Mail Improvement Project Underway in NE Nebraska

Twelve NE Nebraska counties are included in a major mail improvement. projects, it was announced Tuesday by Robert R. Justus, Wichita postal region director. When completed, the program will assure the nearly one million postal patrons in the area in Nebraska are Wayne and Norfolk:

next day service for all classes of mail. The area covers nearly 30, 000 square miles in Nebraska;

Minnesota, Jowa and South Dakota.

The improvements made will

Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota.

The improvements made will also provide overnight exchange with postoffices beyond these boundaries. The Nebraske countles to benefit by the improvement are Antelope, Burt, Cedar, Cuming, Dixon, Knox, Madison. Pierce, Stanton, Thurston and Wavne.

Pierce, Stanton, Thurston and Wayne.

Patrons in the 50 counties included in the total area are assured that, barring occasional human errors, every piece of preferential mail deposited in a collection box or at a postal installation any where in the area by the close of the day will be delivered to the following day, anywhere within the area.

While there are exceptions to this, in a very few of the smallest postoffices where mail must be deposited prior to 5 frm, it was emphasized that in a great—many of the area postoffices mail can be deposited much later than 5 p.m. and obtain assured next day service. This includes newspapers and parcel post exchanged between the area postoffices.

The revised service was accomplished by:

"Our Roots Are In This Land"

FARM REVIEW FORECAST.

Live Cattle and Meat Imports, 1957-1960

Impacts of live cattle and manufacturing meat into the United States during the past 2 or 3 years have raised questions among livestock producers about the effect upon the domestic market. Some producers feel that imports should be drastically curtailed or stopped entirely.

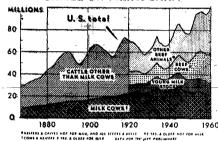

Cattle Imports up Sharply

In the 3-year period just ended, 1957 through 1959, imports of cattle into-the U. S. rose to their highest level. The peak import year was 1958 when more than a million head of cattle came into the U. S. from Canada and Mexico. Last year, imports of live cattle declined but still remained rather high at about 850 thousand.

Periods of high imports of live cattle and meat are closely connected with cycles in U. S. livestock production. When U. S. cattle numbers and beef production are high, imports are likely to decline because the low prices do not encourage Mexican and Canadian producers to market livestock in this country. When our cattle numbers are reduced and then expanding, as they have been during the past 3 years, the higher prices attract cattle from our neighbors in increasing numbers.

The primary factor in the importing of live cattle into the U. S. is the demand of U. S. cattle feeders and packers for foreign animals. This demand is stronger during the early buildup or expansion phase of the cattle cycle when breeders, feeders and packers are bidding against each other for the smaller supply of domestic cattle coming to market.

CATTLE ON FARMS JAN. I

In 1957 and '58 we had a record supply of feed grains on hand but cattle numbers were down. On Jan. 1, 1958, the number of cattle on U. S. farms and ranches was about 2.5 million below their 1956 high of 97 million head, with most of this reduction in beef cattle.

Thus, beef cattle.

Thus, beef production was down but the demand remained strong. To meet this demand and to use the abundant supply of low-priced feed-grain, American cattle feeders bid strongly for feeder cattle and feeder cattle prices rose sharply. Buyers looked to Canada and Mexico to meet this demand for cattle to place on feed. The number of live cattle imported increased sharply in 1957 and '88.

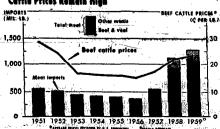

Imports of live cattle from Canada and Mexico will be lower in 1960 than during the past 3 years. Cattle' numbers in those Two-countries were reduced during the period of heavy shipment to the U-S-so. fewer feeder cattle will be available for export this year. Mexico raised its export taxes on cattle considerably in February, 1959. U. S. cattle numbers have also increased to the point that more domestic feeder cattle are available. Prices were considerably lower-last fall than in the fall and winter of 1958-59.

Manfacturing Meat Imports Rise

Imports of low-grade boneless meat for manufacturing uses also arose sharply during the 1956-59 period - from 32 million pounds 3 years ago to about 600 million pounds in 1959. The U. S. has now become an important importer of meat, especially of beef and mutton. The cause of the increase in imports which accounted for 4 percent of our total meat consumption last year is essentially the same as for increased imports of live cattle.

In the expansion phase of the cattle cycle farmers and ranchers hold back cows in order to increase the size of their breeding herd. This causes the price of low-grade cattle to rise relative to the higher grades. High domestic prices for low grade beef and mutton attract meat from other. outpaties in order to supply the domestic meat demand. The favorable weather and high feed grain production of 1957-59 caused a rapid turn around in the U. S. cattle production cycle. Cows were retained in the breeding herds. The production of low grade beef was especially short during the past three years, resulting in an unusually sharp rise in the price of such meat.

