Wayne Historical Society Needs Help

THE WAYNE HISTORICAL society has a problem. More antiques and curios than they know what to do with. The collection of more than 900 articles now overflows the original room allotted them on the second floor of the courthouse. In fact they have filled another room in the courthouse attic and some of the larger relics are stored at the fairgrounds. A pressing need now exists for both space and help in putting the museum into a semblance of order. Any ideas, or help with the project would be very much appreciated, according to Mrs. Maude Auker, president of the association.

Mrs. Abel Labels Opponent's Plane Charges as Untruth

Commenting on a vicious personal attack against Mrs. Hazel Abel at Humboldt Monday night by one of five other candidates for the Republican nomination for governor, Mrs. Abel was to have said in Wayne Wednesday.

"I do not believe in dignifying a lie by refuting with the simple truth. Neither do I choose to dignify the purveyor of untruth by giving such an individual an opportunity to retrace his false steps through happy headline hunting grounds.

"I think the old adage of 'people who live in glass houses' applies in this case. My air travel hardly approaches that of two of my opponents, one of whom chartered an expensive airplane recently to fly to a political meeting in Rustville.

"My critic charges me with chartering a 41-passenger Convair at $500 an hour — a plane so large only a few airports in the state can accommodate it. How ridiculous can he get?"

"I believe in running on the issues and my platform, announced at the time of my filing, still stands. As I interpret news reports, no other candidate for governor can make that statement.

"If the wholly irresponsible charges made at Humboldt are representative of the speaker's thinking, then distorted statements along many lines can be expected from the statehouse if this person were to be elected governor. Many of those supporting him until this scurrilous Humboldt attack have left his camp these last few days because of this man's continuing indiscretions. Our phones are jangling and bringing us cheer from many newly-found friends.

"Dignity should be restored to the highest office in our state. There is no room for folly."

Because of poor flying weather, Mrs. Abel was unable to reach Wayne Wednesday for a scheduled talk at WSTC and a locally-organized reception in her honor.

The Wayne County "Abel for Governor" committee is headed by Donald Reed.

See Tax Levy Up Two Mills

A 1960-61 operational budget of $246,655 was adopted by The Wayne city school board Monday night. The board is asking $141,600 from local district taxes.

The tax amount is an increase of $36,600 over last year's request and will require an increase of approximately 6.3 mills in the tax levy for operation of the local school district. Part of the levy increase will be offset by a reduction in the levy to meet bond and interest payments on the new elementary school.

Based on the present district valuation, the total tax levy necessary for 1960-61 would be about 29 mills. Last year's levy was 26.64. The total for 1960-61 would include 24.33 for operation and 4.47 for bond and interest payments.

The new operational budget is approximately $24,000 over that of a year ago. The increase is due almost entirely to the new elementary school which will be opened this fall.

The new budget for instruction is $149,755 compared to $122,945. This increase is accounted for by an additional $8,000 for elementary teachers and $17,000 for high school and junior high instructors.

The other major increase in the budget comes in school plant operation, where opening of the new school necessitated hiring of another custodian. The budget was increased about $8,000 in this area; $3,000 of the amount going for custodian's salary.

The board offset these two major increases with a decision to use $34,000 of the surplus funds, it now has on hand. If the surplus had not been used the tax levy would have been even higher. The $34,000 will be used for purchase of furniture and equipment, mainly for the new school.

The table shows a comparison of the budgets for the two years:

Fund	1959-60	1960-61
Administrative	$ 11,250	$ 11,000
Instruction	122,945	149,755
Other services	3,550	3,500
Plant operation	14,850	22,500
Plant main.	8,800	8,850
Fixed charges	7,350	9,600
Capital outlay	48,200	40,000
Adult education	6,355	1,400
Totals	$222,800	$246,655

Revenue for the coming year was estimated. It includes the $34,000 to be taken from the present surplus. About $45,000 was taken from the surplus last year. The district currently has about $100,000 on hand. It will receive about $22,000 in June for free-high school tuition for the 1959-60 second semester. However, operational expenses, including teacher salaries through August, will deplete these funds considerably. A comparison of the revenue estimates for the two years is shown below:

Source	1959-60	1960-61
Taxes	$105,000	$141,600
Tuition	57,000	58,960
State app.	4,300	4,700
City of Wayne	1,500	1,500
Licenses, fines	2,800	2,495
From surplus	45,000	34,000
Misc. sources	12,200	3,400
Totals	$222,800	$246,655

In other business the board approved a tuition hike, continued search for a cook for the hot lunch program, approved bills totaling $2,338.16 and named depositories for school monies.

Because of increased per pupil costs, tuition for contracting districts was hiked to $15 a week for seventh and eighth grades and $9 for lower grades.

All individuals presently contracting will be charged $9 through eighth grade. All new individuals contracting will pay same as districts except at Carroll school where charges will be $9 for grades K-8.

Depositories for school funds were the same as last year with the First National bank named for the regular school fund and the State National for the bond fund.

All the above action followed reorganization of the board and election of officers. Mrs. Don Wightman was re-elected president; Albert Kern, vice president, and Edw. Seymour, secretary.

PEOPLE ARE SAYING . . . and we heartily agree that Mrs. Hazel ABEL is the logical choice for GOVERNOR on the Republican Ballot

Nebraska needs ABLE leadership in the state-house to declare "war on waste." We need to overhaul our state's archaic tax structure to be directed by the people themselves . . . we need to inaugurate central accounting and central purchasing procedures in all State-house departments to cut waste in government. We need to "beef up" our agricultural economy by speeding up additional agricultural research for crops new to Nebraska. Finally we must hold the line on all governmental expenses. Hazel Abel has the ability and leadership to bring these things about . . . and she can win. Elect Hazel Abel, Republican for Governor.

WSTC Wins 67-64 At Omaha U. Meet

Wayne State and Omaha U. trackmen battled to the last event Monday before settling a dual track meet at Omaha. The Wildcats emerged with a 67-64 margin, thanks to a sweep of all three places in both the mile and the two-mile runs.

As usual, Wayne dominated the distance events. Omaha won most of the dashes and both hurdles events.

Don Weitzenkamp set a meet mark of 4:36.8 in the mile, and Ken Katzer broke the two-mile record in 10:34.8. Elden Hobza's victory in the pole vault tied an 11-foot meet mark. Keith Towns heaved the javelin 174-9 for another Wayne record.

Omaha posted new marks in the broad jump and discus.

The meet was Wayne's third in five days. Coach Carl Ellermeier will take about 15 to the Sioux City Relays Friday.

WSTC Tracksters Win 15 Events in Triangular Meet

Wayne State tracksters rolled up 13 1/2 points Saturday in defeating Southern (S. D.) State, 25-1, and Westmar, 13, in a triangular meet. The Wildcats won all but one of the 16 events. They swept all four places in the 220 dash and the javelin and took three places in eight other events. Westmar won the shot-put.

Wayne Singles Lead To Pierce Bowler

Art Herbolzheimer, Pierce, took over the singles lead in the annual Melodee lanes handicap bowling tournament Sunday with a 694 series. The tourney has two more weekends to run, ending May 15.

Herbolzheimer holds an eight-pin lead over Al Jenkins, Norfolk. Carroll Hemmer, Humphrey, who had led the tourney since the first weekend is in third with 684. Sioux City's Walt Behn still leads the all-events with 1,856.

Team and doubles leaders also held their positions although there were changes in second and third places in both events this week. Randolph Oil co. tops the teams with 3,002, one pin ahead of Reed's Furniture, Pierce. The 150 club, Neigh, moved into third with 2,998.

Downpour Friday Nixes Ball Games

WSTC's baseball team will entertain Concordia in a doubleheader Saturday at the Wayne ball park. The opener is scheduled for 1 p.m. The team traveled to Peru Friday — and accomplished nothing. A downpour of rain greeted their approach to the city, washing out a scheduled doubleheader.

The games are tentatively scheduled for May 17 if the outcome would effect conference standings.

Rain also stopped the Wayne tennis team's match here Thursday with Concordia, but the golfers managed to play half their match with Concordia. They finally won the first round, 4-0.

Morningside golf and tennis teams are billed to play at Wayne today.

