This Guy Davey Crockett ...

Current hero of the small fry (and some not so small) is a buckskin clad pioneer who has been immortalized in a modern ballad, movies, T-shirts and small play suits.

This shows a definite reverse of the trend to Superman, space patrols, ray guns and interplanetary exploration ...

The Crockett influence has also made itself felt in the Wayne public library. Mrs. Mildner said she has had to buy three new books on Davey plus a Davey Crockett picture book for tots.

All this interest by the young fry is heartening, but it does have drawbacks. They always beat us to the bookshelves and we can't get our chance at Davey Crockett.

Good Old Davey Crockett

Hearing about the exploits of Davey Crockett on juke box and radio for the past several weeks has brought many requests from the "cereal set" for more information on this fabulous American.

A little rusty on our American history and slightly curious ourselves, we sent our researchers scurrying for information to supplement the tale currently being told on wax. The opening lines of one biographer indicate that writing enthusiastically about Davey Crockett is not a quality peculiar only to our modern-day song writers:

"The morning Davey Crockett was born Davey's pa came bustin' out of his cabin in Tennessee alongside the Nolachucky river. He fired three shots into the air, gave a whoop, and said, 'I've got me a son. His name is Davey Crockett and he'll be the greatest hunter in creation.'"

The Encyclopedia Britannica, in more subdued tones, tells us: "In 1821-24 he (Crockett) was a member of the state legislature, having won his election by telling stories. (This is the same way people get elected today.)"

Another biographer tells us that Crockett once modestly said: "Look out, Andy Jackson! For I'm Davey Crockett fresh from the backwoods! I'm half horse, half alligator with a little snapping turtle mixed in." After committing this verbal slaughter, Crockett sped off to the Alamo.

Other interesting facts about Crockett: He liked apple cider, was a good square dancer and once shot the ears off a cat.

It looks like Pa Crockett's prophecy about his son has come true. We suspect that the rightfully honored Davey now has a firm toe hold on immortality. Indeed fame is a funny thing. Time was when you were famous if you could get your name on the side of a Pullman car. Now days you have to get it on Junior's T-shirt.

In Bookland

by Mrs. F. A. Mildner, City Librarian

THAT LAST MINUTE SCRAMBLE TO GET IN book reports and term papers is going strong. The reference section has been swamped some of the evenings this week. That last frenzied activity accounts for the quotation of the following verse:

"Under these moldering tomes amassed A tired librarian lay down at last. A victim of mental indigestion She gazed of a borrower's reference question."

IF YOU ARE A CLUB CHAIRMAN, NOW IS THE TIME to plan next fall's program—steer clear of conflicting dates. Your task will be a lot easier if you know what other events are already scheduled. Have you thought about using films for your programs next year? An early date for a film will guarantee the date you want. Inquire about good films at the library. Your librarian can order them for you.

WE WILL OWN A FILM PROJECTOR FOR 16 MM sound films next fall. It will be available for loan so if you want to show a film at your meetings and are worried about procuring the projector you may book your dates for the projector at the same time you book your dates for the film and your worries are over. We plan to conduct classes in the use of the projector, or will send someone from the library to show the film in case no one in your group can run it. There will be a slight rental charge which we hope will cover the cost of any repairs on the machine but since it will be small and the film rental charge is not very much we hope many people will take advantage of our film service next year. There are many free films well worth showing also.

SOME OF OUR VERY FINEST BOOKS ARE chosen for Memorials. We have two new books on that shelf now, one for H. J. Felber and one for Mrs. Herman Lundberg, "Conquest by Man," a translation from the German by Paul Herrmann was given by the Chamber of Commerce in memory of Mrs. Lundberg. It is the story of how man, driven on by curiosity, greed, accident and ingenuity, discovered the lands and seas around him. History is here surveyed from a fresh and entertaining point of view. It was also the Chamber of Commerce who placed the book in the library for Mr. Felber and the book chosen for him "Quasaban and Siba," exploring the ancient Kingdoms on the Biblical spice routes of Arabia, by Wendell Phillips. The author is the explorer, adventurer, archeologist, and president of the American Foundation for the Study of Man, who organized and led four expeditions to find the ancient treasures of exotic civilizations long buried in the wilds of southern Arabia. The book is easy reading and illustrated with 87 photographs.

