Missing Youth Is Safe in War Area

Cpl. Warren Renz Member Of Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group in Normandy.

Cpl. Warren Renz, 20, formerly of Wayne county, missing in action since the invasion of the Normandy beachhead in France, June 6, writes that he is feeling fine and is well. His letter of June 20 reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Renz, who live a half mile south of Homer, Monday this week. The youth said that he could not tell where he is or what happened. Information that Cpl. Renz was missing came to the parents through the Red Cross June 26.

The young man, who entered service in January, 1943, and who went to England in January, 1944, was in anti-aircraft artillery. Cpl. Renz had written his parents late in May. He was discouraged about the outlook and told his parents how to dispose of his property in case he failed to return. The youth had livestock and other farming interests with his father. In England he stayed in the home of a middle-aged couple who had written Mr. and Mrs. Renz, telling them they enjoyed very much the association with Warren as they had no young folks of their own.

Warren Renz was born near Carroll September 4, 1923. When he was small the family moved to a farm near Wayne and lived there until eight years ago when they went to Homer. Warren stayed here two years in the home of his aunt, Mrs. Chas. Hikes, and attended school in district 42 south-east of Wayne.

Earl Renz, a brother of Warren's was accidentally killed at the age of 4 when children found a revolver in a barn near Carroll. Another brother, Donald, died five years ago.

Besides the young man's parents, two sisters and two brothers, Betty, Darlene, Bob and Fritz, are at the family home near Homer. The eldest brother, Leo, is married and lives near Homer. Three sisters, Margaret, Mildred and Dorothy, are in Corvallis, Ore.

KNEE-HIGH STALKS OF CORN REALIZED ON JULY HOLIDAY

CORN on ground not too badly washed by recent floods is fast making up for lost time. All the spring and frequent rains delayed plowing and planting dangerously long, but farmers generally managed to overcome the wet spells, and now most of them have fields growing satisfactorily. Knee-high corn by the fourth was often realized. A good yield is the promise at this stage. Reports of small grain are not so favorable. Generally the first of July would find that crop ready to harvest, and how it will turn out will depend on the weather during the next few weeks. It is expected to have about small grain yield and a bumper crop the same year, and the latter seems to be in the ascendancy at this time.

Make Final Drive To Realize Quota

DRIVE FOR WASTE PAPER TO ANSWER GOVERNMENT NEED

THE OLD paper drive announced in today's Herald presents an opportunity to get rid of out-of-use newspapers and magazines and have them hauled away. These things now vitally needed by the government, are usually an encumbrance in the hands of possessors. Stored away, they are fire hazards. They are often eyesores. In the past people who have had newspapers and magazines to dispose of found no one to haul them away. As we understand, the sharpened demand has prompted a way to facilitate gathering and transportation. We hope people will read the plan, and respond as promptly and generously as quantities on hand will warrant. Thus, ridding places of useless waste will answer a pressing government demand and at the same time serve in carrying out a valuable house-cleaning program.

Priority Program Goes Into Effect

The new nationwide priority hiring procedure for Wayne County which requires that workers except agricultural, odd jobs and part-time, shall be hired through the United States employment service. This means that those changing employers will present priority referral cards to the new employers. The plan is to appoint a volunteer representative of the war manpower commission in each town of Wayne and nearby counties to can clear workers for new jobs immediately if they meet the requirements, subject to approval of the Norfolk office. Director Walter Steffen explains that the new ruling does not affect those who stay at their present jobs. Priority jobs are offered in the order of their urgency, national, state and local.

Insatiable Power Thirst
SUNDAY'S Sioux City Journal makes serious editorial appraisal of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and rates him the most ambitious person in American history. It notes that if he had not been so inordinately ambitious he would have accepted the dictum of tradition and retired at the conclusion of two terms. As a smasher of precedents, he brushed aside the examples of Washington and Jefferson and sought and secured a third term.

Now looms temptation to capture a fourth term on the pretext of being indispensable. It will be up to the electorate to do some precedent smashing, notably one about changing horses in the middle of a stream. And in view of the president's grandiose state of mind, it will be healthier for the country, though far worse for him, if he runs and is defeated. The Journal concludes with these searching paragraphs:

"Now, in all probability, Mr. Roosevelt will want still another term, a fourth this time. He will want it for many reasons, the chief one of which is his personal ambition, which today is as strong as ever, quite uncontrolled and dominant in the nature and the character of the man. Mr. Roosevelt wishes to go down in history as the greatest of all the presidents. He desires not only to remain as commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the country till the war is won, but wishes to dominate the peace conference and be looked upon as the greatest man in all this world.
 "This ambition is said to be so powerful in the president that he no longer is politically prudent. He would know, if he considered the thing at all, that if he tried to win a fourth time and failed it would be far worse for him and his place in history than if he retired to private life at the end of his third term. But the temptation to 'build himself up as not only the greatest American in history but as the most dominant personality the world ever saw is strong within him. He confidently is expected to demand re-nomination and another term in the White House. Obviously, he risks much if and when he makes another campaign for the presidency. What a gambler he would have been! What a gambler he is!"

