Out of Old Nebraska

Prepared by the Nebraska State Historical Society

This column has mentioned frequently that many Nebraska communities were settled by colonies from the east, organized expressly for the purpose. Sometimes they were religious colonies; sometimes they were nationality groups; sometimes they were groups of people who had banded together simply to make possible the estabishment of new homes in the west, without any particular ties beyond that common hope.

One of the most interesting of the early Nebraska colonies was the Soldiers Free Homestead colony which founded Gibbon. Recently, descendants of the original colonists erected an appropriate marker to the colony in the city park at Gibbon. The dedicatory program was held Apr. 7 and began promptly at 2 p. m. That hour and date have great significance in the history of Gibbon, for it was exactly 2 p. m., April 7, 1871 when a Union Pacific emigrant train, bearing the members of the Soldiers Free Homestead colony, arrived at Gibbon siding and switched off a few cars that were to be home to the colonists until they could build dugouts and soddies.

According to S. C. Basset, historian of Buffalo county, the Soldiers Free Homestead colony originated with Colonel John Thorp of Waynesburg, Ohio. Col. Thorp had already settled a colony of homesteaders in Kansas along the line of the Kansas Pacific railroad, and during the winter of 1870-71 he turned his promotional energies to lands along the Union Pacific in Nebraska, painting in glowing colors the great opportunities awaiting men in the land of "free homes and free lands."

The great opportunities for Union veterans were stressed in the colony's advertising but membership was not restricted to veterans. Members were recruited from various states in the east. For many the adventure was a plunge into the great unknown. Omaha was described as a dreary, unwelcoming village, consisting of cheap frame buildings, devoid of paint. The terminal of the Union Pacific was itself a cheap frame building. From this unwelcoming terminal, the settlers took the night emigrant train west.

Rumors began to float through the crowd that they were taken on a night train because if they saw the country in the day time they would desert the colony and go back east.

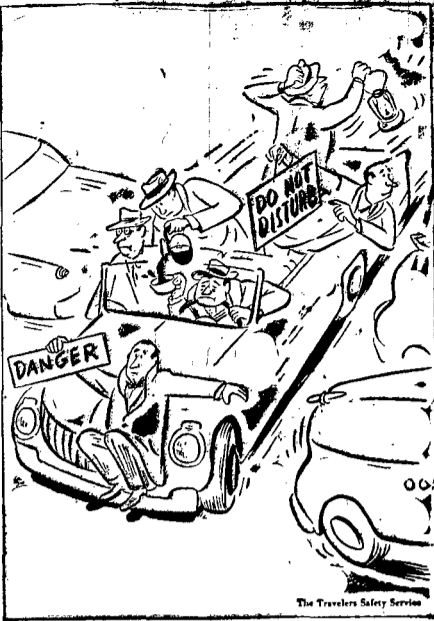

When they arrived in Gibbon the afternoon of April 7, 1871 it seemed as though there might be something to the rumor. Five days before, a prairie fire had swept over the entire country, leaving it black, bleak, desolate and uninhabitable. No rain or snow had fallen since the previous August and that which was not burned by the fire wore the marks of prolonged drought. Buffalo county looked like anything but the promised land.

But it was the promised land and the members of the Soldiers Free Homestead colony knew it. It was good land and it was theirs for the taking and the developing. Only one took the train back east. The rest stayed on to develop the Wood River Valley into what former Chancellor Samuel Avery of the University of Nebraska once called "an agriculture paradise."

Robert Beacher Howell, who served Nebraska in the United States Senate from 1923 until his death in 1933, was born in Adrian, Mich., Jan. 21, 1884. After attending the public school in Adrian, he was appointed to the United States Naval Academy, from which institution he graduated in 1885.

He moved to Omaha in 1888, then went back to Michigan to attend the Detroit School of Law, from which he graduated in 1893. His subsequent career in Nebraska utilized both his law background and the engineering background he acquired in the Naval Academy.

Mr. Howell served as state engineer of Nebraska in 1895-96, then went to Omaha to serve a couple of years as the city engineer. He served as a lieutenant in the United States Navy during the Spanish-American war after which he returned to Nebraska to take his first active part in politics when he ran successfully on the Republican ticket for the state senate. He served one term in the state senate then became a member of the board of directors of the old Omaha water board, later serving in the same capacity with the Metropolitan Utilities district.

