Vitamin A Can Cause Sub-par Performance in Beef Cattle

Sub-par performance by beef cattle may be due primarily to poor vitamin A nutrition, according to a University of Illinois animal husbandman.

Dr. G. S. Smith spoke at the Northeast Experiment Station Association's sixth annual meeting at Wisner Tuesday afternoon. He told farmers and cattle feeders that the incidence of the vitamin A problem is increased under conditions which presumably would favor the accumulation of nitrates in forage plants.

In other words, Smith said, drought, heat, excessive planting rates with consequent shading of plants, and increased usage of nitrogen fertilizers are factors possibly contributing to the problem.

"It has been shown that the vitamin nutrition of animals is affected by dietary nitrates," the Illinois animal scientist stated.

In the corn belt, he explained, the apparent vitamin A problem has been frequently noted in conjunction with silage-feeding programs, either during the period of silage feeding, or more commonly during the period of full grain feeding following a silage wintering program.

Smith cited University of Illinois studies comparing the liver stores of vitamin A in two groups of steers fed "low nitrate" and "high nitrate" corn silage. Liver contents of carotene were significantly increased by "high nitrate" silage, thus suggesting that the "high nitrate" silage interferes with the ability of the animal to convert carotene to vitamin A.

Other current research at Urbana is concerned with the influence of nitrogen fertilization and seeding rates upon the nitrate content of corn silages, and the extent to which vitamin A nutrition of cattle is affected by high nitrate silages.

"Results obtained reveal that the nitrate content of corn silage is increased by heavy seeding of the stand (30,000 seeds per acre) on soils that are high in nitrogen fertility," he added.

The afternoon's program also took up the other problems in beef cattle feeding.

A researcher at the Northeast Experiment Station said experiments at that station show that "pelleting has increased feed economy beyond that accounted for by greater feed intake."

Walt Tolman, the station's cattle researcher, said that these tests have also pointed out the difficulties in returning to "usual rations" after the cattle have been pelleted.

"The possibility of replacing part of the grain with pelleted roughage is clearly illustrated by the results of these feeding trials conducted over a two year period," he concluded.

University of Nebraska animal husbandman, Dr. Johnny Matsumura, posed a number of problems in beef cattle nutrition. Tapped the question among those frequently asked by farmers and feeders in recent months.

—Why do cattle show symptoms of "founder" when they have not been on heavy grain feed?

—Should we use a "blended" protein supplement?

—Are two pounds of 22 percent protein supplement better than one pound of 40 to 20 percent protein supplements?

—Will grinding increase the utilization of feeds such as corn and milo?

—How fine can I grind my feeds?

Robert Roselle, Extension entomologist of the University of Nebraska, warned stockmen of economic losses caused by parasites which suck blood, or annoy animals throughout the year. Normal rate of gain is reduced resulting in losses of thousands of dollars a year, Roselle pointed out.

He said that losses vary from loss of blood from attacks of barn flies, stable flies, mosquitoes, horse flies, deer flies and ticks; feeding of cattle grubs within the bodies of cattle; annoyance caused by house flies and blow flies; galling of animals caused by beet flies; consumption of flesh by screwworm maggots; the ravages caused by mange mites; and the annoyance and fluid loss caused by chewing lice.

Roselle said that most of these pests can be controlled with insecticides used properly.

"The use of most insecticides are governed by tolerances established for residues in the fat and meat of animals," he added.

The Extension entomologist recommended the following controls for the parasites:

—Lice - toxaphene, ronnel, Cor-Ral, malathion, methoxychlor, lindane, DDT. All except malathion and methoxychlor require from 28 to 56 days to expire between treating and slaughter.

—Horn flies on range cattle - DDT, methoxychlor, toxaphene, malathion, ronnel.

—House flies - poison baits.

—Stable flies - good sanitation is the most important requirement. Residual sprays of diazinon, ronnel, DDT are also recommended.

Cattle Numbers Not Reaching Estimation

Cattle numbers have not climbed as high as earlier estimated USDA, based on preliminary census data. Still, this does not mean that beef prices are automatically in a better position, say Doane Agricultural Digest editors.

