Penalizing Cooperation IT is surprising to learn that Communist Earl Browder has been forced to retire from leadership in the communist party in this country because, as reported, he wanted to cooperate with capital. It seems he was not raw and wild enough to suit the radical majority. Therefore, he was not deemed fitted to lead in class warfare. Perhaps he had learned to be too tolerant of those who supply the capital and executive brains to be trusted to fight them.

A copy of the International Teamster, edited by Daniel J. Tobin, flaming president of the teamster organization, bears additional evidence of hatred cultivated against employers. In one of his contributions to the official magazine, Tobin remarks: "I am not afraid of the communists taking over control unless the employers drive the masses of God-fearing workers into the ranks of the communists." Is he "afraid," or is he encouraging that very thing?

There are no doubt some unreasonable industrialists, but it must be granted that nothing known to the world surpasses their record of production despite numerous strikes. No working group anywhere has fared better or enjoyed a higher standard of living. Some union radicals appear determined to fatten on the strength of capital and genius of management, and at the same time to force control of plants and policies. They want authority without responsibility. Attempts to injure sources of employment do not harmonize with wholesome democratic processes.

If Browder urges closer cooperation between capital and labor, he is, for a change, on the right track. That may be done with the least likelihood of anyone forfeiting deserved rights.

The public is so accustomed to gloomy prognostications in the field of civilian food supply that the Washington report the first of the week giving promise of greater abundance due largely to Secretary of Agriculture Anderson's planning, is highly refreshing. Secretary Anderson who was recently installed in the agriculture department with enlarged responsibilities, has made a careful survey of conditions, and is now able to announce a let-up in restrictions. Practical planning and coordination of official activities will solve many problems and lessen many hardships.

Senator Kenneth Wherry is an irritant to fellow-senators who do not want to be questioned or stepped on. At a recent committee hearing on involved rationing problems, Senator Allen Ellender of Louisiana, squirming under the Nebraskan's barbed inquiries, got mad and walked out, whining: "Wherry is just trying to heckle and embarrass the administration." Growing value of the junior senator lies in considerable measure in his ability and determination to serve the public regardless of superficial senatorial dignity.

This is the period when Saturday night's forum draws its largest crowds and remains animated longest after the sun has retired. Every live subject is discussed, and sojourners are refreshed by exchange of opinions. The European war over and dangers in that area minimized, the nervous tension has greatly decreased over what it was a year ago. Still further relief will be felt when Japan folds up. Main street is wonderfully satisfying in keeping up friendships and absorbing the other fellow's experiences.

The last of this month will see the beginning of a series of county fairs, and with good exhibits and plenty of entertainment, as promised, they should and doubtless will draw large crowds and pan out successfully in all respects. People have a surplus of cash and need a few days' recreation after grinding along with inadequate help. County fairs this year have an abundance to offer, and they will deserve the enlarged patronage they are reasonably certain to receive.

Columnist Louis Bromfield does not like the careless way the word "liberal" is used. He thinks it does not properly apply to the new deal's "do-gooders" for twelve years. He says he would seek a new word to "designate men and women of the stature of Jefferson, Wilson and Cleveland." And it was Cleveland who said the people were to support the government, not the government to support the people.

J. S. Woodson, able editorial writer for the Sioux City Journal, is also an experienced horticulturist, as evidenced by his comments on that city's gardens this year. He reports vegetables not up to standard. They panned out better in 1944. Editor Woodson blames too cool weather in May and June. Without desire to excite envy we venture to suggest that Wayne gardens are richer and more productive this year.

Anyway, we do not like the looks of victorious Clement Attlee as well as those of defeated Winston Churchill. We note with approval Attlee's high forehead, but we are disturbed by his little mustache and by the way his ears curl inward.

Picnics, aggravated by jiggers and mosquitoes, and vacations with sundry inconveniences, are particularly valuable in the relief felt when one returns home.

Radio spellers may pronounce tangled Japs names incorrectly without fear of being questioned because no one knows.

If one wants to have something well circulated, he should whisper it confidentially.

PARANOIACS.

The Norfolk Daily News refers to top ranking nazis like Hitler, Goebbels, Goering and others as paranoiacs who, parading themselves as great leaders, were blindly followed by unthinking groups. The News mentions that the United States is sometimes annoyed by the appearance of a dangerous paranoiac, but that he does not last long. "We don't hell our paranoiacs, nor elevate them to places where their bloody ambitions can work destruction on us and the world," says the News. "That is because democracy has worked its wonders on our minds. We are a nation of individuals, each making up his own mind and following his own course." The News offers this concluding observation: "Psychologists see nothing unusual in a nation producing the freakish minds that headed the Nazi party. What they find strange is a nation that allows itself to be led to the abyss by such maladjusted individuals."

COMMUNISM.

