Accidents Increase

CAPTAIN C. J. Sanders of Nebraska's safety patrol, reported recently that the state's accident death toll was 94 for 1947. Toll for the same period in 1946 was 88. The captain's report explains:

"This increase shows that greater care is needed this year. With a heavy increase in tourist travel for the coming summer months, accidents are more likely to increase."

"The commonness of traffic offenses, which have contributed to many traffic accidents, is shown in the patrol's April activity report of Captain C. J. Sanders.

"Five hundred forty four motorists were arrested for dangerous traffic violations. Heading the list were 152 arrests for speeding, 71 for reckless driving, 61 for drunken driving, and 47 for stop sign violations.

"In addition to the arrests, 420 motorists were given written warnings for dangerous driving practices. The patrol issued 935 violation or 'must repair' cards to motorists for operating motor vehicles with faulty equipment. Improper lights headed the list with 387 cards being issued.

"In its efforts to render service the patrol assisted 827 motorists in distress, removed 340 obstructions from the highways, gave 96 safety programs and recovered 10 stolen cars."

Easing Tax Load

NEBRASKA'S SENATOR Hugh Butler is convinced that the economy program now being considered in Washington will, if adopted, succeed in both reducing taxes and reducing the national debt. He looks for a 20 to 30 per cent cut in income taxes, and he expects pending legislation to trim a few billions from the public debt. All needed is the exercise of common business sense. Addressing the senate recently in an endorsement of the proposed bill to reduce individual income tax rates, Senator Butler declared:

"We have now reached the point where we do not have to choose between debt reduction and tax reduction. We can do both. This bill, in effect, provides for both."

Pointing to the savings to government spending already made by the republican-controlled appropriations committee, Senator Butler estimated that it might be possible to achieve savings of as much as four and one-half billion dollars. "Under these circumstances," the senator said, "we may be able to reduce the national debt by four to six billion dollars during the next fiscal year."

Talking to the new deal, Senator Butler observed: "I can understand why many adherents of the new deal do not wish to reduce taxes. They want us to tax, so that

Washington, D. C. May 29, 1947

This is the time of the year when Washington lays out the welcome mat for tourists. As a matter of fact, the city's guests from all over the nation will be journeying here until next fall to see how the federal government functions, a view of historical monuments, and may take time out to feed the pigeons in Lafayette Square across the street from the White House.

Among the vacationers who have been visiting Capitol Hill recently are several high school graduating classes from neighboring Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Probably Nebraska's high school seniors would call it "sneak day" if they took part in the 24 hours fun.

The school youngsters usually start their day by posing for commercial photographers in front of the capitol building. This is followed by a general tour of the building itself, including a look at a room which formerly housed the U. S. supreme court (the room was also the scene of the late President Lincoln signing the Emancipation Proclamation and the old senate chamber). Before leaving the building, the seniors will take a squint at the senate and house in session.

But this isn't all. Before the student's go home they journey to Mount Vernon (George Washington's estate), travel to Arlington cemetery and stand before the tomb of the unknown soldier of World War I, receive passes to visit the White House and perhaps inspect one of the government departments.

The elder tourists who find Washington an interesting vacation site during the summer months include in their agenda a major league baseball game.

One can understand why so many Americans visit the capitol city because, as a social science instructor once said, "there's more history in the District of Columbia than any other comparable area in the country."

Apparently Henry Agard Wallace, the former vice president, doesn't impress the American Veterans Committee Against Communism. Last week, the committee sent members of congress a letter explaining their views about the American communist party and included in the remarks was the following telegram the vets sent to Mr. Wallace:

"We condemn your recent utterances abroad as not only gross ingratitude to the American people but unpatriotic if not treasonable. After holding public office and being supported by the taxpayers for a large part of your life, you least of anyone should criticize the administration on international and economic conditions for which you are so largely responsible. It would be a blessing to our country if you would relinquish your American citizenship. You could go to your beloved communist Russia and they can continue to spend. That is not the view of the majority."

A possible depression following a period of extraordinary demand, was considered by Town-Meeting-of-the-Air Thursday night, and we do not recall any such discussion with more evidence of partisanship. It did not seem so much an effort to detect economic possibilities as for each side to blame the opposing political party for what might happen. Chester Bowles, former OPA head, appeared eager to make removing price controls responsible for any unfavorable turn in business, and Senator Ball of Minnesota stuck to private enterprise as the solution of vexing problems. Of course, what the country wants is freedom from devastating business and market declines, and if private capital is given a chance, unhampered by studied attempts to discredit and thwart it, it will no doubt be able to stabilize the country's economy and prevent the calamity that followed World war I.

