there were Mr. and Mrs. Emil Roebber and Darlene, Herbert Hinrichs, Betty and Bonnie, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Weiersheuser and Bernice and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ruser. 'BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE' Omaha World-Herald. "Heavens to Betsy," Mrs. Mary Mella remarked. This exclamation escaped the 85-year-old woman as she was discussing a gully on her farm near Gretna, Neb. The gap is about 30 feet deep and 50 feet wide. It splits the farm and now extends some 25 feet into a neighboring farm. When it rains, the rush of water from the head of the gully reminds Mrs. Mella of Niagara Falls. But 65 years ago, when she and her husband homesteaded the farm, grass was growing horse-high where the gully is now. The gully started, perhaps, with a slight trickle of water down a furrow. There, geographically presented, is the story of soil erosion. The Mella case is noteworthy not because it is unusual but because it can be duplicated all too often throughout the Midwest. Many gullies, on many farms, give mute testimony to the damage wreaked where grass once stood horse-high in fertile soil. Hindsight is of course, easier than foresight. Mrs. Mella learned the former when she remarked: "If we started to think about erosion 40 years ago, many of our present problems wouldn't need such drastic cures." Landowners ought to take advantage of all the technical help that is offered to stop soil erosion before it is too late. The aging homesteader, speaking from long experience, is an expert witness. Farmers everywhere would do well to heed her advice "before it is too late." Mr. and Mrs. Albert Frank of Stanton, suffered severe burns Easter Sunday when refueling a brooder stove.

Mrs. Eugene Helgren and Donald were afternoon callers. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Henning and family attended a confirmation dinner in the Cape Christian home at Laurel Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pearson and daughters spent the evening in the Henningson home. Elkhorn Included In Basin Project West Point, Neb. The Missouri river basin development program is comprehensive enough to encompass such plans as the Elkhorn valley flood control program, according to Brig. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Missouri river division engineer at Omaha. Addressing more than 350 persons at a Chamber of Commerce-sponsored flood control meeting here Monday night, General Pick said flexibility is one of the most important features of the Pick-Sloan plan. Rep. Karl Stefan of Norfolk, who flew from Washington to attend the meeting, predicted that plans for flood control eventually will materialize in the Elkhorn valley, some two years ago a flood causing $9,000,000 damage and taking 83 lives. Pupils and teacher of district 20 are planning a program for May 10 at 8 o'clock. Lunch will be sold. The public is invited. m911

Stalin's GENERALISSIMO Stalin's May day speech puts Russia in the front rank as a peace-loving nation, but in the same breath accuses other countries of war plans and evil motives. The dictator wants freedom, but he does not grant it. He wants self-determination for small nations, but he is constantly scheming to subject them to his own iron control. He has repeatedly violated pledges, and he has disdained any attempt to explain why he has done so.

In his May day expulsion of hot air Stalin boasts of Russia's achievements and indicates that rivals are threatening another world conflagration. It is evident that he is charging other nations with doing exactly what he is doing himself. Stalin sees that nothing happening within his country, leaks out to his disadvantage. Reporters and other foreign observers are kept out unless accompanied by Russian agents. Subjects are allowed to know nothing that authorities think they should not know. They are forced to make an appearance of liking their slavery.

Russia spurns what the allies fought to gain—liberty and self-government for all nations, big and small alike. It is now kicking aside international pacts, and snorting charges that it should rightly turn on itself. In dealing with Russia hope for future peace rests largely on the superior force which other members of the united nations possess.

Major blame rests on John L. Lewis for the nation-wide coal strike, and he looks and acts defiant. The interrupted production and general losses and inconveniences caused by the fuel shut-down doubtless please his idea of noteworthy accomplishment. A more sensitive and considerate person would hate himself. On the contrary, notwithstanding devastating results, he is probably as happy as he is capable of being, and would even smile if he could, which he can't. From here on out he should order an underling with a less grim countenance to sit for photographs.

The World-Herald's two recent polls on the United States senatorship show the two leading candidates, Senator Butler and Governor Griswold, running almost neck-and-neck. One poll favored Senator Butler by a narrow margin and the other indicated a slight lead for the governor. The two candidates are too close together for the comfort of either. The primary June 11 will be required to dispose of uncertainties.