In Omaha affairs, Mr. Howell probably is best known for his fight for public ownership of the city's utilities. As a state senator, he fought for enactment of a law compelling the Omaha city council to obey the mandate of the people and buy the Omaha water plant. Of this phase of Mr. Howell's career Senator Norris once said, "He became an outstanding figure in the state of Nebraska in favor of municipal ownership of all public utilities. His reputation in this respect was given great consideration by the voters of Nebraska and was one of the material factors in his subsequent nomination and election to the United States Senate."

Further activity in politics came in 1912 when Mr. Howell was elected Republican national committeeman for Nebraska, a post to which he was re-elected in 1916 and again in 1920. He received the Republican nomination for governor in 1914, but was defeated by John H. Murehead, his Democratic opponent. His next foray into politics as a candidate for office came in 1922 when he was elected to the United States Senate, defeating Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock. During the second decade of the 20th century, Mr. Howell served as general manager of the metropolitan utilities district, a lieutenant in the United States Naval Reserve and in 1921 as chairman of the radio commission, United States Post Office department. During the senatorial contest of 1922, Mr. Howell talked a great deal about the future of radio. In this he seemed like something of a visionary.

Senator Howell was re-elected in 1928, over Richard L. Metcalf, his democratic opponent. He had an easier time of it in the general election than he did in the Republican primary, being contested for the nomination in a close race, by O. S. Spillman of Norfolk.

Senator Howell died in Walter Reed hospital in Washington, Mar. 11, 1933. He was buried in Forest Lawn cemetery, Omaha.

May 30 the Nebraska territory was 99 years old. Next May 30, then will be Nebraska's 100th birthday. All Nebraskans should take part in the great "once in a lifetime" celebration being planned for Nebraska's territorial centennial. The legislature has created a territorial centennial commission. Omaha is making elaborate plans to stage the biggest show in the city's 100 year history. Nebraska City, Plattsmouth, and other river towns are making similar preparations to celebrate their centennials—centennials which correspond to the territory's centennial.

In many places, various phases of the territorial centennial celebration will extend throughout the year 1934, the actual birthday—May 30—is the day the Kansas-Nebraska bill was signed by President Franklin Pierce. It was a monumental piece of legislation.

In the first place, it was one of the most controversial measures to come before the Congress in the 19th century. The crux of the controversy was the extension of slavery. Senator Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois, chief proponent of the measure, wanted the organization of Nebraska at any cost—so long as the principle of "popular sovereignty" whereby the people of the territory would have the right to determine for themselves whether or not they wanted slavery. This was a complete reversal of the stand taken back in 1820 by the Missouri Compromise, which had prohibited slavery forever from the territory that was now being organized as Nebraska. Northerners reacted violently to this concession to the South and slavery. Anti-Nebraska meetings were held all over the northwest. Out of them developed the Republican party.

In the second place, the Kansas-Nebraska act organized a territory from the Missouri River to the Rocky Mountains, or to the territory of Utah, and thus made it possible for a trans-continental railroad to run entirely through organized territory. Senator Douglas was vitally interested in the Pacific railroad and looked upon the organization of Nebraska as an important prerequisite to the building of that railroad—as indeed it was.

In the third place, the Kansas-Nebraska Act made possible legal settlement in all of the remaining area of the Louisiana Purchase. The territory of Nebraska, as created in 1854, was bounded on the south by the present Kansas line and on the north by the present international boundary. It extended from the Missouri river on the east to the crest of the Rockies on the west. All of this vast territory had been forbidden area so far as permanent white settlers were concerned before 1854. Now it was open for settlement.

So next year we'll be celebrating Nebraska's 100th birthday. More important we'll be reviewing a century of great progress here on the plains a review which should give all Nebraskans courage and determination to make the next 100 years even better.

One of the best known business houses in old Nebraska was McDonald's store at Cottonwood Spring in Lincoln county. From the beginning of overland emigration, Cottonwood Springs was a favorite stopping place for the west-bound traveler. The cool water issuing from the springs slaked the thirst of man and beast alike; the great cottonwoods provided welcome shade.

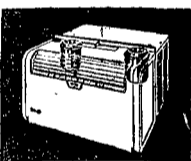

A trading post appears to have been built here as early as 1838. This was passed out of existence, however, and we know little about it. Permanent activity and McDonald's store—dates from 1858 when Dick Darling began the erection of a second building at Cottonwood Springs. This building was purchased by Charles McDonald, who completed it in the fall of the same year. During the winter he stocked the store and all set for the emigration of 1859—an emigration that was to include the Colorado gold rush.

Business was good and Mr. McDonald prospered. In 1860 his wife came out from Omaha to be the first white woman to settle in Lincoln county. William H. McDonald, chairman of the board of the McDonald State Bank in North Platte, was born at Cottonwood Springs.

