THE KNOT-HOLE Vol. 8 Wayne, Nebr., Thursday, May 23, 1946. No. 16 Officer: "You cannot stop here." Motorist: "I can't, eh? Well, officer, maybe I shouldn't stop here, but you don't know this car as well as I do." Mother: "You were a very tidy boy not to throw your orange peel on the floor of the bus. Where did you put it?" Junior: "In the pocket of the man next to me." Screen wire is very hard to get but you can prolong the life of your old screens by keeping them painted. Go over both the wood and the wire itself with Glidden screen enamel. That way you can put off buying new screens until screen wire is again on the market. You will not have to keep two kinds of wax around the house, one for linoleum and one for wood floors. If you use Bruce Tuf-Luster wax. It is equally good for both. Bruce Tuf-Luster is the toughest wax you have ever used. Try it just once and be convinced. In the old horse-trader days a Scotch hoss wrangler had a new horse. Try as he would he could neither make the horse eat or drink. The Scot's eyes fairly gleamed as he said hopefully: "By golly, I've got a real bargain in he's a good worker."

Sodium Chlorate Is Hard on Stock. Sodium chlorate used carelessly in hived eradication can be dangerous to livestock, according to word coming to County Agent W. R. Harder from Dr. S. W. Alford, extension animal pathologist at the college of agriculture. Livestock should not be given access to the treated areas until moisture has dissolved the sodium chlorate. Livestock is inclined to eat the chemical to excess because of the salty forage. Dr. Alford explained that sodium chlorate poisoning affects the blood hemoglobin. Animals affected by sodium chlorate poisoning show symptoms of difficult breathing, stumbling gait and great exhaustion after forced exercise. The tongue and lips turn blue-black in color. So far an effective antidote for the poison has not been found.

Marching on Nebraska
 The CIO is reported moving into Nebraska with a lot of evil intentions. It is being felt in Omaha, and threatens to spread out over the state. It is in conflict with its rival organization, the AF of L, and bears none of the latter's ideas of fair play. The Norfolk Daily News comments:

"Already war is being declared between the two great rivals in the labor world, with the people caught in the middle.
 "The situation is one that isn't good. CIO is trying to organize public employees with the claim that it has the right to call them out on strike against the state or city or the national government. AF of L does not claim the right to strike against the government. But if CIO moves in and is able to close the larger employed groups against AF of L or unorganized workers, it can get a strangle hold upon Nebraska's industry.
 "The Wagner act ties the hands of the public and the small employer in any attempt they may make to maintain free and open industry. But the situation is facing them and they will no doubt try in spite of it, to do what they can."

Unfair to Farmers
 The Sioux City Journal joins George A. Sterling, manager of the Greater South Dakota association, in taking to task Life magazine for its unjust criticism of American farmers in connection with the present food problem. The Journal offers this concluding paragraph:

"It virtually is certain that an impartial survey would prove that American farmers contributed more to the war effort, and profited less in proportion to their hours of labor and volume of contribution than perhaps any other production group. It is true that higher prices and heavy demand put agriculture in a more favorable position recently than in many years past. But it is not at all certain that farmers as a class actually received production costs, plus a reasonable profit on their investment and their activities, without considering wages for their long hours of labor, or of other members of their families. Mr. Sterling and his associates are to be commended for being prompt in challenging any such unfair criticism of a patriotic faction of our citizenry."

Small Start
 WE have heard the refreshing story of a returned soldier who has begun farming with little capital, but with an abundance of pluck and capacity to work. He has started in a small way, but he proposes to add equipment as fast as warranted by returns. Pride spurs the quest for ownership, and freedom from burdensome debt gives deep sense of independence. Here is the story:

Dean Thomas of Rowley, Iowa, after spending 41 months in the armed forces, returned to his home county recently and started farming on 100 acres. Not wishing to go into debt he borrowed farming ideas of his forefathers by starting out with a minimum of cash expense. With a $300 investment to get started he paid $170 for three horses, borrowed a fourth and picked up such used machinery and harness as he could get. Some day he'll have modern machinery, but he figures that he'll have it only when he can afford it. His is a lesson for others starting out, in that great outlays are not necessary to succeed.