Slaughter during 1961 will probably record high per capita supplies and thus will tend to keep prices during the latter part of the year. Doane specialists recommend that beef cow owners continue strict herd culling practices. Feeders should keep purchasing cattle for a fast, early finish.

Improper Feeding Costing Dairymen

Dairymen lose several hundred dollars a year by not feeding their cows properly. However, dairymen who are on a testing program and having their rations tabulated on the new electronic processing equipment, find it easy to correct the tendency of overfeeding or underfeeding cows.

A Doane Agricultural Digest report points out that the electronic tabulators can calculate the amount of grain needed for each individual cow on the basis of the forage being fed, the stage of the lactation and her level of production. Check with your county agent about getting started on this new record system.

Farm Construction Costs Now Lower

Farm building costs are off a little, according to the Doane Agricultural Digest. A lag in both residential and industrial construction the last few months has forced price declines on lumber and other building materials.

This slower trend in building starts, however, is expected to be reversed by next summer. The result will be some price gain for construction materials like lumber and aluminum. This means that now is a good time to get going on new barns or storage structures that are in your long-run farm planning.

Replacing Chicks Now Could Be Profitable

Buying replacement chicks for laying flocks now will be more profitable than waiting until later in the spring, according to a special report in the Doane Agricultural Digest. Prices this past fall have been the best since 1957 and have touched off optimism. Total winter and spring placements may exceed year earlier levels by 15%. This spells price troubles for eggs by late 1961.

Quarterly average egg prices in 1961 may compare to 1960 as follows: January through March—8¢ higher; April through June—about like 1960; July through September—2¢ to 1¢ lower; October through December—at least 5¢ per dozen lower.

Feeding Hogs Silage Can Boost Hog Profit

Feeding silage to sows can boost hog enterprise profits, according to a report in the Doane Agricultural Digest. Under drylot conditions, feed saving will add up to $5 to $10 per litter. Gilts felled on corn silage will eat from 8 to 12 pounds daily. Full grown sows will eat from 10 to 15 pounds. Special supplements, high in protein and minerals, are needed to balance the silage. You can get a free copy of this report by writing this station.

Disk Shredded Stalks To Cut Erosion Effect

Disking corn stalks after they have been shredded reduces effectiveness of erosion control by the stalks, advises the Doane Agricultural Digest. Shredding after harvest cuts out in half the normal 25% of total erosion that occurs between harvest and spring plowing.

Disking on top of the shredding, however, tends to loosen and expose more soil. This offsets part of the advantage gained by the previous operation.

Corn Drying Can Pay Even When Sold Soon

Corn drying will pay this winter, even if grain must be sold immediately, according to Doane Agricultural Service economists. A lot of corn is wet and has been selling for 50¢ to 70¢ per bushel, with the moisture discount figured in. You could clear 15¢ to 20¢ per bushel above this even after paying drying, handling, loan and storage costs.

Stanton Defeats Plainview For Class B District Crown

Stanton used the free throw route to overcome a seven-point deficit at half-time to defeat Plainview 41-37 in the class B tournament. Stanton will meet Hoover in first-round play at the state tourney in Lincoln.

Stanton scored only two field goals in the last half, both in the third quarter, then dropped in 21 charity tosses in the final period.

Plainview still held the lead at the end of the third period, 33-28, but could muster only four points in the final stanza as they were plagued with fouls.

Stanton's Bill Johnson was high man with 15 points, hitting seven out of nine free throws in the fourth quarter.

Jim Brunke was high for Plainview with 14 points.

Stanton's coach, David Meyer, a former Wayne resident and WSTC graduate, will have the company of five other WSTC grads when his team goes to the state tourney. The five Wayne State men are Al Babe, Fremont; Bob Tushia, Bancroft; Bill Kropp, Clarkson; Jerry Hueser, Spencer; and Bob Tishendorf, Madrid.

Rachow Ranked in Top Seven NCC Selections

No Wayne State basketball players earned places on the first team of the All-Nebraska College conference selections announced Sunday.

But Charles Rachow, senior forward for Wayne, came close to the first five in voting by conference coaches. He was among the first seven.