As the traffic through the Platte Valley increased, so did business at McDonald's store. A stage station was established there, and later a Pony Express station. The Indians in the western Platte Valley became correspondingly more restive. They attacked freight wagons, stage coaches, road ranches and emigrant trains. In 1883, the situation became so critical that the army decided to send a detachment of troops out from Fort Kearney to establish a military post at Cottonwood Springs.

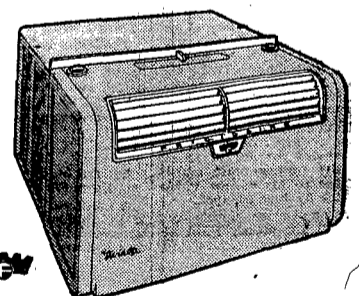

A company from the 7th Iowa Cavalry was sent out to do the job. Eugene F. Ware, an officer of the company, later wrote a book, "The Indian War of 1868," in which he says OLD NEBRASKA — Page 3 struction of the Union Pacific railroad which built into the panhandle in 1867. Fort Sidney was established along the Lodgepole to protect construction crews and the trains themselves from the Indians. Around Fort Sidney there developed a booming frontier town. The discovery of gold in the Black Hills provided a great impetus to the growth of Sidney, and the middle 70's saw the town's tercentenary of an important trail leading to the gold fields of the Black Hills. The Sidney-Black Hills trail was discussed at length in "Nebraska History," the quarterly journal of the State Historical society, some years ago.

described, among other things, the establishment of the military post at Cottonwood Springs. McDonald's store played an important part in the establishment of the post that was to become Fort McPherson. The company quartered at McDonald's store while the initial buildings of the post—originally called Cantonment McKean—were being built. Captain Ware's book provides us with one of our best descriptions of this pioneer Nebraska trading establishment. The main building of the store is described as being about 20 feet front and 40 feet deep, two stories high. The wing extended 50 feet to the west. Around the store to the rear was a large and defensible corral which extended to the arroyo coming out of the canyon. In front of the store was an inextinguishable well, 46 feet deep, cribbed up and rigged with pulley, chain and heavy oaken buckets. The whole establishment was very sturdily built of cedar logs. After the coming of the Union Pacific railroad and the establishment of North Platte, Mr. McDonald moved the seat of his operations to North Platte. All that remains at Cottonwood Springs is a marker locating the site of the store. It's an important site on the Nebraska historical landscape. County history in the southern half of Nebraska's panhandle traces inevitably through old Cheyenne county, which like Nebraska itself, originally embraced a much greater area than it does today. As originally established in 1867, the boundaries of Cheyenne county included all of the present counties of Kimball, Cheyenne, Deuel, Garden, Morrill, Banner and Scottsbluff. The settlement of Cheyenne county dates largely from the con-

Local Nine Drops Game To Laurel

Four unearned runs in the first inning gave Laurel an advantage the local nine couldn't offset in a game played here Thursday night. The visitors went on to win the game, 10 to 4.

Laurel scored four runs in the first and fifth innings and added two more in the sixth. Wayne got their scores in the fifth and sixth frames, one in the fifth and three in the sixth.

Three errors, three walks, two hits and a stolen base gave the visitors four big runs in the first frame. Ten batters went to the plate during this outbreak.

Wayne could do little with Peterson's offerings until the sixth when hits by Dwayne Van Auken and Don Skeahan produced three tallies.

Wayne batters collected six hits, Laurel's 10. Don Tietgen rapped a double.

Hirschman hit a triple and Carman homered for the visitors. Carman's round-tripper came with two men on bases.

Bill Palmer and Gordon Zapp shared pitching duties for Wayne. Peterson and Kruger were on the hill for Laurel.

Get a lot more grain ... AT THE TWIST OF A DIAL!

with the DEARBORN-WOOD BROS. COMBINE

It puts you hours and dollars ahead... every season!

Just imagine! Without struggling with shims or sprockets—without switching belts or pulleys, you can adjust cylinder speed on this combine to meet the slightest change in crop or field conditions. You simply twist a handy control knob on the Dearborn-Wood Bros. Combine to get any cylinder speed from 430 to 1510 r.p.m.

Think what this means in savings of time and money—as well as grain.

You start combining earlier... work later in the day, when a ripe crop calls for extra-fast action by man and machine. And it's just as easy to adjust concave clearance, sieves and wind blast too. Furthermore, you'll like the way you raise and lower the header, adjust the reel to catch "down" grain—without leaving the tractor seat.