George Sheldon, governor of Nebraska more than thirty years ago, is running as an independent republican in Mississippi for the United States senate, pitting himself against the notorious Senator Bilbo. Sheldon ought to be elected, but if he is, he will have to change the voting habits of the south. The former Nebraskan who was elected chief executive on a reform platform, has, we judge from conversations with him, veered a great deal to the right under the pressure of many years of experience. If he could break the south's tradition and get into the senate, he could be depended on to fight for the things that made America strong and great. Mississippi would profit by junking Bilbo and pinning faith to Sheldon.

Criticism of Herbert Hoover, former president, simply because he happened to have been chosen to guide the affairs of the nation at the time of an inevitable economic collapse, is plainly unjust. Hoover is a leading humanitarian, and he performed wonderfully helpful service in feeding hungry multitudes in the first World war, and he has since been on the alert to relieve distress. He has lately surveyed the world to ascertain conditions and needs, and he deserves gratitude rather than ugly thrusts from unfounded prejudice.

Discord in the world tends to make people dissatisfied. They think an El Dorado beckons, and they kick loose and hasten to it only to be disillusioned and disappointed. They jump from one thing to another, and find themselves worse off than they would have been if they had stuck to old moorings. Good times and abnormal cash returns keep people changing. Employers cannot always depend on help because of the insatiable itch for something new in the hope of something better.

Unfortunate conditions in the world at this time should more than ever stimulate qualified electors to take sufficient time from routine to go to the polls on primary day, June 11, to vote. It is a duty as well as a privilege. Farmers will be busy, but by stopping long enough to exercise the precious electoral franchise, they will gain more in satisfaction than they could possibly lose in their fields.

A report says: "As a result of special privileges accorded labor, there is no incentive whatsoever today for labor leadership to be anything but arbitrary." If that is true, it is a sorry departure from the democratic plan. It does not harmonize with the American system of equal rights. It is up to congress to steel its courage to fix laws accordingly.

Weather has been too cool for corn, but the heat we need may be just around the corner. Moisture has been sufficient to help, but is still not enough. Crop prospects are better than a month ago, but not exactly up to expectations. We are pinning a lot of faith on June and July.

It is hoped administration action in dealing with strikes will show more and more backbone until the country is rescued from the paralyzing tentacles of John L. Lewis and others of his kind.

Food scarcity may encourage observance of the wholesome practice of "eating to live rather than living to eat."

POLITICS.
 Pathfinder magazine comments on the intense political struggle to be waged this year. Weaknesses of the bureaucratic opposition make the republican party confident. The aim of each party is to control the next senate and house. Of 32 senate seats to be filled this year, 21 are held by democrats. Republicans would have to win nine from the opposition, while holding 11 offered for reelection. The house has 238 democrats and 191 republicans, all to win or lose. Republicans will do their best to capture a majority, and indications are believed favorable. The Political Action Committee, an outgrowth of the CIO, is out to defeat congressional and senatorial candidates who are not in tune with labor union rule. The organization is said to be dedicated to "liberalism" which means submitting to union control. Its front suggests "educating" voters, but in reality its purpose is to support labor union candidates. Persons who want to remain free from arbitrary interference with traditional rights will vote against all candidates that bear the PAC label.

continue to demand that the wartime law shall be extended one year from next July.

With an armed force exceeding 2 1/2 millions of men, the house spoke most emphatically for reduction of that force and in favor of more rapid demobilization. Over a month previously, the house passed a bill extending conscription, exclusive of fathers, boys of 18 and 19 years, and regularly employed farm workers, with a holiday on inductions until October. The war and navy departments immediately opened a fight on the bill before the senate. That influence apparently was sufficient for the purpose. But the draft law would have expired on May 15, and to save the draft, the senate passed a resolution extending the law until July 1. Immediately the spokesmen for a big army went into action in an endeavor to have the house concur in the resolution, which reached the house only on May 13.

The house by a large majority tacked on the two exemption amendments and returned the resolution to the senate, whereupon, at a late hour in the evening, after the expression of indignation by some senators, the senate gracefully backed down, accepted the changes and sent the measure to the White House. The president thereupon expressed his disapproval, and at the same time attached his signature. Between now and July 1, the pressure for the year's extension desired by the war department, will be strong.

The coast guard met with severe criticism of the house committee on appropriations, not of its activities, which receive generous praise, but the committee cut about ten millions off its appropriations on the ground that it was top-heavy with high officers. In 1940, the coast guard had only three admirals, 31 captains and 12,000 enlisted men. The president's budget committee provided one four-star admiral, 15 commodores and 138 captains for peace-time operations, with only 19,000 enlisted men. The coast guard announced that for next year it could get along with 40 flag officers, 100 captains, 193 commanders, 304 lieutenant commanders, 457 lieutenants, and 857 warrant officers. So the budget estimates were cut down $19,734,000 in all by the house committee.