Henry Wallace has attracted big crowds in his speech-making tour, and the only way he can find out whether they are drawn by curiosity or by approval is to run for something. He was quoted as saying at Hollywood that if the democratic party did not toe along with new deal ideas, he would bolt the party. He dodged answering a query as to whether he would accept the presidential nomination of a third party. It is hoped it is made convenient for him to submit himself to the secret appraisal of American voters. If we were convinced he could win, we would be feverishly apprehensive of the future of this country.

While tarrying in Sioux City following a high school commencement address at South Sioux City, Gov. Val Peterson was interviewed by the Journal, and expressing himself in regard to the unicameral, said he favored party identification. He believes the unicameral works as well as a group can without party responsibility. Members of the legislature are elected on a personal popularity basis without a party platform, as the governor suggests. He thinks the party label is significant and influential, as many do.

Sioux City showed its old-time spirit of public enterprise last week by voting bonds by an overwhelming majority to complete its new municipal auditorium. Sioux City has had no adequate place to accommodate conventions and other big gatherings. The new auditorium will serve every such need, and in both utility and satisfaction will more than justify the cost.

The eclipse of the sun, observed in Brazil, where scientists peered through telescopes, emphasized the existence of people so possessed of superstitious fear that they dumped food into rivers and cringed in anticipation of the end of the sun and end of the world. But some one suggests that in numerous other ways we haven't any better sense.

The Nebraska unicameral has gone on record in favor of limiting a president to two terms. This sensible change may be realized in due time. Also, it would make practical sense to lengthen the term of a congressman. A longer congressional term would tend to modify the temptation to play politics.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is quoted as saying she is against having a woman president. If she has herself in mind, we heartily agree.

MEMORIAL DAY

Another Memorial day finds the world free from declared war, but marred by racial clashes and torn by hateful rivalries. Inhabitants of countries sorely stricken by the late war are hungry and clamoring for food. The United States has been giving liberally from its stores to relieve distress abroad. It is hoped starvation can be prevented, and that in time sufferers may become self-sustaining. As Americans turn to the cemeteries to remember with flowers and eulogies the nation's patriot dead, they are grieved by unwholesome and often threatening trends in the social order. They are eager for peace, eager for understanding and unity. They are eager for realization of the freedom and security for which the flower of American manhood fought and fell. May the near future unfold more hopeful thinking. May international amity grow and strengthen. May utmost wisdom guide statesmen in shaping the course of events.

there put into effect your fantastic and destructive program of creating scarcity by destroying crops, killing pigs, cattle, etc. To facilitate your early departure and help our country we stand ready to buy you a one way ticket to Russia."

An indication that the senate may aid in the economy drive was brought to light recently when they voted to reduce by more than a million dollars the labor and federal security appropriation bill for 1948, passed by the house.

Members of congress are having a rough time of it trying to reduce federal expenses. The publicity agents of many of the government bureaus propagandize the country that cuts in the federal payroll will result in chaos and inefficiency in our governmental machinery.

But it seems quite obvious now that in spite of the squabbling coming from the chain-bottom bureaucrats, slashes in the budget will be effected and tax and debt reduction will put the government back on a business-like basis.

Mrs. Melvin Moss, a British war bride of a prominent Fairbury, Neb., attorney, who arrived in this country last week, can't understand why Americans chuckle when she informs them she is looking forward to living in Nebraska.

Mr. and Mrs. Moss called upon members of the Nebraska congressional delegation. The pretty blonde with blue eyes and cockney accent, asked, "What kind of a place is this state of Nebraska if so many people laugh at it?"

She was quickly informed that although Nebraskans may not have fish and chips and a spot of tea, they enjoy the most tasty T-bone steaks in the world from the leading cattle producing counties in the United States.

The navy department reports that as of May 1, there was a total of 1,680 assigned and 1,228 enrolled in Nebraska in the naval reserve. Of these figures, 630 are assigned and 630 enrolled are a part of the Lincoln station while 1,050 assigned and 592 enrolled reservists are included in the Omaha center's total.

The members of the reserve, according to a department statement, are scheduled to take a two weeks' cruise at sea or a training period ashore this summer. The statement added that "this enthusiastic group is ready to perform its mission for the defense of our country whenever or wherever needed."