Features like these are built into the Dearborn-Wood Bros. Combine. That's why this six-footer acts even bigger inside. That's why you'll be hours and dollars ahead in many ways—for many seasons.

Youth Program

Wayne's summertime youth program is getting into full swing. Although there isn't any centralized group heading the program, sponsorship of varied sports gives the youths a well-rounded program for their pent-up energies.

Gerald Moyer is again giving the youngsters tips on how to play ball. He has the smaller youths at the ball park in the mornings and the midgets report in the afternoon.

A new program was announced last week when representatives of the Wayne Country club reported free golf lessons would be given to teen-agers Friday afternoons.

So it seems, if parents dole out a few chores and Junior takes advantage of the sports programs being offered, it will be a quick and profitable summer.

Way Back

30 Years Ago

June 7, 1923—A brick building is to be erected on the lot just south of the Union hotel. It will be occupied by the Wayne Grocery company and is being built by Frank Schulte. J. R. Rundell has just completed a two-story house located on the corner of Seventh and Lincoln streets. An interesting feature is the garage built in the basement. The appearance of the city park has been much improved by the addition of waste baskets for rubbish, this helping keep the grounds clean. A large table just put in, is much welcomed by picnickers.

25 Years Ago

June 7, 1928: Wayne radio station KGCH has been sold to the Farmers Merchants Radio Corporation of America and will be moved to Norfolk soon for use there. Paul Bowen, son of Prof. and Mrs. O. R. Bowen of Wayne, was graduated Saturday from the law school at the university in Lincoln with highest class honors, receiving his bachelor of law degree. School census is being taken in Wayne by Mrs. D. J. Cavanaugh. The work was started Monday.

20 Years Ago

June 8, 1933: Peter Petersen has reopened his billiard parlor here. The building, which was damaged by fire, has a new floor and has been entirely refurnished inside. Helen Swanson and Francis Kiker began last Thursday their work of supervising play at Bressler park.

15 Years Ago

June 9, 1938: Dr. Walter Benthack left Wednesday to attend the National Medical association meeting in San Francisco, Calif. Contract for remodeling the Brown-McDonald store, damaged by fire May 23, was let this week and work starts next Monday. "The Pageant of the Prairie," poem written by Mrs. S. A. Lutgen, will appear in the exposition anthology being published by the New York World's fair commission. F. B. Decker recently found in the Craven Studio store a copy of a city plat which was printed in 1891.

10 Years Ago

June 3, 1943: R. M. Carhart was reelected director of northeast Nebraska lumbermen at the meeting held in Wayne Tuesday evening last week. Letter carriers are distributing 40,000,000 application cards for war ration book No. 3, which will provide new stamps to replace those running out in existing books. Wayne Woman's club's annual flower show will be held in the Woman's club room Saturday June 6.

HOW IS YOUR READING TEMPERATURE—going up with the thermometer? Check at the library to see how many of the new books you have read.

AMONG THE BOOKS WITH UNHAPPY endings are many check books: Your check book would make you happier if you would read "The Magic of Believing" by Bristol. After you have read it, you will be convinced that there is nothing you can't do. In fact, the word can't will be eliminated from your vocabulary.

YOU HEAR IT ON THE RADIO... YOU see it on TV and in the movies! Don't forget that you can read about it too. Indeed, librarians report that more people are interested in a wider variety of reading these days than ever before. As an example, mountain climbing has been in the news recently and Mt. Everest has been scaled. It follows that a book like "Annapurna," by Maurice Herzog, will attract many readers, since it is about that subject. We mentioned the book in this column last week.

OUR SPRING IS OVER AND SUMMER HAS come, but there is a book by Edwin Teale called "North With the Spring" which tells us about that favorite season and how it means different things in different places; to most people—the first robin, to others—dogwood, strawberry short cake or blue birds. Nowhere else in the world is the season more varied and beautiful than in eastern North America. The author of this book followed the spring from the Everglades, north to Canada. If you love nature, don't miss this book.

WAR BOOKS WE HAVE HAD BY THE DOZEN—some horrible, some realistic and some outstanding pieces of writing, but Battle Cry, by Leon M. Uris, a story about the marines, gives us a more balanced picture than most of them. It is a story of American youth in the crucible of war, true, funny, terrible and touching at once.

FORTY CHILDREN HAVE REGISTERED IN the reading club to date. It isn't too late to join so don't forget. Let your child travel by "Magic Bus" at the library this summer through the months of June and July.