The coal "stoppage" isn't over, but most of the miners are back at work, while John Lewis and the operators continue their negotiations for a new contract. The well-proposed proposal seems to be principal contention for the moment, with the operators conceding that some form of agreement should be reached. The amount and the administration of the fund are the obstacles. The operators have conceded the back pay for holidays which the miners claimed. The matter will be postponed until the last. With all the differences between the operators and the miners having been known for weeks and months, during which no attempts were made to negotiate, many wonder why it was necessary for the nation to have the serious disaster of a coal shortage before the conflicting parties gathered in conferences to do the negotiating.

WORLD'S HOPE.
 Bruce Hutchison, associate editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, writes of the United States' ability to contribute to future world civilization and peace. He mentions that while Washington is in confusion, the rest of the nation is encouragingly sound. Most Americans have the strength and courage to cope with unusual problems and prevent collapse similar to the one that overtook the Roman empire. Of events leading to Rome's fall, the author is reminded by Washington's centralized bureaucracy and government hand-outs. But these signs of weakness do not represent the spirit of any considerable number outside the national capital. The still existing philosophy that built America will save America. It cannot live merely for self. It cannot hope to survive by using its power to profit from helpless nations. It can serve and save itself by serving and saving the rest of the world. It must preserve other nations to preserve itself. The future depends on men of vision and courage. Not just Washington, but the millions of sturdy Americans everywhere in the country are the hope of the world.

Secretary Byrnes and his associates at the council of foreign ministers at Paris found the road to a permanent peace treaty rough and rugged. Secretary Byrnes declares the meeting a failure, because the ministers of the big four nations are unable to get together on many troublesome questions. He suggests a conference of the ministers of 21 nations early in July to see what solution can be arrived at. For the present, at least, the proposals for peace treaties for Italy, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Finland have fallen through. The secretary also suggests the council of ministers shall adjourn for a month for a "cooling-off" period. Making permanent peace among European nations seems to be as difficult now as it was before millions of lives were lost in war and nearly all Europe devastated by the conflict. Greed for power and greed for gain are hard to overcome.

The drought in the southwest has reduced the probable yield of wheat by 100 million bushels. The world already is very short of wheat, and even a bumper crop in northern states will only partially relieve the situation. Secretary Anderson now advises that the world food shortage may continue several years. The food councils are increasing their demands for shipments to Europe, and propose to limit consumption here at home to less than half the crop. Chester Bowles suggests that food rationing may be brought back, which in itself may occasion more buying in the meantime, as so frequently has been the case. Our country has responded most generously to appeals for famine relief abroad. It continues to do so and will continue. The practical side of the matter should be given due consideration, however.

Among many suggestions, aside from the voluntary endeavors of our people, are compulsory measures. Production of food on the farm will be affected by weather conditions. Arbitrarily fixing prices will not increase grain yields nor greatly help the situation. The farms are short of help, as they have been for four years. Farm equipment is worn out, or rapidly becoming so. Farmers' difficulties have increased year by year, and still they produce a good part of the foods going to famished lands. Instead of more rules and regulations, let the farmers obtain needed machinery and equipment and hurry it along. Why ship steel abroad and even export farm machinery while farmers can't even get enough machinery to operate at capacity? Fertilizers which farmers need to increase food crops are going to increase food yields of non-food products. Instead of more rules and regulations, the government should go all out for everything needed to increase production.

Nebraska members of the house attempted unsuccessfully to raise the appropriation for reclamation in the Missouri river basin up to the budget estimate following cut by the committee. Another attempt will be made when the bill making appropriations for the department of the interior is taken up in the senate.

The house committee on banking and currency has started hearings on the British loan. The chairman of the committee says that the hearings may last three weeks. The senate, after long debate, has approved the proposed loan to Great Britain.

The government is back in the market for butter, and will buy 60 million pounds for the army and the hospitals during the flush season, if the present limited production can be called "flush." Last year, the government purchased was 325 million pounds. Later, it released 80 million pounds to civilian markets. But production last year was 700 million pounds below normal. It may not be any higher this year. Oleomargarine production has doubled that of years before the war, and now the demands for oils and fats for relief of Europeans are holding oleomargarine to last year's levels. The production of butter in Australia and New Zealand is increasing and the release of so many of the armed forces in the Pacific may turn part of their surpluses in our direction. Before the war, the exportable surplus of butter from the southern countries was about equal to our present output.

