No Substitute For Abundance
TOUCHING UNWISE attempts to return to the prewar "economy of scarcity," the Omaha Journal-Stockman quotes O. B. Jenness, agricultural economist of the University of Minnesota, who says among other things: "No government price support program will help the agriculture of the corn belt as much as active production and a high level of production in non-agricultural lines. There is no substitute for production. We live by it, not by its lack. The future levels of living which Americans will have, depend on how fully we employ our productive resources for the satisfaction of human needs and wants." The Journal-Stockman comments: "Unfortunately, not all economists agree in their prosperity theories. Equally unfortunately, the backers of the 'scarcity' idea were in the saddle for several years before the war came along. But it is encouraging to know that there are still those who argue that true prosperity lies in the possession of an abundance of commodities that are essential to comfortable living. Farmers have felt that way about it all the time, and they probably were never less happy than in those days when they were 'blowing under' their corn and cotton and wheat and killing off little pigs to give the scarcity boys a chance to test their theories."

America's Ambition
AMERICA wants peace and orderly self-government which it would, if it could, extend to all nations as a natural right. After World War I, forces of the United States came home in the belief that the world had been made safe for democracy. This country settled down to peaceful pursuits, little thinking another more terrible world conflagration was in prospect. Things were done and left undone that might have prevented it.

This slumbering giant did not realize what was going on in the minds and in the arsenals of designing subjugators. Therefore, it was ill prepared when the storm of conflict broke. But the slumbering giant was soon aroused, and the fires of resentment were soon burning with unprecedented intensity. Results are now showing on all battle fronts.

Not again will the United States allow confidence in foreign diplomats or emotions of brotherly love keep it from due preparation to meet possible aggression.

Following the Yalta conference President Roosevelt had a meeting with three royal bosses, King Farouk of Egypt, Haile Selassie of Ethiopia and Ibn Saud of Arabia. These three reflect the ignorance and superstitions of ancient but backward civilizations. Altruism is wholly outside the realm of their thinking, and their diplomacy is based on cunningly devised schemes to get the most for the least. In looking at their pictures and contemplating their benighted customs, we conclude that infinite patience is necessary in dealing with them.

Life magazine points out that if Wallace could succeed in guaranteeing 60,000-000 jobs, as pledged, he would be doing what no president ever did. With all his spending of federal money during depression years, President Roosevelt failed in expected job-finding attempts. Experiments in wiping out idleness were disappointing until the war came. Under proper encouragement private industry can successfully meet reasonable labor demands and cause healthy and satisfactory relationship between employer and employee.

Former Governor Charles W. Bryan who died at his home in Lincoln early Sunday, aged 78, was prominent in democratic politics for many years. He served as mayor of Lincoln and governor of the state. He was the vice presidential nominee of the democratic party in 1924. He was closely associated with his famous brother, the late W. J. Bryan, in political and professional activities. Tributes from numerous officials and prominent citizens attested to the high respect in which he was held.

Raising a family from small earnings furnishes a wonderful thrill. Supplying things needed and just steering clear of financial breakers keep one up on his toes and impart deep sense of satisfaction over appreciation expressed. Children who expect little, are delighted over the little they receive. Necessities hard to pay for arouse extra pride in possession. Maneuvering to get by is a powerful stimulant. There are rich compensations in the need to work and plan and save.

Every weekly rural newspaper coming to the Herald reports neighborhood boys in the armed service either missing or killed in action. There are also gripping fears of what may happen in the battles of Europe or the far Pacific. With the toll of death and the dread felt for those in danger, who can go along as usual? What a relief when peace returns, firing ceases and suspense ends!

A bill has been introduced in the unicameral to require school boards in towns over 1,000 population to publish their proceedings. Smaller centers have annual meetings which, it is believed, make other means of publicity unnecessary. School patrons deserve to be kept apprised of official acts and current expenditures. Passing the pending bill would be a step in that direction.

In line with defense transportation regulations no state conventions will be held in Nebraska this year. In lieu of big gatherings, involving long-distance travel, district meetings will be permissible and attract unusual attention. These will serve in considerable measure to afford personal contacts and opportunities to exchange ideas.

The threatened coal miners' strike on order of beetle-browed John L. Lewis, will likely speed the proposed work or fight bill now in congress. Specters of soldiers who gave their lives to safeguard human freedom, should haunt those who would quit work and reduce necessary army supplies.

