power. It means labor union leaders have gone too far in imposing their dictum on workers who want to work and on employers who pay the bills and shoulder the responsibility. Numerous strikes and obstructions to reconstruction in other states doubtless influenced amendment support here. The threat to carry the issue into the courts would seem ill advised. Union leaders should not demand so much that they will lose the ground they have gained.

Paul Mallon, columnist, mentions one new deal blunder which helped precipitate the late landslide. It was permitting Henry Wallace, then member of the cabinet, to make a speech in conflict with the administration's foreign policy. State Secretary Byrnes was trying to deal firmly and justly with Russia when along came Wallace with a sympathetic note for the soviet union. The party in power was thus in conflict with itself.

Government controls with few exceptions, are off. The proposed action follows on the heels of the election whose results were no doubt interpreted as a demand for liquidation of the OPA. It has been a nightmare to many. Prices may go up somewhat, but we believe people will be better satisfied to buy and sell without government restraints. They may regulate the state of the market by detouring around unnecessarily high prices.

It has been said one who hesitates, is lost. Not if he is driving a car and is looking out to avoid a collision. Not if he is asked two prices for something he had in mind to buy. But he is painfully annoying if he hesitates long in expressing himself. If he is too slow and careful he weakens what he has to say. If he hesitates in exercising judgment, he might find himself with none to exercise. Sometimes one should hesitate; sometimes he shouldn't.

We do not recall when Wayne county's election returns failed to score the lead in prompt reporting. To do that, alert action has been necessary on the part of each counting board in the county. County Clerk C. A. Bard has fully measured up to the standard established long ago.

Reports from Washington encourage the belief that there will be cooperation between the White House and the coming republican congress. That will mean sound and speeded progress in reconstruction and a healthier economic future.

The cost of running for congress and the governorship should be modified by extending terms from two to four years. It is not practical to take time from public affairs to engage in a costly political campaign every two years.

Nebraska is said to have polled the smallest vote in last week's election since 1918. Strange so many guaranteed the previous electoral privilege should have neglected to use it.

TOM DEWEY.
 Tom Dewey's unprecedented triumph in New York for reelection to the governorship makes him a strong contender for the republican presidential nomination in 1948. He was a candidate for the nomination in 1940 when the late Wendell Willkie captured the distinction. Dewey was nominated in 1944 but was defeated by President Roosevelt as a war-time expediency. Dewey is still young, and he has amassed a wealth of successful experience. As prosecuting attorney in New York he brought a lot of dangerous racketeers to justice. As governor he has served fairly and economically. He knows the value of people's money, and could be depended on to resist needless waste. His record in office and his support in the late election certainly strengthen his chances two years hence.

SCHOOLS.
 The expected happened in defeat of the proposed constitutional amendment to provide an additional eight-million-dollar fund for Nebraska schools. But results far from justify any assumption that people are indifferent to adequate support of the schools. Teachers are often under-paid, but any lack in that respect should be handled by the state legislature and the different school districts. So voters evidently concluded. They did not relish the idea of putting into the constitution something that should be up to the judgment of responsible groups. Voters wanted to avoid possible remote control. They were uncertain how necessary funds could be raised. They were fearful of the load imposed by the constitution in the event of a dull period. But the campaign should awaken substantial interest in the welfare of Nebraska's institutions of learning. While being careful, the legislature and school district officers should not be parsimonious.

For and Against
 THE Norfolk Daily News mentions points for and against the unicameral legislative system. The party label, designating legislative candidates in other states, fixes party responsibility, whereas the unicameral, without party designations, encourages consideration of personal fitness.

The News points out that in South Dakota where party designations are used, only four democrats were elected out of a total house and senate membership of 110. Voters were evidently influenced by the party name. The News says:
 "When it comes to men, non-partisan voting probably results in a more discriminating choice than partisan voting. When it comes to issues, it's something else again. There is where the weakness of the non-partisan ticket is found. Without party labels the voter has no platform to help him in his decision."
 "There are the two sides of the question. The choice is for each individual to make."

Senator Hugh Butler was the high man on the ticket in the late election. Val Peterson scored a big majority, enough to satisfy his worthy ambition. The senator's surpassing majority is proof of high appraisal of his efficient and conscientious public service. Equipped by the right kind of experience, Val Peterson will make a sound, constructive governor, fully maintaining the high gubernatorial standard to which Nebraska has long been accustomed.