A prominent eastern magazine, whose editors probably never saw a farm except from a car window, had a two-page article condemning farmers in general because our country hasn't sufficient wheat and other grains available to meet the commitments to Europe made by some of our state department negotiators. Apparently the commitments were made without correct information as to the grains we have on hand. The magazine gravely informs its readers that the farmers are feeding grains to livestock instead of shipping it to Europe. The remedy the magazine suggests is that the livestock shall be killed off to save the grain. Probably the same writer will have another article soon, informing its eastern friends that the milk, cheese and butter shortage is due to the cows giving too little milk. It seems to require a wonderful lack of information for some magazine writers to grind out an article.

But western people have become rather accustomed to criticism by eastern editors whose food comes mainly from western farms. Only for the work and products of western farmers, the eastern cities would be undergoing a famine nearly as bad as that in Europe. About 85 per cent of the nation's food comes from the middle west.

The United States produced 9,015,000 bales of cotton in 1945, the smallest cotton crop since 1921, the agriculture department said in its final report on the 1945 output. Because of large stocks of cotton on hand, the short 1945 crop causes little worry as far as use of the fiber is concerned. Its most serious result is the crop in production of cottonseed, a leading oil crop. Large amounts of cottonseed oil are used in manufacture of margarine and other foods. The short 1945 crop thus directly affects the housewife.

Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, says that city people are making home-made butter out of whipping cream at a cost of about $1.50 a pound. He figured that these "kitchenette creameries" turned out butter in Washington for $1.42 a pound and in New York for $1.68.

Dwight Havens, manager of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce, came to Washington to appear before the civil aeronautics board in hearings affecting pending applications for establishments of commercial air routes in northeastern Nebraska.

A new and drastic cut in bread for the family table or in essential wheat reserves offers the only means of fulfilling United States promises of grain to hungry foreign areas.

This prospect was raised by a gloomy department of agriculture report that stocks of wheat in this country on April 1 amounted to only 338,644,000 bushels—60 per cent of that on hand a year earlier. Britain, meanwhile, ordered smaller loaves of bread and less beer as an "additional contribution" to aid countries most needing food. Prime Minister Atlee's office said use of flour for bread would be reduced by 12 1/2 per cent and use of barley for beer brewing by 15 per cent.

The Nebraska friends of Mr. and Mrs. Claude H. Canady, already aware of their generous voluntary contributions to foreign famine relief, will be interested to know that Washington newspapers have prominently featured their Washington visit in picture and print. In addition to being the guests of the secretary of agriculture, being received at the White House by the president and generally seeing the places of interest in the national capital, they were guests at the weekly breakfast of the Nebraska delegation. Miss Martha Heier spent Sunday at Emil Vahlkamp's.

Even Crops Can Tell You When They're Hungry

A farmer with the "know-how" can spot, at a glance, evidence of starvation in his growing crops, and remedy it. You will find it profitable to learn the signs of "hidden hunger" in your crops, whether you are selling them as cash crops or using them as feed for livestock. Once you have learned to understand the "sign language" of plants, you can often tell just by looking at a growing plant whether it is drawing from the soil all the nitrogen, phosphorus, potash and other elements it must have to produce healthy, high-yielding crops. A deficiency in these essential elements will affect the plant's appearance in some way which will tell you just what is short. Here are some of the "hunger signs" in corn, for example: Yellowish-green leaves and stunted growth indicates nitrogen deficiency. Tips of leaves gummed together indicates calcium deficiency. Purple color in leaves indicates phosphorus deficiency. Bottom leaves dead; yellow striping between veins of upper leaves (condition known as "white-bud") indicates zinc deficiency. Scorching along the edges of leaves indicates potassium deficiency. Regular yellowish-white stripes on leaves indicate magnesium deficiency. Other crops also show "hunger signs" which can be recognized at a glance if you know their sign language. Your county agent or vocational agricultural teacher can tell you about them or advise you about books or bulletins which give detailed information. Because of their thorough understanding of soil and crop conditions in your district, they are the men to answer your questions. Both are ready and able to help you. They know the signs of crop malnutrition and can give you valuable advice.