Rachow, Larry Conroy and Ron Marcellus all drew first-team votes from the mentors.

First-team selections were Bob Buettgenbach and Mike Roach, Peru State; Eldon Benson, Kearney State; Gene Velloff, Doane; and Dennis Semin, Nebraska Wesleyan.

Roach, a hustling playmaker and hall hawk, is credited with driving Peru to the NCC championship and a place in the NAIA national tournament.

Buettgenbach, with 240 points in NCC games, ranked second to Velloff, who topped conference scoring with 287.

Rachow's 196 points ranked him seventh in conference output. Conroy was twelfth with 102, and Freshman Dave Goeck with a sixteenth with 136, most of them in the last eight games.

have the characteristics of being cheap, plentiful and uniform in character. Hanway explained, pointing out that possession of these characteristics has made petroleum the principal source to date of raw material for industry to use.

The unique properties of castor oil for use in jet aircraft and in plastics offer a big potential market in industry. Hanway stated. Based on the belief that supply and quality requirements can be met by Nebraska producers, international economic considerations will determine whether the crop has a future in the state, he said.

The U.S. now imports most of its supply from Brazil.

Being successful with castor beans or any other new crop is a step toward becoming a vegetable grower. The University spokesman commented.

While some varieties of vegetables are adaptable to north-east Nebraska, data indicate that this is not true for castor beans, Hanway stated. Experience in the department of Agronomy to date indicates that field production from present varieties will be confined to an area in or south of the Platte Valley as far west as the southeast corner of Dawson county and from there southwest to McCook.

Planting soybeans a " Cinderella crop in America agriculture," Hanway expressed the belief that land suitable in the eastern third of Nebraska that would allow farmers to increase present acreage several times from its present level of about 160,000.

Survey yields in the state the past 15 years indicate that we can compete with Iowa and Illinois in yields if we do a good job on cultural practices," he stated.

Far farmers who have never grown them, soybeans have all the aspects of a new crop. He warned, adding that raising soybeans requires a different know-how than for corn.

There has been some interest by farmers in northeastern Nebraska in growing flax, Hanway related. Possible new uses for linseed oil could make it more competitive in industry.

"White flax is not as well adapted in Nebraska as in South Dakota," he said, adding that there is no reason why we can't approach their level of success if we use the best practices that are used in the Nebraska area just across the boundary line," he concluded.

Home Owners Are Adding Bathrooms

In the growing family, lack of privacy and irritating washup routines can emphasize the need for more bathroom space. An unprofessional view of the home may fail to uncover available space for an additional room. But the plumbing contractor, with his years of experience in these matters, can often utilize an area under the stairs or adapt a closet which, with the right fixtures, can be another bathroom or powder room.

In adding a new bathroom or modernizing an old one, the question of "right fixtures" is an important one. Today there are many products readily available which can fit the exact space and decor requirements of any home. There are fixtures for the large bathroom and for the smaller room, fixtures especially suitable for adults, and others for children. Style and color variations are numerous, as are the very important factors of durability, quality and brand names.

The corner bathtub has long been a favorite in remodeling schemes where existing wall structures are left intact. The free finished side of the corner fixture makes it adaptable to walls that extend beyond its length.

Many modern designs are now available in corner models. One example is the recently introduced Contour bathtub which features a spacious non-symmetrical bathing area.

The decorating possibilities with the corner model are very attractive. The free end of the bathtub can be equipped with a towel ladder emphasizing the towel colors used in the bathroom scheme.

A popular modernization idea for the house without a basement is the combination bathroom-utility room. Modern, compact fixtures make it possible to have a streamlined installation for laundry and bath facilities in an area approximately 6x8 feet.

Along one wall you can have a 5-foot recess Contour tub, which adds to the utility of the bathroom with its handy ledges for easier cleaning and sitting space for mother while bathing her children.

A tile divider can separate the tub from washing and drying equipment, which come in compact models for this kind of installation. The tile divider can house the piping for the tub and the washer/dryer. On the opposite wall twin lavatories can be installed.

Vegetables Make New Crop Horizons for State's Farmers

A University of Nebraska crops expert has expressed confidence in the ability of Nebraska farmers to adjust their present concepts of crop management to meet the demands imposed by newly introduced crops.