Detecting...

by Dick

The city slickers have nothing on Bob Harrison—he's commuting to work now, too. Bob drives back and forth to Randolph to the lumber yard there. The yard's manager recently suffered a heart attack and is hospitalized.

Entered a protest with the Country club. Against teaching the teen-agers how to improve their golf games. First thing you know the kids will be challenging the businessmen and beating them. Going to be tough on the ego to get trounced by some 13 or 14-year-old. What we really need is lessons for the older kids, 25 on up.

Hats off department: Like to acknowledge the Presbyterian Men's council for making church services available at the drive-in on Sunday mornings. Whether or not the services are a success depends on the response from the public. But, whether they are or are not a success, recognition is still due the Men's council for their efforts.

Wayne will lose a landmark in the next few weeks. Carharts purchased the Central Garage building and will remodel it to provide space for hardware and other lines. Older residents remember when the garage building was one of the few along Main street and used it as a central point for giving directions.

If you meet Dave Hamer, jr. on the highways and he's veering to the right, it's not the effects of a colored bottle. Dave has horn trouble on the family auto and the only way he can keep the thing quiet is to keep it on the steering wheel turned to the right. Pardon, you'd better break down and buy some new wiring—all roads don't lead to the right.

Attention housewives: Hubby will now be home on Wednesday nights. Passengers in that stream of cars heading south last Wednesday night were members of Wayne's Men's club going on their last roundup—until fall. So you can't get away that rolling pin until further notice.

Get a kick watching the smaller midgets stream to the ball park each morning for their practice sessions. What their practice lack in ability they make up with enthusiasm. If you can spare the time, go over to the ball park and watch the kids work out. Have morning and afternoon sessions. Older midgets practice in the afternoon.

Guess it's going to be up to the kids if a swimming pool is built in Wayne. No one else will take up the banner so the fourth graders have started their own campaign. "We want a Swimming Pool" is the appeal on the card in Pat Atkins' store window. Go to it kids. We're all for you. If you can raise a little smoke maybe we can help you build a fire.

If any of you vacationers are planning on going to Canada, Mel Crawford can give you firsthand information about our neighbor to the north. Mel spent many years in that now booming country.

Sunday morning's breakfast scheduled at the Country club was washed out. Members could have done a little fishing—had a small trout stream running down between number one and number six fairways.

Treat for you readers next week. John Kyl is going to be guest writer for the column while yours truly is on vacation.

SO BEAUTIFUL! SO POWERFUL!

SO ROOMY! SO LOW IN PRICE!

Judge Pontiac purely from the standpoint of quality and it's hard to believe that it is actually a low-priced car.

Here's a car so handsomely styled it's one of the most beautiful on the road.

Performance-wise, too, Pontiac will take on all comers. Its big, high-compression engine gives you split-second response in city traffic, lets you cruise at highway speeds with plenty of power to spare and economy, too.

Pontiac is a big car—in fact, no car so big is priced so low. Its long 122-inch wheelbase means road-hugging safety. And inside you'll find Pontiac's big, roomy body by Fisher gives you plenty of space to relax.

But Pontiac's outstanding feature is its price—a price so low that if you can afford any new car you can afford a Pontiac.

We'll be glad to prove that dollar for dollar you can't beat a Pontiac!

NEBRASKA FARM OUTLOOK

(The MONTHLY FARM OUTLOOK is reprinted from Notes on Nebraska Farm Business, a monthly publication of the Department of Agricultural Economics, Agricultural Extension Service, College of Agriculture, University of Nebraska, Lincoln. This authoritative report is reprinted each month by the State National Bank of Wayne as a service to our customers and friends.)

Economic Situation

Farm land values are registering the effects of falling farm prices. Sharply lower prices for beef cattle was the primary reason for the significant drop in prices of grazing land in most of the Mountain and Pacific Coast States. Average values for all farm lands in most of the states this March were 5 to 7 per cent below last November. Nebraska land values registered an average decrease of 1.2 per cent during the same four month period. Prices of lower quality farm and pasture lands have declined more than the better grades.

Anything that adversely affects expected farm income will have a tendency to cause land prices to decline further—such as: falling farm prices, rising production costs, rising interest rates, lower and expected lower support prices; failure to renew the International Wheat Agreement; poor yield due to dry weather; insects and diseases, decline in export; decline in consumption of particular crops, farm labor shortage, increased land tax, etc.