Footnotes Needed
 THE Saturday Evening Post objects to publishing the big salaries received by corporation officials without due explanatory footnotes. The Post says in conclusion:

"The question is: Does publication of amounts paid in salaries serve a useful purpose when no mention is made of the fact that from a third to three quarters of the salary received must be paid in income tax? We believe the answer is No. Surveys of popular opinion show that few people are familiar with the higher-bracket revenue schedules or have any conception of the amounts paid by high-salaried men. The average citizen who reads that National Sausage Casing paid its president, Luther E. Glotz, $86,977 assumes that Mr. Glotz still has $86,977, or such of it as he didn't spend. Actually, his income tax came to $53,049.56, leaving him $33,927.50.

"By this time all of us accept the necessity for unprecendentedly high taxes in wartime. The so-called 'little people,' who are most of us, are paying more taxes than they ever expected to. But the government's need for vast sums of money is no excuse for promoting class hatred by giving a false impression of the incomes available to people in the high brackets.
 "There ought to be no serious objection to adding to these lists of salaries a note to the effect that they are taxable at whatever rate is applicable to the bracket in which they fall. If that is too much to expect, the practice of publishing these misleading amounts should be abandoned. After all, the salaries of company officials are always available to stockholders. Why the rest of the public should be entitled to such information, we are sure we don't know."

High Ground
 SPEAKERS at the late republican national convention occupied uniformly high ground. Proceedings comported with the seriousness of the war. Governor Earl Warren, keynote, was followed by Herbert Hoover, former president, whose analysis of problems that face the country how and that will face it later, proved anew his deserved rank as the world's greatest economist as well as greatest humanitarian. He bestowed on younger men the responsible task of straightening out the nation's tangled affairs and bringing the postwar period to a sound and healthy basis. Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce told a lot of hard truths in a nice way.

Other speeches observed the importance and dignity of the occasion. Presidential Candidate Tom Dewey disappointed no one in his clearly stated and generally acceptable position on national and foreign issues. His reasoning was supported by masterful presentation. His utterances had the ring of candor and sincerity.

The platform is progressive without violating traditions. Both speakers and the platform were free from abuse of the opposition, but emphasized the need of forthright statesmanship.

Hope of the World
 A WRITER for the Chicago Sun Belted Governor Griswold's effort in nominating Dewey as a "country speech by a country boy." On the contrary, the New York Times complimented the Nebraska governor. It is surprising that even partisan mannerism would lead anyone in the great grain and cattle center of the west to deprecate proved merit and unjustly reflect on rural populations where, in fact, brains think clearer and hearts beat truer than in most other areas of the world.

We would be less surprised if disparagement came from a Washington bureaucrat who still thinks civilization is bounded on the west by the Allegheny mountains, the country beyond that dividing range inhabited mostly by Indians and prairie dogs and producing little besides dust storms and grasshoppers. When any one lifts his nasal organ in contempt over earned distinction in the corn and cattle country we are more than ever convinced that it is the soul and hope of the world.

The vice presidential nomination is a puzzler for delegates to the democratic national convention. Whatever may be his personal feelings, the president is said to favor Wallace, and for obvious reasons. The CIO and the erstwhile communist party want the vice president renominated, and they have a forceful way of expressing themselves. The president will sidestep offense to this considerable group at this time. Aversion to a fourth term by southern democrats, among other Jeffersonians, is aggravated by prospect of extending the Wallace tenure.

We are inclined to acknowledge the validity of some psychic manifestations, because we are eager to substantiate belief in immortality. Some persons need more than faith to be convinced. We are one of them. But the alleged evidences of the supernatural appearing in a current magazine and relating experiences of many years ago, mix in too much material to satisfy a spiritual thirst. There are phenomena that cannot be explained in relation to physical forces, though no doubt there are errors that shake credulity and multiply doubts.

The international monetary conference promises to favor gold as the world standard despite the demands of twenty-five western senators who urge silver as a contributor to money stabilization. The conference is to prepare the way for permanent world peace, and in that connection, Senator Tobey of New Hampshire, said: "We dare not—we cannot—fail in the high purpose which brought us together, for today men are dying and homes are saddened for the cause of world freedom."

Wendell Willkie is mentioned as a possible running mate for President Roosevelt, but if he were even no smarter than we are, he would refuse. He will serve the future of the country and the future of himself better by sticking to the political organization which he led four years ago. He cannot jump from one political mooring to another without losing influence.

The Fourth was quiet. There were no fireworks and no firecrackers. Shooting was largely restricted to battle areas where brave American soldiers and their allies are recapturing the spirit and reality of universal freedom. People usually took the day off, acutely mindful of the world conflict and hoping another Fourth will see victory with reason more than ever to celebrate.