Most Valuable WSTC Players

HAPPY ATHLETES Rod Tietzort (left), Wayne, and Ron Raver, Craig, display trophies they received last week as most valuable players at Wayne State. Athletic Director J. B. Merriman presented the desk pen sets to the pair at the annual W Club banquet Wednesday. For Tietzort, a junior, it was the second year he has received the most valuable award in football. Raver, though a senior, plans to spend another year at WSTC to complete degree requirements — and to play basketball. An all-conference player this season, he still has a year of eligibility left.

with two classes. Class A included schools rated as Class A and B under state rules, while Class B included the C and D teams.

The athletes bucked a frigid, blustery wind and a damp, soft track, yet posted 19 new records, 10 of them for meet marks.

Cherokee High School Wins Annual Playday

Girls from Cherokee, Ia., high school won the annual Playday held at Wayne State Saturday.

Disabled Persons Should File Claim For Social Security

Seriously disabled people who expect their disabilities to be long lasting are advised to contact their social security office, says Clifford Kittelson, manager of the Norfolk office.

A person must be disabled for at least six months before a period of disability can be established. However, if the condition is not expected to improve, a person may apply three or four months after the onset of the disability. This early inquiry speeds up the claim processing.

Besides being disabled, a person must have been under social security at least five years out of the 10 before he became disabled. It is equally important for disabled people under 58 to have their records frozen. By doing so they will generally receive higher benefits.

Witt Scores Double Track Win Friday

Bill Witt gave Wayne High a double win Friday in the Wayne State Invitational track meet as he posted records in the 440 and 220 dashes.

His time of 22.8 in the 220 is both a class A and a meet record, eclipsing the 24.0 meet mark set by Taylor, Stuart, two years ago. Witt did the 440 in 54.4 for a class A record. The old standard, 56-flat by Auburn, Pierce, was set in 1958.

Roger Denesia gained a two-way tie for third in the high jump with 14 1/2 points — good for a seventh place tie among 10 schools entered in class A.

For Wayne Prep, Radelle Exleben's second in the shot put was the only scoring. This gave Prep four points and a tie for 13th place with Randolph among the 17 schools scoring in class B. Three other schools failed to score.

This was the ninth running of the invitational but only the second

When we do the job... You know it's done RIGHT!

With Cuckler Buildings ...

YOU GET THE FULL PRICE FOR THE GRAIN YOU RAISE

For Example: Suppose the ASC will lend you $1.05 on every bushel of eligible corn you raise on your farm ...

Let's say you raise 5,000 bushels of corn. Here's what you get

$1.05	support price
less .01	an ASC service charge for processing your loan
$1.04	per bushel net price or
$5,200	on your 5,000 bushels of corn

Should you store this 5,000 bushels of corn in a commercial elevator, this is what would happen ...

$1.05	support price
less .16	storage fee to hold your grain from Nov. 1 until your loan maturity date (July 31)
less 1/2c	an ASC service charge for processing your loan
.88 1/2	per bushel net price or
$4,425.00	on your 5,000 bushels of corn

In Other Words ...
You lost $775.00 worth of your corn harvest because you didn't have storage space!

NOW ...

According to present indications you will be allowed to reseal your grain as long as you have adequate storage.

Under the ASC Resealing Program you will be paid 16c per bushel for storing this same corn on your place the year following harvest. 16c x 5,000 bushels give you 800 bonus dollars for resealing your grain.

THESE BONUS DOLLARS WILL PAY FOR YOUR CUCKLER BUILDING
COME IN AND LET US GIVE YOU THE FULL STORY ON GRAIN STORAGE AND CUCKLER BUILDINGS

L. M. SHULTZ
Candidate For
State Senator, 16th District
Colfax, Wayne and Stanton Counties

1. Possibly most of the 16th District voters DO NOT KNOW that our present State Senator voted for Legislative Bill No. 58.
2. This was one of Carpenter's bills that would have levied a property tax on our churches and hospitals. How tax-crazy can an elected state official get?
3. Blunders like this by our elected officials must be stopped NOW, AND AT THIS ELECTION.
4. Be careful about signing that petition for a Sales and Income Tax. There are several stingers in it that might make your face red later.
5. Vote for me. I will be loyal to the laws that have kept Nebraska a wonderful place to live.
6. I will get the job done by being aggressive and by using my Legislative experience and good common sense.

Use Cottage Cheese
In Cherry Custard Pie

While waiting for really warm weather to ripen fresh cherries, make this pretty two-layer cherry custard pie with frozen tart cherries. It's a delicious combination of sweet-tangy flavors, according to Ray Kling, local salesman of the Meadow Gold Dairy, who gave us the recipe.

Cottage cheese is the surprise element in the custard layer, says Beatrice Cooke, director of the test kitchens. It makes it thick, creamy and rich—a perfect topping for the tart cherry filling.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The editorial department of a weekly newspaper is an important department. Normally it is one person's opinion of topics that concern most of the readers.

It is the duty of an editorial writer to search all available facts before he sits down to write. From this basis the writer should be able to give a clear picture of important topics.

You may not agree with an editorial... but if you read the editorial and give serious thought to the subject discussed you have gained. You, as a reader, have given careful thought to an important problem and the writer is proud to have called your attention to an important subject that you may have overlooked.

A Right and an Obligation

If anyone thinks the passage of last year's labor bill solved the labor legislative problem, it's time he thought again.

For instance, here's something a publication of the American Retail Federation has to say: "Union lobbyists are trying to get Congress to pass a bill to permit secondary boycotts in the construction industry."

Here is how the bill would work... A retailer decides to build a branch store and hires a general contractor to build it. The general contractor gets individual subcontractors to do the cement work, the electrical installations, the painting, the plumbing, etc. In the middle of the construction job the plumbing subcontractor gets into a labor dispute with the union plumbers who work for him. Under this bill (HR 9070) the plumbers could put picket lines around the store at which the plumbing subcontractor is doing work.

Fathers expect their sons to make money and mothers expect their daughters to take it away from the sons of other mothers.

Why Mothers Get Gray

Mrs. Jack Lough, wife of the Albion News publisher, some time ago spent some hectic days answering her little boy's questions while he was confined at home with chicken pox.

Why mothers get gray prematurely isn't hard to answer, compared with some of these:

Why, where is Heaven?
Why, my eyes be open in Heaven? Why, Mommy, if I'm dead? Can the doctor bring me back down here?
Mommy, how does Gussie know she's a dog?
Which has the longest hair, Mommy — Jesus or God?

How many days 'till Christmas? Show me on your hands.

Why is the moon broken sometimes, Mommy? Is a whale bigger than a house? Why can't I go outside and play?

Mommy, which is bigger — a ship or a train? Why did I get the chicken pots, Mommy?

Mommy, is a whale bigger than an elephant? Mommy, is our Daddy bigger than Nancy's? Well, then, is he tougher?

Could I pretend this cookie is spinach, Mommy, and get muscles like Popeye?

Whatsa matter, Mommy? Why do you have wrinkles? Don't be sad, Mommy.

Board of Control Likely Debate Topic For State Senators in Coming Session

LINCOLN — The Board of Control and its functions will likely be the subject of considerable debate in the coming session of the Legislature.

The lawmakers convened in January, but a committee of state senators has already touched on the matter. It is the group studying penal affairs, headed by Sen. David Tew, Norfolk.

State Penitentiary Warden Maurice Sigler, Gov. Ralph G. Brooks and Atty. Gen. C. S. Beck have all expressed dissatisfaction with the current State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Sigler said the board is made up of the three highest elected officials — governor, attorney general and secretary of state — and these men do not have the time to spend on cases. "I think this is a full-time job," the warden commented.

Secondly, he told the committee, there is a chance for personalities to enter into which inmates are recommended to the parole board for hearing.

Gov. Brooks and Beck, both members of the board, feel the state should create a State Board of Corrections and Parole, composed of men with the technical qualifications to handle such work. Additionally, Beck and Brooks said they feel that the present Board of Control system should be abolished in favor of directors over the various areas that now come under jurisdiction of the board.

Sigler also called for a law requiring automatic review of prisoners for paroles and higher pay scales for guards at the penitentiary. He said there should be in Nebraska also a reception center at which persons sentenced after being convicted of crimes could be studied and assigned to the institution which could best help them.

Highway Maps

Nebraska's Interstate highway, the subject of much controversy since it came upon the state scene, will appear on official highway maps. The State Highway Department says official maps to come out June 1 will show the Interstate sections that are completed and those that are under construction.

