NEBRASKA FARM OUTLOOK

(The MONTHLY FARM OUTLOOK is reprinted from Notes on Nebraska Farm Business, a monthly publication of the Department of Agricultural Economics, Agricultural Extension Service, College of Agriculture, University of Nebraska, Lincoln. This authoritative report is reprinted each month by the State National Bank of Wayne as a service to our customers and friends.)

"Our Roots are In This Land"

Economic Situation

Important changes have been made in the national defense program. Originally, the government had expected to reach its spending peak around June, 1952. According to Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson, government expenditures for defense will not reach a peak until 1954 or 1955.

The lengthening out of the defense program has important implications. In the first place, the pressure of inflation in 1952 will be less. Inflation will extend over another two or three years, reaching its peak in 1954 or 1955. As a result, prices are not expected to rise as rapidly in 1952—some prices may fall. As civilian production expands, and with smaller than originally planned military production (about 25% going to national defense) the value of the dollar may appear to have been stabilized.

If prices appear to have been stabilized by summer, expect OPS supporters to take the credit. Also expect to hear some producers clamoring for decontrols, pointing out that prices are now stable and the need for controls has passed.

Cattle

'Continue Uneven'

Prices continue uneven and generally weak. Better grades withstood large receipts and labor trouble better than the lower grades. Seasonally, prices should strengthen soon.

Prospects for Profit In Hog Production

How much profit is there in producing hogs in these days? Such a question is in the thinking of many farmers. Some have already answered the question by reducing the number of sows kept for spring farrowing. According to the pig survey last December 1, farmers intentions were to keep 8% fewer sows to farrow this spring than in 1951. With average size litters this would result in a 9% smaller spring pig crop in the United States—a 14% smaller pig crop is expected in Nebraska.

Further reductions may take place as the result of the continued downward trend in the hog-corn price ratio since November and because of spoilage which, according to reports, is occurring in corn which was supposedly cribbed in "good" condition last fall.

There is no question that profits will not be as high with a hog-corn ratio of 12.0 to 1.0 or less as they would be with a ratio above 12.0 to 1.0. (The 1940-51 average in Nebraska was 14.1 to 1.0).

Hog Production Costs

Those who have not already made up their minds have several choices to consider. They can (1) feed their corn to hogs, (2) feed it to other kinds of livestock, or (3) sell it on the market. All of these assume, of course, that the corn will be dry enough to keep by the time warm weather arrives.

The costs of producing hogs are made up of cash costs or their equivalent, and non-cash costs. In the long run, the hog-producer must be able to recover not only his cash costs, but his non-cash costs as well. In the short run, however, he may be better off to stay in the hog business than to sell the corn on the market, even though he does not recover all of his non-cash costs.

Cash costs or their equivalent include any marketable grain, supplement, and such labor as may have been hired for that particular purpose. Non-cash costs include charges for the use of equipment, fences, buildings, and unpaid labor.

What Are Your Costs?

Feed costs make up a little over three-fourths of the cost of raising hogs. The efficient producer can make 200 pound hogs out of 40-50 pound pigs with about nine bushels of corn and 35-40 pounds of a good supplement. This amounts to six bushels of corn and 25 pounds of supplement per 100 pounds of gain. With corn worth $1.75 a bushel and tankage worth $143 a ton, the feed cost on a pig fed in this way would be $12.28 per hundred pounds gain. If one can produce or buy pigs weighing 40 pounds at weaning age, for $15 a piece, the cost of the pigs plus the cost of the feed would amount to about $35 for a 200 pound hog. This does not allow for any death loss or any of the non-cash costs, and only the most efficient producers can get gains as economical as this. Present hog prices ($18 at Omaha) would give such a producer a very small margin over and above the assumed cost of the pig and the feed cost. If weaned pigs can be produced or purchased for less than $15, that much can be added to the "profit" realized.

The man who needs 7-7 1/2 bushels of corn and 30-35 pounds of supplement for each 100 pounds of gain would lose money if he paid $15 for a 40 pound weaned pig. He could clear approximately $1 per head over and above the cost of the pig and feed if he could buy the pig for $12.

Heavier Weights Usually Less Profitable

Feeding hogs to heavier weights becomes even less profitable than usual with a low or unfavorable hog-corn ratio. The "efficient" producer would find that putting on another 100 pounds on his 200 pound hogs would cut his margin in half over and above the cost of the feed and pig. The less efficient producer would not only lose his margin of profit but would realize an actual loss of a dollar or two a head, even if he bought his pigs for $12 a piece.

If prices of both hogs and corn go up this summer, as seems probable, the relationship may improve slightly. A smaller supply of hogs during the latter half of the year coupled with a strong demand for meat would suggest that hog prices might go to ceiling levels.

If ceilings should be imposed on both hogs and corn at minimum levels, the ratio in the United States would be approximately 12.2 to 1.0 compared to 13.1 to 1.0 as of January 15, 1952.