The umbrella, almost as extinct as the dinosaur, was a thing composed of ribs covered with light, water-resistant material. Stemming from the confluence of ribs was a handle with which to steer the canopy in protecting exposed cranial surfaces against onslaughts of rain. Our recollection of the umbrella leads us to believe it should have been preserved.

Allied forces are moving steadily forward on all fronts. The Russians gain ground daily, and Americans and British in France and Italy are gradually and decisively overcoming enemy resistance. All aim at Berlin. A question that seems of tremendous importance to the Nazis: Will the Russians or the Americans and British reach the German capital first?

If a smear campaign is launched against Dewey and Bricker, it would seem necessary in defense to point out certain defects in the opposition, thus properly to enlighten and warn the electorate. It would be a heavenly train of political events if the campaign could be kept free from ugly remarks, but that seems unlikely.

Not in observance of the Fourth, but in the course of his waning authority, Hitler made a speech to his helpless subjects on that day, modifying his usual bombast with the suggestion that the going had become tough in the face of what is happening everywhere; however, he still claimed the nazis would win.

Despite repeated urgings to minimize travel and to be on the look-out for hazards, fatalities due mostly to traffic accidents, mounted higher than usual over the Fourth. Accidents from fireworks and firecrackers sank to an all-time low.

It is refreshing to note that Republican Presidential Candidate Tom Dewey will, if elected, rejuvenate the cabinet by displacing haggard members with new, young blood, all able to accept tasks of independent leadership.

Democratic leaders have betrayed their intention to draft the president for a fourth term. This will not surprise him, and he will be found willing and ready. But his acceptance will be easier than his election.

Outside of Washington, twisted and queer-performing mentalities are still in a minority, and that is ground for hope.

The weather observed approach of the Fourth, but that was a tedious shower which was highly acceptable.

IMPATIENT JOE

Nation's Business calls attention to Joe Stalin's evident contempt for persons who ridicule their speech, and who do not hit the nail squarely on the head in talking. The magazine quotes him as curiously remarking: "If a man can't speak clearly about his subject, he can't think clearly, and I don't give a damn about listening to him." Then Nation's Business quotes something that Chamber President, Eric Johnson poured into Joe's ears in the course of a speech in Russia in June. The quotation, far from ambiguous, follows: "In economic ideology and practice, my country is not only different from yours, it is more different from yours than is any other country in the world. You are the most state-minded and the most collectivist-minded people in existence. We are the most individual-minded and the most free people in the world. We are determined to remain so—and even to become more so."

AS SEEN BY EARL STEPHAN

Washington, D. C. June 30, 1944
 Premier Churchill's view that the war in Europe may be ended this year seems not to be shared by military experts here. Some of them seem to believe that he is as optimistic as they are pessimistic.

But congress keeps on appropriating billions for war purposes upon the proper theory that there must be no let-up in production until victory is achieved. The army bill for the coming fiscal year appropriates approximately $49 billions, and other appropriations are a dozen billions more, aside from those for the navy. During the present year, billions authorized were not used. That may be the case the coming year. The one certainty is that funds are made available to win the war under any and all circumstances.

The South American countries keep in the news from week to week—particularly Argentina and Bolivia. Argentina's new revolutionary administration is doing business in Spain, purchasing army supplies and equipment. It seems suddenly imbued with militaristic fervor. Spain has been furnishing essential materials imported from our own country until the state department clamped down on Spanish shipments. Just what sort of a row Argentina may be preparing to start is not known. The new regime in Bolivia has been denied recognition by our state department, which seemed to have good and sufficient reasons. Venezuela and Brazil are said to be pressuring our government to reverse its stand, and it may do so. Six million bushels of corn are being imported from Argentina by administrative agencies this month. More corn may come later. It will go to the alcohol distilleries and not to the livestock farmers. Argentina raises corn at a lower cost than any other country in the world, and because of lack of shipping, it now has an immense surplus.

The census office has been passing out estimates on the voting population of the country which may be of interest to political experts. It estimates 8,800,000 of our young people have come to voting age the past four years, and upon their elections may depend. The total number of those of voting age is 88,665,555, so about 10 per cent of the eligible voters are included in those reaching their majority since

CLARE BOOTHE LUCE

John W. Carey, resourceful Sioux City Journal writer, disapproves in his expressed disappointment over the republican convention speech by Clare Boothe Luce. He says in The Rear Seat of the Sunday edition: "The finely manicured and carefully couched offering of the much heralded Clare Boothe Luce was a disappointment to us in that it seemed out of tune with the occasion—too staid to utterly permit us to dictate, inflection, intonation and timing—like pages taken from a dramatic script—and presumptuously implicative that the one major party is any more solicitous for the welfare of our fighting men." We can't imagine anyone with Walter Carey's penchant for fine diction characterizing the speaker as "too utterly perfect" in that respect. It must be admitted that she aroused people to think, and she did it in a style quite in contrast with that often employed by new deal boosters of the likes type. Alex Dreier news commentator said Mrs. Luce was more sentimental than reasonable, and the reaction to that is that sentiment is a valuable force in the world and that it should be carefully cultivated and preserved.