THE BOOK OF THE MONTH FOR MAY IS "HIDDEN RIVER" by Storm Jameson, a suspense thriller and a work of serious moral reflection. Since it may be described as a psychological melodrama it will be popular on the rental shelf.

HERE AND THERE ... With Your County Agent By Harold Ingalls

Sorghum or Corn Most farmers are still relying on corn as their principal crop even though the yields of grain sorghum are greater than in periods of low rainfall. Yields for the last fifteen years show that under conditions where corn produced 35 bushels per acre, sorghum has produced about 50 bushels per acre. In years of lowest rainfall, the sorghum yields declined much less proportionately than corn yields. Machinery and operating costs are similar for planting and cultivation but the harvesting costs are higher for corn. If the farmer markets his crops through livestock, he will receive a larger return than selling crops as such. Feeding tests have shown that ground sorghum when fed to cattle, was worth 95 percent as much as ground corn. Other grain sorghums are valued from 91-97 percent as much as corn. Milo is apparently quite well liked by all livestock, but is somewhat less palatable than corn and must be ground in order for livestock to receive the greatest benefit. One problem is the storage of grain sorghum. When stored in large quantities it has a tendency to spoil due to the high moisture content. To prevent this, you may have the sorghum in the field for a longer period or resort to mechanical drying in the bin. Sorghum will respond equally as well to fertilizer as corn. The same amounts should be applied as is used on corn. A recent bulletin giving complete information on both grain and forage sorghums is available at the County Extension office. A forage harvester, to justify its purchase, must handle 125 to 150 tons of forage per year, says a recent Agricultural Experiment station report. Costs of a ton of forage chopped decreased from $8.88 to $3.52 as the use of the harvester increased, from 61 to 288 tons a year. A similar reduction in cost was found for pick-up balers. Rat Damage Rats take a terrific financial toll from growers, particularly in corn crops. Experience with new bait materials has shown that they can be controlled with a "double barreled" attack. This system requires a combination of baited food and drinking stations. Rats generally like their food to be near their water or vice versa. By placing water treated with Warfarin (a water soluble form of Warfarin) next to Warfarin bait, the rat is virtually sure to get a lethal dose. The average corn crib needs about four of these combination feed and water stations for good rat control. Maintain and replenish your stations daily until all signs of rodent activity have stopped. A thorough rat control program should be exercised at city dumps which often provide a breeding ground for reinfestation of neighboring farms. Tankage and Pasture Good pasture cuts the cost of getting hogs to market up to 30 percent. Less grain and 50 percent less protein supplement are needed when pigs are on good pasture. The need for special vitamin supplements is lessened or almost completely eliminated when pigs are getting all or part of these nutrients through good, green legume pasture.

state government is being asked for a helping hand. This in itself is a significant event. Two major plans may be advanced. One would establish a state wide electricity agency. The other would give the entire Nebraska to the Platte Valley Public Power district as a distribution area.