Hogs

"Remain Weak"

Prices remain weak. Normally prices strengthen during February. Heavy receipts and packing house labor trouble may be partly responsible for low seasonal prices.

Watch Your Marketing Dates

As a result of the short supply of good corn and the unfavorable hog-corn ratio, some farmers may be thinking in terms of limiting the amount of corn fed to hogs with the idea of finishing them on new corn. Work at Missouri has indicated that there was very little difference in the total costs of feed for hogs on a limited ration as compared to hogs which were full fed. However, the important thing for many producers may well be the time required to get their hogs ready for market.

The work at Missouri showed that hogs fed on limited rations from start to finish took nearly a month longer to reach the same market weights. In the fall of the year, when hog prices normally drop around 5% a month, a month's delay in getting to market might easily mean the difference between making or not making something over and above cash costs.

Therefore, it is fully as important to consider the rate of gain and its effect on time of marketing as it is to look at the cost of gain.

See County Agent for Latest Information

The producer who decides to stay in the hog business should check and recheck the practices which he has been following to see whether they can be improved in any way; for only the most careful and efficient producers will make a profit on hogs in 1952 unless hog prices improve considerably in relation to corn.

Those who aren't sure of themselves should get the latest recommendations from their county agent for the use of supplements, antibiotics, pastures, shade, water, minerals, and proper sanitation. No producer can afford to leave any stone unturned in an effort to cut his costs with the present hog-corn ratio of 11.5 to 1.0.

Feeds and Crops

Concentrated feeds are in less supply for the year ahead in the United States than was true for the year preceding or for the 10-year average 1940-1949. Hay and roughage feeds, on the other hand, are much more plentiful than they were during the same period.

Numbers of grain consuming livestock for the year ahead are greater than in any post-war year. There is sufficient feed for all livestock during the current year ending next October 1, but the supply of feed left on hand at that time will be smaller than for any year since 1947 and smaller than the average for the five-year period 1937-1941.

More Livestock on Feed

Cattle on feed as of January 1, 1952, were greater in number than a year earlier. The movement of stocker and feeder cattle into Corn Belt feed lots from July to November, 1951, was the second largest in numbers, according to report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The same report indicated a larger fall pig crop in 1951 than a year earlier. In addition, it shows an indicated decrease of 9% in the 1952 spring pig crop compared to a year earlier. The 1951 spring pig crop was 7% larger than that of 1950.

Less Corn and of Poor Quality

The corn crop of 1951 is estimated at 2,941 million bushels as compared with a crop of 3,058 million bushels in 1950 and an average production of 2,581 million bushels for the 10-year period 1940-1949. Much of the corn produced in the western part of the Corn Belt in 1951 was of poor quality. This will result in larger quantities of corn being required to produce a given weight when fed to livestock. This situation would indicate that possibly the supply of feed grains at the end of the current year (September 30) might be less than now expected.

Corn Production Down

Oats production in 1951 was about 7% less than the production of a year earlier but it was somewhat greater than the 10-year average production during 1940-1949. Barley production in 1951 was less than that of 1950 and the 1940-1949 average. Grain sorghum production in 1951 was less than in 1950 but greater than the 10-year average, 1940-1949.

Less Feeds Available

According to a Bureau of Agricultural Economics report, the supply of feed grains for the current year, October 1, 1951, to September 30, 1952, is estimated at 148.9 million tons. Corn production is estimated at 82.4 million tons, oats 21.1 million tons, barley 6.1 million tons, grain sorghums 4.1 million tons, and other grains to be fed six million tons. An additional 21.6 million tons of by-products feed is expected to be fed during the year. The total supply of concentrates available for the year consists of 148.9 million tons of grains and 21.6 million tons of by-product feeds or a total of 170.5 million tons. This compares with 182.5 and 179.1 million tons respectively for 1949 and 1950.

Stocks of Feed on Hand

The amount of feeds to be fed during the year is estimated to equal 133.5 million tons, a larger quantity than for any year since 1945. An additional 19 million tons is expected to be used for seed, human food, industry and export, a total utilization of 152.5 million tons.

If 152.5 million tons are used from a total supply of 170.5 million tons there will be 18 million tons on hand next October 1. This would be less than stocks on hand on the same date for the three preceding years.

With an estimated 175 million grain consuming animal units on hand this year, the supply of concentrates per unit is .97 tons while the amount expected to be fed is .76 tons. The supply of feed grains, in view of needs, approaches the short side. Protein feeds are in adequate supply while the supply of hay and roughage is in abundant supply.

Crops ...

Production goals for Nebraska call for increased production for most crops. The goals ask for the following production over 1951: Corn 6% more; Oats 1% less; Barley 19% more; Sorghum for grain 22% less; Wheat the same; Tame hay 3% less; Rye 6% less; Dry Edible Beans 9% more; Soybeans for beans 3% more; Alfalfa seed 308% more; Smooth Bromé 70% more.
