Everything EVERYTHING in which one engages, is a lottery, but none more so than farming. The merchant fills his shelves, and if they are not reduced through sales, he still has the goods. The lawyer and doctor and dentist hang out their shingles and wait more or less impatiently for customers. The preacher and teacher are certain of monthly pay checks if they can satisfy critics, but they struggle along without prospect of burdensome cash returns from their efforts.

But the farmer necessarily plays the agricultural and livestock lottery all the time. He starts out in the spring with buoyed hopes. He plows, plants and cultivates with keyed-up expectations. He must know when to put seed into the ground. He must know what to do in every forward step. He must be on the alert to head off destructive rodent and insect pests. Simultaneously, he watches the uncertainties of the weather. Confidence is tempered by fear bred by unhappy experiences.

The farmer is sometimes liberally rewarded. Sometimes returns are modified by one unavoidable calamity after another. But he is game. He does not allow occasional defeats to extinguish his fire or slow down his program. Contrary to an unfortunate world trend, he acts on his own judgment, and that is an inspirational experience. That is what makes the farm population dynamic, resolute and whole-some.

Byrnes' WE think Secretary Byrnes' speech in Germany was a masterpiece of American principles at a critical juncture in the peace conference. He virtually defied Russia and its subservient satellite, Yugoslavia. The secretary was careful, but firm. He made plain that the United States would see that defeated nations were not tortured, but while kept from war-like plans, would be given a chance to recover and become self-sustaining. He made plain that this country would continue active interest in European affairs to insure a square deal for Europe and to prevent future armed conflict. Byrnes expressed the idea that two costly curses in a generation should now convince us to use preventives.

Especially Russia recoils. Byrnes' defense of human rights is entirely out of line with the soviet union's age-old intolerance and inhumanity. But Russia's conscienceless bosses are not too sodden to understand possibilities of force, and implications in the Byrnes speech should prod the soviet mind to check aggression and remove rattle of sabers beneath specious pleas for peace and good will. The speech may, as hoped, lead Russia away from trying to hog the world trough, and convince it that an orderly world is better for everybody in it including the soviet's tinsel bellwethers.

Farmer complaint against operation of the OPA in connection with the cattle industry is the hazard of having a ceiling on animals marketed for slaughter and none on feeders and none on corn. C. F. Sandahl, farmer east of Wayne, voiced his complaint to us last week. Like many others, he has been trying in vain to harmonize price incongruities in order to stay in the feeding business. Too much put into what one sells knocks the props from under profit prospects. Even OPA officials should be able to see the invincibility of this barrier, and realize its threat to the meat supply. If the administration could brave the voting strength of the CIO, and dissolve the OPA bureau into nothing, farm areas would doubtless be encouraged to renew their grip on livestock production and take their chances in the lottery of supply and demand.

Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Teamsters' union, wrote a labor day article for the Bridgeport, Conn., Herald, and he was not only free from strike threats, but counseled workers to settle differences without quitting their jobs or reducing production. He emphasized the need of increased supplies to insure a healthy economy and to prevent dangerous inflation. He concluded: "Labor can save the United States from inflation if it stays on the job. It will have done much to stabilize conditions throughout the world." Tobin was surprisingly conciliatory.

According to Time magazine, General Douglas MacArthur acts boldly and decisively when a strike is threatened in Japan. Seamen who walked out recently to the interference of necessary shipping, drew this warning from the commander: "Strikes, walkouts or other work stoppages which are inimical to the objective of the military occupation, are prohibited." The men immediately returned to their jobs and gave assurance that the same thing would not happen again.

While the CIO will present united strength in the November balloting, its strange ideology—its strange sense of justice—will consolidate many other forces against candidates it favors. In large industrial centers its vote will count heavily. Farm communities will usually play safe by voting against all CIO endorsements. Its favorites will stand no show in Nebraska or other mid-western states.

Elsie Robinson, columnist, deplors filth in writing or in talking. She says it is thoroughly distasteful to most people.

Bad Manners. (Omaha World-Herald) Stanley Walker's recent Saturday Evening Post article on the decline of New York has attracted a good deal of support and rebuttal. Mr. Walker complained that New York is crowded; it is full of disputation; its restaurants are not what they were; the people are tough and disagreeable; courtesy no longer exists. So he is moving back to Texas.