CAPITOL NEWS

BY MELVIN PAUL
Nebraska Press Association Statehouse Correspondent

Lincoln — State government this week took a hand in the tangled affairs of Nebraska's public power districts. Gov. Victor Anderson scheduled a conference with leaders of the various districts to attempt to iron out controversies which have racked the power set up for many months. The Legislature, too, has under consideration a measure, LB 501, which would enable a complete reorganization of the state power system. This has been delayed because some senators have been uneasy about giving the state freedom to the power districts until a complete plan is agreed upon. The real reason for so much speed at this time is that a complete reorganization may be necessary if Nebraska is to get permission to construct a peacetime atomic plant. In the light of this possibility what was just a "family squabble" has taken on the dimensions of a controversy so important that state government is taking an active role. The controversy broke into the open last year over the question of whether the Nebraska Public Power system or Consumers Public Power district should build a peacetime atomic plant. This is one of 53 state recreation areas which are supported by part of the income from hunting and fishing licenses. State parks get support from tax funds, the recreation grounds and they have become "step children" because there wasn't enough money to go around. Sen. Kathleen Foote, Axtell, argued that the recreation area should be fixed up. A housewife and mother, Mrs. Foote contends, "This is no time to de-emphasize recreation." Some senators wanted to sell the land to the city of Hastings. Others warned it might be a precedent for similar requests from citizens in the vicinity of other state recreation grounds.

"Harassing" Bills A resolution was introduced in the Legislature condemning the practice of having bills drafted up to "harass" a particular industry for the general public. The resolution, "Bills have been prepared solely for the purpose of harassing persons or industries with no thought of being introduced. Preparation of bills for the purpose of harassment is contrary to the public interest."

Drought Cattlemen and farmers in a 10-county northcentral Nebraska area appealed to their state senators and Gov. Anderson for help in getting federal drought aid. They said that many cattlemen were forced on the market because of poor pasture and lack of food because of extremely dry conditions. Both Gov. Anderson and State Agriculture Director Ed Hoyt said dry conditions in other parts of the state might require assistance elsewhere. First counties to make the appeal were Greeley, Loup, Valley, Blaine, Holt, Greeley, Custer, Sherman, Howard and Wheeler.

New Agencies The Legislature voted to spend $40,000 to buy land and build a hospital in Omaha for a crippled children's center. Once the building is completed it is to be leased to various organizations and supposedly will not cost the state any more money. This will provide a first rate center for the treatment and rehabilitation of children suffering from various kinds of diseases. Also given a state of approval was a bill to establish a wheat

"Our Roots Are In This Land"

Whoa There, Spring Cleaner!

Are you—the most folks—haunted by two little pieces of paper? One is the little piece of paper you SAVED—a cancelled check, an old receipt or whatever. The other is the little piece of paper you DIDN'T save—and all of a sudden you need it, urgently. Of all the documents you might have kept, it is the one you should have kept.

The spring cleaning season is here—and with it comes the urge to throw out all kinds of things. And many of the papers that lie around the house could be discarded but they should be discarded with some thought and care.

The second step to avoiding frustrations because that valuable little bit of paper has disappeared, is to put the family files and records on a systematic basis.

Save Those Records

But what family records should be kept and what need not be kept?

This list doesn't include the obvious items like insurance policies of all kinds, or wills—which anyone in his right mind safeguards anyway.

There are very real reasons for preserving certain other records. Now let's get specific. Here are many items that might be considered for family records.

MILITARY SERVICE RECORDS: A discharge certificate is exceedingly important. Some experts recommend that it be recorded by your county or town clerk. That entry creates an official record, in case the original is lost.

ORDERS TO ACTIVE or inactive duty, commissions, records of medical treatment or disability, and papers connected with claims for benefits are also essential as are documents connected with GI-Bill education that certify your completion of training or withdrawal from training, and those that certify any remaining period of entitlement.

SAVINGS BOND LIST: You should have an up-to-date listing of your U. S. savings bonds that shows, for each bond, the serial numbers, denomination, date of purchase, and after it is redeemed, the amount you received. And don't overlook the form of ownership so you know its eventual disposition in case of death. The serial numbers will be needed should you ever lose a bond; the other data provides income tax information.

TAX RETURNS: Now there's a timely item, with most Nebraskans getting their personal property tax form into shape right now. Make a duplicate copy of every state, local and federal tax return you file. Attach the duplicate withholding receipt to your duplicate income tax form. You'll need the information when filing in subsequent years; also if your return is ever challenged. Keep them fairly accessible for at least five years. And then put them away—don't throw them away.