1940. For the first time in our history, the number of women voting age exceeds the number of male voters by some 3,000,000.

In 1940, the total vote cast in national elections was 49,815,312, a little less than two-thirds the total eligible for the ballot. On a like basis this year, the total vote may be in excess of 54,000,000. About 8,000,000 people have moved from former homes and communities the past four years, and nobody knows how many will vote in new locations, many of them are likely to retain their voting and vote by mail. Nebraska has good absentee voting laws for civilians and for the men and women in the armed forces. By November there will be 12,000,000 in our armed forces at home and on the various fronts, not all of whom will be of voting age.

The number of those not voting varies in different states, but there is a surprisingly large number in all states who fail to vote. In practically every election the stay-at-home voters may hold the power to decide results if they care to do so. In 1940, the largest percentage of the whole percentage of vote was in Illinois—about 53 1/2 per cent. South Carolina had the smallest percentage—about 5 per cent.

Yes and No

(Norfolk Daily News)
 Ask a man from Mars, who might be expected to take an unbiased view of earthly affairs, whether we provoked Japan's attack on us, or whether we were forced into the war, and he probably would give a yes and no answer.

The fact is that our course before Pearl Harbor was recognized as dangerous to our peace. Secretary Hull admitted this when he explained that the reason for embargo was put on oil and scrap metal earlier in the Chinese war, was that we could not afford to provoke Japan to attack us in our defenseless position.

So when we did apply the embargoes to Japan we knew we were affronting a powerful enemy who might take his revenge just as the aftermath did at Pearl Harbor. Our demands on Japan in the negotiations that were going on when the sneak attack was made, were such as almost certainly to lead to hostilities.

But that is not the real question. The real question is could we have in honor taken a different course. Could we have placated Japan and thus have avoided war? The answer to this question is most certainly no. Japan had started on a general attack on China which was leading to the invasion of other countries in the Far East. We could not condone this bloody policy. We could do nothing else than recognize that our vital interests were being invaded by the Japanese long before the attack on Pearl Harbor.

So it seems that the only way we could have had peace was to buy it at the sacrifice of our most vital interests. This we could not bring ourselves to do. The administration may be criticized for not recognizing sooner that we must arm and prepare against Japan. Then we would not have been caught disgracefully napping as we were. We would then have had airplanes, modern airfields and ample supplies of guns and munitions in the Philippines with which our troops could have defended the islands and themselves. Our fault was not in affronting Japan, but trying to appease her by neglecting to take defensive precautions.

Old Campaigners Will Be Grounded

(Saturday Evening Post)
 The prospect that this will be a hot campaign year does not seem to extend down to the grassroot level of political contention. Reports from all over the country indicate one of the slimmest turnouts of local candidates in years. Primary elections often present the unusual spectacle of a single aspirant for once-coated courthouse or legislative jobs. In several middle western counties no democrat at all thought it worth while to strive for some of the offices.

Several explanations have been offered for this dearth of participants in America's Number One sport. One is that there is more profit from sticking to business or the farm than serving the public. A more plausible reason is the formidable array of unaccustomed obstacles that a candidate must face this year. Not in the memory of the oldest politician have there been so many difficulties in the way of getting out to see the voters. Tires have to be cherished, gasoline is rationed. Here and there, candidates are reported to be resurrecting the horse and buggy. But there is a diminishing return on this means of transport, because there aren't enough buggies to go around, and the horses are busy on the farm. The big timers can get on the radio, but the county and other lesser office seekers are out of luck. A veteran Indiana politician says about the only hopeful campaigning strategy left open is to resume church-going, attend all the farm sales, lodge meetings and church suppers within range, do some advertising in the newspapers and cultivate the women's vote, which will count more this year than usual.

This scarcity of local candidates and the difficulties they must struggle with may have repercussions on the national campaign, for hotly contested local races help to get out the vote for the higher offices. Theodore Roosevelt, who was not worse than the second-best politician of this century, always wanted to know how much fight was being shown in the battles for sheriff over the country. A party that wasn't pulling in the sticks, he thought, wouldn't amount to sticks as a national phenomenon.

HYMN-SING

All are invited to join in the community "Hymn-Sing" . . . Services are held each Sunday night at 8:30 at the Sermon by the Rev. O. W. Swaback . . . one man playing (in harmony) two cornets at the same time . . . music by the Free Church band.

ALL WELCOME BRING A FRIEND

We Know It

WE KNOW that at times during extreme weather, we cannot give you the quick service we used to give, and the individual attention you would like to receive.

WE KNOW we are doing everything possible with our under-manned organization to keep everyone rolling.

WE KNOW we are sometimes out of parts and someone's badly needed car or truck is tied up and the war effort suffers. Every "bogged down" car or truck congests the traffic load along the line somewhere.