Congress
A B-25 bomber from a southern base to Mitchell field. He is the son of M. C. Phillips of Leigh and has been training American and British pilots for several years. Recently he has been ferrying ships.

The house passed the bill making regular appropriations for the post office and treasury departments in nine minutes' time on a voice vote. The bill carries more than a billion dollars. The committee on appropriations made substantial cuts in the budget estimates.

Educators who have come to Washington to lobby for the bill to give federal aid to education, say that there are 2,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 16, not attending school in the United States.

The house passed a bill authorizing 231 rivers and harbors projects throughout the country. If and when these projects are completed, the cost would be over 381 million dollars. A project for the improvement of the Missouri river from Sioux City to its mouth is included in the bill. The cost of the Missouri river project would be $6,000,000. The projects are for the post-war period and the Missouri river item is closely related to the Missouri river flood control legislation recently passed by congress.

The rivers and harbors bill is an omnibus bill and contains 231 separate bills. If the bills were not placed in an omnibus measure, congress would have had to act on 231 separate bills.

George Johnson, head of the alcohol plant at Omaha, has been in Washington seeking priorities on material to facilitate corn oil extracting activities at the Omaha plant. He told members of the Nebraska delegation that the plant produces 70,000 gallons of industrial alcohol daily. About 6 million dollars of federal money are invested in the Omaha plant. When it may no longer be a necessary war plant, effort will be made to keep it in operation and out of the hands of certain monopolies which are now seeking the liquidation of our synthetic rubber plants and auxiliary plants. Mr. Johnson told Nebraska members that the plant officials are all the while seeking new uses for farm crops.

FOR CIVILIZATION.

In an article in a current magazine, Dr. Elton Trueblood, professor of the philosophy of religion in Stanford university, strongly upholds religion and the church as vital to the wholesome development of our civilization. He points out that the Nazi creed is wholly materialistic, basing its mastery on use of ruthlessly exercised force. It must be met by genuine spiritual revival. As the author suggests, winning the war against alien enemies is not enough. It must be followed by fortified Christian faith and practice. The only way we can overcome opposition to our Christian civilization is to get behind Christian leadership and live accordingly. Dr. Trueblood says in conclusion: "What, in historical experience has most often been able to do this? It is that often-criticized organization we call the church. Without it we might long ago have been submerged. With it we may yet save civilization. The rock on which the church is built often appears to be weather-beaten rubble, because it is all mixed with human frailty, but the lesson of history is a continual verification of the judgment that the gates of hell cannot prevail against it."

police in Washington. Frequently he calls in servicemen known to him to be from the Cornhusker state, for visits about Nebraska. Recently he called in one Nebraskan who suspected a reprimand from the commanding officer only to learn that the colonel merely wanted to ask about Nebraska and Nebraska people.

The president has approved the George bill to divorce the major federal lending agencies from the department of commerce. It is believed that Jesse Jones will not be the new independent federal loan administrator. Fred Vinson, economic stabilizer, and Assistant Secretary of State Wm. L. Clayton are mentioned in connection with that post. The approval of the George bill has apparently cleared the way for confirmation of Henry Wallace for secretary of commerce.

Bill Otto, secretary-treasurer of the national organization of post office clerks, is a Nebraskan. He is one of the most popular representatives of postal employees in Washington. He expects to visit Nebraska this year.

An agricultural census costing 13 million dollars is now being taken. The operation requires about 40,000 enumerators and other special employees. The latitude of the census is now asking for another 10 million dollars to employ about 16,000 additional workers to take a sample census of unemployment and gather information about the shift in population. This appropriation request is meeting opposition from the minority members of the committee on appropriations.

The house passed the first deficiency appropriation bill for 1945 carrying more than a billion and a half dollars. Other deficiency bills are scheduled during the year. The first bill provides funds for the navy, the war department, the war manpower commission, the public roads administration, veterans' administration, the office of price administration, the department of state, and many other federal agencies. The bill contains money for 700 additional housing units at the navy depot at Hastings, Neb., and some additional housing facilities at the army air base at Kearney. Both establishments are expected to employ additional civilian employees. Deficiency bills are passed because departments "guessed" wrong when making regular estimates.