TACTLESS

The Norfolk Daily News suggests that William Ritchie, democratic state chairman, restricts his political thinking largely to Omaha. The News charges that Ritchie tried to throw a monkey wrench into the Schroeder farm road improvement program. Opposition came mostly from Omaha. The News comments: "But it is not so clear why he should try to commit his party to the opposition. It would be dangerous to assume that the next campaign will be won in Omaha. The farmers have votes, too, and when they have an issue they get out and use their votes. The Schroeder bill has proved to be one of the most popular measures before the legislature. That fact is shown by the measure's seven votes cast against it. Some found flaws in it, but on the whole it makes a start toward accomplishing what the farmers of the state have been clamoring for these many years. To make the opposition to it an issue between the political parties isn't exactly tactful. The farmers might decide to give their answer on that issue."

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA

One of the most important factors in the settlement of the western plains country was the barbed wire fence. It not only provided a lot of excitement during the cattleman-homesteader wars, but it helped to determine the pattern of the plains development.

Fencing was just another of those problems which the absence of trees forced on the plains pioneers. Back in the wooded states where the land had to be cleared of its forest covering before farming could begin, it was not difficult to find enough rails to fence the farm. Out here, however, it was difficult to find a ridge pole for the sod house, let alone fence rails.

One of the earliest solutions to the problem was the use of hedge fences. The white willow was one of the first trees used for fencing, although it was soon replaced by the Osage orange. The pioneers found this to be ideal for fencing. It grew rapidly in its early stages and, if trained correctly, quickly formed a wall. Then, too, nature had endowed the Osage orange with a long, sharp thorn making it something of a natural barbed wire.

As a substitute for the hedge fence some Nebraska pioneers developed sod or mud fences. These were fairly useful for a time but the women particularly objected to them and it is not without reason that the term "ugly as a mud fence" came into general use.

Considerable smooth wire was used, and while it may have done more for the landscape than the mud fences, it had a number of serious drawbacks. It was expensive. It contracted in cold weather and expanded in hot. Stock soon learned that it could be pushed through without injury.

The only satisfactory solution to the problem of fencing the western prairie, however, was the barbed wire, in which man took a lesson from the Osage orange. Men had been experimenting with barbed wire since the late 1860's, but it was not until the middle seventies that a successful type was developed.

The invention of barbed wire really opened the plains to the homesteader. It also proved to be a great irritant to the cattlemen, who resented fenced-in islands on the open range. Wire cutters became standard equipment for the cowboy.

Barbed wire was an important factor in the decline of the range cattle industry. It made stock farming, rather than ranching in the old sense, the dominant occupation in western Nebraska and elsewhere on the great plains.

The road ranch, that institution which grew up along the overland trails in Nebraska, might well be described as the covered wagon tourist camp. It served the same purpose for the emigrant making his weary way westward as does its modern counterpart for tourists speeding across the state in a few hours.

Although they hardly could have advertised innerspring mattresses (or any mattresses at all for that matter) or hot or cold running water, these early road ranches did fill a definite need in the lives of the early western travelers. They were spaced twelve to fifteen miles apart - a good day's journey by ox team - and provided facilities for taking care of both the emigrants and their stock. In addition to providing accommodations, the road ranches also offered a certain amount of protection from the Indians.

They usually consisted of a large log or underground stable, a ranch house where travelers might spend the night, and possibly a store or two, blacksmith shop and several saloons. The smaller ones were little more than private dwellings which occasionally accommodated travelers and served them meals. Many of the larger ranches also served as stations for the overland stage. And some of them along the route of the pony express also served that institution during its brief existence.

One of these early establishments which later became most famous of all was the Rock Creek stage station located in Jefferson county near the present city of Fairbury. It was here that Wild Bill Hickok started his notorious career by killing David McCantes, proprietor of the station.

Another station which became well known was the Boyd ranch located on the Utah-California-Oregon trail in Buffalo county. James E. Boyd, the owner and proprietor of this ranch, later became governor of Nebraska. The fame of the Boyd ranch was wide spread. It maintained its own brewery and had an ice house.

Another well known establishment was Cheese Creek ranch, located in the western part of Lancaster county on the old Nebraska City-Fort Kearney trail. It got its name because the people who operated it specialized in the mailing of cheese which they sold to the freighters and others who stopped at the ranch.

Miss Virginia Robinson of Pierce and Keith Huwaldt of Randolph will be married June 1.

John Wieting, 78, died at Pierce Tuesday last week.

In Early Wayne Files.