WE KNOW that every man we have is working harder than he ever worked before in an industry that has been declared vitally essential, because America moves on wheels.

BUT — WE KNOW, TOO, that we have done everything possible under the circumstances to do our part and keep our doors open so that your car or truck can keep going through this emergency. We have learned a lot about service during these ration point years — yet, we haven't accomplished what we thought we couldn't do.

AND WE ALSO KNOW that the lessons this war has taught us about service will more than repay our patient customers when victory is ours and we "retool" for peace.

Signal Corps Group In Valuable Service
Sgt. Richard A. Baier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Baier of Wayne, Pvt. Virgil H. Dittman, son of Mrs. Clara M. Dittman of Ponca, and M. Sgt. Willis B. Hoehne, husband of Mrs. Hazel M. Hoehne of Stanwood, are among the men from this vicinity who are in signal supply depot communications school and headquarters in the Mediterranean theatre of operations.
Communication networks, spreading out like a spider web, are the intangible strands that link an army together. In the center of the spider web are the signal corps men who operate, maintain and supply the communication network.
At one of the largest supply headquarters in the Mediterranean theatre, with its multitude of incoming and outgoing messages, many of them dealing with the movements of vast quantities of material or large numbers of troops, these signal corps soldiers are performing one of the outstanding tasks of the war.

Woodard is scarce in the Mediterranean, but in the middle of this enormous signal supply depot—is a "horizontal forest" of telephone poles, 40,000 or more of them, piled up like so many matchsticks and awaiting the pleasure of the eye-sewing signal corps.
Courses "traveling by tri-cycle, jeep, truck and even aircraft, deliver many of the messages on a 24-hour-a-day basis, the same schedule that is followed by all of the vital communication branches. Only those who have seen that part of the world can realize the difficulties that constantly face these drivers.

No Damage Results in Blaze Starting in Gasoline Overflowing Tank

Fire burned for a few minutes in the storm sewer in the block east of Stirtz oil station about mid-morning Thursday. Wayne fire department responded to the fire call and quickly extinguished the flames. No damage resulted.

The fire produced a unique sight with the flames shooting from the storm sewer at 5th and Logan streets.

Like the Israelites, could cross over dry shod and without a bridge. This would bring the stock of the Short Line up to par. A cable under the river between Sioux City and Covington, resulting from a convulsion of nature, might make passage for the line without a bridge. If the cable were a large one like Mammoth cable in Kentucky, it might be used for the bridge and a place to store cars with the balance used for an addition to Sioux City. If lighted by electricity, one might use it for a house. Or, if no cable materialized, the train may be able to come to the bank of the river, plunge in, swim across and continue its journey on the other side. The sea serpent act is still available for taking the train over. Or the newly invented flying machines might come down and make a jump into a Short Line train, lift it up, scot across the river and land it in some vacant lot. In some such way the Short Line may emerge from its present difficulties.

A Switch in Time saved Mine...

I'm not losing face.

I guess you've seen pictures of those real ancient cars that are quite a fad with some prominent people. I'm no big shot, but folks envy me, even at that, for keeping this car like an heirloom. Oh, some say that any good motor oil would largely do the trick, and they're welcome to believe it. I simply say this: Keeping my engine OIL-PLATED ever since I switched to CONOCO Nth motor oil, has helped me beat the curse of engine acids. I got wise that acids from combustion always try to corrode an engine's inside finish, but OIL-PLATING furnishes special protection. A synthetic in Conoco Nth-oil, I've learned, behaves almost like magnetism. This makes the working parts attract OIL-PLATING, and hold on to it. It's fastened as closely as chrome plating to keep metal under cover from acids. That would certainly be a check on corrosion, from the minute you switch to an OIL-PLATED engine. So just get Conoco Nth motor oil.

Library News

Don't forget that the closing hour in the evening during July and August is 8 o'clock.

The motto at the library last week proved very popular. We counted 120 children and then lost count because the little heads bobbed around too fast and the place was so crowded that we couldn't see in all the corners.

The children's department had visitors last Thursday morning. The special education class taught by Dr. Geo. Seck came down to observe and take notes on the projects set up for the children this summer.

New books in the adult department this week are: 'Dely the Tempest' by Sylvia Dainett, 'Toward Zero' by Agatha Christie, 'Office Wife' by Faith Bakwin and 'Anna and the King of Siam' by Margaret Landon. This last mentioned book is a very unusual book. The Siamese government did everything in its power to keep it from being published. Barely if ever has the inner life of an oriental court been laid bare as in this book. The romance and the terror of the harem, the splendor of vast palaces amidst squalor, intrigues and system, cruelties and gentleness, all are here in glittering tapestry. The book grew out of years of research in old Siamese records, private diaries, letters and the actual writings—published 15 years ago.

'Joseph the Provider,' by Thomas Mann will interest those who have followed this series by the famous German writer. This is the concluding volume of what is regarded by many as the greatest creative work produced in the 20th century.