Worth thinking about: Consider that word a-n-d. It usually joins things together, but now and then we use it to separate things which should not be separated. Strawberry-shortcake is a homely example of our meaning. It's eaten everywhere... it has two parts... but no one ever separates that satisfying combination in word or thought. You'd never think of saying strawberry and shortcake. So it is with many combinations which cannot exist separately. There's agriculture-industry and the livestock-meat industry, for example. These combinations cannot be split into separate sections, because all parts of each are dependent on the others. The production of livestock and the preparation and distribution of meat are as inseparable as strawberry-shortcake. When producers prosper, meat packers prosper. When one suffers constant loss, the other must suffer also. Those of us in the livestock-meat industry have mutual interests, and we work together toward a common goal.

Vaccinate pigs against cholera while they are still young, advises the United States Bureau of Animal Industry. It is cheaper, the pigs are easier to handle, and the risk is less. Several pig diseases have symptoms similar to cholera, and with cholera eliminated through early vaccination, diagnosis and treatment of the specific disease will be simplified.

KEY TO SUCCESS IN FEEDING GROWING PIGS by J. H. Longwell North Dakota Agricultural College

If the pig is to grow normally, it must be provided with the required amounts and proper quality of building materials with which to develop the various body tissues. Quantity of feed alone will not insure thrift, vigor, and normal growth. Water, protein, minerals, vitamins and energy must be supplied in proper proportions to enable the pig to build a strong skeleton, plump muscles, vigorous vital organs, and the desirable amount of fat. Quality of protein is especially important because all the essential amino acids, or body protein building-stones, must be included in the feed. The inclusion of some animal protein in the feed is the simplest method of insuring a supply of all the essential amino acids. Vitamin A, most easily supplied from green pasture, and Vitamin D, best obtained from direct sunshine, must also be provided. If you meet the quantitative nutrient needs of the pig, the goal of efficient gains is not difficult to attain.

EDITOR'S COLUMN You who raise and feed livestock know as well as I do that the problems of the livestock-meat industry are usually mighty complicated. Naturally, I am always interested in what others have to say about our problems, especially in the press or over the radio. During the recent meat strike, for instance, I was impressed with the effort that was made to place both sides of the question before the public. On the other hand, I was disturbed, on several occasions, by statements made by people who either did not know all the facts, or who ignored them—people whose words consisted of part-truths and their own biased opinions. To my way of thinking, all of us should consider all the facts that are available if we are to form a fair opinion on any subject. And so, it seems to me especially important that ranchers and farmers have the fullest-factful understanding of every part of the livestock-meat industry. Now I don't pretend to know all there is to know, and you probably have many facts that I lack. But from long experience in this business we have learned many things which might help clear up certain doubts and questions you may have in your mind. If there are things about our business that you aren't sure about, we would appreciate hearing from you. We will reply with whatever facts we have. I am sure that our correspondence will make for a better mutual understanding of our common problems. F.M. Simpson, Agricultural Research Department.

Senator Comments On Labor Problem

Senator Hugh Butler, (R), of Nebraska, made the following announcement to the press on the labor situation:

"It is long past time for congress to take the handling of these strikes out of the hands of Pres. Truman and force a settlement. We have been prevented from taking action in the senate sooner by the senate labor committee, which has tied up all labor legislation and which has used the excuse that the president already has ample power to seize the mines and factories and stop the strikes. But Pres. Truman refuses to use the powers that he has. "Action—even drastic action—is much better than letting one man deprive us of the necessities of life."

F. B. Decker of Lincoln, formerly of Wayne, gave the address at Hartington Saturday for 184 rural 8th graders.

Ask for One World or None for that is the title of this book.

Address Is Given To Winside Class Awards Are Presented Here To Senior Students of Local School.

The challenge of character, science and what has made the world and the circle of God are the three circles described by Dr. Harry E. Hess of Norfolk, in his speech entitled "Three Circles," given for commencement exercises of Winside high school seniors and 8th graders May 6 at the auditorium.

Young people must be prepared to meet the masses they will encounter," stated Dr. Hess. The finest things of life are not found in the scientific world but in the circle of God.

Dr. Hess said that the world is shrinking today through radio and television and a world of other things. He presented the question, "Will science be made a thing to grip or ruin us?"

Dr. Hess concluded that the world is small but a great many responsibilities are thrust upon us and we must be ready for them.