Road Work

Acting State Engineer John Hossack reports that work was done on 144 miles of Nebraska highway during the first three months of this year. Hossack said projects cost $11.5 million with 10 miles of road and $6.6 million on the Interstate, 59.7 miles and $2.2 million on the primary system and 74.4 miles and $2.4 million on the secondary road network. The acting engineer also summed up what is planned for the current three-month period. He said contracts will be awarded for 148 miles of road costing an estimated $16.5 million, of which 13.6 miles and $6.6 million will be on the Interstate, 55.1 miles and $6.8 million on the primary network and $3 million and 79.3 miles on secondary roads. Hossack says Nebraska has 26 miles of Interstate highway complete and open to traffic, but that this includes 13 miles of two-lane road near Kimball. Another 40 miles is under contract, he said.

Tax Proposal

The battle is on again to do away with Nebraska's property tax system for supporting state government. A group has been formed to promote eight Constitutional amendments passed by the last Legislature and to circulate petitions to put up to voters in November whether they want to do this. Abolish the state's property tax. Substitute a two percent maximum retail sales tax and an income tax with a maximum of four percent on an individual or company's net income.

Repeat the tax on intangible property, such as cash and stocks and bonds.

Provide a $2,000 exemption for every taxpayer on household goods subject to local taxation.

For the past 20 years there has been one type of movement or another to try to get rid of the property tax as the only means of raising the bulk of the revenue for state government. All attempts have fizzled.

Only Nebraska, New Jersey, New Hampshire and Texas among the states do not have either a general sales or income tax.

There has been considerable opposition in the past to a sales tax along Nebraska borders and from organized labor who say it will penalize the working man who must spend most of his income for living expenses.

Bills have been introduced in the Legislature every session since 1943 but have failed after warring over makeup of the legislation and what exemptions should be allowed. There is expected to be considerable scrapping over this issue this year before it is resolved.

Petition backers must get the required 52,000-plus valid names to Secretary of State Frank Marshall's office before the July 7 deadline in order to put the question on the November ballot.

It is anticipated by backers that the Legislature every session since 1943 but have failed after warring over makeup of the legislation and what exemptions should be allowed. There is expected to be considerable scrapping over this issue this year before it is resolved.

Backers that a sales and income tax would produce about $32 million per year for state government. Details of the new program would be left for the Legislature.

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

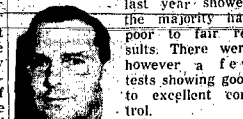

Back when I was a boy in 1910 folks was a heap more worried about a certain situation than they are today about them long-range Russian space bombs. Halley's Comet was due to whirl through the heavens sometime in June that year. Long about March a rumor got started that Halley's Comet would switch its tail and smash the earth to smithereens. In many sections of the country folks started holding special prayer meetings and people was all worked up about it. Old men that hadn't been inside a church since Grant took Richmond started going regular and setting in the front pew. I recollect my Grandpa was one of

CULTIVATION NEEDED

We are getting many inquiries about chemical weed control in corn. This early weed control is generally referred to as pre-emergence treatment. The results with pre-emergence weed control in Nebraska have been discouraging. A summary of 18 tests in 14 counties using four different materials last year showed the majority had poor to fair results. There were however, a few tests showing good to excellent control.

We have a report from Iowa State University which likewise cautions against dependence on chemicals for satisfactory weed control. They suggest trying some on a small acreage for experience.

When the chemicals have been applied it is necessary to have some rainfall to obtain satisfactory results. Pre-emergence treatment controls only annual weeds and not the perennials.

Good cultural weed control practices are still important and may be far less costly.

CORN ROOTWORM CONTROL

The 1960 recommendations for corn rootworm control are: Aldrin, 4 pounds per gallon; broadcast, 1 quart per acre; row treatment, 1 pint per acre. Heptachlor, 2 pounds per gallon; broadcast, 3 pints per acre; row treatment, 2 pints per acre. BHC, 1 pound per gallon; broadcast, 3 quarts per acre. Aldrin or Heptachlor (20 percent granules), broadcast, 5 pounds per acre; row treatment, 2 1/2 pounds per acre.

Broadcast applications can be made with weed sprayers, as granules, or mixed with fertilizers. The above rates are the minimums from which to expect satisfactory results.

In every case the material should be worked into the soil with disc or harrow as soon as possible after application.

Row applications can be made with broadcast sprayers or various planter attachments. Combinations of insecticides and fertilizers are effective as a split-boot application above or with the seed. Applications at one side and below will reduce the effectiveness of corn rootworm control. There is no danger to germination when aldrin or heptachlor is used.

The amount of insecticide used for rootworms is not enough to control heavy infestations of cutworms or wireworms.

Farm News and Views

NEW MILK concentrates hold promise for the dairy industry in this area, say farm experts. With the advent of fresh, sterile and dry milk concentrates, many midwestern producing areas may be able to successfully market their product in many more consumption centers than normally. The overall effect will tend to be leveling out of prices between surplus and deficit producing areas. These new products could increase per capita milk consumption by 15 percent to 20 percent within the next 10 years and lower milk distribution margins by as much as four cents or five cents per quart.

ACIDS in grass-legume mixtures cause considerably more pitting to silos than does corn silage. For this reason farm managers advise that you may want to apply a coat of an acid-resistant material to your silo before you fill it. There are several materials now on the market which can be used for this purpose. Among these are plastic resins and a mixture of linseed oil and asphalt or coal tar thinned with gasoline. You can apply plastic resins with a trowel or have them commercially applied for a total cost of about 30 cents per square foot.

USE ALL chemical herbicides with care — read and follow all directions to the letter. Improper use can cause bodily injury, injury to your crops or those of your neighbors and could cause your crop to be condemned on the market. Not only can improper use reduce your income but injury to your neighbor's crops from drift damage could cost you a lawsuit.

Good cultural weed control practices are still important and may be far less costly.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sirs: I want to add my appeal to Uncle Zeke to keep on writing as I think he has real talent. I enjoy him and think he could go on to bigger things. Although I don't think he is an old man and is not from Plum Creek either, he shows keen insight into the minds of just everyday folks like most of us. By all means persuade him to continue.

"WAR ON WASTE"

WASTE of Water and Top Soil.
Nebraska is richly endowed with surface and underground water. We must militantly conserve this treasure and use it wisely. We know the ravages of floods—the unrestrained runoff of melting snow. We must impound flood water and put it to constructive work. Of all areas of Federal participation in local affairs, Soil Conservation is the most practical.

WASTE of Our Talented and Educated People.
"Raiders" from the industrial East and West, governmental agencies and educational institutions regularly come into our State to siphon off the cream of our young people with lure of greater opportunities and bigger incomes. Let's redouble our efforts to help these people create career opportunities by going after new industry, expanding "homegrown" industry, stabilizing our economy.

WASTE of Materials.
Shame shocks all of us when we approach our cities and towns and are confronted with the twisted auto frames in junkyards. After all, scrap metal helped win World War II. Let's convert this waste into useful material. Litter along our highways and byways, too, leaves our countryside. Let's wage war on this wastefulness!

WASTE of Natural Scenery and Historic Points.
Many Nebraska scenic beauty spots and points of historical interest are simply unknown. Let's build access roads. Attract tourists, sell Nebraska! Nebraska is rich in historical lore. Let's exploit these existing legends. Let's wage war on this type of waste!

WASTE in Government.
Here's where our battle cry can make itself felt immediately! Inauguration of central accounting and central purchasing procedures in all Statehouse departments, will result in immediate savings up to one million dollars a year!

WASTE of Human Life.
We must step up our continuing battle against the costly destruction of men and machines on our highways. In mobilized America we must wage war on death-dealing drivers and death-trap highways.

In addition, we need an overhaul of our State's archaic tax structure to be directed by the people themselves... we need to "beef up" our agricultural economy, bolster our public transportation, continue airport development; improve farm-to-market roads and intelligently complete the Interstate network as soon as practical.

FINALLY--WE MUST HOLD THE LINE ON GOVERNMENT EXPENSES

EDITORIAL COMMENT

BY WILLIAM G. DOBLER

Organizations and their individual members have moved over the years the prominence which has been gained by the Nebraska Rural Electric Association. The organization has been the center of many spirited disputes within the state and its members are at this time in the middle of a dispute with their wholesale supplier.

But as the organization of rural electric cooperatives for its twenty-fourth annual session, it is well to point out that it has a long history of strength and permanence. Back in 1936, the thought of a network of electric lines serving the farms and small towns of the state as Nebraska was enough to brand the idea as slightly off his rocker. For political and practical reasons, it was believed that such a thing was simply no future in any area of the darkness of the Nebraska country.