Three Earn Honors At Homewood Camp

Gibdon Magdanz, Strahan Strahans 4-H club member, was selected as one of the seven best campers at the northeast Nebraska district 4-H camp at Homewood park, Wyo., last week. The best campers are selected by state leaders. Their selections are based on the attitude, conduct and helpfulness during the camp period. Dolores Baird of the Victory Workers and Jolly Jills, and Jeanne Milliken of the Jolly Strahers, were two of the four 4-Hers exhibiting the best attitude work at the camp.

Guy N. Davis, Dortha Folmer, state extension 4-H club workers, John Roberts, instructor of physical education at the University of Nebraska, and Julia Cron, student at the University of Nebraska, conducted the educational work at the camp. Miss Cron had charge of the music programs. Mr. Davis and Mr. Roberts were in charge of the safety and first aid work. Mr. Davis also discussed cattle grub, hog cholera, erysipelas, bangs disease and nodular worms, (sheep) control work. He stressed methods in which 4-H members could assist on the farm and in the county with the control of these diseases which were causing a heavy loss of food production in Nebraska and the United States as a whole at this time.

James Kimball, biologist, state game commission, discussed the importance of birds and other forms of wild life in the control of insects on the farm.

Is Ill in Pierre.

H. N. Marso, father of Mrs. Joe Haberer and Mrs. Dan Sherry, is ill with heart trouble in a Pierre, S. D., hospital. At last word he was improving. Mr. Marso spent last winter here with his daughters. Mrs. Sherry and Patricia left Monday last week for Pierre to visit Mr. Marso. They will also see other relatives and will be gone about two weeks. Mr. Sherry and sons are staying with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sherry on the Sherry farm west of town.

Early Weed Control Found Important

Spreading dogbane is quite prominent in many Wayne county small grain fields this summer, according to County Agent Walter B. Harder. The weed, according to some farmers and weed authorities, is more difficult to kill by mowing than the bindweed. Spreading dogbane is often mistaken for a milk weed as it has a milky white sap. However, the leaves are quite narrow and the pods quite long and slim whereas milk weeds found in Wayne county usually have broad leaf and large short seed pod. At the present time the plant of the spreading dogbane is nearly two or three times as tall as the small grain. Many of the plants are blooming. The flowers are white or yellowish white.

The mowing of small grain for hay before the spreading dogbane forms seed is advisable in order to control the spreading of the seed to other parts of the field by seed.

Frequent mowing of the plants may aid in weakening the old plants so that they may be more easily killed by shallow cultivation the same as bindweed. Wayne county farmers should begin the control of the plant before it becomes too abundant, states Agent Harder.

Sgt. Walter Zach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Zach of Pierce, has been reported killed in action in the invasion of France on D-Day.

Bait Is Available Free to Farmers

Grasshopper bait is now available in Wayne county for cutworm, army worm and grasshopper control work, reports Walter R. Harder, county agent. The bait is ready mixed and is available without cost to the farmer although he is expected to furnish his own sacks or containers. County Agent Harder urges farmers to watch their broom fields and alfalfa for damage from cutworm and possibly armyworm. Don B. Wheeler, state extension entomologist, states that weather conditions have been favorable for cutworms and armyworms and damage may be expected if control measures are not taken immediately.

Nebraska laws see to it that there shall be no sale of alcoholic beverages to minors. Violation of this law subjects the tavern keeper to revocation or suspension of his license . . . up to $50 fine for the minor.

This is a good law and this Committee gives it full support. Going still farther, to discourage minors from attempting misrepresentation of age, we provide retailers with "Sworn Statements" which doubtful cases must sign before making a purchase. Signers swear they are 21 years of age or over. The $50 fine for misstatement is emphasized.

This is just one of many services to the public by the brewing industry of Nebraska in the interest of law enforcement. It typifies our desire to keep the retailing of beer on the same high plane as the retailing of any food product.

Control of Steam Helps in Canning

Letting the steam escape from the petcock before processing is one way of insuring success when canning foods with the pressure cooker, according to the extension cooker, according to the extension cooker.

After the steam begins to escape from the petcock, leave it open from 4 to 7 minutes for a cooker holding four quart jars or less. For a cooker holding seven one-quart jars or more, the petcock is left open for 10 minutes. If the steam is not allowed to escape for this length of time, cold air inside the cooker prevents the gauge from registering accurately.

Having the pressure gauge tested regularly is another precaution for successful canning with the pressure cooker. Extension circular 11-218 gives additional suggestions on the use of the pressure cooker.

After having processed the food in the canner its required time, do not let the steam escape too fast. Only open the steam valve part way. Rapid expelling of steam may result in poorly canned foods.

Congress

As seen by EARL STEFAN

Washington, D. C. June 23, 1944

The veterans' GI bill passed both houses without a dissenting vote and has been approved by the president. Its estimated ultimate cost varies from $3 billion to $6 billion. The costs will be spread over several years as demobilization proceeds, so that any accurate estimate of an annual expenditure is impossible. It will be independent of direct war activities and appropriations, and is intended as the nation's assurance to the veterans that their immediate future after the close of hostilities will be on a plane worthy of their victorious endeavors in this world conflict.