Successful crop production depends on the farmer understanding the crop and making the right decisions, said Dr. D. G. Hanway, in a speech delivered at the 58th annual meeting of the Northeast Nebraska Experiment Station Association at Wisner Tuesday morning.

"The growing of any crop, such as castor beans or vegetables on a commercial basis, requires a whole set of new decisions," the chairman of the University Department of Agronomy pointed out. "But," Hanway said, "irrigation farmers taking a crack at raising new crops such as castor beans can make decisions only when they have a background of experience on which to base them."

He pointed out that the yields of a ton of castor beans per acre in south central Nebraska are known to be possible where farmers apply good cultural and irrigation practices, although the average yield obtained last year was far below this figure.

However, the problems encountered by farmers in the South Platte Valley who did not reach the production potential of castor beans in 1960 can be mastered by each individual, Hanway stressed.

Assistance for farmers is available from County agents and Extension specialists as well as special field men working with the crop. Dr. David Kitcock, agronomy department staff member employed on a grant made possible by the special levy initiated by the last legislature, will be carrying out a research program so that future recommendations on irrigation, fertilization, and weed control will have a more solid re-

Family Fun Room Requires Durable Floor Covering

"Trouble free" is the number one requirement for all materials used in the family fun room. A popular choice for flooring is resilient rubber or solid vinyl. Since the colors go all the way through in these high quality floorings, they withstand wear and tear of dancing feet, spilled glue, and the hobby activities, dents from small toy pull toys, spilled drinks and other hazards common to a heavy traffic room devoted to family recreation.

Both rubber and solid vinyl flooring may be considered as structural components which last for the life of the building. It is easy for the do-it-yourselfer to install either rubber or solid vinyl in special areas of activity through the resilient tile design. The home owner can achieve not only a feeling of great spaciousness in the recreation room, but also localize activities of different members of the family, for example.

Creating a shuffleboard or checkers board pattern as part of the design of the family room floor is another way to increase the play value of the rubber or solid vinyl floor.

These resilient tiles are easy to cut in special shapes so a custom design is well within the talents of an amateur home decorator. When you buy a rubber or solid vinyl floor, it is wiser to order a few extra tiles and use them as a decorative topping for a game table.

Spruce-Up Days Are Here Again

As inevitable as the blooming of the first flowers of Spring is the home owner's urge, at this time of year, to spruce up his property, give it a fresh "new look" inside and outside, make necessary repairs and other improvements. So universal is this movement, that March marks the beginning of the season that has become known throughout the country as "Clean Up, Paint-Up, Fix-Up Time."

Following the ravages of winter weather, this is indeed the logical time of the year for the home owner to take a long and hard and very critical look at his property, and determine what steps should be taken, not only to make it look better and serve his family better, but to maintain and, if possible, enhance its value.

The home represents the largest single investment that the average family is ever likely to make. Sturdily constructed though it may be, it is continually subject to attacks from many quarters which can weaken it and threaten the home owner's investment unless preventive measures are taken.

Winds tug at and loosen shingles. Rains probe for entry. Mortar crumbles and boards decay. A house, which expands in warm sunlight and contracts in the chill night, is like a living thing which must be cared for.

Developing dangers the average homeowner can watch for and combat have been listed by the Construction Research Bureau, a national clearing house for building information. Alertness can forestall serious damage and keep the value of your property at peak levels.

Repairs Check List
Check these trouble spots:
Exterior walls: Masonry. Loose mortar between joints should be scraped out and replaced, pressing fresh mortar in firmly. Broken brick, stone or tile should be chiseled out, new unit pressed into trash mortar.

Clapboard or wood shingles, when damaged, may be removed with a nail ripper or back-saw blade slipped under shingle to cut nails. Slip new piece into place, fasten with rust-proof nails.

Leaking roof: If caused by missing shingle, replace unit. Split shingle may be repaired by slipping piece of copper underneath. Fasten loose shingles with galvanized nails, counter-sink and cover head with roofing cement.

Chimney cracks: Scrape loose mortar from joints, brush out dust and dampen well. Pack fresh mortar in tightly.