Victory for the constitutional amendment restricting labor union power in this state, does not mean disapproval of unions or of organized effort to improve working conditions. It simply forbids abuse of

HOTELS for LIVESTOCK

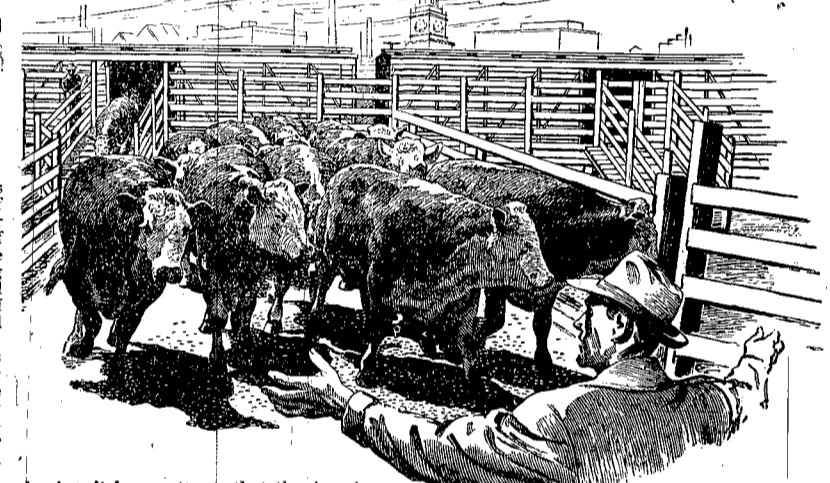

The central livestock market is as American as the "hot dog." No other country has the like of it. European sellers and buyers haggle over individual animals. In South America most of the dealing is done right on the estancias, where the livestock is raised. But here in the leading livestock nation of the world, for 75 years central markets have played a big part in the job of moving meat toward dinner tables of the United States. When a carload of livestock rolls off the prairies or out of the mountains into one of the 65 or more great central markets, the animals are "greeted" and "registered" at the unloading dock, much as travelers are received and registered in hotels. From there they are sent to their "rooms"—the pens assigned to the commission man to whom the owner has shipped his animals. There these hogs, cattle, calves and lambs are rested and given food and drink. Just as hotels compete for guests, so these central markets compete with each other for the business of accommodating the 88 million head of livestock which come in each year. Thousands of livestock buyers and order buyers bid against each other and the sale is made to the highest bidder. With 26,000 meat packers and other commercial slaughterers active in livestock

Things Are NOT Always as They Seem Soda Bill Sez: ... to be a success at farming, you have to dig in. ... if you want to realize that cattle in the air, you had better get down to earth first.

PREPARATION OF CORN FOR CATTLE FEEDING by P. S. Shearer Iowa State College How should Corn Get cattle feeders prepare corn to get best results from their feeding? As ear corn, shelled corn, corn-and-cob meal or ground shelled corn? The following may be helpful in deciding: 1. Are hogs following the cattle? If not, the evidence seems clear that grinding either the whole ear or shelled corn will pay. Feeding ear corn is especially wasteful if hogs are not following the cattle, or if lots are muddy and the hogs have little chance to salvage corn thrown out of the bunks or passed through the steers. 2. Is the corn hard or soft? Corn varieties differ greatly in hardness of kernel. Grinding hard corn is recommended, whereas grinding might not be needed with softer corn. 3. What will the preparation cost? Costs of shelling and grinding differ from farm to farm due to labor, power and other charges. If the cost exceeds the gains derived, preparation doesn't pay. 4. Will an experienced, careful feeder do the feeding? Corn-and-cob meal is rated as a safer preparation in the hands of inexperienced feeders than either shelled or ground shelled corn. Corn is a good cattle feed any way it may be prepared and one will not go far wrong with any of the standard preparations. Even our damaged, moldy corn surprised many with its feeding value this past winter.

Martha Logan Recipe for APPLE TORTE Yield: 6 servings 1 tablespoon melted butter 1/2 cup sifted flour 1 egg 2 teaspoons baking powder 4 tart cooking apples 1/2 cup nuts or 1/2 cup chopped raisins or dates 1/2 teaspoon vanilla Pare and chop apples. Sift dry ingredients together. Combine all ingredients. Spread in a 9-inch square buttered cake pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) about 30 minutes, or until apples are soft. Serve hot or cold with foamy or hard sauce.

buying, it is easy to see that the American livestock marketing system is the most competitive in the world. These livestock hotels are a separate branch of the livestock-meat industry. They are privately owned. Swift & Company does not own a single share of any stockyards company.