The Negro press should take due notice of the fact that a member of its race has been chosen American mother for 1946. This is the first time the honor has gone to a colored person, and it should cause dismissal of a good deal of the clack about race prejudice. Newspapers serving colored populations could help materially in wiping out ill will between Negroes and whites.

What we need is a candidate to invite support on these pledges: More rain without floods, more sunshine without drought, more pay, more leisure and less work, higher prices for what we have to sell and lower prices for what we have to buy. That kind of convincing program has so far been overlooked.

Senator Wherry and Senator Butler make a valuable team in looking out for Nebraska's municipal units and farm areas at the seat of national government. Wisdom suggests keeping them together.

If there are any compensations in spending weeks on one's back in a hospital, they may be found in enforced rest and the outpouring of sympathetic interest.

The government could ease up on farming and small business by granting greater freedom of operation. Both are essential, and both are trying to serve well during a trying time.

Voters in France have turned against communism, and the report adds a guess that most of Europe is headed in the same direction. If true, it is encouraging.

MOTHER'S DAY.

Remembering Mother's day re-emphasizes the most precious gift to mankind, Mother love is the most constant, most enduring love in the world. Everyone has felt it and has been buoyed and sustained by it. No one sinks so low that he is not lifted to a fine appreciation of his mother—an appreciation of her innumerable sacrifices and her unflinching readiness to sympathize and help. She is the idol of every man and woman. Wherever one may be located or whatever one may be doing, his mother is in his thoughts, and he frequently recalls what she meant to him. Some mothers may be far away, some may have passed on, some may be suffering from accidents or disease, but wherever they are, they will be cherished in richest memory. The hardest sinner as well as the noblest soul reveres his mother and longs for the days of his youth when she minimized his weaknesses and breathed courage into his footsteps. All love for mothers and utmost respect for motherhood!

AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN

Administrative officials did not seem to sense the widespread resentment due to the bungling methods of OPA. That black markets should become so big and powerful and apparently control so much of the supply of scarce commodities while OPA was giving so much attention to minor infractions of its regulations had been a sore topic in congress for months. Congressional offices have been fairly deluged with complaints in thousands of cases. Consequently, when the OPA bill came up, the hostility was manifest. The matter of inflation, its dangers and possible consequences seemed to be subordinated to the determination to stop the practices which had become so highly objectionable. Many amendments were offered. The few that were adopted by the house and placed in the bill to extend the price control law as it went to the senate, make important changes in the administration of price control.

The conference committee still is considering the veterans' housing bill, which came back from the senate with many important amendments. The problem grows more pressing daily, but what the conference committee will recommend is in doubt. There is strong opposition to the proposed subsidies, and guarantees for prefabricated housing. The supply of housing materials is increasing, but not to the degree essential to the broad program of 2,700,000 new homes in the next 20 months.

The president urges upon the country the importance of relief from famine in many foreign countries. Ex-President Hoover is on a world tour of investigation, which has taken him over three continents. In his reports to the president he confirms the stories of widespread starvation. Our country continues to make the largest contributions. Wheat and other grains are short the world over. Only a few months ago, our government agencies were predicting a surplus, but now comes the appeal to furnish more than we can supply.

Millers now are required to limit distribution of flour to 75 percent of the allotment to the bakeries last year. In scores of cities the bakeries will be handicapped in operating on such basis. The people have responded generously to the appeals for saving foods in order to permit larger shipments abroad.

To enforce a rule country-wide further limiting the supply of bread may not be easy. Some bakeries which made carloads of bread for army posts last year, and have a lessened demand, may not be seriously crippled. That will not be universal, however, and the smaller cities may feel the pinch more than some larger cities.

Housing Expediter Wyatt has outlined a plan for priorities on materials for new houses. Among other features is one-fourth the houses to be allotted to any city must be for rental, and at low rents. At least half of such low-rent houses must rent for not over $40 per month in the average cities. Half the homes to be built for sale must come below a price line varying from $4,500 in southern cities to $7,000 in northern cities. Such prices do not include the cost of lots, and the actual investment for a home will come higher accordingly. The new order is expected to increase the number of new homes built for less than $6,500 by fifty percent in the next three months. The announcement of priorities is only the first step. Getting the materials for the allotments will be the greatest difficulty in getting the housing program underway.