But such endeavors seem like a waste of time and money but private power interests were not so sure of any furtherance of the cause. They did not want themselves to be believed was the financially risky business of the country but they did not want to see the growth of any entity in competition.

They saw big profits and easy money in the highly developed metropolitan areas and they saw a future for that was busted. But fortunately, they had confidence even in the most remote adversity. While the products they had were virtually useless and many of them were virtually useless, facing was a way of life which had long ago taught the value of perseverance.

Many farmers in those years did lose their land and moved into the metropolitan areas. But they saw the rural electrification program as a means of modernization that was to lift them to a new place of prominence. Electrification was the answer to many things, including the erosion of the land and defeat for the ravages of drought. It took years of planning and organizing before the first rural electric district was formed in Nebraska but it and subsequent organizations have paid handsome dividends.

It was a major job getting a federal program to handle the financing for building of lines and transmission facilities. It has been a major job since then to protect the federal program and keep it from destruction by selfish private power interests. The thing which has been most important is the success of the rural organizations.

These districts are as strong today financially as any private power organizations. They have religiously paid back to the government every cent they borrowed when their notes became due. Many have paid out their notes years in advance and the record will not produce one bad loan among the millions the government has invested in rural electrification.

Certainly this is a proud record and it puts to shame those who once denounced the program on an economic basis. But even greater than their financial success has been the overall influence of these districts upon agriculture as an industry. Nothing in the history of agriculture has so profoundly affected this business.

Electrification of the farms has provided the power with which farm effort and output have been many times expanded. It has made it possible for the farmer to greatly improve his standard of living and to broaden his economic base so as to more effectively ward off the natural disasters that befall him from time to time. It has not carried him completely out of the wilderness because it has not been able to solve the price or market problems which face the farmer. But it has done more in less than three decades than anything before it has done and anything in the future is likely to do.

As today's leaders of the rural electrification program gather this week in Lincoln, they have cause to look back over the future with great pride in real accomplishments. They can see many problems and pitfalls ahead but there can be little doubt that the roadblocks thrown in the way will be hurdled and even greater achievements will be realized. — Lincoln Star, Feb. 2, 1960.

Wayne PPD Becomes Reality First Lights Go On in 1939

Received July 13, 1938 from C. A. Sorenson a telegram reading as follows: "Petition for creation of District approved today by Department of Roads and Irrigation."

The entry in the minutes of the first directors, Wayne County Public Power District, takes up the first three lines of type: "but to the men who had for years envisioned the availability of electric power to all families whether in towns or rural areas was both the consummation of a dream and the dawn of a new era in the way of life for the entire rural population."

Men like Frank Rees, R. Irwin Jones, Hans Tietjen, Gus Paulson, John Petersen, Jack Sveigard, George Langenberg, William Langenberg, M. R. M. A. N.

Podoll, Lyle Marotz, T. P. Roberts, F. I. Moses, Ed. Grubb, Alfred Sydow, Emil Kai, William McQuistian, R. T. Utecht, Carl Sundell and Albert Watson, to name only a few.

These were men who had given both time and effort to promote this vast undertaking, which up until this time had been only a dream of a better way of life.

To list all the persons who had worked toward this goal would be nearly impossible, for each member of the community who had hopes of improving his home or farm, or making the country a better place to live and raise their family can be said to have helped in the project. Months and years had gone into the preparation for this day. A petition had been filed with Gov. R. L. Corban and State Engineer A. C. Tilley, Department of Roads and Irrigation, stating the desire and intent to create a public power district.

On June 27, 1937 a letter of approval was received stating that the application was on file and an investigation was made which indicated that the proposed project had sufficient merit so that the district should be permitted to organize.

With this much of their goal accomplished a meeting was held at the Wayne courthouse to decide the next course of action.

It was decided that this was the opportune time for the completion of the survey of farmers after which the legal organization could be set up and an application made for federal funds from the REA administration.

On Mar. 1, a county meeting was held at the old City Hall, Wayne, for the purpose of organizing a Rural Public Power District. The progress of projects throughout the state were reviewed and the motion was made and seconded to organize a Rural Public Power District within Wayne county.

Temporary Chairman A. G. Sydow submitted to the group the names of men nominated as directors for each district by the nominating committee. The motion was made and seconded that each district elect its own director. Names of men placed on that first ballot were:

Frank Rees, James B. Grier, Frank Griffith and Albert Watson, District I; Jack Sveigard and Erwin Ulrich, District II; Herman Podoll and Lyle Marotz, District III.

Ed Grubb and F. I. Moses, District IV; Lawrence Ring and R. T. Utecht, District V, and Alfred Sydow, Eric Albers, W. R. Schmidt and Emil Kai, District VI.

Elected were Watson, Sveigard, Marotz, Grubb, Ring and Sydow.

Although as in any election there were those who were elected and those who were not, the winners of each of these men to serve in a job which held the promise of more than taken merely remuneration was a sign of the willingness of the rural population to work toward the goal which they had set for themselves.

As the promise of electricity loomed nearer, farmers filled out more survey blanks and the town board of Shales supported the project and pledged 16 or 17 users in that community.

The network of proposed consumer lines continued to increase. The original application for federal funds showed approximately 705 signed customers on 275 miles of line, with a density of 2.56 customers per line. On Apr. 26, 1938 the application for federal funds was signed and submitted to Washington.

Less than three months later came the reply granting the petition.

Now a definite groundwork could be laid. Problems remained to be ironed out, construction contracts had to be let, office space secured, help hired, telephone waivers obtained and by no means last or least, corners throughout the county had to be determined.

Less than one-third of the corners in the county were marked and the exact location of some of these was not known. Actual construction work on power lines was begun at last. Late in 1938 the district paid their first bill for electric power to the Cumming County Rural Public Power District, their first source of electricity.

The amount of the first bill for power for the district was only $31.90 but the dream had become a reality for some and for the rest

Twenty-five years of rural electrification have brought tremendous changes to the face of rural America, but that's not all. The Nation's REA loan program has generated billions of dollars of business for people who do not live in rural areas. This includes the billions of dollars invested in electric lines and facilities, as well as the endless list of appliances and equipment for farms and homes.

These purchases and labor required to build the lines and do the wiring have made jobs for millions, and profits for merchants up and down every main street in America. Back of every kilowatt hour of electricity distributed by America's Rural Electric Systems lie huge investments in electrical equipment, and the companion appliances and equipment that go with rural electrification.

Rural customers receiving electricity for the first time in their lives have not been able to buy all the electrical equipment they needed or wanted. Spending more than a billion dollars a year, they have become the best customers electric appliance dealers ever had and the market's still far from saturated.

Today, America's Rural Electric systems are spending between $200 and $300 million annually on lines and facilities. At the same time, a new survey shows that rural electric consumers will buy over a billion dollars worth of appliances in 1960.

That's good business for all and it means more and better jobs in cities and towns too.

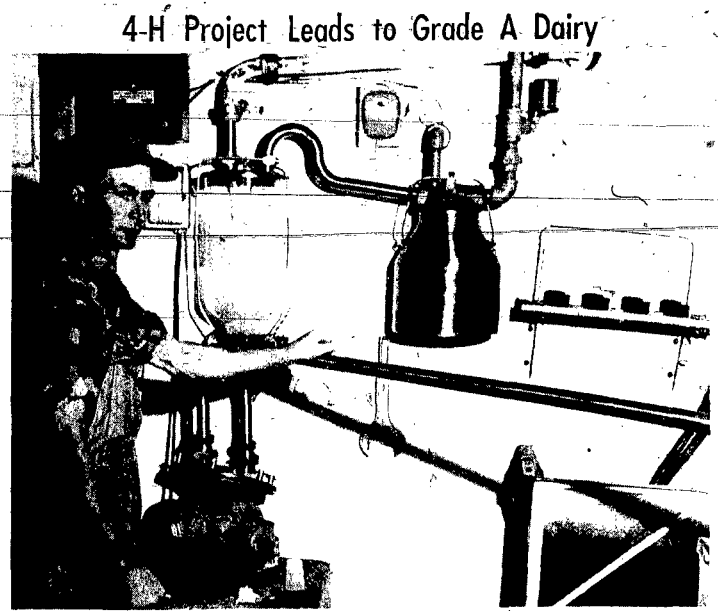

WAYNE KERSTINE, who farms southwest of Carroll, uses REA power to pump water for his irrigation system. Kerstine, who irrigates 100 acres, has a five-year contract with the Wayne PPD for irrigation power. A 25-horsepower motor does the work and eliminates much of the maintenance for the system. As electric rates decrease, more and more farmers are coming to depend on this type of power for irrigation.