SPREAD When visiting with livestock producers on farms or ranches, or at meetings, the subject of "spread" often comes up for discussion. Then I give them an explanation of the difference between the price they get for livestock and the price we meat packers receive for the meat we sell. To me it is a source of continual surprise that the spread is not greater than it is. During my years of experience in the livestock-meat industry, here is what I have learned about spread. We at Swift & Company have been paying farmers and ranchers approximately 76¢ on the average, out of every dollar we receive from those to whom we sell, for all products we process and handle, including hides, glands, and all by-products. That leaves us 24¢ to cover the cost of processing and marketing. Out of the 24¢ comes the cost of buying livestock and other agricultural products. The cost of preparation and refrigeration. The cost of loading them into cars and trucks. The cost of transporting them to our branch houses or to retailers. The cost of branch house operation and of billing and delivering the products to the retail dealers. In addition, we have taxes to pay; plus insurance and all the other necessary costs of doing business. When all these expenses have been paid, we make a profit, which over a period of years has averaged a fraction of a cent a pound on the 6 1/2 billion pounds of products we handle annually. There is no other business in the country that does so much for so little. F.M. Simpson, Agricultural Research Department

Woman Is Ahead In Rattler Count

Scarce Items Are Stolen While Lady Is Out for Scarce Articles.

At Goldfield, Nev., Henry Carlson came home from his mine and told his wife that he had killed a large rattlesnake. She listened, then spoiled his story by announcing that she had stopped her car and killed four rattlers with rocks during a 26-mile drive from Tonopah, Nev.

Mrs. Jessie M. Junge, Felton, Minn., made a hurried trip to near-by Moorhead in the hopes she could purchase a few hard-to-get items, meat, sugar, soap, etc. When she got back home she discovered thieves had broken into her house. They too, were looking for scarce articles. Mrs. Junge said they stole her supply of sugar, raisins, coffee and a 15-pound roast which she had left cooking in the oven.

At Salt Lake City, Utah, the United States employment office adopted a new line of persuasion in urging women to take part-time clerk jobs in labor-short Salt Lake City. It advised that clerking was the best way to get first-hand information on what merchandise is available.

The man who entered Fred Lieberman's florist shop at Chicago asked for the best gardenias available. As Mr. Lieberman finished wrapping the flowers another man entered and the first customer greeted him. Then both produced pistols and bound Mr. Lieberman with his own necktie. They took $150 from the cash drawer and picked up the best gardenias in the shop which the first gunman had ordered.

At Bonner Springs, Kans., just as Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Wasson sat down to a mealless dinner they heard something strike their house. In the yard they found a three-pound pheasant with his neck broken. The Wassons had meat for dinner the next day.

Was Kilroy an army bugler? Harry Grimlund, Lake City grade school principal, Seattle, Wash., reported that some one entered the school, made off with a trumpet and case and left this sign of the fabulous army chafacter on the blackboard: "Kilroy's been here."

Mary Jacob, a bus girl at a San Francisco restaurant, found a woman's pocketbook bulging with currency. She took it to the manager, who estimated it contained at least $10,000. Mary had visions of the usual reward for honesty. But was Mary any richer? The woman who lost the money came back to claim it, and swished out without even a "thank you."

Two hundred women delegates to the 34th annual meeting of the national safety congress at Chicago, watched while Dr. Fred Bonnet burned a pair of nylons to demonstrate that nylons are not a fire hazard. The stockings smoldered and shrieveled but never burst into flame. The women said privately they didn't care whether nylons were safe or not.

A decision by Maurice Levy, 640-pound professional wrestler, to fly from Denver to Grand Junction, Colo., posed an engineering problem for Western Airlines. Airline employees said they had to communicate with their engineers in Burbank, Cal., before putting Mr. Levy on the reservation list. "They told us to seat him in the front of the plane, to remove a chair arm so he could sit on two seats, and to get him an extra wide safety belt," a harassed ticket agent reported.

Firemen at Spokane, Wash., searched the apartment house from collar to attic for the fire that a tenant had reported. He heard crackling. The crackling noise, deduced Capt. Arthur Perusse, came from crickets.

Glen R. Stewart, Decatur, Ill., ran up against the usual problem of finding materials when he started to build his four-room house. But he found a substitute for lumber in ammunition boxes, leftovers from the war. He first planned to use the wood from the boxes but later decided a stronger building would result by leaving the boxes together.

