For Better English

COMPLAINT is made that many freshmen enrolling in the University of Nebraska are pitifully lacking in knowledge of correct English. One instructor expressed the opinion that deficiencies came from small high schools...

Lincoln had less than a year of schooling, but he had the zeal and courage to study and learn. His ideas were sound and his diction was faultless. Witness his Gettysburg speech as an example.

Lincoln's powerful incentive to learn and excel is no doubt absent in students who fall short of accepted standards. Teachers disposed and able to impart ardent interest would perhaps find results in line with expectations.

Capper Warns

GOVERNMENT paternalism received a body blow from Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, as quoted, with comments, by the Sioux City Journal.

"The idea that the government owes each person a living; and that government can establish and maintain prosperity by legislation and by spending. This false philosophy that government can care for citizens that it is possible for them to get something for nothing, and that a nation can spend its way to prosperity, is reflected in the hundreds of bills introduced in congress providing for more and more spending."

The Journal reemphasizes the wisdom of cutting out the "gimme" habit if people expect to get out of the red and balance the budget. Another paragraph from the Capper criticism:

"It is time that individuals and groups, cities, states, businessmen rid themselves of this habit of "double-thinking" and the false philosophy which inspires it. They should stop demanding that congress reduce taxes while at the same time they write their congressman to get financial aid from the federal treasury. If it doesn't stop, we will have trouble avoiding a financial smashup."

The Journal offers this closing comment: "Other thoughtful citizens have arrived at this same conclusion before this. But enthusiasm for a federal grant is likely to run so high that one hesitates to throw cold water on the project. The Kansas senator has said what needed saying, and repeated until the soundness of the idea soaks home. Let it be hoped that his message will get wide circulation and attention."

The Houston, Texas, Chronicle reports the gift of $160,000,000 for educational and medical purposes by H. G. Cullen, rich oil land owner and producer. This act of philanthropy is said to be the largest ever known in the south.

It is hoped warm weather and mellow ground will welcome Arbor day, April 22, the time set apart for planting trees. Once a treeless state, Nebraska is now dotted with groves, thanks to the spirit imparted by Arbor day.

In Nation's Business, Felix Morley, writing of the first three months of divided authority in Washington, is encouraged by the practical sense exhibited by the executive and the republican majority in both houses.

NO INTEREST About 200 votes were cast in the three Wayne wards at the late election for unopposed candidates. Probably around 1,000 eligible voters, with no competition and no turning out, no interest developed.

conservation service with AAA. In many cases a farmer must call upon three or four federal offices at his county seat while the "Mrs." does her Saturday shopping. This causes delays and puts a hardship on the farmer, Dr. Condra said in effect.

The U. S. communist party is flooding members of congress with propaganda in an effort to prevent the solons from outlawing their organization. A recent letter from the communies states that Secretary of Labor Schweinnbach's suggestion that the communist party be outlawed is in the reds' opinion "a direct violation of the principles enunciated by Secretary of State Marshall."

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA By James C. Olson Superintendent, State Historical Society Most characteristic of the original dwellings occupied by the first settlers in much of old Nebraska was the sod house. Indeed, so typical was this type of dwelling in the early days that the Upper Great Plains—Kansas, Nebraska, and the Dakotas—have come to be known as "the sod house frontier."

The sod house was just another of man's answers to the problem of subduing the western plains. West of the 98th meridian there were virtually no trees. There was no way to haul lumber. Shelter had to be provided, and the most suitable material was the tough, prairie sod.

There were many types of sod houses. The simplest was the dug-out, which was simply a room cut into the side of a hill or ravine and walled up in front with sod. Quite frequently the dugout was combined with a regular sod house, thus taking advantage of the economy in construction offered by the terrain and the greater convenience and comfort of a house built above ground.

Where possible, lumber was used for the frame, particularly for the roof. Sheeting was nailed on the rafters and tar paper spread over the sheeting, which again was covered with sod. If lumber was not available, in many cases it was not—the settler had to make out as best he could, using crooked limbs, brush, coarse prairie hay, and a thick covering of sod and dirt for the roof.

Interiors were furnished as best the settler could. If possible, board floors were laid. If not, the dirt was simply stamped down. Often the walls were calcimined or white-washed. Pegs were driven into the walls for hooks, and such furniture as had been brought from the east was used to give the place the appearance of home.