While it is generally granted in self-determining countries that the majority should rule, it is permissible for free people to disagree over conflicting ideologies. Commenting on an article by Dr. Harold J. Laski who favors Russia's planned economy, the Saturday Evening Post says in part: "If the misinformation in Dr. Laski's article stopped with the fellow-travelers, there would be no point in commenting on it. Unfortunately the notion that private enterprise merely makes the rich richer and the poor poorer, whereas communism raises the status of the common man, has been accepted by millions who are not fellow-travelers at all. The truth is that the only system which has even partially succeeded in making the benefits of modern industrial technology available to the common man is our own despised capitalist system. On the other hand, the system which deliberately favors the few in distributing the proceeds of industrial progress is the communist system as practiced in soviet Russia." The Post says Arthur Koestler, a long-time observer of the soviet system, "watched people starve in the Ukraine while the local papers were extolling the wonders of the soviet agricultural system." The Post concludes: "The tragedy is that so many people of intelligence and influence are willing to urge blind acceptance of the communist solution without knowing how it really works in Russia."

Hot and Humid Weather Is Giving Crop in Area Needed Boost.

A few more days of hot weather and one good rain will put Nebraska corn in shape for a bumper crop, according to Dr. T. A. Kieselbach, professor of agronomy at the University of Nebraska. The educator says that not more than 10 to 15 per cent of the crop will fail to mature. The state has already produced a record wheat crop.

Dr. Kieselbach reports that corn has been growing at the rate of three inches a day during the made-to-order hot and moist weather. Under such conditions the corn grows twice as fast as on cool days.

The corn specialist looks for a full yield from the early corn. It may be necessary to delay corn picking a few days until the corn dries, the educator thinks.

Corn usually is in tassel the first of August and ripens about seven weeks later. The early corn, Dr. Kieselbach believes, will ripen about October 1.

PVT. LEROY LUNDAHL IS IN PHILIPPINES

In the Philippines July 22, Pvt. LeRoy Lundaahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Lundaahl of Wakefield, writes as follows:

"Well it's Sunday morning over here in the Philippines. It's about 9 o'clock here which is about 9 Saturday night in good old Nebraska. I'm dressed up in my sun tans and am going to church when it's time.

"No more changing address now. I'm assigned to the 1st cavalry. So when you hear in the news of the 1st cavalry's doing anything, that's our outfit. And if Japan doesn't surrender, it won't be too long before you'll hear about it either. I'm glad I got in the mortar platoon.

"Gordon Bard went to the 43rd division and I don't know where Ekberg went. Anyway we got split up. I've already made new friends so I like it swell here. Our arm patch is yellow with a horse head. If you got half the rain here that we get here you'd have to make the husking bed eight feet long and six feet wider to take care of the corn. Over here they raise rice, sweet corn and peanuts, all in the same field. The corn is just about knee high now. The people farm with oxen. A wooden plow, a hoe and rakes make up their equipment. It sure is slow work. The women work and the men go along to see that they do it. Quite the life for the men!"

Lane says he and five other men searched many hours in the debris attempting to recover bodies in the hope that some persons might be buried but still alive in the wreckage. He says he has a better idea now of how Londoners searched through debris after the blitz air raids.

Earns Bronze Star By Acts of Heroism

Pfc. Dale Powers who distinguished himself by heroism on the 1st day of April, 1945, in Germany, has been awarded the bronze star. The young man, who is in the field artillery, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Powers of Wayne.

"The reconnaissance party of headquarters battery of which Pfc. Powers was a member was ambushed by enemy troops while caught under a cross fire of enemy machine guns. He ran across the field of fire to obtain a bazooka from a vehicle exposed to enemy fire. He obtained a firing position by exposing himself once again and after finding the mechanism of the bazooka at fault engaged the enemy with small arms fire, causing several casualties. Seeing the enemy was dug in too deeply for small arms fire, he once again exposed himself to report the enemy's positions to a tank passing by. He then again engaged the enemy with small arms fire. His actions were brave and heroic and in the finest traditions of the military service."

Pfc. Powers, who has been overseas for some months, is now in France.

Three Campaigns Credited to Group

correspondent's description of his experience in a Chinese army bath house. Being very dirty after a jeep drive on the Burma road, the writer felt it necessary to have a hot bath at any cost. He paid for it dearly as he was forced into a vast stone bath filled with slimy, grey-green colored water. A sullen looking bath attendant then proceeded to "scrape" the dirt off with a large wet cloth. The victim says he felt several layers of epidermis came off with the dirt. He was reminded of men who use a blow torch to peel the old paint off wooden houses.

Statute of Liberty Prompts Tears and Thrills for Boys

"Tears came to the eyes of many boys and shivers went down my back at the sight of the Statue of Liberty," according to Capt. Chas. Wehrer of Norfolk, Wayne college graduate, who is home after four and a half years with the 15th air force, 27 months of the time being spent in north Africa and Italy. At the sight of the statue in New York harbor last week the captain says, "We all saluted and it was quiet all over the ship. A band gave us a great welcome and when we got off the boat we kissed the dock. We were met by Red Cross ladies who gave us milk, which we gobbled up. I still don't realize yet I'm back in the states.