The law provides funds for continuing the education of those whose training has been interfered with by their war service. Those under 24 at the time of their induction will be presumed to have been in training when inducted and older veterans may prove their eligibility under the educational section. An allowance of $50 per month for single men and $75 per month for married men will be made to those again taking up their educational training, plus $500 for their tuition. The course of instruction may run for not over four years, and may include mechanical, agricultural, or other training, as well as academic courses. This section is based on a service of not less than 90 days.

To help veterans purchase homes for farms, government-guaranteed loans from private or public lending agencies at not more than 4 percent interest will be granted. The amount assured by the government will be not less than 50 percent of the loan, limited to $2,000 for principal.

To insure veterans against loss of employment in the post-war period, each veteran will be allowed employment insured at the rate of $22 weekly for 52 weeks within the two-year period after his discharge. The bill also provides a special job finding agency for veterans to assist them in locating jobs upon their return from the service. The administration of such an employment agency will be placed in the chief of the selective service, the veterans administration, and the chairman of the war manpower commission.

The matter of hospitalization for returned veterans in the post-war period also is provided for in the measure. The government now has many hospitals throughout the country, devoted to the care of those who have been sent back from the war fronts because of injuries or illness. These hospital facilities will also become available to discharged veterans after the war upon the same general plans as have been in operation for the disabled veterans of the first World War. The details of the administration of the G. I. bill have yet to be worked out. It is likely that from time to time further legislation may be necessary, but the present measure outlines the general program, and congress will be called upon to respond as fully as any occasion or any situation in the future may warrant. The G. I. bill is the first broad proposal to come before congress for the post-war period. Those in our armed forces are doing a heroic work with wonderful results, and they are properly entitled to first consideration now and when victory finally is accomplished by them.

Balancing agricultural production to the demands of this war period is proving more difficult because the farmers are doing all that the government requests—and then even more, notwithstanding drawbacks and difficulties. A year ago more eggs and poultry were demanded to feed our armies, the civilian population, and supply our allies in the war. Now comes the war food administration asking people to buy more eggs and eat more eggs to help relieve the unprecedented surpluses. It states that last week there were about one million cases nearly 30 million dozen of eggs which were spoiling because there are not sufficient storage facilities for them. The egg drying plants are running to capacity, and the surplus of dried-egg powder is accumulating. Thousands of carloads of eggs are being made into livestock foods, and some of the surplus eggs that have spoiled or are spoiling have been turned over to fertilizer plants to be mixed with commercial fertilizers. So instead of rationing or shortening egg supply, the surplus problem mounts daily as the hens keep busy. It may not be so particularly patriotic to "eat more eggs," but there are few foods which are more nourishing, especially for children. Just a few more eggs in every contains living organisms that are infectious to other livestock and human beings. Its administration is restricted to certain designated and approved veterinarians, Dr. Spencer advises.

Farmers who have had swine erysipelas on their places in the past, or who have reason to suspect its presence now, should lose no time in making arrangements for the immunization of their herds. Letting the infection run its course is something that cannot be afforded, either by individual growers or by the nation.

Returning Soldiers to the Land?

(Omaha Journal-Stockman)

It is to be doubted that returning soldiers will flock to the land in the absence of hard times after the war. If jobs should be scarce, then a trek to the land may be expected. People always turn to the land when it becomes difficult to make a living in town.

But the new "GI Bill of Rights" makes some provision for farm purchase, and rightly so. Under this bill a qualified veteran will be able to get the veterans' administration to arrange for a government-guaranteed loan for buying a farm. Such loans also may be obtained by a veteran to pay off back taxes or delinquent debts on property. The government will guarantee 50 percent of the loan up to $2,000 and will pay the first year's interest on the part of the loan that it guarantees. Thus, a veteran can borrow up to $4,000, with the government standing behind half of it.

These loans can be made by a bank, loan association or any other lending agency, including an individual or friend of the veteran. A veteran who obtains such a loan would have to satisfy the lender as to collateral on his share. But the farm could be used as collateral. Interest on these loans cannot exceed 4 percent, and they must be repaid in full within 20 years. In addition, the government will guarantee fully a secondary loan up to 20 percent of the cost of the property. But the total amount guaranteed by the government in both loans cannot exceed $2,000. This provision makes it possible for veterans to get cash for original down payments. Interest on such secondary loans can run up to 5 percent. Veterans have until two years after the war or two years after their discharge (whichever is later) to take advantage of the loan opportunities. But a veteran who wants to buy a farm, must show that he knows something about farming and is likely to make a success of the undertaking.

Loans on the same basis are available for veterans who want to buy homes.