The sod house had numerous advantages. It was relatively easy to construct. It was cheap and durable. It was fairly warm in winter and cool in summer. At best, though, it represented a hard life, particularly for the women. The State Historical Society has over 1,000 pictures of sod houses, most of them from Custer county. Probably the best antidote in the world for gloominess about present day housing conditions is to leaf through this file of pictures.

To Give Message On Radio Program

Mrs. Atwater leads a girl scout troop which planned a trip to France this summer. Because ship reservations cannot be made, the trip is postponing its trip until 1948. Then the girls will be more familiar with French and will have had another year's training as counselors at camp.

The scouts recently sent a box of chocolates to French girls with whom they correspond and the troop in France divided the pieces carefully to make them last longer. The girls write that sweets are available only on the black market and then at $8 a pound.

Ruth Mary Atwater has been accepted as Iowa's representative at the international encampment of Girl Scouts at Camp Barbee, Pa., June 25 to July 16 to observe the 85th anniversary of scouting. One girl represents each state and two girls come from each foreign country where there are scouts or guides. The plan is to have a cross section of American girlhood, representing all classes and religious faiths. Applicants have to have experience in primitive camping and skills which they can share with other girls. Ruth Mary also speaks some French and Spanish and expects to enjoy association with French and Latin American girls.

Mrs. Atwater plans to take her troop camping the week-end of the 18th and she will assist the leader of Jane Atwater's troop on an overnight camp May 10.

SAME

Same super-strong shell better than over horses' legs—only one-sixth of a horse's leg.

Same inner-shell center reinforcing layer much like your thumb nail or a cow's horn.

Same end-grain wear like the lasting end-grain wood in a butcher's chopping block.

Same secret triple-tanning process tans it pliable as buckskin. Stays soft.

WOLVERINE Shell HORSEHIDE WORK SHOES

YES—Wolverines are same as always. No other work shoes like them. Shell Horsehide is Nature's only 3-ply hide—three layers growing as one piece—and the center layer is the inner-shell. Wolverine's secret triple-tanning formula—same as for 40 years past—tans this shell horsehide to buckskin softness yet retains all the extra strength and wear. Come in soon and see these wonderful Wolverine Shell Horsehide Work Shoes. See—and feel—the amazing difference for yourself.

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA
By James C. Olson
Superintendent, State Historical Society
In the Missouri river towns of old Nebraska a sure sign that spring had arrived was the appearance of the first steamboat churning its way up the Big Muddy after the ice of winter had broken. At the first blast of its whistle, all normal activity in the community stopped, as virtually the entire population rushed down to the river front to greet the captain, crew and passengers, and to watch the unloading of such merchandise as was destined for the local stores.
In the days before the railroad, the arrival of the first steamboat of the season was one of the most significant events of the year. It meant that the long winter's isolation had been broken, that contact once again had been established with the outside world, that another season of growth for the new land had begun. More immediately, it meant that stocks of clothing and food, depleted by the demands of winter, could be replenished.
It is little wonder, then, that most communities marked such an event with joyous celebration, for which the boat itself usually provided the setting and the means. Although most of the boats were not luxuriously equipped, occasionally a band could be mustered from among the crew, and if not a full band, there was sure to be a deck hand on board with a banjo or fiddle. The larders usually were well stocked, and liquor always flowed freely over the bar.
It is little wonder, too, that the newspapers of the time frequently heralded the arrival of the first boat of the season in bold-faced type, and with plenty of exclamation marks. For example, under a heading which screamed, "The First Boat! Immense Excitement! The Platte Valley! Takes the Horns!" the Nebraska News chronicled as follows the appearance of the first boat to reach Nebraska City in 1858:
"Our writings were disturbed last evening at 7 o'clock by the wringing of bells, the thrilling whistle of the engine, and shouts of 'A Boat! A Boat!' The streets were at once filled with men and boys running to the wharf to meet the first boat of the season. It proved to be the Platte Valley... This is a new boat, her first trip—the first boat of the season, and made the trip from St. Louis to this place in six days, an unprecedentedly quick one considering boat condition of the river. The Platte Valley discharged a good amount of freight and passengers, and his started on her upward trip to Omaha."
The Nebraska Advertiser wrote in the same vein of the first boat to reach Brownville in the spring of 1857: "Three cheers for the first boat of the season! The steamer St. Mary passed up the river this morning. Her gentlemanly officers have our thanks for favors. Success to the St. Mary."