Cracked interior plaster: Remove loose material—and dirt. Force fresh plaster into cracks to form firm bond with old.

Floors: Cover worn, dull wood surfaces with resilient tile such as asphalt, vinyl asbestos or solid tiles. These are also excellent for basements where there is no hydrostatic pressure problem to eliminate dusting of aging concrete floor.

Many Favor the "New Home At Old Address"

Millions of American families, who prefer a "new home at the old address," spent nearly $20 billion in home modernization during 1960 according to Home Improvement Council, which represents home builders, dealers, contractors and others involved in the home improvement business.

In 1961, home owners will spend more for this purpose, Council executives declare, pointing out that there is a growing realization on the part of property owners that remodeling can be a good investment. The home that is well kept and periodically improved will bring a much higher resale price than the owner's total investment.

Many families, too, improve their present homes because they do not want to move. They have many friends in the neighborhood and their children are settled in area schools. The housewife has come to know and have confidence in area dealers. These and a variety of other factors exact a tremendous toll from the millions of families who must war homes built to high standards, and with target prices. The happiest solution is to improve the present dwelling.

Responsive to the needs of the many families embarking upon such projects is the growing number of centers, where home owners can obtain all of the materials and arrange for all labor needed for the remodeling project. Financing is arranged at the same time. And a well-planned home improvement project is almost as easy to buy as a new car.

Many Uses of the Rose Commend it To Garden Fans

The rose is the most popular of all flowers in the plant kingdom. Roses have many uses, which may account for their popularity as much as the beauty and quality of the flowers.

Consider the rose. It will flower from spring until heavy frost. It can be used as a corsage. It helps in landscaping the property by adding continuous color and softening bloom. It makes an ideal flower for the dining table or to decorate two weeks with a good purpose.

The perfume of many roses is delectable. They can easily be grown by anyone in almost every climate. They can climb up a trellis or porch, or any unsightly building, tearing it into a thing of beauty. The rose universally is a symbol of love.

A reasonably fertile soil is all that is needed to grow roses well. According to the American Association of Nurseriesmen, if your soil is too heavy, or too sandy, add peat moss. If rainfall is not sufficient, you water it once each week, and spray about every two weeks with a good all-purpose spray.

In the early spring, or after the first blooming period, add a handful of fertilizer to the soil around each plant. With a dozen rose bushes one can have all the cut flowers he needs for the home and around the property. With enough to spare for that is needed to grow roses well.

WAKEFIELD Special Services for Youths Set Next Week at Wakefield

The Rev. and Mrs. Willard Grant, Hinsdale, Ill. will conduct special services for boys and girls at the Wakefield Covenant church, 7:00 to 8:15 p.m. Sunday through Friday. The series of services is called "The Western Round Up" for All Rangers. There will be the use of marionettes, sing time, western chautauq, missionary adventures, stories and prizes. While the services are especially designed for children, other folks are welcome to come.

All of the services will last an hour and a quarter, beginning at 7 o'clock in the evening. These services fascinate the children and a large attendance is expected.

Rev. Grant is an ordained minister of the Evangelical Covenant church. He and his wife spend all of their time doing children's work in Covenant churches and Bible camps. They are spending the first part of 1961 in Covenant churches in Nebraska.

Rural Electrification . . .

A Blue-Chip Investment In Better Living!

Back in the 30's most power companies thought extension of their lines much beyond the city limits was a poor investment. In those days, the American farmer lived in comparative darkness. Only one farm family in 10 had, or could get, electricity at a price it could afford.