"Little kids, well-dressed smiling people, neon lights, malted milks, steak dinners, soda fountains, boxes of popcorn, people you know, hot towels in the barber shops, automobiles, trains and ball games. The officer deplores the fact that many good soldiers have been ruined when they have learned that their wives are divorcing them. "When they hear about being divorced they don't care what happens to them." Capt. Wehrer has helped at least two couples become reunited.

When the war is over the men just want to forget it, be with their loved ones and return to civilian pursuits, Capt. Wehrer adds.

A correspondent, interviewing the couple was entertained at tea at guerilla headquarters. "Nothing is perfect without our women," the young general is quoted as saying.

"I shouldn't have shot him," said the member of the 24th division, "he had only one roll of caps left. But how was I to know? He charged right out of the jungle." Also on the humorous side is a

Travels One Mile In a Long Period

Population of Oregon Town Doubles Over Night in One Transaction.

Here's a little tortoise which isn't in a hurry to go places. Louis Beall, Ray E. Warner and Harvey E. Chalacombe, while picnicking on Macbubin Creek near Medora, Ill., July 7, 1922, carved their initials and the date on the back of a land turtle. The marked tortoise was found the other day a mile from the picnic grounds just moseying along.

Burglars should take heed of the act that for the second straight time W. A. Goodell of Los Angeles, has caught a culprit robbing his cafe. After three break-ins, Goodell installed an alarm system which awakens him in case of a robbery. Since then he has caught two intruders, but it's interfering with his sleep.

W. A. (Bachelor Billy) Rahn, owner of the one-man town of Millican, Ore., has sold his village and is leaving. When the new owners, Mr. and Mrs. George Petry of Bend, move in, the town's population will be doubled. Mr. Rahn, who had scores of offers of marriage when he resigned his post-mastership and offered the town for sale, says he's going to Portland to see the sights of a big city.

Four years ago, Mrs. Maran Kranchok, San Diego, Calif., had a little house situated on an acre of fertile soil in suburban Lincoln Acres. She had been out of town most of the last four years. Mrs. Kranchok returned home recently to discover that someone not only removed the house, but also most of the topsoil.

Special Officer Jack Bowers of Las Cruces, N. M., who sat in for Fire Chief J. B. Camuzens during the lunch hour, complains the job is "too hard on the nerves." Mr. Bowers received only one call, but it was to his own home. Volunteer firemen confined the damage to one room.

Kansas City firemen rescued Timmie, a Maltese tomcat, from between brick walls where he had wedged for a week. Police considered shooting the cat but couldn't get a bead. A rag saturated with chloroform only made him sleep. So the firemen finally battered a hole through the wall of a beauty shop and set Timmie free. After a little artificial respiration and a bowl of milk, the pet scampered home to his masters, Jackie Jean Folz, 7, and her 20-month-old brother, Jerry Lee.

Robert Buresh of Seattle, Wash., is only 12 years old but he told police he ran away from home in Anchorage, Alaska, with a little more than $4 and got as far as Seattle on $3.50. He asked for a little help so he could go on to Los Angeles to see his father. But the Travelers' Aid society failed to locate the father. Patrolman F. L. Pietsch quoted Robert as saying he spent $3.50 of his hoard for a train ticket to Seward and

Militant Attitude Is Out of Accord With Beauty of Rhineland Country

Rhineland travel folders of some years ago quote an old German phrase, "Rhine, Wine and Sunshine," in describing this famed valley as "the home of a laughter-loving people" where English-speaking vacationists will find "a natural, gay hospitality and a hearty welcome."

"These alluring phrases may have been true in days long gone," writes S. Sgt. Howard W. R. Witt, "but it is doubtful if they meant much after a little black mustache decided to rule the world. Today there is no gaiety and laughter; there is no hospitality; there is no welcome. Yet the beauty of the Rhine, the famous sunshine, the age-old atmosphere still remain."

The sad saga of the Berkeley, Calif., bridegroom who said "I do" and swooned was the talk of the town. It happened in the Chapel of the Flowers when the organ completed the strains of Lohengrin. The minister posed the $64 question. "I do," answered the bride. "I do," said the bridegroom. The bridegroom turned as pale as the bride's veil. He fainted. The swain was carried into an anteroom. Finally he re-emerged man but gay. The organ played Mendelssohn's and in stately step the couple strolled out.

Arthur Fielder, conductor of the Boston Pops concert orchestra, wasn't stumped when he found he had misplaced the shrill whistle used in war songs to simulate falling bombs. Mr. Fielder, still waving his baton, placed two fingers between his teeth in schoolboy fashion and let out a series of loud whistles at the appropriate bars in the music.

Investigating a "kidnapped baby" report, Detective Ralph Weir at Spokane, Wash., learned that a 7-year-old neighbor girl had taken the infant to her woodshed to "play house" after she had heard him crying in his crib. The case was solved in less than an hour, but now Detective Weir is afraid there may be new developments. The baby had chicken pox. The little girl and the detective never had it.