Spring Cattle Feeding Review

At this time of year farmers who have been wintering cattle are faced with the decision as to what to do with them. They have several choices: (1) they may decide to sell them during the next few weeks while feeder prices are comparatively favorable; (2) they may decide to put them into drylot immediately, and finish them for the fall market under a fairly long feeding program; (3) they may decide to put their cattle on grass now, feeding them some grain on pasture until the last of June and finish the cattle in drylot during the latter part of the summer and fall. The farmer

Numbers Up

Slaughter prices during the latter part of April made their first gains for the year. Smaller receipts have had an influence. The USDA April 1 Cattle On Feed report shows that 21% more cattle were on feed in Iowa, Illinois and Nebraska than a year ago. In Nebraska there were 35% more on grain feed.

who buys additional feeders at this time to use up surplus feed faces essentially the same alternatives.

Conditions Affecting Profitability

There are several considerations which a cattle feeder should study in deciding just what kind of feeding program he will follow this season. Among these are the number of cattle on feed, present and prospective slaughter prices, the cost of putting on gains, as well as the prospective price of feeders next fall. The number of cattle in feedlots now, especially in the Corn Belt, will affect the market later in the summer and early fall. On April 1, there were 19% more cattle, or about 570,000 head, on feed in 11 Corn Belt States than a year ago. In Nebraska, the increase has been about 35%. The number of cattle on feed represent an important part of the supply side of the cattle market. Continued heavy marketings of fat cattle are expected to continue through June; then marketings may decline until after late summer grasses are used up. However, toward the end of the pasture season marketings will probably substantially increase again.

Slaughter Prices to Stabilize

The average price for choice slaughter steers at Omaha during April was $21.05 per cwt. Specials expect prices for the higher grades of slaughter cattle to be generally steady during the rest of the year. In most years, higher grades of slaughter cattle sell at seasonal lows during the early summer months, strengthening later in the summer and fall. However, the usual seasonal increases will probably not be evident this year. In fact, if we should experience extensive drought conditions this summer, farmers will step up marketing of cows and feeder cattle, and prices might be depressed further.

Narrow Margins in 1953

We would conclude, on the basis of the above, that the opportunities for profit on "margin" increases in the price per pound over the purchase price of the feeder animal—will be quite narrow this season. In fact, many cattle feeders will be operating against a minus margin—a selling price lower than the purchase price of feeders. Accordingly, any profits will depend primarily on gains. The important question then is: Will the value of the gain be more than the cost of the feed necessary to make that gain?

Feed Costs and Age Important

The cost of feed is an important item affecting profits from gains. Feed should be charged against the feeding operation at either the market price, or the support price. On April 15 the price of No. 2 yellow corn was $1.40 in Nebraska. The average support price in the state is about $1.56 per bushel. Of course, many feeders keep their cattle to use up feeds which do not have desirable alternative uses. Setting a price on such feed is more difficult; but pasture can be rented out to neighbors. Or, the market price of the hay which could be harvested from the pasture, less the cost of harvesting and marketing might be a reasonable value to put on pasture.

The age of the animal also affects the cost of gains. As cattle get older, and put on more weight, the cost of feed necessary to put on a hundred pounds of gain increases. Feeders should estimate very carefully the cost of putting on each additional hundred pounds of gain.

Costs Increase With Weight

It appears that the feeding of light cattle will be particularly advantageous this year, both from the standpoint of profitability of gains, and because of the smaller investment tied up in the feeder animal and the correspondingly smaller risk of loss on "margin." It also appears that cattle feeders should watch the market carefully this season. With little prospect of rising prices they should be very cautious about holding cattle when they have reached a weight such that the cost of putting on the last 100 pounds of gain is greater than the price received. Farmers are already showing evidence of tending to market their finished cattle earlier than usual this year.

Time To Look At Your Lease

If you are one of the 68,911 Nebraska farmers who rent all or part of their farms you should be thinking about your 1954 lease. For many farmers, whose lease years started March 1, June will be too early to begin to worry about 1954.

Sheep . . .

Prices of lambs at Omaha have continued to steadily climb as slaughter numbers have slowly declined. For the nation as a whole, total slaughterings have exceeded a year ago. The USDA has announced a modified eligibility provision for 1953 shorn wool loans. For particulars see your local P. and M.A. officials.

However, if existing leases are not satisfactory and if either the landlord or tenant considers making a change, notice of the termination of the lease must be given long before the end of the year.

Satisfactory Leases Essential

Satisfactory leases are as necessary for the landlord and his family as for the tenant and his family. Unless lease terms are such as to encourage good soil conserving practices, the owner, after a few years of renting, may find his fences and buildings run down and his land reduced in productivity. Much of this depreciation can be avoided if you have a good tenant and if you give him a good lease. A good lease not only helps preserve the farm but enables the tenant and the landlord each make more money.