CANCELED CHECKS: Save them by all means—but not willfully and forever. Keep ALL canceled checks for at least two years. After that, thin them out.

SAVE CHECKS for tax payments indefinitely, and put them with your tax records. Save checks for any expense that you have deducted on an income tax return, and put it with your tax records. Save GI insurance checks. Save rent checks as long as you live on the premises. In Nebraska the Statute of limitations runs for four years for an unwritten contract and for five years for a written contract. Thus, save checks used to pay off indebtedness accordingly. Save those that paid for securities or investments or real estate. Save any other special check in a case where you think you might some day need to establish the fact or date of purchase or the price paid.

BANK STATEMENTS: Bankers advise saving them with the checks that are returned. After a few years, throw them out.

CHECK STUBS: Keep them to tally against your bank statement, then discard.

DUPLICATE DEPOSIT SLIPS: Handle like check stubs.

RECEIPTS AND RECEIPTED BILLS: Again the same rules as for cancelled checks.

But you can ditch a receipted charge-account bill, as soon as the credit shows on the next month's statement. But save the receipts for tax payments, rent and mortgage, interest, insurance premium, and receipts or bills for any expenses included in income tax returns.

BIRTH CERTIFICATES: Always keep certified copies of the birth certificate of each member of the family in a safe deposit box or strongbox. There are numerous circumstances in which you are called upon to prove your age or citizenship. Life insurance and social security benefits may depend on them.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE RECORDS: They are vital in insurance, social security, tax and inheritance matters.

EVIDENCE OF DEBT: Keep copies of promissory notes, installment-sales contracts, liens and chattels—all the papers that show you owe money or that pledge security. Keep them during the life of the debt and for a year afterward. Keep the receipts for payments with the papers.

Once a debt has been paid off, bundle together all the papers and save for five years.

SALES SLIPS: Save them until you are sure the merchandise is satisfactory and won't have to be returned. Then they can be destroyed, WITH TWO EXCEPTIONS: If the items carry a guarantee, keep for the life of the guarantee; if the slips show sales tax amounts, and you want to itemize your income tax deductions.

SOCIAL SECURITY CARD: Hang onto it for dear life. It may mean income to you in years to come.

PERSONAL PROPERTY INVENTORY: Protect yourself by listing your belongings. Keep in a fireproof place. Insurance companies say that an inventory saves lots of grief and can mean real money to you in case of loss.

AUTO TITLE OR BILL OF SALE: Keep in a strong-box or safe deposit box. You'll need it to sell the car.

Where to Keep Those Records?

Of course, a metal filing cabinet would be dandy if you wanted to get fancy. But an average family can get along nicely with a safe deposit box, a fireproof strongbox at home, an alphabetized cardboard letter file, and a little drawer space for a few envelopes.

That layout will enable you to keep the vital things safe and to keep track of what is where.

If you spend an hour now and then cleaning out and updating your records, you will be able to find the really important things a lot more quickly and easily.

As for the few items you do want to keep, but which aren't important enough for safe deposit, keep a carton in some out-of-the-way corner and attach a list of contents.

If you need that paper, will it be where you can find it? If you have organized your family records and put them away promptly, of course you can find it!

BEEF CATTLE Numbers Up, Prices Steady

FOR THE SIXTH CONSECUTIVE YEAR numbers of cattle on farms in the country have increased. On Jan. 1, 1955, an all time high of 95.4 million cattle on farms was estimated by the USDA. This represents about a 1 percent increase over a year earlier, but the rate of increase was the smallest since the current continued upswing began.

The number of cows 2 years old and over remained unchanged from the previous year; the increase of total cattle numbers was largely due to the biggest calf crop on record, and more yearling or older steers which reflect the large number of cattle in the feed lot.

More Cattle on Feed

On April 1, 1955, the estimated number of cattle and calves on feed for market in the 14 major feeding states was 4,547,000 head. This was an increase of about 12 percent over April 1, 1954, and also an increase over the number reported for Jan. 1, 1955.