After months of consideration, the OPA finally issued a new order regulating prices of whole milk in the territory covered by eight mid-western states. The order had the approval of the secretary of agriculture. Taking up the matter last fall, the OPA delayed its report and regulations until milk strikes were threatened in many parts of the country. The new order only temporarily will serve to remedy more difficult situations. The protests from farmers and dealers alike are evidence of that fact. With butter production down by 50 per cent below normal, cheese hard to get everywhere, and whole milk shortages threatening rationing in many cities, the government will have to give more attention to increasing milk production. And milk is produced by farmers milking cows on farms, and nowhere else—a fact the experts seem to overlook in drafting rules and regulations.

There is a big decrease in the number of cattle in the feed-lots of the middle west. The reduction is about 20 per cent, the largest falling off since the drought year of 1936. There have been predictions that the supply of beef from the middle west might increase by fall, but that there might a decline in hogs and poultry. Apparently the meat situation is so difficult and confused that estimates are not so very reliable. The exports of livestock, including milk cows, continues, but not at a rate which seriously affects our own farms. Cows are being shipped in larger numbers to Poland, whose herds were almost destroyed in six years of war.

The court-martial systems of both the army and navy have been under investigation by a special house committee, which has brought in a report critical of both branches of our armed forces for the injustice and severity of many court-martial sentences. The report is so strong in condemnation of existing practices that it will not be released for publication until the committee on military affairs considers its serious charges. The committee found that 142 enlisted men had been executed for various crimes during war, and questions the guilt of at least some of those whose summary convictions were based on unreliable testimony. The army has a special board now in session reviewing thousands of court-martial cases for which over 7,000 enlisted men still are serving sentences. The Litchfield military trials in England as to abuse of our own men in military prisons is making revolting disclosures as to brutal treatment of some of the enlisted men. Among many witnesses was one private who is still serving a sentence of seven years for being absent without leave.

Weed Supervisor Named in State

Robert Monteith of Newcastle, has been appointed manager of the Dixon county noxious weed district. He, and district supervisors, expect to develop a systematic eradication program. Mr. Monteith plans to operate an eradication machine throughout the growing season and anyone who desires help may write or call at the office of the county agent at Allen. Mr. Monteith is in Lincoln this week at the college of agriculture studying various methods of weed treatments.

O'Neil plans a hospital costing $210,000, mostly supplied by cash donations.

Miss Merce Outhouse is returning from Stanton school faculty after instructing since 1917.

JOBS FOR CONGRESSMEN.

(Norfolk Daily News)

The resolution to crumple up and toss in the wastebasket all nylon publicity, is hereby suspended long enough for a little comment on the way this "no nylons, no vote" movement has taken hold in some sections. One congressman is said to have received 2,000 letters from feminine voters protesting the situation.

Thus it seems that in addition to their other chores, our congressmen are going to have to make it their job to put stockings on their women constituents, if they want to be reelected. This, in turn, will no doubt call for additional help in the office to do the other work while the congressman is busy with his new job.

But the comment called for is not about our overworked representatives, but about the way we rush to Washington for relief when things don't go just as we would have them. Time was when, if a congressman sent us a few packets of seeds once a year, we thought he was a darned good legislator and voted to keep him in Washington. Now we rush to him for the silliest things, without even trying to help ourselves, and he has to give his time to us or we sulk and vote for the opposition candidate.

Asking the congressmen to legislate stockings on our feminine legs may rate as top-notch foolishness, but it is so only in degree. There are plenty of other services we ought to perform for ourselves that we saddle on to our representatives, who ought to be using their time in considering weighty problems of world peace, domestic reconstruction, veteran rehabilitation, etc.

So deeply has the Washington bug's bite affected us.

Pendex students will hold a paper drive.

MENTALLY SICK.

Appalling inhumanity is revealed by words and pictures in the current Life magazine, reporting mistreatment of patients in state-operated mental hospitals. Too few physicians and attendants in charge do not furnish ground for extenuation, but do shout loudly for more funds to employ more help. Cruelty and neglect are charged. Attendants are said to have become calloused to the needs of the mentally sick and yield to acts of abuse rather than to acts of kindness. Restraints are imposed without mercy and drugs are often used unnecessarily and illegally. There is reported little promise of improvement or recovery under existing conditions. Life's revelations demand investigation and reform. Persons not disposed to accord humane treatment to the helplessly sick, mentally or physically, should be kicked out and into the arms of whatever law exists to mete out due justice. Author of the Life article urges "an end to concentration camps that masquerade as hospitals and to make cure rather than incarceration the goal of mental institutions."