"Our Roots are In This Land"

Over 7,000 New Leases Annually

According to the United States census, 7,560 Nebraska renters were first year tenants on the farms they operated in 1950. Each year between 7,000 and 8,000 Nebraska farmers start new rental arrangements with their landlords for the entire farm operated. Many other farmers who own farms rent additional land from landowners. In addition to men who are first year renters some tenants remain upon the same farm but under changed leases.

A lease is a business arrangement by which the owner of the land agrees to provide the real estate and perhaps other things with which the tenant can conduct farming operations in exchange for a rental.

Leases-Oral or Written

The leases can vary from simple oral agreements to very complicated written contracts. Under some circumstances a lease can be verbal (unwritten) although it is usually better if put in writing. Leases that can be terminated in less than twelve months time after the agreement is made can be enforced in the courts even though unwritten. Leases for longer than 12 months must be in writing of they are to be enforced in court. Most lease arrangements are agreed upon before March 1. Unless put in writing such leases would not be enforceable in court.

Five Important Musts

A good written lease must meet five requirements:

- (1) It must be signed by the parties concerned.
- (2) It must specify a definite period during which the lease is to operate.
- (3) It must contain a description of the property.
- (4) It must name a specific landlord and tenant.
- (5) It must provide for payment of rent.

These five provisions will not in themselves insure satisfactory tenancies. Greater detail must be given if the lease is to function to the satisfaction of landlord and tenant. Most good leases list many things landlord and tenant must do and describe the penalties to be imposed if either fails to live up to his agreement.

Some leases merely specify that the tenant is to farm the land in a husbandmanlike manner. Others go into considerable detail to indicate what the tenant is to do. If the landlord and

Hogs

Slaughter Numbers Down

Prices continue to show strength against usual seasonal trends. The number of Federally inspected hogs slaughtered during the last week of April was down 22% from the same week a year ago. The 1953 total slaughter is expected to be 12 to 15% below 1952.

tenant agree as to what constitutes husbandmanlike farming, the first type of statement is enough. However, too often arguments develop when such brief statements are made. Such disputes may lead to lawsuits that call for interpretation of the terms of the lease by the court. Where cases, arising from disputes over leases, are taken to court neither landlord nor tenant may be entirely satisfied with the court's interpretation of the lease. More detail in the lease can save trouble for both parties. Good leases usually specify that the landlord or his representative is to be permitted to come on the farm to determine if repairs are needed and to see that they are satisfactorily made.

Means of Reducing Frictions

The following additional sections may reduce friction between parties to a lease. (1) A section concerning weed eradication. (2) A section that shows how the tenant is to be reimbursed for improvements he makes but does not get to use. (3) A section giving methods, times and places for making settlement at the end of crop year on a tenancy. (4) Division of crops and the cash payments to be made for pasture, meadow or buildings. (5) A section showing what contributions other than real estate the landlord is to make. These may include fertilizer, insecticides, pesticides, tiling, terracing, etc. (6) A section showing the contributions of the tenant. (7) The method of terminating the lease.

Printed lease forms are satisfactory if they cover all the points the two parties consider important. Often it is necessary to change sections of such leases in order to satisfy the parties to the lease. If changes are made in a printed lease the identical changes should be made on all copies of the lease and each party should indicate his approval of the change by placing his initials under the change.

Trends In Food Consumption

Americans are eating more food. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics index indicates that the per capita food consumption in 1952 is 12% higher than it was in 1935-1939.

The average person is eating slightly more food in pounds but about the same number of calories as pre-war. Americans now eat more meat, poultry, eggs, dairy products, vegetables and fruits than they did in the late thirties, but fewer potatoes and grain products.

Consumers are getting more of the foods they Corn . . .

New "Reseal" program for corn and oats announced by USDA. Wayne county's PMA office is prepared for this program and is currently resealing oats at the rate of 10c per bushel for one year extension. Farmers may reseal oats until June 30. Corn resealing will begin in July and will be at the rate of 13c per bushel if the corn is delivered to the government in July, 1954. This program for corn covers both purchase agreements and seal corn loans. Deadline on corn resealing is Sept. 30.

want most. When Americans choose the foods they want, they increase their intake in some of the most important food elements. Significantly more riboflavin, thiamine, niacin, iron, protein, and calcium and slightly more ascorbic acid are being consumed.

Incomes Higher Than Prices

Two major factors have brought about this increase in consumption. First, farmers produced 44% more food in 1952 than before the war; second, consumers could afford to buy more food in spite of high prices because of higher incomes.