Electrically Speaking... we join with WAYNE COUNTY PUBLIC POWER DIST. In celebrating the significant 25th Anniversary of Rural Electrification and the modern convenience it is bringing to an increasing number of homes in our community.

A 4-H Project and half-ownership of a Guernsey heifer gave Wayne Gilliland a start on a lifetime project. In fact, both Wayne and his brother, Ward, who chose the Guernsey heifer for their 4-H project back in 1928, operate grade A dairies southwest of Wayne. Wayne Gilliland, who owns and operates picturesque "Oakshadows Farm," sells approximately 200,000 pounds of milk each year from his purebred herd. more than $25 billion for absolutely necessary electrical goods such as lights, wiring, TV's, air conditioners, freezers, heaters, dryers, water systems, stoves and other equipment required in modern farming and rural living.

One thing sure, REA loans not only enable rural people to serve themselves with electricity, but they are helping miners, factory workers, office personnel, stockholders, salesmen, small businessmen, corporations, banks and tax divisions of local, state and federal government.

Rural electrification is making jobs for millions, business boom and profits directly or indirectly for everyone. Truly, rural electrification is good for all Americans.

REA now has 987 active electric borrowers.

New Educational Tool Available Through REA

Rural electric people will soon have a new educational tool to aid in telling their story. REA is making a new movie called "The REA Story." It is billed as a sequel to "Power and the Land," the widely acclaimed film which gave Americans a dramatic look at the potential for rural electrification 20 years ago.

The new movie will go back to some of the scenes of the earlier film and report on what has happened in the last two decades. Rip Parkinson, the nine-year-old boy who stole the show in "Power and the Land," will be back, this time as the father of three youngsters of his own.

Do You Know

REA borrowers generated 4.9 billion kilowatt hours of electricity during 1959. Rural electric systems financed by REA sold 15.5 percent more electric power to consumers in 1959 than they did in 1958. An estimated 139,000 new consumers were added to the lines of REA electric borrowers during 1959. Total REA electric loans amount to just over $4 billion.

MR. AND MRS. TAWNEY HOLMES, Plainview, credit REA with making their poultry and egg business profitable, and possible. Mrs. Holmes, shown here, packs some 21,000 dozen eggs a year into cartons, ready to be delivered to the New York market.

staff of well trained workers; that is, until the door is opened.

The minute the door is opened 1,100 pairs of eyes are trained on the opening to see who is entering, and unless it is Mr. or Mrs. Holmes, pandemonium results. In fact when Mr. Holmes recently discarded his winter coat in favor of a jacket the hens deeply resented the change.

Replacements for these hens are now being raised. The Holmes' recently purchased 1,250 baby chicks. Productive life of the hens is from 12 to 14 months.

REA receives a great deal of praise from this farm family. In fact, when the lines first reached their place, they had been ready and waiting for months.

Household appliances, poultry and egg facilities, water heaters in the house, barn and poultry house and their water supply system are only a few of the many facilities which rely on electricity. They have also added a standby generator in case of power failure. REA is here to stay, and the Holmes family will be the first to verify it.

Electric Program Creates Business For New Industry

Since REA, Mr. Farmer has found ways to milk his cows, feed and water his stock, move heavy crops into the silo and mow. Hand labor was cut drastically with electric power. This cost less, made him happier and saved his back.

The result? Well, today the average American farmer uses four to five times as much electricity as even the most optimistic "expert" guessed he would back there in 1935.

And this growth continues. Rural Americans are increasing their demands for electricity much faster than their city neighbors. Within the next seven years demands will double again. And all of America's Rural Electric systems are gearing up to meet this problem even before it happens.

This isn't all. Good roads, better telephone service - and low cost electricity - are causing more city folks to move to the country.

As farms grow in size and decrease in number, the proportion of non-farm consumers of the rural electric systems continues to increase.

From the start, America's Rural Electric systems have been organized for service, not profit.

Electric Heat "Best Ever"

"THE BEST HEAT we've ever had!" That's what Willie Kay and his mother, Mrs. August Kay, say about electric heat since they have installed it in their farm home southeast of Wayne. Mrs. Kay, shown above with her flowers, is particularly enthusiastic about their new electric heating system. The steady, even, dust-free heat throughout their seven-room house is credited with greatly reducing her household chores.

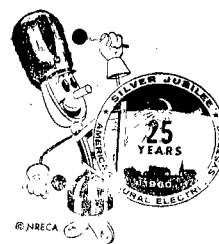

Their motto has been to "serve them all" in rural areas. They agree to provide this service to all and at the lowest possible cost when they borrow their capital funds from REA at 2 percent interest.

One thing sure, with our spiraling rural population, the new and better uses of electricity and the higher standards of living through the use of this modern necessity, demand for and use of electricity can move only upward in the years ahead.

Based on the past rate of increase, the agricultural research service, U. S. Department of Agri-and improving service with the latest modern equipment may well cost more than the original times. As one spokesman for the rural electric systems put it: "This spells out the need for continued loans from REA. America's Rural Electric Systems today own on the average only 18.2 percent of their systems - because of this fact, REA loans are amortized over a maximum period of 35 years."

Electric Power Cuts Labor In Caring for 1,100 Layers

Mr. and Mrs. Tawney Holmes, who live southeast of Plainview, are in the egg business. Twenty-one thousand dozen eggs left their farm last year bound for the New York market.

Twenty-one thousand dozen, or 162,000 eggs, are a lot of eggs any way you say it, and without the help of electricity would undoubtedly be a huge undertaking.

The Holmes' entered the egg business strictly by accident. An automobile accident, in fact. When Mr. Holmes was injured several years ago he was forced to reduce some of the hard work associated with farming.

The Holmes' decided to try chickens. And, listening to the enthusiasm they voiced about the project, they're not sorry.

In 1958 they built the new laying house which houses some 1,100 hens, each in her own separate cage.

An electric cooler, grader, washer and water heater were added, and the Holmes' were in business.

Mrs. Holmes estimates that it takes about 30 minutes a day to gather, grade and wash the eggs. In warm weather it takes somewhat longer because the eggs must be gathered twice a day.

Electric lights are kept burning to bring production to peak efficiency. The hens, in their separate cages, go about their task like a Progress is on the march as is revealed by the March, 1960 Honor Roll. WCPD purchased 1,798,488 kwh during March, the largest amount since the district was organized. Ten years ago they purchased 640,356 kwh.

At present the district is serving 2,310 customers. In 1950 it served 1,907. The average usage per farm consumer is now 888 kwh at $15.77. Ten years ago the average consumer used 241 kwh and paid a total bill of $8.20. A total of 452 consumers used 1,000 kwh and over during the month. Below is a breakdown of the kwh used by these 452 consumers:

Do You Know . . .

The six directors of the Wayne County Public Power District are elected at large on the non-political ballot by all voters in Wayne county.

The directors are elected for a six-year term, and are elected on staggered terms so that two directors are elected at each general election every two years. This method assures the customers of the district that there will be experienced directors serving the district at all times and thus prevents a complete change in all six directors at any one election.

There are more than 400 farm and home uses of electricity.

THIS GRAIN DRYER is only one of a multitude of operations on the Lyle Marotz farm which utilizes electric power. Electric motors power the elevators, grain augers and blower on the dryer. Altogether some 38 motors are currently in use on the Marotz farm.

Multitude of Uses For Electricity On L. Marotz Farm

Lyle Marotz, one of, if not the most enthusiastic backer of REA since it was first proposed some 25 years ago, puts electric power to a multitude of uses on his farm east of Hoskins.

In a recent count over 38 electric motors are used for various purposes around the farm, not to mention the number of household appliances.

Electricity is used throughout their modern farm shop and on electric motors, elevators, pumps, augers and various other farm equipment.

Marotz uses electric motors in his custom-corn drying operation to load and unload the drying bin and power the blower on the dryer.

Using the dryer, a crib of ear corn 25 feet in diameter and 12 feet high was recently dried from 23 percent to 16 percent moisture in a matter of 48 hours.