U. S. Meat Imports Up; Cattle Prices Remain High

Most of the meat imports into the U.S. come from 7 countries. Austrolia and New Zealand supply the greatest percentage with Argentina, Mexico, Ireland, Brazil and Canada following in order.

The meat exported to the U.S. is mostly frozen-boneless beef and mutton. Such meat does not compete directly with the good, choice, and prime grade beef produced from grainfed cattle. Meat imported into the U.S. has mostly been used in the making of lunch meats, canned meats, and other processed products.

the making of lunch meats, canned meats, and consider products.

The strong demand for lean beef in the U. S. during the past 3 years provided a bonanza to the Australian and New Zeoland cattle producers. It provided a market for cull cattle which would otherwise not have been marketed but just killed and skinned for the value of the hides. It is recognized in these countries that the level of exports will not be sustained in 1960 and future years at the level existing in the recent past, withqut seriously reducing basic breeding herds and impairing future beef ploducing ability.

Cows and Feeders Show Greatest Price Gain During Last 3 Years

Australia has a long-term arrangement with Great Britain providing that practically all the first and second quality Australian beef available for export shall be marketed in Great Britain. This means that no Australian beef of the quality we ordinarly consume as fresh meat will be shipped into the United States. Australia does not subsidize the export of meat to the U. S. or any other country. Such sales are made through regular commercial channels and are largely determined by price relationships. Beef and lamb is produced in Australia almost entirely from grassland. There is very little fattening as we know it in Nebraska and other feeding areas.

Livestock Marketing North Central Region

Where Farmers and Ranchers Buy and Sell

The period of 1940 through 1956 brought major economic and social changes in the U. S. These changes had an important impact on supply and demand for agricultural products and on technology used in agriculture.

A major change which occurred in the marketing pattern between 1940 and 1956 was the increase in volume of sales of livestack of all classes through auction markets. In large measure, this occurred as farmers decreased the proportion of their sales through dealers as an outlet for slaughter livestock. The proportion of slaughter cattle, calves, sheep and lambs marketed through terminals changed only slightly between 1940 and 1956.

Classes of Livestock Sold, Outlets

For the North Central States, the most important classes of livestock sold by farmers are slaughter steers, heifers, and hogs. In the range states feeder cattle, calves, and lambs usually are the most important classes of livestock sold.

Farmers and ranchers in Nebraska reported that 45 percent of the cattle and calves were sold for slaughter, 45 percent for feeding, 2 percent-for-breeding, and 8 percent for 4-H or unknown, in Nebraska 94 percent of the hogs and pigs were sold for slaughter and the rest for feeding and breeding.

Sixty-eight percent of the slaughter steers and heiters in the North Central Region were sold through terminal markets. Terminal markets also were the major outlet for other slaughter cattle and calves (41 percent), slaughter hogs (35 percent), and slaughter sheep and lambs, (59 percent).

Auction markets were the most important outlet for feeder cattle and calves; direct sales to other farmers were most

BRIEF . . . AND IMPORTANT

FEDERAL BUDGET, 1960-61. Expenditures of $80 billion e next fiscal year were proposed in the President's budget FEDERAL BUDGET, 1960-61: Expenditures of $80 billion in the next fiscal year were proposed in the President's budget message-to-Congress. Each dollar of federal spending-would be divided as follows: national security, 54 cents; interest, 11 11 cents; veterans, 7 cents; agriculture, 7 cents; debt retirement, 5 cents; other, 16 cents. Since appropriations are made by Congress, actual spending may differ from the budget. The sources of each federal tax dollar will be: individual income taxes, 52 cents; corporation income taxes, 28 cents; excise taxes, 11 cents; other, 9 cents.

BEEF CATTLE: The number of cattle on feed April 1 21 major feeding states was 8 percent above a year ago. Ne-braska showed a one-percent decline from last year's high level, but ranks second in number an feed this spring. Cattle feeders report intentions to market 19 percent more in April-June per-iod of 1960 than last year, and also have more heifers on feed. Fat cattle prices will decline $1-$2 cwt. in late spring and RECORD FEED SUPPLIES: Feed grain and concentrate supplies for the 1960-61 feeding season will set new records unless this year's crop production is below normal. With average yields for 1960 crops, the total supply will be about 270 million nons, 3 percent above 1959-60. The carryover of 78 million tons will be 10 million tons over that of, last year. Feed concentrate supplies per animal unit will exceed 1.6 tons, also a new record. 1960 support prices are 6 cents a bushel lower than '59 for corn but the same for other feed grains.

Feed prices will continue low during the next 18 months if 1960 yields are average or above. Livestock feed price ratios favor expansion of production for most kinds of livestock. Cattle numbers are now in the third year of the expansion phase the current cycle. Hog and poultry production, down this year, can be increased rather quickly. Serious trouble lies ahead (1961-62) for livestock prices unless feed production and livestock expansion are slowed down.

important for feeder pigs, and dealers were most important for feeder lambs. For all species of breeding livestock, direct sales to other farmers accounted for the major portion.