Two state police squad cars and one from the Kankakee, Ill., police department threw up a barrier on a highway and closed in on four men. The chase followed a report from a nearby community that one of the four men was carrying a gun. The investigating police halted the car and found the man still had a gun. But they discovered it was all right. He was a Springfield, Ill., detective going to Chicago for a convention.

Policewoman Elizabeth Rickey of San Francisco doesn't let her small size deter her from doing her duty. She saw a 150-pound man snatch a case of whisky from a truck and gave chase. The culprit dropped the liquor and tried to defend himself. Mrs. Rickey collared the man, dragged him 50 feet to a call box and held him with one hand while she telephoned.

Police Lt. Raymond Dahl of Milwaukee, Wis., got a tip Friday, right out of a horse's mouth. A telephone operator called excitedly to report a receiver off the hook at a downtown address "and hearing breathing like someone in distress." Lt. Dahl dispatched officers and alerted the rescue squad. The officers returned to report the receiver unhooked was in a barn and the heavy breathing that of a horse munching oats beside it.

At St. Peter, Minn., Arthur Noteboom landed a 6 1/2 pound bass when he shot a small teal on the opening day of the duck hunting season. The duck landed in open water and when Mr. Noteboom rowed over to retrieve it he found a bass choking on the duck. He scooped both into his boat.

A thief who stole a dress from J. T. Purviance, Tacoma, Wash., returned it with a tuck, giving evidence of an attempt to reduce the size. But on his return trip the prowler took three blouses and two women's suits, all a size smaller than the dress.

Presents View Of Agriculture in Midwestern Area

It is entirely possible that the man who is fixed to handle early pigs in 1947 will find a splendid market and will be repaid, according to Howard J. Gramlich, Chicago, general agricultural agent for the Chicago and Northwestern railway. The fall pig crop was light and more pork will be needed next summer when fall pigs usually supply the demand. A sow bred November 1 would farrow February 22. These pigs, under modern methods of production, could be marketable in August. A Wisconsin farmer bred 14 sows in September, 1945; the sows farrowed in January with a total of 140 pigs; and July 29 he sold 131 pigs at an average weight of 212 pounds. This is ample proof that winter pigs can be handled satisfactorily even in a state as far north as Wisconsin.

Confusion and misunderstanding continue regarding the livestock business. Many overlook the fact that it takes 18 months to grow a yearling feeder steer and six months additional to fatten him. It requires 12 months to produce pork. Farm animals must be fed twice a day and when they are ready for market the farmer has no alternative but to ship them. If held too long, the cost of feeding can result in a loss rather than a profit. The current misunderstanding on cattle is accentuated by the shortage of long-fed cattle. Normally, many steers are placed on grain feed between February and June. These cattle supply the trade with corn fed beef during fall months. In the spring of 1946 practically no cattle were placed on feed. Then the margin between feeder cattle prices and ceiling price on fat cattle was very narrow. Even worse was the acute shortage of corn and the high non-official market for that corn. Feed lots now are full of cattle but most of these have gone on feed since September 1. Apparently the supply of pork in the next few months will be rather generous as the spring pig crop is reaching finishing stage. However, next spring a shortage of hogs will result from a very light fall pig crop.

Waxy maize corn, matured on 20,000 acres in Iowa and Illinois, is a source of starch which lends itself to many industrial uses. It takes the place of tapioca starch, supply of which was curtailed by the war. It is especially useful in making mucilage for postage stamps, sizing for cotton goods, etc. Iowa experiment station developed this variety of corn by crossing good hybrids with a strain of Chinese corn. From a small start in 1942, production increased to a million bushels in 1946. The greater variety of outlets, the easier it is to stabilize markets for farm commodities, Mr. Gramlich states.

Intensive research in swine breeding at the University of Minnesota the past 10 years has resulted in perfecting a new breed of hogs. Several other new breeds are well on the way to development. Developed through in-breeding and cross-breeding, fat shoats shown recently weigh 25 pounds more than the casual observer would estimate. They have a very high percentage of lean on the carcass. They are exceedingly efficient gainers. Many gain 100 pounds on 300 pounds of food. The new breeds are being developed not only with large litters but a large number of pigs actually weaned per sow. When pigs can be developed to 210 pounds at 140 days of age and show one pound of gain for each three pounds of feed, there is no need to worry about pork, in the opinion of Mr. Gramlich. Spring shoats busily engaged in husking corn "a la carte" make a fine sight as they work through fields, occasionally knocking down a stalk and eating kernels from the ear. The practice of "hogging" down fields is a sound one, Mr. Gramlich finds, for it saves expense of harvesting. Provides healthy method of feeding hogs. Gives hogs fresh protein out of the soil, scatters fertilizer in the field and speeds up fattening of hogs. Mr. Gramlich advises planting a patch of early corn that can be "hogged" down in August and having other fields for later months. He would also put in a field of rye and have an abundance of late fall and early spring pasture.