The army has a plan according to which there will be initial de-

CONTRAST.
A recent editorial in the Shreveport, La., Times contrasted the stories that appeared on its first page. Among them were big headlines announcing invasion of the island of Iwo Jima by the dauntless American marines. On the same page was a story from Detroit's big Chrysler plant where 14,000 men refused to comply with an order issued by the war labor board and went out on a strike. The union responsible for this suspended war production is a branch of the CIO. The editor notes the "Angels of Bataan" who had stuck to their task until they were captured and made prisoners by enemy Japs, and who now, after three years of prison misery, are ready to return to finish the job. Strikers are reminded of the sacrifices of men and women in the grim business of war, and are asked to forget petty disagreements and speed up rather than retard production. Comments the Times editor: "There is inspiration in this picture, inspiration for editorials which spring wordless from the heart for songs and sagas, poems and epics, all built on the theme: 'These are our men, our marines, our Americans.' We hope that the men of Detroit, who quit work because of production schedules too fast to meet their inclinations, will see it."

The war department notified the Third district office that Chas. M. No word has yet been received regarding Leo Cotterman, the son of Chas. M. Cotterman.

The heated controversy over the servicemen's ballot seems to have been resolved emphatically on the side of those who insisted upon and made possible the use of the full ballot instead of the bob-tailed federal ballot which would have restricted absentee voters in the armed services to exercising choices among candidates for the office of president, vice president, United States senator, and United States representative in congress.

Under the law which enabled absentee voters in the armed services to utilize the full length ballot of their respective states or the so-called federal ballot, 2,800,000 servicemen's votes were cast in the 1944 general election. Of this number 2,700,000 were state ballots and only 100,000 were federal ballots. In other words, 97.8 per cent of absentee voting servicemen chose the regular state ballots and 2.2 per cent desired use of the bob-tailed ballot.

LEGISLATIVE LETTER

The legislature has been in session long enough to judge many important bills up for consideration.

L. B. 115 providing for an additional six million dollars to the two million raised after World War I will likely be passed very soon. The additional funds will be raised at the rate of one million each year for six years by an annual levy. One the income will be used to aid veterans as it will be a trust fund set up by the state. It is much better to raise this trust fund now in prosperous times than to make a biennial appropriation from tax funds for the next 30 years.

L. B. 120 providing for a retirement system for Nebraska teachers is of state-wide importance. It will be strenuously debated as some members of the legislature are not in favor of pensions for any class, at any time, in any amount. It provides adequate security for teachers based on their length of service and remuneration to which both the teachers and the state contribute. It will tend to assure teachers security and tenure if they continue to teach in Nebraska. Many states have had a teacher retirement system for years. We will summarize the 62 sections of the bill when it comes up for discussion.

construction. A one cent raise will result in a loss of revenue from counties bordering on neighboring states which have a lower gas tax than Nebraska. The trucking industry urges that it is bearing an undue heavy burden of taxation, increased operating costs coupled with decreased income in proportion, and is against the bill. Opponents of the one cent gas tax increase urge that the necessary money should be obtained from other sources.

L. B. 185 raising the fee for motor vehicle drivers' licenses from 75 cents to $2 in order to provide among other things for a two-way radio system for the state highway patrol was amended to reduce the license to $1. There is now $105,000 in this fund, sufficient to install a two-way radio system. It was stated on the floor that a complete system could have been installed two years ago at a cost of $34,000. It would seem that it might be well to wait until costs have decreased for this equipment and considerable money could be saved for the state. It would also appear that the automobile driver should not bear all the cost of exercising a police power of the state. A fee of $8 for drivers' licenses appears to be as high as we should go, unless a further showing be made by those who favor a higher license fee.

L. B. 336, the sales tax of 2 percent was indefinitely postponed by a unanimous vote of the revenue committee. The merits of the bill were ably presented by the proponents and strenuously opposed by the opponents. Many legislators are of the opinion that Nebraska is not ready for a sales tax. They argue that if a real attempt were made to place all property, especially intangible property on the tax rolls, we would have plenty of money and tax rates would be materially lowered. A legislative resolution has been introduced requiring a thorough-going study of our entire tax structure and system for consideration by the next legislature. There may be an attempt to raise this bill out of committee this week by the proponents of the bill for discussion by the legislature as a whole.