To determine the moisture content of grain, Marotz uses a small electric tester which utilizes radio waves to determine the exact amount of moisture in the grain as it is poured into the machine. Testing takes only a matter of seconds. Marotz, who is a member of the original board of directors of the Wayne PPD, admits that REA progress has far surpassed his original conception for rural electrification.

But, although the project has exceeded expectations, it has not exceeded the American farmers' ability to adapt it to their individual uses to make the farm a better place to live.

THIS ELECTRONIC MOISTURE tester tells at a glance the percent of moisture in a sample of corn or grain as it is poured into the machine. Weigh the grain, flip the switch, set the dial and pour in the grain to be tested. Lyle Marotz, who uses this unit on his farm in connection with his custom grain drying operation, can tell in a matter of seconds the exact condition of a sample of corn. This is not a "gadget," but one of a number of tools being used by farmers to make farming more profitable.

REA Borrowers Must Serve Whether Profitable or Not

While no would-be expert has yet to measure the complete impact of electrification on American agriculture, the influence of rural electrification on farming and farm life has been tremendous.

For years, farming has been undergoing a peaceful yet rapid revolution in technology, living standards and working conditions. Everywhere, the magic power of electricity has played a leading role in the dramatic changes in both farming and life in rural areas.

The REA act authorizes the loan of funds to "persons, corporations, cities, districts, states, and cooperatives" for the construction of rural electric systems. The act specifically prohibits use of loan funds to extend electrical service into the more profitable areas of towns and villages of over 1,500 population, or to anyone already being served.

Anyone who ever used the old sad iron for an hour, turned the corn sheller, pumped water or milked a dozen cows knows how electricity is helping get the work done. Things are easier on the farm today, everyone agrees.

Availability of dependable low cost electric power is one of the important factors in modern farm efficiency. It is a major reason why farmers have stepped ahead of production increases in our factories. Believe it or not, output per farm worker today is double what it was 15 years ago and three times what it was at the start of rural electrification in 1935.

While electricity has been cutting farm production and processing costs, it also has been raising standards of rural living, improving health conditions both in town and country and helping provide quality food in abundance for city tables.

Never have so many been fed so well by so few. In 1930 one farm worker produced on the average enough food and fibre for nearly ten people. Today each farm worker produces for 25 people and American farmers are making plans to handle twice that number of people before the turn of the century.

Wonderful Changes Not only has rural electrification removed drudgery and brought city living and city ways to rural areas, it also is credited with changing the entire outlook of rural people. Whether you live in the country or in town today, schools, churches, clubs, recreation and civic interests are often the same.

The only dividing line between town and country anymore is the city limit showing where the city streets begin. So, rural electrification, as no other single force, has transformed America's rural areas into a highly desirable place to live.

Three-fourths of the electricity used on the farm today is consumed in the home for lighting, cooking, washing, drying, pumping, waterheating, space heating, cooling or freezing.

Use of electricity about the farmstead still is limited largely to chores that were time-consuming when done by hand. It powers the motor that turns, lifts, pumps, heats, freezes, grinds and sharpens.

Electricity powers clocks, solenoids, and automatic controls to operate the lights, feeders and waterers so much a part of farming today.

On many a farm, electricity has replaced the hired man and at the same time permitted a big increase in the amount of productive livestock carried on the farm.

For instance, a single one horsepower motor can do as much work in one hour as the average man can do in an entire day and the cost per unit of production is almost negligible.

For four or five cents, a farmer can pump 1,000 gallons of water, milk 30 cows, heat five gallons of water, cool 10 gallons of milk, shell 30 bushels of corn, cut a ton of silage and blow it into the silo.

According to USDA findings, the average dairyman spends 110 man-hours a year on each cow in the herd. With modern buildings and the latest electrical equipment, he can cut his labor requirements to 67 man hours or less.

Under the old system of hand milking one man had his hands full with 10 or 12 cows. Today, he lets electricity do the chores with silo unloader, barn cleaner and pipeline milker and he handles 30 to 40 cows with ease.

Everywhere farmers have cut their costs, solved their labor problems, and greatly increased the size of their farming operations by putting this new electricity to work.

For instance, barn cleaning for a 40-cow herd in New Jersey required one and one-half man-hours daily when the fork and scoop were used.

An electric-powered cleaner now does the job for four cents a day. Michigan State College reports 300 tons of manure can be moved mechanically from gutter to spreader for only one cent a ton. At that rate, you just can't afford to do it by hand.

A silo unloader, at the flip of a switch, tirelessly and effortlessly unloads silage at five cents a ton for digging and throwing down silage. Today a farmer loses dollars for every hour he uses a silage fork or manure scoop. In that hour, he could be handling another 19 cows or 50 hogs.

Electrically operated bulk coolers have increased the sale price of milk as much as 35 cents per hundred. One Vermont farmer found he could add 20 cows to his herd when he installed a pipeline milker. By pushing buttons and pulling switches, a midwest farmer feeds 400 cattle and 500 hogs in only a few minutes, a job that would require a half dozen men a half a day to do by hand.

Three-Phase System Powers Silo Unloader

THREE-PHASE USERS of electricity are cropping up throughout the district. Glenn and E. W. Lundahl are two of the latest farmers to put this type of power to use on their stock and grain farm east of Wayne. This type of installation provides steadier power with maximum efficiency and allows the use of lighter weight motors. The three-phase power is currently used to operate an automatic silo unloader. The Lundahls plan to install an electric motor on the blower which fills the silo before next season. The conveniently located feed supply and automatic unloader make it a matter of minutes to feed the cattle.

Future's Bright

There's no doubt but that Rural Electrification has played a big part in our changes in farming.

But we haven't seen anything yet if there's anything to the prediction of the future. Farm scientific and technological developments of the next 10 years will be equivalent to the progress of a whole generation in the past.

pose of starting and supervising energy to rural areas. This was what people out in the nation and distribution of electrical country were waiting for.

Warm Springs, Ga. Real Birthplace Of Vast Program

Contrary to the way most Federal Government programs come about, rural electrification was not born in a smoke filled room, in a Congressional cloakroom, or in a government office building in Washington.

Actual birthplace of this vast program, which has brought light and power to every nook and cranny of rural America, is said to have been a little cottage at Warm Springs, Ga. And the plan evolved in the active brain of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Those who should know say the germ of this idea - low-cost electric light and power for all Americans, in or out of the city limits - came during F. D. R.'s first visit to Warm Springs in 1924.

At the end of his first month's stay, he couldn't understand the charge of 18 cents a kilowatt hour to light his cabin. This was about four times the rate he paid in his Hyde Park home in New York, over six times the average cost of a kilowatt hour of electric power in rural America today.

F. D. R. felt that all America deserved the comforts and convenience of low-cost electricity. More than that, he decided to do something about it.

It wasn't until 1935, on May 11 to be exact, that this same man, then President of the United States, signed the executive order that brought the Rural Electrification Administration into being.

Program Changes Outlook He visualized a program that was destined to change the whole outlook of rural people. The order created REA for the express pur-

Automation Cuts Feeding Time to Minimum

A FLIP OF the switch and 150 head of cattle on the Earl Anderson farm come on the run to the feed bunks. Six minutes later the silage is distributed evenly along the bunk and Mr. Anderson is free to go on with his other chores. An electrical augering system automatically carries, mixes and distributes the feed and the cost for electricity is approximately eight cents a day.

Automatic Conveyor System Feeds Cattle in Six Minutes

Mix enough cracked corn and oat haylage to feed 150 head of cattle and distribute it in the feed bunks, all in six minutes? That's no small task on most farms, but Earl Anderson, who farms 17 miles northwest of Wayne does it with ease. In fact he's been doing it three times a day for the past three years since he erected a Harvestore storage unit and an electric augering system to carry the feed to the cattle bunks.

Although silo unloaders have been on the market for several years, their use has not become as widespread as it probably will in the next few years.

An automatic feeding system with an electric-powered silo unloader at its heart, can relieve the farmer of much of the worrying he does about whether the hired man will quit, where he will find a replacement or how much he will have to spend for help next year.

Farm help also appreciates the relief from the drudgery chore. Dale Miller, who works for Mr. Anderson has been with him for three years. The two handle the feeding operation with ease along with tending to other farming operations on the 400-acre farm.

Corn is picked and shelled in the field and stored with a moisture content of 33 percent. If the moisture test is below 20 percent, the corn is run through a rolling mill and cracked and water is added as the Harvestore is filled. This prevents mold.