Vet's Corner

More than 4,000 business establishments, with facilities for training 12,000 veterans, and 55 farms and ranches have been approved by the veterans' administration for on-the-job training. Nebraska is one of the leading states for veteran training.

Veterans suffering from malaria or other tropical diseases developing after release from the service are eligible for treatment at government expense. Such illness will be considered service-connected even though the veterans' army medical records show no indication of hospitalization for the diseases, according to Ashley Westmoreland, VA regional manager at Lincoln. Veterans are eligible for treatment at VA hospitals or by private physicians at government expense if authorized in advance by the veterans' administration.

Officers and enlisted men who served in the armies of occupation in Germany, Austria or Italy after May 8, 1945, and in Japan or Korea after September 2, 1945, will be awarded an "occupation medal." The medal will be made of bronze. It will be suspended on a ribbon of white, black and red stripes.

The veterans' administration is seeking to hire 1,500 specially trained personnel in order to bring rehabilitation programs to every ward of the veterans' administration's 100 hospitals. A thorough program of education and shop training is to be carried out, according to Dr. Donald A. Coyalt, assistant medical director for medical rehabilitation.

Recent World War veterans placed on jobs in Wayne are: James H. Murphy, Omaha, as assistant plumber, Economy Shop; Earl D. Showalter, chef at Gem Cafe, formerly of Sterling.

Numerous inquiries have been made of this office relative to the reason for slowness of subsistence payments to veterans in school or in apprentice work. The United States employment office in Norfolk informs this office that the checks are sometimes several months late in being forwarded due to the immensity of job at hand. Oftentimes the employer will advance the veteran the needed money to take care of immediate obligations.

Less than one per cent of business loans guaranteed by the veterans' administration have been defaulted. The veterans' administration lists three principal reasons for failure of veterans' businesses: Lack of operating capital, lack of experience, and failure of obsolete equipment, necessitating expensive repairs.

As of April 5, business loans approved under the servicemen's readjustment act (GI bill) numbered 7,575 with a face value of $25,000,000, of which about $10,200,000, or 40 per cent, was guaranteed by the veterans' administration.

Q. Are veterans given priority in the purchase of automobiles?
A. Priorities were discontinued after the termination of hostilities. Individual agents may give preference to discharged servicemen, but there is no law setting up such procedure.

Salvation Army, which is worldwide in scope, has made plans to decorate graves of American dead in foreign cemeteries. The officer in charge of the various corps cemeteries will have charge of decorations, and wherever possible a picture of the grave will be taken and returned to relatives. Cost is $3.00. Further information is available at the service office.

Did you read and enjoy The Wide House, by Taylor Caldwell? If so, you will be eager to read This Side of Innocence. The scene is the up-state New York town of Riversend. The novel begins in 1868 and concludes almost 20 years later. It is the story of two vital, strong-willed, unscrupulous and passionate people who met their match in each other, and whose tempestuous mating smashed the orderly pattern of their families' lives, and, to a degree, that of the community. This novel presents a great American story-teller at her brilliant best.

Some of our critics say that her style is over done and melodramatic and perhaps it is but for sheer entertainment it is story telling in technicolor.
The Frederick Fell book company has put out an anthology with the title Murder For the Millions. They call it a Harvest of Horror and Homicide! Just what it is in the lives we are leading these days which makes us turn to such gruesome subjects for relaxation will be for future historians to decide. The fact remains that the murder mystery is much in demand by people of all ages and walks of life. This volume is no mere morsel of blood but a veritable banquet, for between the covers of this large book lurk murderers who have performed their evil deeds in every field—regicide, parricide, fratricide, homicide or simple strangulation. Some of the killer-dillers who have contributed are Dashiell Hammett, George Harmon Cox, Ellery Queen, Damon Runyon, William Irish, John Collier, Milton Eberhart, Wamuel Adams, Sax Rohmer and a score of others.
