Women have been authorized to vote during the past twenty-five years. The nineteenth amendment, giving suffrage to women, was proclaimed in effect August 26, 1920. Never was there sound reason why they should not have had a hand in shaping affairs of the government to which they were required to give obedience. But too few women have turned the privilege to advantage. Many have deferred to men sole exercise of electoral rights in accordance with the old-time discrimination. Men have not demonstrated the superior wisdom in electing leaders or in fashioning public policies to justify women in holding aloof and refusing to participate. The world is in such a sorry pickle right now that the intelligence and best judgment of both men and women are needed to straighten out tangles and restore the ship of state to an even keel.

In the old days, formal calls were the popular order on New Year's day. Men and women, togged out in their best, spent the afternoon visiting households that had previously announced their intention to entertain. Rich eatables regaled travelers in exchange for good will and good wishes. But formal calls on any day have long since become passe. Neighbors and friends visit without formality, and we guess results are just as satisfactory. The automobile, radio and motion picture have taken the zest out of the toil of dressing up to call, inspect the family album and talk about a neighbor's health or his success or failure. With all its faults, the world has become less monotonous and more interesting in many ways.

The sudden passing of Gen. Geo. Patton as the result of an automobile accident in Germany removes one of the hardest-hitting and most colorful military leaders of the time. His daring record as commander of the Third Army in helping overcome the threatening "bulge" of a year ago was heroic and outstanding and will be etched deeply into the history of the allied cause. Some indiscretions of speech and action on a few occasions elicited adverse criticism, but were no doubt due to a highly wrought temperament which, however, served advantageously in meeting a military crisis and overthrowing the enemy.

Many Omahans with big houses are reported opening them to accommodate families in need of homes during the shortage. We are wondering if Wayne home owners with room to spare could persuade themselves to do the same thing. This would help solve a serious problem. Providing living quarters for young couples out of homes would perhaps involve inconveniences for both sides to the action, but it would certainly help out in an acute emergency. If Wayne could accommodate most persons who want to live here, its future would be greatly enriched.

Speaking of eventful 1945, Congressman Karl Stefan says: "Great things have occurred. Military victory has been achieved in both Europe and Asia, but a lasting world peace has yet to be worked out and established. Great problems, both domestic and international, remain to be solved—problems that will require our best efforts if they are to be correctly solved. Christ came to earth 1945 years ago with a program to establish 'Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men,' a program that has never been given a real trial. All man-made plans have failed."

The past six months have been unusually dry. Extremely light rainfall during the autumn has been followed by little snow. As to the value of snow, sharp disagreement exists. Some think it helps protect and moisten the soil, others that it is just a nuisance. All agree that abundant spring rains are necessary to put the ground in shape for early germination and healthy growth.

Sunday's Omaha World-Herald told the story of Virginia O'Hanlon who 48 years ago wrote the New York Sun for the truth about Santa Claus. The editor's famous answer, many times republished everywhere, is a wonderfully satisfying interpretation of the good old saint. Virginia is now Mrs. Edward Douglas, assistant principal of a public school in New York.

It is gratifying to note that American soldiers in Europe shared their Christmas food with hungry children. That is the spirit of America, and may it never grow less. That is one reason why this country has proved a winner, and why it will continue a world leader.

The main advice offered by medical authorities to prevent spread of colds and flu is to get out of circulation and go to bed. But we suspect comparatively few take the course suggested. That may account for the way the influenza has multiplied its victims.

HERE'S THE REASON!

Over one million of our heroes are arriving from overseas in December and heavy arrivals of the armed forces will continue into January and later months. No one would deny these men the opportunity to reach home promptly.

THE CHICAGO AND NORTH WESTERN SYSTEM has contributed over one hundred coaches for this service, taken largely from regular train service. In addition, three-fourths of all sleeping car space has been turned over to aid the movement of our armed forces.

No new passenger cars were built during the war. The cars diverted for military traffic must be taken from those now available for civilians.

Travel will be difficult during the next few months... especially during the holiday period. In the event that you should be inconvenienced, THE CHICAGO AND NORTH WESTERN SYSTEM would like to have you understand the reason for the temporary shortage of coach accommodations.

When these coaches are returned to civilian service, adequate accommodations will again be available.