The Anderson farm has two of these units. One filled with 10,000 bushels of cracked corn, the other with 350 tons of haylage. Conveyors connecting the two carry the mixture to a central auger system which runs the length of the feed bunks. Five electric motors power the feeding operation at an electrical cost of approximately eight cents per day.

Total cost of the installation including the two Harvestores was estimated by Anderson at $20,000.

While the silo unloader was designed to save labor, owners soon learned that it led to faster growth. As silage travels through the augers it is fluffed up and made more palatable with the result that the animals eat more of it and produce better. Frozen lumps of silage are also eliminated.

The modern silo unloader lets the farmer use his silo the year around. Many farmers fill their silos with corn in the fall for winter feeding and with grass in the spring. Then they have green feed in the fall when pastures are short. With manual methods grass silage often packed so hard that it was almost impossible to remove it for feeding. However electric silo unloaders will cut through any silage no matter how hard it may become packed.

The Andersons have designed their feeding operation with an eye to the future. Should they decide to reduce their farming operation in the future the cattle feeding could still be maintained at maximum efficiency with a minimum of effort.

REA has approved about $911 million in loans for generation and transmission facilities, including 2.2 million kilowatts of generating capacity.

450 Uses Listed For Electricity On Farm by USDA

Who would have guessed 25 years ago that we would ever find as many as 200 uses for electricity on the farm? Those were the days when seasoned electric company executives laughed as REA engineers predicted some day farmers might use an average of 90 to 100 kilowatt hours of electricity a month!

Use of electricity today has passed the wildest dreams of 1935. Researchers in the United States Department of Agriculture now point to more than 450 different applications of electricity on the farm and in the farm home.

These new uses and big stepup in the consumption of electricity on farms is part of American agriculture's move to mechanize and substitute power and machinery for human labor both on the farm and in the home.

There have been real changes made from the early days when home use of electricity was limited almost entirely to lighting, powering the washing machine and pumping water. From an conditioning to automatic water systems, rural electrification has made it possible for farm people.

Radio, TV, clocks, refrigerators, freezers, stoves, washing machines, dryers, vacuum cleaners, water pumps, water and space heaters, dishwashers, mixers and lawn mowers are common everyday uses of electricity around the home. In fact, there's little today that can't be done easier, quicker and better electrically.

USDA's list of uses for electricity in the farm home includes just about every conceivable household gadget under the sun.

There are burglar and fire alarms, fish bowl heaters, bed warmers, biscuit bakers, can openers, Christmas tree turners, cigar lighters, communication systems, deodorizers, dumb waiters, dust precipitators, fish sealers, flour sifters, fly traps, and foot warmers.

There are games, organs, pants and necktie pressers, pianos, shoe polishers, siren, scissors, tooth brushes, wiener roasters, door openers and even window openers all operated with electricity.

Power Used in Homes

As you might suspect, electrical appliances and equipment used in the home outnumber those used in farming operations. This partly

Three Transformer Pole Enters Scene

THE REA POLE with three transformers is becoming a more common sight each day as an increasing number of farmers add three-phase electric service to their farms. Warren Marotz, who farms northwest of Winside, uses the three-phase service to power his rolling mill and elevator. The elevator's 12,000-bushel capacity, built-in scales and pit and elevator facilities help make short work of feeding some 450 cattle.

explains why three-fourths of all electricity consumed on the farm today is used in the home.

However, technological developments of electrical equipment and the ever increasing new uses now promise to boost the use of electricity to undreamed of levels around the farm. New ways of handling grain, feed, hay and even milk are fast antiquating the fork, shovel, milk can and bucket.

Pack carters, barn cleaners, silo unloaders, hay and grain dryers, mills, grinders, elevators, graders, dustlers, sprayers, fences, flytraps, milkers, emery wheels, pumps and fans are only a few of the many ways electricity has replaced the hired man on the farm.

From molasses heaters to peach defuzzers, farmers are making new and varied uses of this unique and wonderful power that turns on and off automatically or with the flip of a switch.

Electro-magnets for catching pieces of metal, walnut dryers, bull exercisers, ox-grub removers, cattle trimmers, orchard fans, sweet potato cutters, beehive heaters, hog callers, fish barriers, earthworm catchers, humane electrocution of farm animals and poultry and tank farming without soil all are some of the unique uses of electricity on the farm.

One thing sure, as more and more farmers turn to pushbutton farming operations of their farmsteads, new uses and wider uses of electricity about the farm and rural home lie ahead.

About 55 percent of all consumers on REA borrower's lines at the end of 1959 were farm consumers.

Do You Know . . .

REA borrowers generate a little more than 14 percent of the electric power they distribute to consumers.

More than 90 percent of REA electric loans have been to locally owned rural cooperatives incorporated under laws of the various states.

REA has made electric loans to 1,085 borrowers, which included 984 cooperatives, 50 public power districts, 27 municipalities and other public bodies, and 24 power companies. The cooperative borrowers include 32 with loans for refrigeration facilities only.

REA electric borrowers have paid to the Government a total of more than $1.2 billion on their loans, including interest.

In 1959, consumers on REA-financed systems used an average of 5,200 kwh. REA estimates that in 1963 they will use an average of 7,000 kwh, and in 1975, an average of 14,400 kwh.

More and more farmers are using electricity to handle farm chores automatically, and finding many more uses in the home and shop. While consumption of electric power was climbing, the average price per kilowatt hour to consumers was declining. It dropped from an average of 2.68 cents per kwh for all types of consumers in 1958 to 2.56 cents in 1959. In 1958 the average monthly bill for all types of consumers was $12.24; in 1959, $12.64. Another indication of the increased usage is shown from the fewer number of minimum consumers.

REA Abbreviation Of USDA Division To Provide Loans

If you are one of those who call everything connected with rural electrification "REA"—read on! You will be surprised to learn that "REA" is the abbreviated name of a division in the U. S. Department of Agriculture—far removed from the local Rural Electric System that provides electrical service to rural Americans.

Actually a number of organizations and groups of organizations are actively engaged in making the nationwide rural electrification go and grow. As a help in understanding this program here are a few basic facts about the various groups directly involved in the rural electrification.

Rural Electric systems are local organizations that actually do the work of providing electrical service to people who need and use the electricity. Individual electric systems, incorporated under state law, borrow money from the government through the REA to build electric lines and facilities.

These systems bill their members for the electricity they use. A portion of each bill is set aside for interest and principal payments on the REA loan. Rural Electric systems are an outstanding example of private enterprise. They are owned, controlled, and operated by the local people who use the service they provide.

Since the start of the rural electrification program 25 years ago, over 1,000 rural electric systems have been organized to bring electric light and power to people who had to do without electricity up to 1935.

These systems have crisscrossed the rural areas of the nation with nearly 1.5 million miles of electric lines, which serve approximately 16 million people. While most of the rural systems are cooperatives, in some states they are called public power districts or public utility districts.

Rural Electric statewide associations have been organized in many states to provide service for the individual systems, services that can be done more efficiently or economically, or both, through group action. Membership is voluntary but almost all Rural Electric systems belong to a state association.

The National Rural Electric Cooperative Association is the national service organization of all rural electric systems. With headquarters in its own modern office building in Washington, NRECA functions on the national level such as the states do on the state level. Important services NRECA provides for its members include insurance coverage, management institutes, consulting service, group purchasing and public relations assistance to state and system publications. NRECA also has regular contact with Congress and many federal administrative agencies and represents to them the views of the rural electric systems of America.

As with statewide associations, membership in NRECA is voluntary, and more than 90 percent of all Rural Electric systems belong to the National Association. Member systems, by vote at annual meeting or through their elected state director, control policies, services and actions of NRECA.

The Rural Electrification administration is the real "REA" so often referred to in matters of rural electrification. It is actually a banking institution. A government agency, REA makes loans to local organizations for the construction of electric lines in rural areas.

Loans are secured by a mortgage and repaid with interest over a period of 35 years. While REA loans are available to persons, corporations, states, cities and districts, most of the borrowers have been rural electric cooperatives.

Contrary to the general opinion, REA does not own or control the systems that borrow money. Nor does it hire the manager, set the rates, or dictate policy to the local systems.

REA's and the government interest in the operation of rural electric systems is much the same as that of any prudent banker. That is, to make loans and take the necessary action to collect them.