From Wayne Herald for July 31 and August 14, 1890: The Corn Palace in Sioux City is attracting much attention and parade like those of the Mardi Gras in New Orleans are planned . . . M. S. Englert and Chris Nelson indulged in a walking match from Coon creek to Wayne, a distance of five miles, and judge declared Nelson winner as he crossed the line about a foot ahead of Englert. The five miles were made in 50 minutes . . . Nelson has been wearing bandages on his feet since the match and he used the $5 he won to buy liniment . . . Work on the new First National bank building progresses . . . Tom Steele said that as soon as iron ore is mined and made into steel the structure will proceed faster. One of the fine boxelders on the corner had to be cut down to make room for the bank . . . "Prairie chickens are not ripe yet but they are turning."

It seems a settled fact that the Fremont, Elkhorn and Missouri valley railroad will extend its line either from Hartington or Randolph to Yankton . . . A Catholic convent will be built at O'Neill . . . The salt well at Hastings is down to a depth of 1,100 feet and the water pumped out is stronger of salt than that in the old hole.

Balloon ascensions have been arranged for the county fair . . . Capt. Hord will give the Memorial day address; Miss Lou Addis and Miss Lena Feauto give recitations; and the glee club sings.

Pawnee Indians have complained to the department of interior of irregularities in management of their affairs . . . The second story is being built on the Sault-paugh hotel in Ponca . . . The rumor that railroad surveyors were working on the old grade between Newcastle, and Ponca seems to have been ill founded . . . A bridge is to be built over the Missouri within 18 months . . . Trains in the Elkhorn valley are said to be run on the "don't-care-a-continental-when-we-get-there" plan . . . The Phillips moved from Ponca to Wayne.

Wherever a uniformed American has been laid to rest, we place this wreath of words. Be he known or unknown; whatever his name, soldier, origin or creed, let us remember that he took upon himself the sacred obligation of dying that we and our children might live and prosper in peace and freedom. We can show our gratitude to the dead only by making peace and freedom for all live forever.

160 acres, unimproved, two miles from Carroll. A good buy at $75 per acre.

This Program Speaks For Temperance This Committee's chief aim is to maintain good conditions in places where legal beer is sold. This is accomplished by educating tavern owners and checking tavern conditions... assisting authorities to guard against bad practices and maintain a high class of retailers and beer taverns—all in the public interest. This program of Self-Regulation, in operation since 1938, has had the noteworthy effect of weeding out most of those who abuse their license privileges and maintaining high tavern standards. If you have traveled, you know that Nebraska's Liquor Control Statute, properly enforced as it is, provides one of the nation's best systems of alcoholic beverage control. Is That MILK Really Skimmed?

The tiny globules of butterfat in milk and cream are literally liquid gold. The dairy industry in 1945 produced $3,632,146,000—or about 15% of the national farm income. Butterfat plays a big part in creating that wealth. That's why the milk you feed your hogs should be separated carefully. The butterfat is much too valuable to you to pour it into hog troughs along with the skim milk. In more than three centuries, the American dairy industry has come a long way. But there's still a lot of hand-skimming—just the same way the Pilgrim Fathers skimmed their milk. That hand-skimming costs producers plenty, averaging 22¢ a lost butterfat. Surveys show water-diluter separators lose an average of 18% of the butterfat, produce lower grading cream. But mechanical separators, correctly adjusted and operated, will save all but a very small percentage of the butterfat. Moreover, tests have shown that producers who use mechanical separators market up to 71% of first-grade cream, while only about 40% of the hand- or water-separated cream marketed is first grade. Thus, with even only three cows, a mechanical separator can pay for itself in as little as six months and begin earning a profit. The five minutes a day it takes to wash and sterilize a separator pays out well in dollars and cents. Of course, there's a lot more to milk and cream quality than the method of separation used. It begins with healthy cows. Cleanliness every step of the way, quick cooling and frequent marketing—all count heavily. Nearly all state agricultural colleges offer detailed bulletins of improvement of the market value of milk and cream. They are profitable reading. Improved quality* in the cream that we process

Early Cut Hay is Better Feed As Reported by Mark A. Shipley University of Nevada Steers wintered on meadow hay cut early in the season gained 151 pounds per head while a similar lot of steers fed late-cut hay lost 2 pounds per head. This interesting information is revealed in a report of an experiment conducted by the University of Nevada. The two lots of steers averaged 535 pounds at the start of the feeding experiment in November. They were weighed again at the end of 100 days with the above results. The hay classed as early cut was put up on July 10, and that classed as late cut was harvested on September 10. After the 100-day period, all the steers were shipped back to the summer range which they had been on the previous summer. They were marketed in September. By that time, the lot fed the early-cut hay weighed 69 pounds more than those fed late-cut hay, according to the Nevada report. At 15 cents a pound, the extra gain was worth $10.35 more per steer.