Burning of Fields Not Good Practice
Many times each spring one can see fields being cleaned by burning. The occasions when it is wise to burn crop residues are very rare in northeast Nebraska, states Dixon County Agent Howard Gilaspie. It is very difficult to determine the advisability of burning. Soils are in great need for organic matter. Most farms do not produce enough livestock to cover the land sufficiently with barnyard waste. Crop residues are very necessary to improve or maintain good soil tilth. Good tilth is essential for good production, as tilth aids in permitting more moisture to be absorbed, gives the soil a higher moisture retaining quality and improves the life of the soil.
Burning destroys life in the soil and soil texture becomes less desirable for crop production and encourages soil erosion. If discing, plowing or subsoiling does not satisfy, piling some place out of the way for deterioration and later use on the field may be an alternative.
Jay Crawford, 45, of Ponca died in Sioux City bus station where he suffered two heart attacks.

Announces Details of $20,000,000 Price Reductions

Details of the recently announced International Harvester policy of making price reductions to save users of our products approximately $20,000,000 a year have now been worked out. We have reduced prices on 163 models. These cover 12 basic models of farm tractors, 123 basic models of farm machines, 16 basic models of industrial tractors and engines, and 12 models of motor trucks, as well as certain motor truck attachments. The new lower prices are effective as of March 10, 1947.

These reductions were made not because of any decline in demand, but because we believe nothing is more important to this country than to lower the prices of the goods people buy.

While prices have not been changed on all products, we have made reductions wherever possible, in the amounts possible. Prices of many of our most popular products have been substantially lowered.

Altogether, more than half of the company's customers will be benefited by the reductions, which range from 1% to 23.8% and from $2.50 to $300 per item, based on list prices, F.O.B. Chicago.

Since the people have demanded that the government withdraw from price control in peacetime, the responsibility to keep prices in check is back where it should be—in the hands of business and industry. The business outlook makes it possible for us to move toward the goal of lower prices, and we have felt a duty to act as promptly as possible.

Our ability to maintain these lower prices will depend on the supply and price of materials we buy from others and on uninterrupted production at reasonable wage levels.

The prices listed here carry out our announced policy that "Any price is too high if it can be reduced."

We All Want GOOD Tavern Operators

YOU want competent, careful men to operate the taverns in your town. So do your neighbors. The brewing industry, too, wants its product sold by men who conduct their places of business in the public interest.

To obtain this result, the law empowers local authorities to examine, under oath, those applying for license renewals or a new license.

Further, local authorities must consider protests from citizens who report a law violation or bad conduct on the part of an applicant.

A license renewal may be withheld or a new license denied if there is cause.

Re-licensing time is here. This Committee urges every citizen to act now in supplying evidence of misconduct or law violation.

Do your community a service by cooperating to insure that licenses shall be granted only to law-abiding operators.

Gangsters in the Grass

Weeds and brush are gangsters in the grass. They literally steal your cattle and sheep by reducing the carrying capacity of grazing land or pastures. They rob your soil of moisture and minerals. They choke the life out of your grass.

Mesquite and sagebrush in Western range country are often thieving plants. They're tough and aggressive. The carrying capacity of a hundred million acres of good grazing land has been greatly reduced by these two alone. Weeds and brush can be burned or poisoned, grubbed out with bulldozers or yanked out with tractors and cables. Grass thrives again when the brush is gone. Then, cattle or sheep production can be increased, sometimes as much as 300%.

From farming states come reports of doubled beef production per acre of pasture simply by mowing weeds. In dairying sections startling improvements in production, flavor, and milk and cream profits have resulted from cutting pasture weeds two or three times a season. Promising experimental work is proceeding with 2, 4-D and other new chemical weed killers. Spraying pastures is proving effective in destroying these livestock rustlers. Once weeds are under control, pastures benefit by liming, fertilizing, reseeding with recommended pasture mixtures, by harrowing or disking to break up manure. Few crops give as great return for a little attention as does grass. A good starting point in an improved grass program is to take steps to control weeds and brush.