A common reply to Mr. Walker is that he is suffering from the nostalgia of middle age. Perhaps, too, he has lived in New York so long that he has become provincial. For example, the plague of bad manners to which he objects is certainly not confined to New York.

This plague came with the war, when employes were hard to get. Secure in the knowledge that they wouldn't be fired whatever they did, many gave full play to naturally churlish attitudes. Some pretended to make a virtue of their incivility—"Don't you know there's a war on?"—which made it particularly unbearable.

In war time many people vowed that, come peace, they would go back to those same surly clerks and belatedly use the counter-question, "Don't you know the war's over?" They are still waiting to do so. The plague of discourtesy continues, partly because help is still scarce, and partly because people have got into the habit. It is a sad commentary on human nature to conclude that it probably will not end until jobs are scarce.

Mr. Walker ought to get around the country. Possibly going to Texas will enlighten him.

AN ACUTE PROBLEM. Consolidation of rural school districts as a means of service as well as economy is being emphasized at this time on account of unprecedented teacher scarcity. The Omaha World-Herald comments: "Plainly something will have to be done about the rural school problem. The simple fact is that many of the districts—laid out in the days when children walked to school or got there by horse and buggy—are far too small. Some have only one pupil. Many of these obsolete districts are kept going for sentimental reasons; oldsters hate to see the school they attended abandoned. The solution for the problem is in every case not more money. That, in fact, probably would tend to keep schools going that ought to be closed. The solution would seem to lie in consolidation of districts. Since this is difficult under Nebraska law, the legislature might well study the problem most seriously. The savings that could be made by forming sensible districts would pay for a much higher standard of teaching."

was in Sioux City, but Mrs. Crawford suggested that a new young doctor had just arrived from St. Louis and he likely would make the trip. This was Dr. W. C. Wightman, who like many others, realized that new country was the best place to start in business. He had a little frame shack for an office.

Mr. Giese found Dr. Wightman and the young physician was glad to make the journey. The men hired a team from the Perry livery barn and started out. They rode in the buggy with Mr. Giese's horse tied behind. The two reached the Hansen home about daybreak the next morning. The doctor's services helped Mrs. Hansen, and that fact alone was sufficient compensation to Mr. Giese for the night's trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Giese reared their five children on the farm south of Wakefield and later on their place north of Wayne. The children are Levi of Wayne, Mrs. Anna Shumway of Hartington, Mrs. Lydia McGuire of Pender, Mrs. Lavina Arnds of Illinois, and Mrs. Laura Erickson of South Dakota. The Gieses came to their home in Wayne about 30 years ago.

Wayne's new Memorial park a mile north of town is 60 acres of the Giese home farm.

Pioneers Perform Valuable Service In Transforming Prairie Land Here

Pioneers accomplished for the benefit of the generation many things that are usually taken for granted. Few realize the task of breaking prairie sod and of riding the land of snakes and gophers. But all this had to be done under primitive handicaps to make northeast Nebraska the rich farming region it is today. Henry Giese, who has been in Wayne county 62 years, did his full share in helping develop this section of the state.

Mr. Giese, who was born in Germany 89 years ago last July, came to this country with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Giese, sr., when he was 9 years old. His family located in Illinois. Louie Nuernberger, father of the Nuernbergers of Wakefield, thought that prospects for young folks were better in new territory so he bought land south of the present location of Wakefield. Mr. Giese, a relative of the Nuernbergers, also liked the prospects opening up in Nebraska. He came in 1853 and had only $10 when he arrived. He was employed by Mr. Nuernberger a year.

After Mr. Giese had worked for a while, he was able to buy a team and started breaking prairie. Later he saw the need for a threshing outfit and he brought the first new threshing machine to this territory in 1855. Albert Longe and Max Hensching were his partners, and helped him thresh wheat and oats from Wayne to Wakefield to Pen-young lady who had come with her parents, the John Beckenhauers, to a farm south of Wakefield in 1851. Pioneers Are Religious.