And the credit record of REA borrowers has astonished many private bankers. Over $1 billion in principal and interest has been paid to REA on $3.2 billion in loans. Best of all much of this has been paid prior to due date.

Increased Demand Makes Line Work Never Ending Job

Some folks think the job of electrifying rural America is about done, now that more than 96% of all the farms, homes, schools and churches and businesses—outside the city limits are being served with low-cost electric light and power.

Not so, says Cal Comstock, manager of the Wayne Public Power District. Even more costly and difficult years lie ahead. "We must run, just to stand still," he insists, "because heavy-going our lines to meet ever increasing demands for more kilowatt hours is a never ending job."

Most folks back in '35, including the so-called experts, "guessed" that a farmer could possibly use as much as 90 to 100 kwh per month. That was when the average farm was using about 50 kwh per month. They figured he might install a few 25 watt bulbs, throw away the battery for his old radio and buy his wife an electric iron.

They didn't know Mrs. Farmer. They didn't realize that to her, good refrigeration is much more important than it is to city folks. So a freezer followed her refrigerator. Then the electric water pump and heater brought a wave of washers and dryers. The automatic electric range replaced the old coal, wood and oil stoves—and on and on.

Users Investment Many Times Over That of District

The WCPPD consists of 1,072 miles of line. If it was built in a straight line it would reach from Wayne, Nebr., to Wren Springs, Ga., the birthplace of Rural Electrification. The line contains approximately 21,000 poles, 2,400 transformers, four substations and all necessary materials, making a total investment of nearly $2,000,000.

National surveys indicate that for every dollar invested by the district in power facilities, the members have invested between

Auxiliary Power Unit Insures Service

AS ELECTRIC POWER becomes more of a necessity on Nebraska farms, more and more farmers are adding an auxiliary power unit. Louis Lutt, who farms southeast of Wayne, recently purchased this unit from the district. The Lutts, who depend on electricity to operate their furnace and furnish power for their milking machines, among other uses, are of the opinion that the $500 unit was well worth it. The Lutts plan to mount the unit in a two-wheel trailer. This would enable them to use an electric welder, motor or any other electric appliance at any location.

four and five dollars for wiring, electrical equipment and appliances.

The District has invested nearly $2,000,000. According to the surveys, members have invested at least $8,000,000 and most of it was spent locally. Can anyone say that Rural Electrification has not been good for this community and all Americans?

How do you compare with the national survey? You can check it yourself.

First, list all of your electrical appliances and what they cost, add to that the cost of wiring the farm, and don't forget motors, etc. Subtract $812.50, which is the District's investment per consumer, from the total you have spent. The answer will tell you how much more you have invested than the District. We'll bet many of you will be surprised to find out that you have invested more than the surveys indicate.

The WCPPD has purchased over $40,000 worth of trucks locally, plus tires, gas, oil, grease and services.

Signing-Up Users Only One of Many Early Obstacles

"Electricity for farmers is out of the question and anyone who suggests it is crazy."

That is the type of reaction received by the people who circulated petitions and worked in signing up customers in order to organize the Wayne County Public Power District in 1937 and 1938.

Although most of the farmers wanted electricity, many of them felt that they could not afford the cost of "signing up" when each customer had to agree to pay a minimum bill of $3.50 per month, which still remains the minimum bill 20 years later.

Many of them also feared that they would not have enough money to pay the cost of wiring their buildings when the electricity was available.

Each of the canvassers paid his own expenses of gas and oil, and money was not plentiful during this period. Many organizational meetings were held and the organizers, in company with Walter Moller, who was county Extension agent at that time, attended meetings in other areas in order to learn about the REA program and how it was to be started.

Work started in Wayne county in 1937 and continued through 1938 in securing customers for the proposed district. The first loan from the Rural Electrification Administration was not approved until July 13, 1938.

The increased use of electricity on the farms now presents problems to secure an adequate supply of electric power for the present and in the future.

The problems of building generating plants, transmission lines and bringing hydro-electric power to this area are problems that are more complex but just as difficult as the early problems that were encountered and surmounted by the persons interested in organizing and operating the Wayne County Public Power District.

THIS LITTLE CALF on the Leland Herman farm has just traded its real mother for an electric one. Although this mother may not demonstrate much affection, it will provide plenty of good, warm nourishment. And the calf doesn't have to worry about it being at the other end of the pasture when he's hungry.

This Little Calf Gets Milk From Electric Mother Cow

Leland Herman, owner of Herdale Farm, is another strong booster of REA. Herman, who raises some of Nebraska's finest Polled Herefords finds electric power an indispensable and tireless worker. Pumps, tank heaters, an electric hay dryer, heat lamps, yard lights, barn lights and appliances are all utilized in making the cattle raising operation easier and more profitable.

Leland even used electricity to feed his calves. At the age of about three months the top Polled Hereford calves are put onto "nurse cows" to give them an additional supply of milk. This, of course, leaves some orphan calves.

These calves are not forgotten, but are given a new mother. Although this mother may not possess all the qualities of their real one, she, or rather "it," does supply warm, fresh milk supplement

The new mother, whose official name is Nurs-Ette, is powered by electricity.

It automatically measures the supplement, heats the water, mixes the two and keeps it warm and ready for the hungry calf. And as the calf nurses, a small propeller inside the unit keeps the supplement well mixed.

One unit of this type is said to be able to provide milk supplement for up to 20 calves, and to anyone who has ever fed bucket calves, the time and effort by such a machine can be readily appreciated.

This is only one of hundreds of ways farmers have found to utilize electrical power. It's cheap, versatile and available.

And progressive farmers like Leland Herman will be the first to tell you that they're mighty glad of it.

IT WAS 25 YEARS AGO

... THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SIGNED THE ORDER CREATING THE RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION

From that day, May 11, 1935, this baby industry grew until today it is a giant that brings electric power to 16,000,000 rural Americans, making their work easier, more profitable . . . and granting them many more hours of leisure.

SEN. GEORGE W. NORRIS
(Rep., Nebraska)

A prime mover in the fight to bring public power to rural America was Nebraska's Sen. Norris. His great ability as a tactician made it possible to get Congressional approval of REA. A stubborn, determined man of vision, Sen. Norris used his influence to bring public power to both Nebraska and the United States. He was a dominant figure on the political scene for many years and much of the credit for success of the REA must go to him.

When the six original directors of the Wayne County Public Power district (pictured at right) first began soliciting members for the district, probably neither they nor the many others who helped them envisioned the growth in power consumption that was to take place in the next two decades. Their solicitations met with scorn in many instances, laughter in others — but success came with many calls. Average monthly electrical bill in 1939 was for only 37.5 KWH — in 1959 the average was 642 KWH. Meanwhile the number of consumers connected rose from 209 in 1939 to 2472 in 1959.

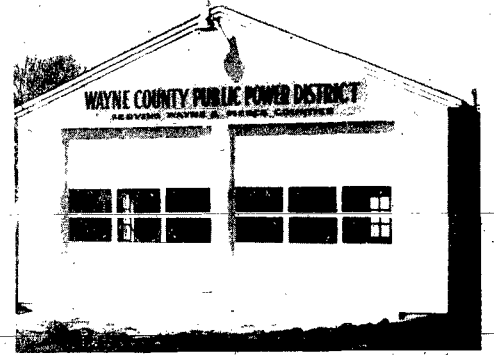

Alfred Sydow Albert Watson Lawrence Ring Lyle Marot Jack Sweigard Ed Grubb

WHAT IT MEANS TO BUSINESS . . .

With the growth of electrical consumption on the farm came an accompanying growth of business for private enterprise in the area serviced by the Wayne County PPD. Surveys show that for every $1 invested by the power district, its consumers have invested from $4 to $5 in services, wiring and appliances — most of it spent locally with private businesses. The nearly $2,000,000 invested in the Wayne County Public Power district have meant from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 in business for area businessmen . . . a tidy sum of money brought about by electrifying rural Wayne and Pierce counties. In addition to this figure the total payroll of the district amounts to more than $50,000 annually.

D., to Wayne where he now lives with his wife and their 10-year-old son.

To service an area of about 600 square miles with electric power takes a lot of service and maintenance. The 2,472 consumers in the district require 20,000 poles to carry the 1,072 miles of power line required to give them electrical power. The miles of line, if stretched in a straight line, would reach from Wayne to Warm Springs, Ga., the birthplace of the rural electrification program.