We—both you and Swift—are interested in making the best use of what we have. It has been said that "a penny saved is a penny earned." There are many dollars to be saved by making the most efficient use of grass lands. We suggest that you contact your state agricultural college, county agent, or vocational agricultural teacher for further information.

OUR CITY COUSIN City Cousin, Smart in school, Thought that he could Lead a mule... April fool!

Price balances supply and demand There is always a demand for meat. Yes, at some price. But that price is not determined by the meat's cost, or set by the meat packer. It is set by what the consumers are willing and able to pay for the meat and by-products. That is something which must be known and remembered if one is to understand the meat business.

A good many people think that the meat packers sell meat for the cost of the livestock, plus expense, plus a profit. But that is not how meat prices are made. We must sell our meat—because it is perishable. We hope, of course, to sell it at a price which gives us a profit. But profit or loss, we must sell it. As our president, John Holmes, said recently, "We seek the price that balances supply and demand. Sometimes this is a profitable price; sometimes there is a loss. The records show that, on the average, we make a modest profit year by year."

As for prices paid for livestock, they, too, are set by the forces of supply and demand. No meat packer could control them because there is so much competition both in buying and selling. There are over 4,000 meat packers and 20,000 commercial slaughterers competing daily for live animals.

Things are NOT always as they seem Which weighs more? The cubic foot block of iron, or those four big rolls of 20' fence wire? The wire looks much heavier, but it isn't. They weigh the same—291 pounds each.

No, things are not always as they seem. Take that fence wire, for example. The fence nicker paid perhaps 2¢ a pound for the iron. You buy it as fencing at around 7¢ a pound. That leaves a "spread" of 5¢ a pound between the raw material and the finished product. This "spread" covers heat treating, drawing the wire, weaving it, rolling, and other processes we may not know about. It includes also manufacturer's profit, transportation, jobbers' and retailers' costs and profits, and delivery to you.

There is also a "spread" between what you producers get for livestock and what you pay the meat dealer for meat. For one thing, an average 1000-pound steer produces only 543 pounds of meat and 161 pounds of by-products, both edible and inedible. In processing there is unrecoverable shrink and waste of 296 pounds. We also have the costs of "disassembling" live animals into meat, refrigerating, transporting to market, and delivery to retail stores. The "spread" covers also retailers' costs and profits—plus a profit for the meat packer which averages only a small fraction of a cent per pound of product handled.

PRODUCERS BENEFIT FROM QUALITY CONTROL

Quality Control protects the buyer of Swift products. It also serves the farmer. For it insists that his products be processed into the best possible consumer products.

"When Mr. or Mrs. America buys a Swift product, they expect top quality," says H. S. Mitchell, director of our Research Laboratories. "They also depend on it to be just as good as the last time they bought it. That's why they keep coming back for Swift products. They have every right to expect uniform high quality. And it's the job of the quality control system to make sure that they get it."

Quality Control begins with the livestock and other "raw materials" selected by Swift buyers. Next, it lays down exact written specifications for the control of each step in the processing of many products. Finally, it sets up strict quality standards for the finished products.

Our Research Laboratories are in twenty-one cities. More than 1,000,000 exacting tests are made each year in our Quality Control program. Each test takes time and work. But constant testing is the only way we can be certain that the quality of Swift products is uniformly high. This constant Quality Control not only builds confidence in Swift products, but it also helps create a steady, dependable market for the livestock and other raw materials we purchase from producers. A permanently successful business must be grounded on the solid foundation of uniform quality.

Judging Producing Ability of Heifer Calves by W. W. Sweet Bureau of Dairy Industry U. S. Department of Agriculture

The results of preliminary analyses of data obtained by scientists in the Bureau of Dairy Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, offer much promise that dairymen will soon have a new, practical, money-saving system for judging the future producing ability of heifer calves.

We have found that by examining the udder of a dairy heifer when she is 4 months old we can get a good idea whether or not she will be a good milk producer. We think that with a little practice any farmer can learn to judge heifer calves the same way.

Working with our experimental dairy herd at Beltsville, Maryland, we first determined, by feel, the average udder development of calves. Then we graded the udders as High, Medium, or Low. Later we checked the grades of these calves against their milk production records as cows. We found a fairly close match between the grades of the calves and the milk production of the cows.

Since these results are based entirely on the study of animals in one herd, the plan must be rigidly tested for reliability in other herds where the inheritance for milk production