Mild weather conditions last fall and early winter permitted late grazing in pastures and stalk fields, and many cattle were not put into the feed lot until after the first of the year. In Nebraska there were 10 percent more cattle on feed on April 1, than a year earlier.

Despite poorest western range conditions in the fall since 1934, inventories of stocker and feeder cattle in the country have remained fairly stable. Winter hay supplies generally have been adequate and cattle should enter the grass season in good condition. Some drought areas have been short of hay and this has reduced carry-over numbers of stock in these areas.

To support the large number of cattle on feed, there was a record total supply of feed grains and concentrates; also a near record supply per animal unit. Indications are that there will be no shortages of grains or concentrates for cattle feeding operations in the near future.

Beef Supplies &amp; Prices

Cattle and calf slaughter in 1954 was up 7 percent over a year earlier. However, slaughter did not increase in the fall as is normally the case. This probably indicates comparatively stable slaughter for the next year and suggests general price stability for slaughter cattle although fluctuations between grades will undoubtedly continue to exist.

Hog slaughter is running considerably higher than this time last year, so increased pork supplies could have a depressing effect on beef prices. Pork production will be about 9 percent above that of 1954.

Price spreads between grades continue to be wide although there has been some narrowing since February. Very few highly finished cattle have been selling at the quoted top price which somewhat distorts the price picture. Scarcity of prime cattle, caused by feeders topping-out feedlots before cattle reach prime grade, has contributed to the price spreads.

Spreads can be expected to narrow as more highly finished cattle move to market. The widening of price spreads between grades worked to the advantage of feeders who bought low-finish cattle when the spreads began to widen, fed them a short time, and sold in January and February. However, if spreads continue to narrow, future margins and profits will be reduced for similar feeding operations.

Indications are that the customary fall price rise for fat cattle may be somewhat less than normal this fall. Steer slaughter since the first of the year has been slow with a relatively small percent of those slaughtered grading prime and choice. Fed cattle slaughter usually decreases in the fall which partially accounts for the price rises for fat cattle.

Since numbers in the feed lot have been high since the first of the year, while steer slaughter has been down, it can be expected that above normal numbers of fed steers will be marketed during the latter half of this year. This would tend to retard the customary fall advances in fat cattle prices.

The supply of fed beef will be fully as great as last year; but the supply of all beef may not exceed 1954. Prospects are for cattle prices to remain relatively stable. Consumer buying remains at a high level. Rising consumer incomes are expected to maintain a strong demand for beef with little likelihood for reduced prices for retail cuts.

SURPLUSES

The Commodity Credit Corporation has used up $8.5 billion of its $10 billion borrowing authority to finance price support operations and may have to ask for an increase in the ceiling before July 1. Wheat now accounts for one-third of CCC price support activities. A wheat carry-over of about one billion bushels is expected when the present marketing year ends on June 30.

DIVERTED ACRES

Nebraska farmers apparently will use soybeans and grain sorghums as principal alternative crops on diverted acres in 1955. A recent survey by the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics showed that farmers plan to increase sorghum acreage from 850 to 935 thousand acres and soybeans from 194 to 252 thousand acres. Price support for both of these crops have been set at 70 percent of parity, $2.04 per bushel for soybeans and $1.93 per cwt. for grain sorghum.

CORN

The minimum support price for the 1955 corn crop has been announced at 87 percent of parity. The U.S. average loan rate will be $1.58 per bushel in the commercial corn area, $1.19 in non-commercial areas. The final level as set in the fall could be higher if the supply of corn is lower than expected but cannot be lower even if supply is larger.

Sorghum or Corn in Limited Rainfall Areas

Many of the farmers in South Central and Southwestern Nebraska are still relying on corn as their principal feed crop even though the yields of grain sorghum are greater than corn in periods of normal rainfall.

Yield averages for the last fifteen years show that under conditions where corn produced 35 bushels per acre, sorghum has produced about 50 bushels per acre. IN YEARS OF LOW RAINFALL, the sorghum yields declined proportionally much less than corn yields.