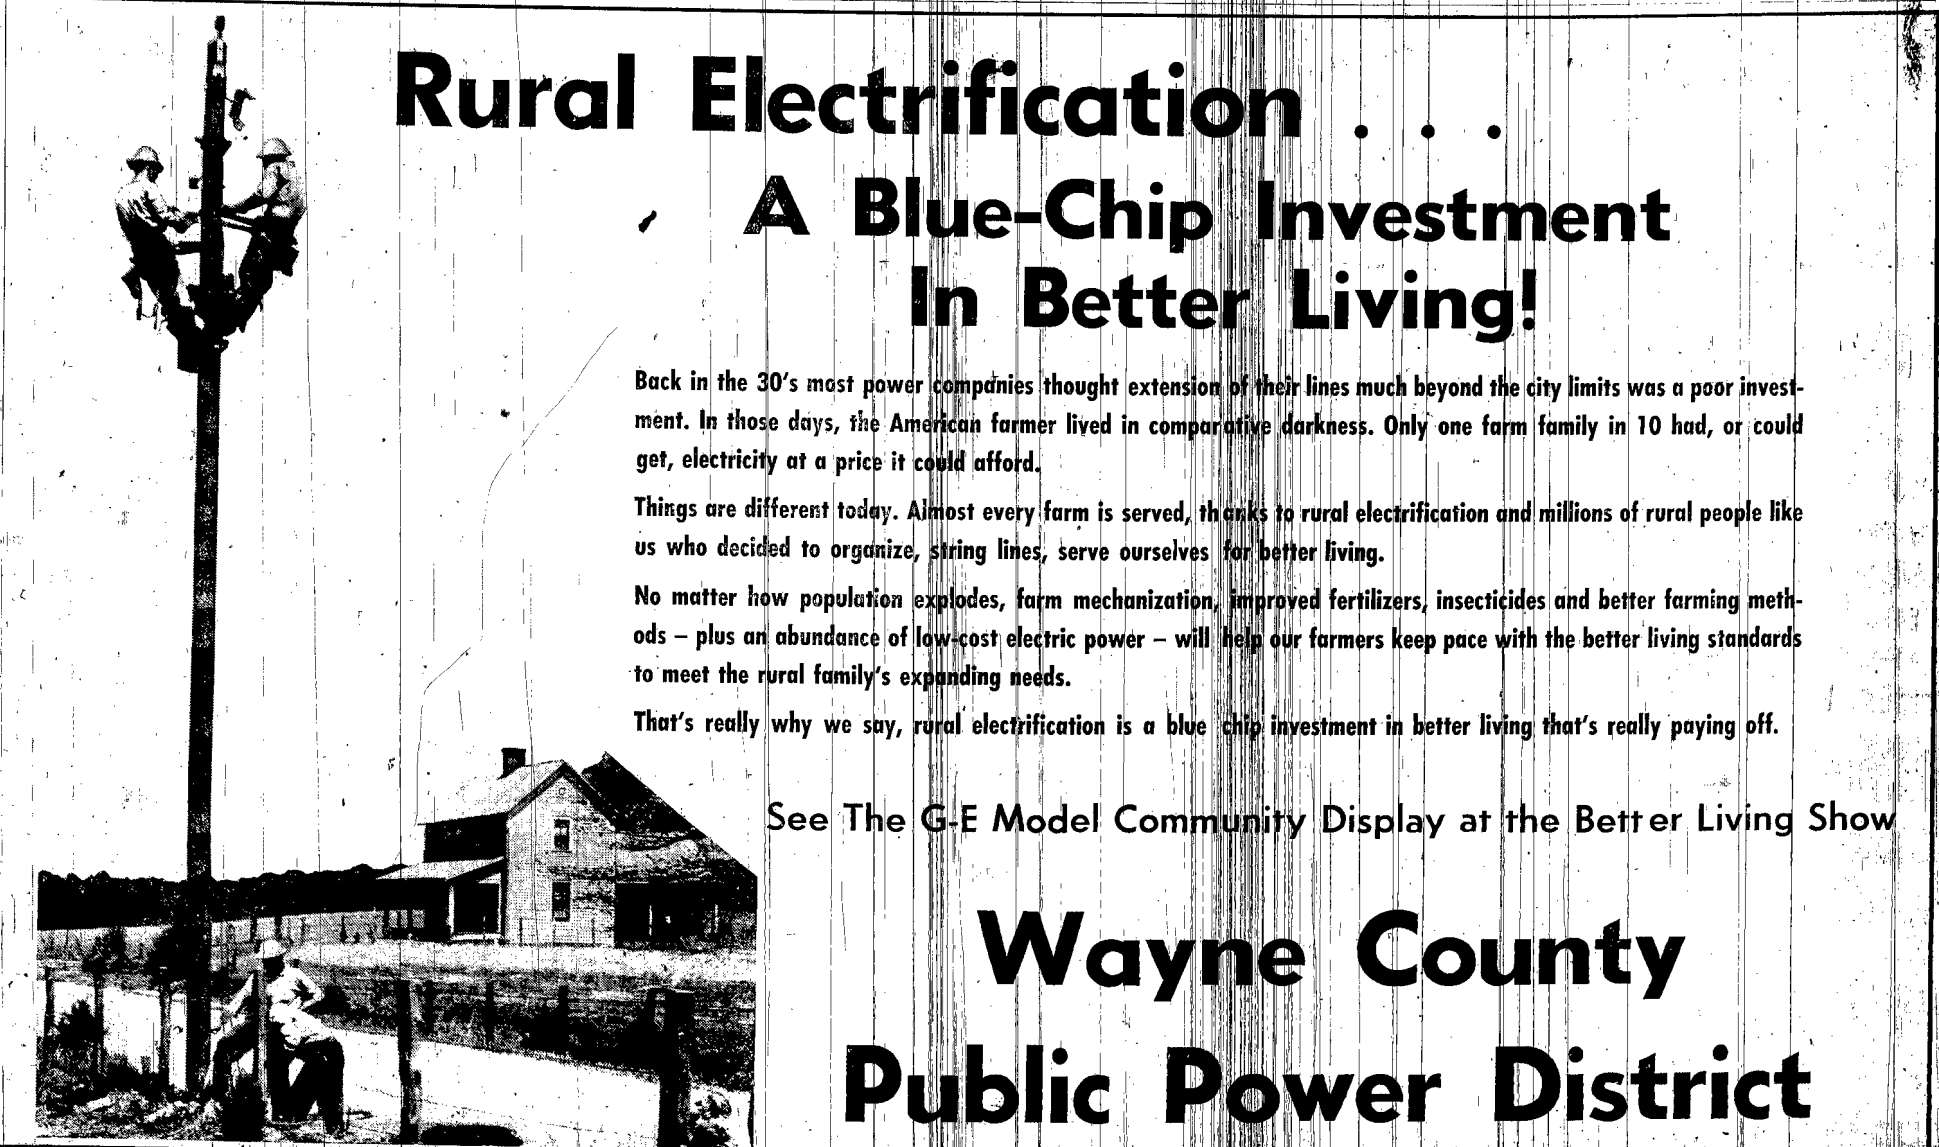

Things are different today. Almost every farm is served, thanks to rural electrification and millions of rural people like us who decided to organize, string lines, serve ourselves for better living.

No matter how population explodes, farm mechanization, improved fertilizers, insecticides and better farming methods - plus an abundance of low-cost electric power - will help our farmers keep pace with the better living standards to meet the rural family's expanding needs.

That's really why we say, rural electrification is a blue chip investment in better living that's really paying off.

Woman's Welfare Club

Woman's Welfare club was held Friday afternoon in the Ivan Clark home. It was decided to sponsor a bake sale and lunch from 1 until 5 p.m. Mar. 25, to help make up the deficit on the lights at the ball park. Any donations of food for the sale will be welcome. We hope the sale will be well attended as we're sure the whole area enjoys the lights during the summer months. The club is also sponsoring a cosmetic demonstration by guests from a Sioux City store, Mar. 20 at the school auditorium from 2:30 p.m. until 4. Everyone is welcome. Pie and coffee will be served. All members are asked to bring two pies. Mrs. Tony Stockem joined the club. Mrs. Chris Tiegen, Wayne, showed slides of her Alaska trip. The next meeting will be in the Bill Rieth home.

Ladies Fellowship

Ladies Fellowship was held Thursday afternoon in the Evangelical Free church parlors. Mrs. Vic Carlsson had devotions. The roll call was the topic "Regeneration" as was the talk given by Rev. Ambrose Collins. Mrs. Don Miles and Mrs. Floyd Blohm sang a duet. Hostesses were Mrs. Edward Linn and Mrs. Oscar Kardell.