Medal for Ma? (Omaha Journal-Stockman)

An Iowa stockman who proposes that medals be given to the farm women of the nation for the contribution they are making to the war effort knows whereof he speaks. By and large, farmers' wives and daughters never have lived a life of ease. But such idle hours and pleasures as they did allow themselves in normal times have been given up in favor of the more important job of helping dad and the boys, or maybe just dad alone, do the plowing, the seeding, the haying, the harvesting, the cornshucking, the milking, and all the other tasks that make up this complex thing known as livestock farming.

As stories which have appeared in this paper attest, women on farms are a pinch-hitting for the "hard man" in goodness knows how many cases, in addition to carrying out their usual duties of keeping the home and raising the family. They and the smaller children, who used to be thought too small to do much real work, undoubtedly are the answer to the miraculous job of production that was done in 1943, and in an even larger way, they will deserve a big share of the credit for whatever production record harassed farmers are able to make in this backward season.

Ask them about it, and they'll probably tell you to forget the medals, since they are only doing what has to be done. But, after all, isn't that the stuff of which, most heroes—and heroines—are made, whether the field be in the battle area or on a prosaic corn belt farm? We second the motion.

Swine Erysipelas Increasing. (Omaha Journal-Stockman)

Cholera is still rightfully rated as public enemy number 1 by swine producers, but in this territory, at least, another disease appears to be gaining in the race for that doubtful honor. It is swine erysipelas.

Dr. W. T. Spencer, regional manager at Omaha for the National Livestock Loss Prevention board has information that more hog carcasses have been condemned in government-inspected packing houses in the last 60 days because of this ailment than for the full two years previous to that time.

As in the case of cholera, the only hope that farmers have of combating the disease is through a form of vaccination which, while still regarded as in the experimental stage, has been quite successful. Unlike cholera immunization treatment, which according to universal recommendation, should be administered around wearing time, pigs on farms where erysipelas has appeared in recent years should be treated as soon as possible after birth.

Because the culture used in vaccinating against swine erysipelas

Farm and Land Prices.

(Omaha Journal-Stockman)

Rising farm land prices are the cause of a good deal of concern in some quarters, largely out of memory of what happened before, when so many farmers were ruined financially, and lost title to their land. No one wants to see that happen again, so there are warnings upon warnings, though in some vital respects conditions are radically different now. But at that there may be plenty of danger in what is developing.

Leonard A. Salter, Jr., of the University of Wisconsin, observes that the volume of farm land transactions is increasing at a phenomenal rate; the price of farm land is moving faster than in the early years of the land boom of the last war period; farms are being bought under an increasing proportion of debt; much of the indebtedness is under contract terms that must be branded as dangerous and archaic.

Another popping land boom, he feels, would result in: "Crop controls, price guarantees, price floors, artificial trade barriers, restrictions, licenses, market agreements, stamp plans, moratoria, cheap credit, subsidies, grants-in-aid, arbitrations and readjustments—all these regulatory devices and many more will not counter-balance the consequences of an unchecked land boom."

How much has land advanced? On the basis of a survey, the American Bankers' association says that in 13 leading farm states the price of land has risen "more than 50 percent" above normal, which is regarded as "somewhat disturbing." Walter B. Garver, agricultural economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, has made a banker inquiry in the Seventh Federal Reserve district, which takes in Iowa, Michigan, and the best farming parts of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, and the country bankers tell him that the land market is "quiet to moderately active." The larger share of purchases were found made by two classes—city investors and former farm tenants. A highly significant fact was that speculative buying was found to average only 6 percent for the district. That doesn't sound alarming, when comparison is made with what happened before, with shifting membership of some farms almost as frequent as changes in the moon.

Some idea of what is meant by "normal values" appears in this report, which says: "Values per acre were reported by the bankers of the district to be, in their judgment, a little over $150 for the 'better' land. The same quality of land has, they believe, a 'normal' value (long-time earning value) of approximately $100 per acre. This may be interpreted as saying in effect that present values as reflected by current sales prices of better lands are in the opinion of bankers about 50 per cent above what they consider to be the normal value of these lands."

Several land price regulatory proposals have appeared, but nothing of that sort has made seem to rest with farmers themselves and loaning agencies. If the bankers and others concerned will stick to "normal" values in making loans, such loans should prove reasonably safe, for both borrowers and lenders. That may be rather too much to expect. But if farmers generally will refuse to become over-enthusiastic, refusing to buy when the price appears inflated, and buying only for cash or when the down payment is large enough for reasonable safety, it would not appear that farmer buyers are likely to meet disaster. As for the city buyers, let them pay whatever they want to pay, only don't follow their lead. And even they may not be hurt too much, for their land investment will never be entirely dissipated, while their other forms of investment might be.

Maybe we don't get as excited as we should be over what is going on in the land market. The reason we don't is that the farmer has his own adequate protection, if he will just use his head and take advantage of it.

Too Much Affection. (Saturday Evening Post)

The communist party has had itself done over as the communist political association. At the moment, its major activity appears to be continuous and public kissing of the new deal. Some new dealers are not sure that they care for so much public affection.