Desire to Build College Starts Here Very Early

The constant struggle for adequate educational facilities which finally concluded in establishment of Wayne State Teachers College, was vividly portrayed by Mrs. C. H. Bright in a discussion to Minerva club Monday last week at the home of Mrs. F. G. Dale. Mrs. Bright showed how citizens of Wayne county were educationally conscious and how they strived to further educational development in Wayne.

The story of education in Wayne county dates back to 1871 when Willard Graves deeded 10,000 acres of land for a college. Mr. Graves desired that a college of liberal courses be established for both men and women. Provisions of the grant were not fulfilled and the trust was set aside in 1895. The next attempt to found a college was Wayne's Lutheran academy, which was in charge of Rev. W. C. McCool, brother-in-law of Mrs. E. W. Huse. The academy was given land south of the present site of the Wayne cemetery. The first commencement was held in 1888.

Another prospect for a college arose in 1889. For a number of years the county superintendent had been conducting a summer institute for teachers and others in Wayne. J. M. Pile, a teacher in Fremont normal school, came to Wayne in 1889 as an instructor in the institute. Mr. Pile was enthusiastic about the possibilities of Wayne as a normal school center. Plans were then made to establish one in Wayne. A tract of land adjoining Wayne on the northeast was purchased for $2,746.15 and deeded to the Nebraska college association. This tract was divided into 600 lots which sold at $35 each, raising $20,000. Two blocks were set aside for a campus. The money raised was used for erecting a building and equipment. The board of trustees elected Mr. Pile president of the property which was given to him rent free for a term of five years with a stipulation that if the attendance should reach 200 in the fifth year, the property would be deeded to him free of encumbrance.

The new Nebraska Normal College opened in November, 1891. The attendance grew to such an extent that the property was deeded to Mr. Pile in 1897. By 1910 the college had eight buildings. In 1909 Mr. Pile's health failed and he offered the school to the state. The most exciting and important event in the town's history was the fight in the legislature in 1909 for the passage of the bill to purchase the Nebraska Normal College for a state normal school. After much discussion and hard work on the part of educationally conscious persons in this territory, the bill passed. Mr. Pile had passed away, however, before its passage.

The bill carried no appropriation for operating the school. The normal board arranged with Mrs. Pile to own it until the state could make arrangements. The president and two faculty members had been elected by the normal board. In the treasury was $20,000. U. S. Conn wondered if this could be used. He and Mr. Ludden, secretary of the normal board, and Mr. Bryant, state treasurer, worked out a plan, which was declared legal, which allowed the use of the $20,000 for teachers' salaries.

The Nebraska Normal school opened in September, 1910, with 80 students and 17 faculty. A number of men from the country entered college shortly after Thanksgiving and stayed until spring. Because their help was needed on their farms, they were able to remain in school only that length of time. Mr. Conn helped this group organize under the name, "Corn Feds" and assigned to them a faculty sponsor. Each student worked hard to make up the required courses in the short period.

The next event of interest was the appropriation of $55,000 in 1911 for the library and science building. The $100,000 auditorium was built in 1915. In 1925 the training school was built under the direction of President Conn and the supervision of Prof. E. J. Hunter. In 1922, Connell hall was built and in 1926, Neihardt and Pile halls were constructed.

The first annual commencement address was given by Gov. Aldrich to three graduates. The first student, publication was known as the "Flame," the Goldenrod was started in 1912; the Spizerinkum, the first annual, in 1914; wireless was installed in Wayne in 1916; trouble developed on the Mexican border in 1917 and Wayne boys joined Nebraska national guard; 300 students served in World War I and six made the supreme sacrifice; John G. Neihardt was made poet laureate in 1924; Spizz dedicated to Dr. Conn in 1935 for his 25th year of service; victory bell was presented to the college by the Katz club; many served in World War II. These and many other incidents will make any Wayne Stater proud to say "Alma Mater, Hall to Thee."