During the period all livestock production increased. Auctions profited much more from the increase in marketings than did the central markets. Dealers and shipping or marketing co-ops lost, and are apparently on the way out.

For slaughter hogs the percentage going directly to terminals declined and sales through shipping associations decilined.

minais accined and sales through shipping associations declined.

Between 1940 and 1956 the percentage of feeder pigs and breeding stock received by terminals declined until it became only a negligible part of the total sold by farmers.

In purchasing feeder livestock the major sources used by farmers were auction markets, other farmers, and declers. Direct purchases from other farmers also accounted to a major part of the purchases of feeder pigs. However, for feeder cattle and calves, which was the major class of livestock purchased by farmers, auctions accounted for almost one-half of the total. For feeder sheep and lambs, declers accounted for a larger percentage than either auctions or direct purchases from other farguers. Major changes between 1940 and 1956 in source of feeder livestock were increases in percentage coming from auctions and from dealers and the decline in percentage obtained from the terminal markets.

Method of Sale

Almost all of the livestock sold by farmers were sold either by liveweight or by the head. Between these alternatives the method used depended largely on the class and expected use. Only a small percentage of the livestock sold by farmers for slaughter was sold on a head basis.

For slaughter animals and heavy feeder livestock the value to the buyer is very closely related to the body weight. However, for very lightweight feeder stock and meny classes of breeding stock even 10 or 15 percent difference in weight may be less important to the total value than ability to convert feed into usable products.

Livestock commonly were sold on a head basis when it appeared that the price per head was more important than the price per amount of weight or where weighing equipment was not available.

For the major slaughter classes—steers and heifers, bar-was not available.

For the major slaughter classes--steers and heifers, barrows and gilts, and lambs--only about one percent was sold by the head. For cull dairy cows, veal calves, and ewes, the percentage sold by the head was much higher, since many become slaughter animals only when they found no demand for breed-

Most cattle and calves sold for feeder purposes were sold on a live-weight basis. However, about three-fourths of the young immature calves and four-fifths of the pigs sold for feeding were sold on a head basis.

Practically all livestock sold for breeding purposes were on a head basis.

Percentage of livestock purchased by the head was greater for dealers and other traveling buyers than for buyers located at fixed facilities.

Method of Hauling Livestock

For all three species, slightly over 60 percent of the live-stock sold by farmers in the West North Central States were hauted by commercial truckers.

Hauling with a truck operated by the farmer, either his own or one-borrowed from a neighbor, ranked as the second most important method of transporting livestock from the farm. Farmers hauled about 30 percent of the livestock in their own trucks and hauled about 3 percent in trucks borrowed from neighbors. Buyers' trucks accounted for most of the remaining transportation of livestock sold by farmers, (less than 10 percent of the total).

For livestock purchased by farmers, the method of hauling varied greatly between species and parts of the region. In both parts of the region, almost two-thirds of the hags and pigs were hauled by farmer-owned trucks. Practically all the remainder were hauled by commercial trucks. For cattle and calves, commercial trucks were the most important, and farmers trucks second.

For sheep and lambs in the west North Central States, commercial trucks accounted for nearly 60 percent. Most of the remainder was divided between farmers' trucks and rail-

Methods used to haul livestock were related to distance. In general, most of the rail hauling was for long distances.

Reasons for Choice of Markets

Four-fifths of the farmers interviewed indicated that in g livestock they had only one outlet where they sold all

Reasons for choice of a particular outlet for use in selling major lots varied between classes. In general, the major factor was convenience of the outlet.

Convenience or rine outlet.

Convenience was particularly important for sale of cult cows and veal colves which typically represented only a small part of total income of formers. For other classes of livestock, which more typically represented a major source of farm income, farmers were more concerned about prices, or competition for livestock they sold.

These reasons were reflected in shifts farmers made be-een markets. Most common shifts were away from terminal rikets to local outlets. The shifts were made because (1) the mer felt the local outlets were much more convenient, (2) riketing costs were less, or (3) some other services were pro-

When buying livestock, farmers usually looked at more markets than they did in selling.

The major single reason for choice of a particular source was the desire to avoid disease. Concern over disease led a large percentage of farmers to buy only directly from other farmers.