Hearings before the appropriations committee of which your senator is a member and secretary, on the needs of various institutions and departments, are about finished. The committee will then build the appropriations bill in final form and hopes to complete the work by April 1. Members have lately been visiting out-state institutions to investigate needs first hand. Much new equipment has been asked for and is probably needed. However, it is a question whether the same should be immediately purchased at present high costs. A delay in purchase might save the state considerable money. Only emergency needs must be taken care of. The war has complicated our problems greatly. Many institutions are not full to capacity now and whether this condition will continue for another year is a question. The appropriations committee is carefully considering these problems and hopes to approach its record of two years ago when overall appropriations were reduced approximately one-eighth. It will endeavor to adequately provide for the institutions and departments but will not be over-generous. Wages continue to rise and also to some extent the cost of supplies and materials.

There are more than 25 salary raise bills in the legislature and all have been combined in one or two bills and will be considered on their merits. Some raises seem justified considering the times. But if unfavorable years should come to Nebraska, will the legislature have the courage to reduce salaries accordingly? We will detail the raises when they come up for consideration.

There is a possibility that there may be no extended discussion on public power questions as in the last session. Daylight saving time will soon be considered. The state tree bill, the hackberry vs. cottonwood, has aroused state-wide interest but many consider it "much ado about nothing." There are many more important bills to be considered. Salaries of district judges were raised $1,000 yearly and salaries of supreme court judges, now $7,500 yearly, were left unchanged and will doubtless pass on final reading. The legislative session will probably continue until May 15.

Helps in Manila Rescue

Bronze Star Is Earned by Soldier Aiding at Camp
North of Manila.

Pfc. John V. Pearson is one of the 121 men of the 6th ranger battalion taking part in the rescue of Americans and others held as Japanese prisoners at Cabanatuan camp north of Manila in the Philippines and earned a bronze star for bravery. The young man is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Bilger Pearson of this vicinity.

guerrillas were entrusted with the mission which was commanded by Lt. Col. Henry A. Mucci. Moving from our lines with air cover they penetrated 25 miles into enemy-held territory and struck under cover of darkness. The mission was brilliantly successful. The Japanese guards were completely surprised and were annihilated. As the rescue column with the liberated prisoners withdrew, it was continuously attacked by Japanese columns supported by tanks. In the bitter fight which resulted a total of 523 enemy were killed and 12 tanks destroyed. Our own losses were 27 killed and three wounded.

Decision Is Upheld
By Supreme Court

Judgment of the district court was upheld by the state supreme court in the land mortgage foreclosure action of Helen Wendt vs. Ima Elming Jones. Mrs. Wendt died while the farm was in process of foreclosure. Ima Elming Jones obtained a decree of foreclosure and sold the place to Louis Krel after Mrs. Wendt's death. The question was raised as to whether failure to serve notice of revivor upon the minors, the children of Mrs. Wendt, made the sale void.

ANIMALS ARE SHOT BY USING PLANES

Two dozen coyotes and four red foxes have been shot recently by Irwin Erxleben, R. G. Fuelberth, John Gustafson and others in this vicinity. The men have flown airplanes on their hunts. When they see one of these animals they swoop down to within about 20 feet of the ground and use a shotgun. One coyote was shot at the south edge of Wainside. Any farmer knowing of coyotes that are around may notify the Wayne airport and the men will hunt them.

Former Resident Of Wayne Passes

Funeral rites were held at Stanton Sunday last week. Mr. DeWitt was a member of the Masonic lodge in Wayne.

Officer Serves in Battle

Lt. Melvin Sabs Is with Division of Artillery
Holding Bastogne.

One of the epic battles of World War II is that of Bastogne, where greatly outnumbered and poorly supplied Americans held out against a powerful Nazi outfit. Lt. Melvin Sabs of Wayne, is a field artillery officer in the 28th division, which made a valiant stand when Marshal Karl von Rundstedt began his gamble for victory by hurling five crack divisions across the Our river into Luxembourg against a thinly-held line covered by the 28th.

story of how the 28th halted the Nazis. Rundstedt aimed to reach Sedan and the Meuse, perhaps Antwerp, and to split allied armies in his desperate attempt to gain a quick victory. These Americans, some hidden in the anonymity of death, bore the brunt of the initial Nazi assault December 16. They kept slugging until they fell in their tracks or staggered and crawled through encircling enemy lines to regroup and fight again. "The story begins with an American lieutenant speaking over a radio phone to a major. He is weeping and every bitter sob is communicated back to his commanding officer. We're down to our last grenades. We've blown up everything there is, except the radio. It goes next. I don't mind dying. I don't mind taking a beating, but we'll never give up."