Such programs as school lunches, distribution of surplus foods to institutions, industrial feeding, and the enrichment of foods have also tended to improve our diets.

Food bills have increased not just because of higher prices, but because consumers buy more food of better quality, and of higher cost.

Calorie Intake Decreasing

The number of calories consumed per person per day has declined over the last forty years. Food containing 3450 calories per person was purchased in 1909 compared to 3250 per person in 1952. More calories are derived from fat and fewer from carbohydrates than formerly.

An ample food supply does not mean a well-fed population unless the foods are distributed to meet the nutritional needs of the various population groups.

More families with a higher level of income tend to have quantities of protein, ascorbic acid, and calcium equal to those recommended by the National Research Council than do lower income families. Smaller families tend to be better fed than larger families, and homemakers with more education seem to plan better diets.

Diets Continue Nutritionally Short

No matter what the income, calcium ascorbic acid and vitamin A are the nutrient most often short of the recommended amount. Although the consumption of milk has increased, it still falls short of the desired amount.

Most of the trends in food consumption seem to be nutritionally beneficial. Still falling short of what is believed adequate is consumption of calcium, ascorbic acid and in many cases vitamin A. It is hoped that with high levels of production and increased nutrition knowledge these desirable trends can be continued.

Cadillac

He's Done Something for Himself!

Only a few short minutes ago, the man you see in the picture above was handed the golden keys to his 1953 Cadillac—and now he's off on that first delightful journey behind the wheel.

And as he leans back against the deep, soft cushion, and looks out over that proud hood into the roadway beyond... well, he knows that he's done something for himself!

He knows it just from the way he feels there in the driver's seat—relaxed, relaxed, and at peace with the world... completely confident that he has made the wisest possible choice of a motor car.

He senses it in the marvelous way the car handles and drives and rides... so effortless and smooth and quiet that it's a joy and an inspiration just to hold the wheel in his hands.

And he knows it, too, from the feeling of pride and satisfaction he enjoys as he looks forward to the delight of his family and the approval of his acquaintances and friends.

And how the miles and the years will bear him out in his conviction!

Let him arrive at a distinguished hotel... or an exclusive club... and he will find that his Cadillac constitutes the perfect "letter of introduction."

In fact, let him travel wherever he will in this broad land of ours... and he will find his Cadillac a trustworthy and unfailing companion, an inspiration to own and drive, a valued contributor to a magnificent way of life.

Yes, you're looking at a man who's done something wonderful for himself—wonderful beyond even his fondest dreams.

And if you think it's time you did something for yourself, then we suggest you come in and see us. Let's make it "Cadillac time" for you!

NORTHEAST NEBRASKA'S LARGEST USED CAR STOCK

How much longer can you afford to pay someone else's income tax?

Today's income—after taxes—must go a long way. Your take-home pay is not what it used to be. A large part of your earnings, you never even see. Certainly, you cannot afford to pay someone else's income taxes, too. Yet, that is exactly what you are forced to do because Congress gives income tax exemptions and special tax privileges to more than 40,000 profit-making corporations.

More than ONE AND ONE-HALF BILLION DOLLARS is added to what you and the rest of us must pay, BECAUSE these commercial operations—such as Cooperatives, Savings and Loan Associations, Mutual Savings Banks, Credit Unions, other co-op financial institutions, government businesses, and even many Mutual Fire and Casualty Insurance companies are permitted by Congress to pay LITTLE OR NOTHING in Federal income taxes on their huge corporate profits.

Actually, you pay more in dollars-and-cents Federal income tax out of your personal income than is paid by thousands of these big co-op and mutual companies whose total earnings run to BILLIONS of dollars. Tax favoritism enables them to escape about $1,500,000,000 in Federal income tax EVERY YEAR!

Small wonder your pay check doesn't go as far as it should when you not only have to pay your own tax, but must pay a part of the tax of these favored corporations. When Congress permits any privileged group to dodge taxes, the amount they do NOT pay must be ADDED to the total tax bill of the rest of us—including YOU. Otherwise, the government could not get its needed revenues.

Hearings on Tax Revision will Begin June 16th

The tax-writing Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives will start actual hearings on complete Federal tax revision on June 16. NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO DEMAND THAT THE LOOPHOLE WHICH PERMITS COOPERATIVE AND MUTUAL CORPORATIONS TO ESCAPE FEDERAL INCOME TAXES BECOME PERMANENTLY CLOSED. Let your voice be heard in Washington NOW!