Specific criticism of market agencies by farmers varied widely between types of agencies. The most frequently given criticisms were that prices were too high, lack of buyer competition, inadequate supervision of weights, and unsanitary coadi-

Relative Importance of the Livestock Enterprise and Outlets Used

For the "most important" classes of livestock on the farm between 60 and 75 percent of the animals sold by farmers were consigned by farmers who received over 50 percent of the total cash receipts from livestock soles. For most of these major classies, somewhat different channels were used in selling livestock by the farmers who received over 50 percent of their income from sale of livestock compared with farmers who received less than 50 percent of their income from sale of livestock. In general, the percentage of livestock sold through terminals and direct to packers was higher for farmers who received 50 percent or more of their income from sale of livestock than for other farmers.

la recent years, the number of head sold has been increasing and the number of farmers selling livestock has been declining. As livestock producers have become more specialized, the percentage livestock sold by large specialized livestock producers may be expected to increase. The tendency of these specialized producers to sell a higher percentage of slaughter livestock through terminals, and direct to packers may be expected to partially offset the increasing preference of farmers for outlets which are nearest and or otherwise more conveniently located.

Market News

Market reports on terminal markets made up almost 70 percent of the total number of reports listed by farmers. Reports on auction markets made up about 10 percent of the total. Reports on local markets and packers each made up about 5 percent of the total.

Of the market news sources used by farmers, radio and television reports were the most frequently used; they accounted for over 40 percent of the total reports. Newspapers and farm magazines each accounted for between 20 and 25 percent of the reports and telephone reports and personal interviews each accounted for about 4 percent.

Esteron 99 - kills weeds that other weed killers find too hard to handle

It's not what a 2,4-D costs—but what it controls that counts. More farmers buy and rely on Esteron 99*—for they find it's too costly to experiment with less-known brands. Tests show it's extra effective and easy to apply——doesn't-foam——mixes easily in hard water, and sprays evenly. A single gallon covers many acres—an extra bushel an acre more than pays the cost. Wayne played at Wausa last night. The locals travel, to Winside Sunday night and return home next Thursday to meet Bloomfield.

A sharp single to left by Rod Tletsort with two out in the eighth provided the winning margin. Ken Manske scored the run after singling to center and advancing when Manager Hank Overin drew a walk.

singling to center and advancing when Manager Hank Overin drew a walk.

Overin handled the pitching duties for Wayne, allowing seven-scattered hits. He struck out 14 and walked only four. He had a non-hitter after the first five innings. Laurel's Gerry Wisnieski had control problems although he abowed only five hits. He walked five and hit one batter.

The locals took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Tietsort and Rudy Kelsch drew walks. They advanced on Hop Rothluebber's sacrifice and scored on Darrel Bogner's hifted out and scored on longed five and hit one batter.

The locals took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Tietsort and Rudy Kelsch drew walks. They advanced on Hop Rothluebber's sacrifice and scored on Darrel Bogner's blobe. Mallatt scored on Curtis' single to center.

Wayne made it 3-0 in the third when Rothluebber was hit by a Wisnieski pitch. He took second on Curtis' double to right center. Overin halted the threat by getting Barger on a grounder to second.

Four errors proved an important part in Laurel's loss. The visitors left eight men stranded to Wayne's 10. The local nine played errorless ball.

Convassing Board

Nebraskans heard again this week about the State Canvassing board. It is composed of the governor, secretary of state, auditor, treasurer and attorney general. They canvass or survey vote totals on elections as sent in by the countries.

Nearly every time the board meets to look over the county reports it finds some errors, where totals have been transposed or clerical mistakes.

The board looks over the totals, rechecks them and makes its report. This type of-action was taken even in_territorial days under a law passed in 1855. In 1955, or 100 years later, the Legislature provided that the board should canvass all votes except those cast for officers named in the Constitution and members of the Railway commission. Those are left for the Legislature and constitutes one of the first things the Unicameral does after it is organized.

Clerical work for the Canvassing board is done in Secretary of State

For Weight Watchers

Sallies on slimming diets should devour this molded strawherry orange desser; says Ray Kling, local salesman of the Meadow Gold Dáiry plant. It is a three-layer fruit and eustard combination in which low calorie-skim milk is used to prepare the creamy custard mixture.

The trick in getting the three, gelatin layers to adhere nicely yet not run together, points out Beatrice Cooke, test kitchen director for the dairy, is to let each gelatin layer thicken slightly before spooning it over the next layer.

JOHN DEERE 896 RAKE

Featuring Widest Raking Width on the Market

The new, low-cost John Deere 896 Side-Delivery Rake features the widest raking width of all rakes on the market today. Whether it's hay or beans, you'll speed work, cut costs, and do a cleaner raking job in every crop and condi-tion—at speeds up to 8 miles per hour.

The extra-long, right-angle reel of the 896 easily rakes swaths clean behind 9-foot mowers. This means you'll rake more hay in the same time and make heavier windrows in light crops. In beans, the John Deere 896 rakes eight 30inch rows into a single windrow in two passes to speed raking operations. Additional features on the 896 include the right-angle, spring-suspended reel, ground drive, high clearance, curved teeth, simple ad-Stop in soon for complete details.