The Not-So-"Good Old Days" In the "good old days" maybe your grandfather butchered three or four steers. The beef that he didn't need for his own use he could peddle without much trouble. Today his grandson—perhaps it's you—may produce 30 or 300, or possibly 3,000 steers a year. It would be out of the question for you to butcher them yourself, and an utter impossibility to peddle from door to door all the beef you'd have. So you send your steers to market. There they are purchased by meat packers with facilities to handle thousands of head a day. There they are converted into meat. There's a minimum of waste. By-products are turned into useful products. And the meat is distributed to markets near and far, each weight and grade going wherever it will sell best. Without the services of nationwide meat packers, such as Swift & Company, there would be no efficient, economical way to bridge the more than 1,000-mile average gap between producers and consumers. Without these services, livestock would have to be shipped long distances, cost of dressed meat would be higher, and consumers could not afford to buy as much meat, nor would they be as well fed. F.M. Simpson, Agricultural Research Department

Things are NOT always as they seem That square seems to be a solid block of gray. But look at it closely and you find it's made up of many individual dots. Similarly, when some people "look at" Swift & Company, they see a big corporation. But if they look closely, they will see that Swift & Company is PEOPLE. Sixty-three thousand individual people (shareholders) who have pooled their savings to create and operate this business. Sixty-six thousand individual people (employees) who work for the company—livestock buyers, workers in plants, salesmen, office workers and managers. Their combined efforts create a market for your livestock, dairy and poultry and other agricultural products, and provide nourishing foods for the tables of America.

OUR CITY COUSIN In the merry month of May, City Cousin comes to play. Finds that farm boys WORK all day. Retire That Rooster You'll get eggs that grade higher if you get rid of the roosters in your flock at the end of the breeding season. Infertile eggs keep better in hot weather. If non-producing hens are culled out at the same time, you'll save considerably on feed costs. With more and more eggs being purchased on a graded basis, quality and cleanliness mean increased income to producers. The way to get uniform high-quality eggs is to keep your flock confined to the hen-house and yard, use dry litter, feed a balanced ration, gather eggs several times a day, keep them clean and cool, market them frequently. Thieves who raided the Charles Thompson farm near Falls City got enough loot to go into business for themselves. Sheriff Vern Atkins reported they took an electric spray gun, an electric motor, electric drill, electric buffer, a number of wrenches, a set of field glasses and rifle and shotgun shells.

No abid fisherman, Charley Lenz of the sheriff's office nevertheless was getting compliments on his angling skill. Typist Dolores Pawlowicz was changing the water in the goldfish bowl which stands on her desk. Down the drain went one of her pets. Dolores cried for help. Charley picked up a pair of tweezers, plucked the fish from the drain.

Noble Betts, Jr., of the Naia-danta fire company, Towanda, Pa., almost spoiled the rival Franklin company's record of being first at fires, almost. Mr. Betts was standing in front of the house of Harry R. Wenck when the alarm sounded. He drove three-quarters of a mile to the firehouse, jumped on a truck and rode back to the burning Wenck home.

At Towanda, Pa., Carl Sloat wandered into his backyard and found a double four-leaf clover, his wife's long lost wedding ring and a V-shaped potato in succession.

Andrew Timmer of Portland, Ore., has been tossing and worrying about travelers' baggage at Union station for more than 40 years. He's about to retire and friends say they will present him with what he wants most, a set of luggage.

He did not know it was illegal to put a "For Sale" sign in the window of his truck parked on a city street, Carl Deuster told District Judge Harvey L. Neelen. "Well," answered the judge, "I've been up there eight years and I didn't know it either. Sentence suspended."

Virgil Lathrom, 21, of Springfield, Ill., obeyed again and again an order of Patrolman Fred Metzke to get out of a restaurant because he was accused of annoying other patrons. After going out the revolving door just ahead of the officer, Lathrom went right back in, and out, and in and out. But Officer Metzke kept up the chase until Lathrom fled down an alley. An hour later Lathrom was back. He was booked on a charge of disorderly conduct.

All a woman amnesia victim could remember was a number "108-R-1" but it was enough for police to identify her. It was the telephone of her home in Bensenville, Ill. Her husband identified her as Mrs. Lily Wolf, 35. He said she had been missing from home for some time.