The ordinary tasks in the home, much more numerous in pioneer times than today, kept all members of the household busy throughout each day. But the early settlers always observed the Sabbath. They understood how very much the daily blessings meant in a new land. They found time to worship whether the services were held in homes, schools or in churches. Soon the fine people in Mr. Giese's neighborhood decided to band together and build a church. All denominations united and a little frame church was built about eight miles south of Wakefield. A West Point minister came every two weeks and the community turned out to attend services. After families had gone to church, they usually stopped at their neighbors' homes for a brief visit that varied the monotony and brought valuable exchange of ideas.

Gets Doctor at Night. True Neighborliness was practiced in pioneer times. Everyone was always ready to extend a helping hand. One night Henry Hansen came to Mr. Giese and asked him if he could go to Wayne for a doctor as Mrs. Hansen was ill. Of course, Mr. Giese started right out on his saddle horse. The trip was slow because trails winding through unbroken prairie and over creeks were hard to follow, and especially so in the dark of night. Mr. Giese reached Wayne and went to the home of Dr. R. B. Crawford. The doctor der and the Indian reservation. Mr. Giese found his neighbors wonderfully helpful. Among them were the Longes, Utechts, Slaughters, Bresslers and others.

Gophers Take Corn. Gophers and snakes were thick in pioneer times. Mr. Giese reports that in one season he planted corn twice and each time the gophers scratched it out. At harvest time he realized only a single load of corn from 20 acres.

Mr. Giese was telling of his gopher troubles one day when a neighbor lady suggested that he use a "strumpfhaedel." Mr. Giese was puzzled because "strumpfhaedel" means darned needle in German. Then he realized the neighbor was trying to tell him of strychnine.

PATERNALISM.

Touching what ails present-day society, Felix Morley writing for Nation's Business, shows that dependence on the state, as encouraged by the new deal for a dozen years, develops indifference to personal responsibility. The individual is a moral creature and is sensitive. The state is cold and doesn't care a darn. Morley says this among other things: "It would seem time for us to realize that the essential difference between man in a free society and man under the state is that in the former case he is under a moral direction which is completely absent in the latter. Man is by nature moral and the state is by nature amoral, which does not mean immoral, but simply unmoral—uninfluenced by codes of conduct which are of the greatest importance to men in a free society. It is the amoral characteristic of the state—not any perversion in a particular people—which makes a totalitarian government ruthless, vicious and degenerate. And the difference between human morality and governmental amorality is indicated by the force of the specious slogan: 'My country, right or wrong.' That is accepted in a manner that 'My conduct, right or wrong' could never be, in any social group."

Library News
"And the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts." Mr. Longfellow said — though often wronged, too, especially with school starting. Term papers and reading lists can be made easier with help from the library. It's smart to get started early and avoid the rush. When in doubt, ask your librarian to help you find needed information. An active library card is a good school ally.

The Wayne public library has a display at the fair so look for the Wayne library booth for suggestions for your fall and winter reading.

The copies of the western stories have been worn ragged and are still being read. We have been hunting for new westerns to replace some of these old standbys and have at last found some which we hope will fill the bill. Our new one this week is "California Ranger," by Tex Holt. We hope eventually to have a section of westerns as good as our mystery section.

The new mystery this week is "The Fourth Star," by Richard Burke, a mystery house selection.

"The Dark Wood," by Christine Weston, is the Literary Guild book for September and is now on our rental shelf. It is a love story with a happy ending and is the sort of story readers have been waiting for: a story about Americans of the present day, a story with characters that are like the people you see on the street, people you have for neighbors or friends. The setting is New York City and Maine.

"Independent People," by Hall-dor Laxness, is a translated story from the Icelandic and is called an epic for it is a story of one generation, including the first World War. The theme is man against the universe; the process is the life story of one heroic individual fit to stand as archetype; and the meaning is not regional or even national, but universal.

New Machine for Applying DDT Popular with Livestock

Repeating hand dusting, dipping and spraying methods, this new automatic cattle carrier, manufactured by a Fender, Nebraska, concern, fights livestock pests with a novel back-scratching technique. The new carrier applies insecticides directly to animals as they scratch themselves. Ranchers and dairymen report this "self-help" system the most effective improvement in the pest control field. The new machine lets the animals treat themselves for flies, grubs, lice, ticks and more.

The alfalfa seed was threshed from the windrows by a combine, following a few days of drying.
