gardens, entomologists advise a liberal dose of dust containing 15 percent rotenone or a spray containing a little flour or skimmed milk added to the spray solution will cause it to adhere better to the foliage. Leafhoppers feed upon the underside of leaves and suck the sap with their sharp pointed mouths. On potatoes they cause edges of leaves to turn brown and rot. On beans the pests may cause a lot of tiny white areas on leaves.

CHAS. E. SANDALL SAYS:

NEBRASKA MAY WELL BE PROUD

"What a Record! Out of 1799 Beer License Renewal Applicants, Only 14 Denied for Cause. Nebraska May Well Be Proud!"

This Committee has urged, time and again, that the greatest care be observed in granting licenses only to proper persons. Working closely with your able enforcement officials, we have helped in locating the undeserving. A checkup just made of retail beer license applications is very gratifying. Of 1799 applicants only 14—less than 1%—were denied for reasons of improper conduct. From only 5 Nebraska towns were protests filed by citizens.

The beer industry joins the citizens of Nebraska in being proud of this record. And the State is to be congratulated on having splendid laws, ably administered.

ISN'T NEBRASKA'S GOOD LIQUOR CONTROL STATUTE, PROPERLY ENFORCED AS IT IS, THE SOLUTION TO THE PROBLEM?

Pin-Up Girls Bow To Elderly Miss

Absence of Lawbreakers Prompts Town to Offer Jail for Sale.

The pin-up blondes and brunettes can move over now to make room for Miss Lillian Castle, 80-year-old actress of Hollywood. Miss Castle has made 4500 wool helmets and zero caps for the armed forces. She recently received a letter from the medical branch of an infantry regiment in Britain thanking her and designating her: "The sweetest grandma we would like to come home to."

The Winthrop Harbor, Ill., village jail seems no more popular among real estate investors than it was among lawbreakers. Because the three-cell establishment hadn't had a customer in three years the village decided to sell it. There were no takers.

J. C. Tomas of Priest River, Idaho, was too startled to estimate the size of the bear, but he vouches that he saw the bear pick up his 300-pound brood sow, high jump the four-foot hog lot fence, and dash into the hills.

At Vicksburg, Mich., Cpl. Donald Waldron talked in his sleep one night. "Wish I'd get a letter from a girl," he muttered. A few days later he got 18 letters from 18 girls. An eavesdropping buddy arranged it all through a girl friend and her 17 schoolmates.

Chicago Park district policeman theorized that an enthusiastic gardener solved the problem of a scarcity of garden tools at the city's expense. Missing from a tool shed in Washington park were the following: One leaf sweeper, one rake, one spade, one wheelbarrow, one roller and a lawn mower.

A young New York woman who is engaged in making consumer research surveys has discovered a technique for overcoming housewife resistance. When a hostile prospect meets her at the door she surreptitiously snaps a string which heads dozens of cheap imitation pearls to the floor. Almost every housewife will come to the rescue. While they scramble around picking up the pearls the ice is broken—and she gets her answers.

At Charlotte, N. C., a soldier and his girl friend passed some children playing football. The soldier snatched for the ball, it was tossed to him, and he hurried a forward pass which landed atop a two-story building. He climbed to the roof with the aid of a step-ladder, flipped the children their ball. Then he found he couldn't quite connect with the ladder. While his girl waited, the fire department came and rescued him.

Mrs. Janet Scarborough's purse was stolen in Chicago. It contained a $50 bill, six $1 bills, a $75 check and personal papers. A neighbor found the purse in his backyard later. The $50 was intact together with the papers. The following morning she found the $75 check in her mailbox, in its original envelope.

What news will Gen. Eisenhower get from us?

You know now what we've heard from him.

We've heard that Eisenhower and his Americans have hurled themselves like a thunderbolt against the bristling defenses of Hitler's Wehrmacht!

We've heard that they are smashing at our foe — sparing neither steel nor sweat nor blood in one final, furious assault that marks the supreme military effort of this War!

And what news do Eisenhower and his men expect from us?

Men and women of America — what the Invasion is to our fighting men, the 5th War Loan is to us at home!

For us, as well as for them, this is the crisis — the time for tremendous, overwhelming effort! Make no mistake! The 5th War Loan will undoubtedly be the biggest, most vitally important financial effort of this whole War!

If the 5th War Loan is to succeed, each one of us must do more than ever before — must buy double . . . yes, triple . . . the Bonds we bought last time.

Our men expect to hear that we are buying double — that we are matching their sacrifice as best we can — that the American nation, soldiers and civilians together, is making one gigantic effort to win this War!

That's the news our men expect to hear from us. Will you personally see that they get it?

And here are 5 More reasons for buying Extra Bonds in the 5th!

1. War Bonds are the best, the safest investment in the world!
2. War Bonds return you $4 for every $3 in 10 years.
3. War Bonds help keep prices down.
4. War Bonds will help win the Peace by increasing purchasing power after the War.
5. War Bonds mean education for your children, security for you, funds for retirement.