Using yields of corn and grain sorghum produced under normal conditions and support prices for 1955 ($1.46 per bushel for corn and $1.08 per bushel for grain sorghum), farmers can expect gross receipts per acre of $51.10 from corn and $54 from grain sorghum. Much corn in South Central and Southwestern Nebraska would not bring $1.46 so returns per acre are likely to be less than $51.10.

Sorghum is likely to bring near support price in this area. The machinery and operating costs are similar for planting and cultivation but the harvesting costs are higher for corn. Therefore, grain sorghums will give a higher net return to the farmer than corn when sold for cash.

If the farmer markets his crops through livestock, he will receive a larger return than selling crops as such. Feeding tests have shown that ground milo, when fed to cattle, was worth 95 percent as much as ground corn. Other grain sorghums are valued from 91-97 percent as much as corn.

Using the 50 bushel yield for milo, which is worth 95 percent as much as corn, corn would have to yield 47.5 bushels per acre to produce the same feed value. Milo is apparently quite well liked by all livestock, but is somewhat less palatable than corn and must be ground in order for livestock to receive the greatest benefit.

One problem faced by the farmer is the storage of grain sorghum. When grain sorghum is stored in large quantities, it has a tendency to spoil, due to the high moisture content. To prevent this, the farmer may have to leave the sorghum in the field for a longer period or resort to mechanical drying in the bin. Capital required for buying corn picking equipment could be used in buying a grain dryer.

Many farmers also feel that grain sorghums will not respond to fertilizer. Sorghum will respond equally as well as corn according to fertilizer test results. The same amounts should be applied as is used on corn.

It Happened In NEBRASKA---

Nebraska's first railway depot was perhaps as much a sight-seeing point as it was a take-off point for trains. Indians, buckskin-clad plainsmen, farmers, gamblers, businessmen, ladies--ALL could be seen daily at Omaha's first depot in 1868.

In pioneer days, Nebraska's taverns were colorful, too (too much so!). But times have changed. Today our taverns are quiet, respectable businesses which have, in recent years, earned the good will of all.

Hottest news in Hardtops is the 4-Door Riviera

Why take anything less than the sensation of the year?

WHEN you learn what's been done in the automobile pictured here, you can easily see why this beauty is winning rave notices coast to coast.

Buick engineers took the hardtop body design that has been growing tremendously in popularity over the past six years—and gave it four doors instead of two.

Simple? Sure—to all outward appearances.

But it took a brand-new kind of body with which new structural principles to do it—to bring a long-awaited new kind of automobile to the public in volume numbers and at popular prices.

For this is a true hardtop—with the sleek and sexy look of a Convertible, because there are no center posts in the window areas on either side.

And now it has front doors for the front-seat passengers—and rear doors for the rear-seat passengers—plus rear doors to the size of a full Sedan.

(It took some special kind of engineering magic, you can be sure, to hinge all four doors at their forward edges for greater safety, and more ease of entering and exiting.)

Hottest news in Hardtops is the 4-Door Riviera

Why take anything less than the sensation of the year?

WHEN you learn what's been done in the automobile pictured here, you can easily see why this beauty is winning rave notices coast to coast.

Buick engineers took the hardtop body design that has been growing tremendously in popularity over the past six years—and gave it four doors instead of two.

Simple? Sure—to all outward appearances.

But it took a brand-new kind of body with which new structural principles to do it—to bring a long-awaited new kind of automobile to the public in volume numbers and at popular prices.

For this is a true hardtop—with the sleek and sexy look of a Convertible, because there are no center posts in the window areas on either side.

And now it has front doors for the front-seat passengers—and rear doors for the rear-seat passengers—plus rear doors to the size of a full Sedan.

(It took some special kind of engineering magic, you can be sure, to hinge all four doors at their forward edges for greater safety, and more ease of entering and exiting.)
